At a recent Wesleyan Conference in England this subject was freely discussed. A restrictive policy had been adopted the year before and had resulted in decreased receipts. This gave ample range to the discussion, and opposing views were set forth with clearness and power. Some of the views advanced were reproduced as helpful in the study of our own best methods of operation.

Rev. J. Posnett defended the old policy of aggression. He said: "It was one of sagacious enterprise; a system of adventurousness and of faith coupled with great prudence and practical sagacity and painstaking effort to bring about the improvement of the missionary income." Another minister said: "If when the income was stationary the expenditure must also be stationary, then all their glory was in the past." One of the secretaries said: "Our fathers began this work without any money at all. They went into debt with great courage, and remained in it with great tranquility." Rev. A. McAulay defended the new policy and argued that there was nothing in it to prevent advance. He said: "Subscribe $50,000, and the Missionary Committee will go on. The way to go into fresh enterprises is not to go into debt, but to go into our pockets."

Mr. Clarence Smith, a layman, said: "I like to keep out of debt; but the mission treasury never had and never would have money in hand, and they never would be able to avail themselves of any grand, striking opportunity of extension that might present itself with this new policy of unavoidably keeping expenditures within their income." Dr. Riggs made an elaborate and able speech in favor of the new policy—restricting expenditures to the actual income. He denied that the decreased receipts were chargeable to the unaggressive action of the committee, and reminded the Conference that it was the failure of income that caused the new policy.

Rev. E. E. Jenkins, a returned missionary, an ex-president of the Conference and at present one of the missionary secretaries, closed the discussion in a very thoughtful speech. Among other things he said he "could never be a party to the fulfillment to the letter of that resolution, that under no circumstances was the expenditure to be in excess of the income. In the spirit of it he would always be willing to act."

This more aggressive policy our Board elected some years ago, and the results have been most gratifying. Our missions have been enlarged, the number of missionaries quadrupled, the list of converts multiplied and our annual collections advanced in seven years from $70,000 to $191,000. There must be careful regard to probable income; but the policy that holds rigidly to appropriations only of cash in hand will fetter the triumphal march of the church toward the world's conquest for Christ. Such was not the apostolic plan, and has never obtained in the history of the ages.

A Rat-Eaten Experience.

We heard this suggestive story at a recent District Conference. A certain brother of another communion was converted in early life, and, though a firm believer in the final perseverance of the saints, had many spiritual failings and backslidings; so he wrote out his experience, giving all the circumstances in detail of time, place, etc., and carefully laid it away. To be sure that he was really a son of God he would occasionally refresh his memory by reading over his written experience. His was a devious course, alternating between good resolutions and sad moral offendings. At length he became very ill and feared that death was imminent. The thought of soon appearing before his Maker compelled an examination of the foundations of his faith. He had no external, joyous consciousness of Divine acceptance, and was forced to recall the memory of former years as the only ground of hope. His wife was asked to bring his written experience; but, alas! the mice had found the old paper and quite destroyed it. So in that dreadful hour he was brought face to face with eternal issues and had only a rat-eaten religious experience. With no present consciousness of sonship and no carefully preserved record of his conversion, he was of all men most miserable. Some moralizing on that story we have not unprofitably indulged.

That man types a multitude. His generation is numerous, and not decreasing. Like his, their religion is not a present experience, but a mutilated reminiscence. They may not write upon paper, with pen and ink, the fact and circumstances of their conversion and lose it or have it rat-eaten; but it is as really a lost or destroyed memory. The patient wife, vainly searching through trunks and drawers for the old paper, fits types a multitude of obsolete Christians exploring the hidden recesses of memory for some evidence of their espousal to Christ. They have vague recollections of a peculiar spiritual exercise in early life and make a fruitless endeavor to revivify it. There has been no manifestation of Divine grace in recent years; but a dim remembrance lingers of the Spirit's presence in the remote past. And on this attenuated thread some men hang eternal things.

No man is saved by experience. However vivid and inspiring the circumstances of our induction into the kingdom of Christ—however marvelous the transformation from darkness to light—that experience has no saving virtue. We might have visions of the transfigured glory of our Lord and afterwards forget and reject him. It is well to have spiritual exercises and manifestations. We should be a witnessing people—testifying of the power of grace in our hearts; but it is only our abiding faith and hope in the Lord Christ that will save us.

An experience which exists only as a memory may be a snare and a curse. How often have pastors heard expressions like this: "I know I was converted; that fact nobody can dispute. I once enjoyed religion if I don't now." And on that memory that brother bases a false hope of final salvation. No backslidden Christian can plead his former conversion as an argument for Divine favor. Absent and rejected grace furnishes no vantage-ground on which to intercede for restoration to spiritual sonship. Because we have been converted places God under no obligation to condone our present wickedness and guarantee final deliverance. A religion of reminiscences is ensnaring and to be dreaded. When any day is less happy in Divine love than a former we are in danger. It is always suspicious when a brother dwells on the experiences of forty years ago. If he lingers amid the memories of the past, it is because they are more vivid than the present.

We should, therefore, beware of living on spiritual memories. They are powerless to help or comfort when most needed. Like the old brother's paper, they may be rat-eaten or beyond recall. Present faith is our test of security and favor with God. We are to live by daily supplies of grace, and are supplied according to present capacity and desire.

Ruston, La., a town not yet two years old, grows apace. The Calligraph reports that the academy opened last Monday with one hundred pupils, which increased to 108 by Wednesday. We shall long remember our pleasant visit to that young metropolis of North Louisiana. The revival meeting there resulted in two conversions and five accessions to the church.

The Missionary Status.

We need that the church shall see our financial attitude as it really is. Men of enthusiasm are in danger of underestimating the serious nature of our situation, while men of business habits are perhaps inclined to take too gloomy a view of the outlook. Let us look backward a little. June 1, 1878, Dr. McFerrin, then secretary of the Board of Missions, gives in his annual report the following resume of receipts:

From June 1, 1874, to June 1, 1875, domestic and foreign (collections taken together), $107,570. From June 1, 1875, to June 1, 1876, foreign, $61,674 11; domestic, $79,501 92; total, $141,176 04. From June 1, 1876, to June 1, 1877, foreign, $70,658 44; domestic, $55,052 80; total, $125,711 24. From June 1, 1877, to June 1, 1878, foreign, $67,488 66; domestic, $49,185 42; total, $116,674 08.

The quadrennium gives a small increase in foreign and considerable decrease in domestic missions. The Board was at that date free of debt. June 1, 1878, to May 1, 1879, foreign treasurer reports $65,139 72. May 1, 1880, $87,472 16. May 1, 1881, $103,941 80. May 1, 1882, $103,741 74.

The fine increase in 1879-81, led the Board at the annual meeting in 1881 to an increased appropriation, which not only left us at the close of the year with a debt of nearly $32,000, but a large part of the appropriation yet to be paid. As there was a slight decrease in collections in 1881-82, this debt should have led to caution in appropriations May, 1882. The report of the Committee on Estimates urged that appropriations should not exceed collections of previous year; but meetings of the Board during sessions of the General Conference are never characterized by carefulness. Representatives from mission fields are likely to be present and give the urgent side of their wants. New members, with more enthusiasm than experience, help to do the work of appropriation; and instead, therefore, of bringing the appropriation down, as the committee asked, to $103,000, appropriations were made amounting to $144,500. This is the origin of our indebtedness.

Collections for 1882-83, $160,272 82. This is the largest increase ever made by the church in any one year—being in fact much more than the increase made in any of the preceding quadrenniums—led the Board to an increased assessment of $264,000 and an increased appropriation of $180,355. Again the Committee on Estimates asked that no more than $160,000 be appropriated; but it is not remarkable that the large increase in collections should have enabled the more hopeful members of the Board to carry the increased appropriation.

This brings us to May, 1884, when collections were reported at $188,962 and a debt of $39,000. The warning voice of the Committee on Estimates was again raised—it was suggested that the proper place for faith was conjoined with work in raising the collection, not as the author of mere votes in making appropriations.

But we were at the beginning of the Centenary year, the large appropriations of the previous year had planted work which we seemed compelled to nurture; the temper of the church and Board had encouraged two of our superintendents to project and build an Anglo-Chinese University in China and mission headquarters in Mexico in advance of funds authorized; additional missionaries had been sent to some of our mission fields; there was no point at which appropriations could be reduced without repudiating obligations already on us—constructively at least—or else abandoning work already begun. The thought of beginning the Centenary year with a retreat along the missionary line so fired the heart of the then senior Bishop Pierce, that he struggled to his feet, summoned his lost vocal powers to his aid in this emergency, and blew a call so clear and loud to move forward, that the timid in the Board were silent, while the enthusiastic voted an appropriation of $260,000. This was the culmination of our debt. The Centenary year with all its helps, fell $87,000 short of the appropriations based on the hoped-for collections. We began the year with an adverse balance of $39,000, which gives us now a debt of over $120,000.

The point on which we would rivet attention is this: Not one dollar of this debt was for enlargement last year, but only to provide for existing work. To fail, therefore, to provide for this debt, means the abandonment of projected work; it means recall or actual suffering to our foreign missionaries, and the abandonment of souls committed by God to their care, for whom no one will care. To carry the debt involves the use of personal credit in a way which violates obligations to those of one's own household. This ought not to be expected longer than the church has time to digest the facts and make response. There is a view which is gloomy enough, i. e., to compare the demands of the mission fields with the rate of increase in the Board's collections for two years past. There is another view which is cheering in a high degree, viz.: This Board, eight years ago, did all the work the church is now doing, through our Board, the Woman's Board, and the Board of Church Extension. The church in 1877-78 only paid $67,000 with which to do the work. In 1884-85, collections of the Board, of Missions, $183,000; Woman's Board of Missions, $52,000; Church Extension Board, $40,000; total, $275,000.

We have used round numbers in giving collections. This increase is marvelous, showing an amount of spiritual vigor in the church on which we may rest securely any demand founded in righteousness. Our object has been to put before the church candidly the causes which have led to our present strait—the necessity for immediate response or retreat on the one hand, and on the other the ground of our hope and the reasonableness of that ground. You ask whether a response now does not mean an increased assessment next year. We reply, there has been no increase of assessment since 1882.

This pressure of debt will assuredly bring greater caution to the Board, and the long stand made by the Committee on Estimates in favor of keeping appropriations within collections of previous year, is likely to be seriously heeded in the future. Our bankers so far have been not only just but generous, but $100,000 is their limit. Personal credit helps to content them for a time, but the situation is extremely unsatisfactory to them and the officers of the Board, and must, if help does not soon come, bring disaster to our missionaries. Some one says there is no enthusiasm in an old debt. We want the church to see that this is a new debt and one which forbids one step forward by way of enlargement until we are prepared to redeem our pledges to those who have gone forth trusting in the honor and brotherhood of the church.

The Board, May, 1885, realizing at last the pressure of debt, reduced appropriations from $260,000 to $160,000. This was cutting down to the very last figure that would allow the possible existence of the work then in hand—unpaid appropriations of previous year for churches, amounting to about $40,000, were recalled. It is plain that this large reduction of $140,000 is a heavy blow on our missionaries and their work—to go further would be positive suffering for necessities of life. All we ask of the church is to pay the assessment of $264,000 which has been standing at that figure for three years. That we can raise it has been demonstrated in so many of our charges of all grades that it is now certain that success is a simple question of earnest resolve and practical methods improved with faith, baptized with prayer and crowned with the self-denial of our gospel, which is no new gospel, but the same which you have heard from the beginning.

D. C. K., TR.

The Clergy, Colleges and Champagne.

We should be careful not to take up reproach against a neighbor; but the condemnation of wrong in our brother or ourselves is not to be tolerated. Unless we deal faithfully with our neighbor, Christ will be wounded in the house of his friends, and blood will be upon our own hands. Though he may resent our warning as intermeddling, and repudiate it as an "impertinence," we are not relieved of responsibility. Evangelical religion is established among the nations in face of perpetual and persistent protest. So we have to encounter opposition nearer home in discharging duty as our brother's keeper. This relation is heavenly ordained, and its obligations divinely imposed. In the spirit of this relationship we reproduce the following. It is from the pen of Rev. Dr. M. B. DeWitt, a distinguished Cumberland Presbyterian minister, and is found in the columns of the Cumberland Presbyterian. He was present at the commencement exercises of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., an institution of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and speaks of the occasion as follows:

On the programme was the item, "Vice-chancellor's medal for ecclesiasticism." Religious service and church ideas prevailed everywhere, and the claim is broadly made that imparts a church education. Now, this feature of the programme was P. M.—Commencement. Bishop hop in theologians, professors, students and all the ladies were expected at this part of the great day. Again, as I am speaking freely and over my own signature, Wednesday night after Col. Colyar's address came the alumni banquet, at which not only students, but toasts with wine were the order of the day, given and responded to by ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ, with young men who are just entering life's battle with all its temptations and follies, and yet do they not pray. "Lead us not into temptation (to drink and get drunk) but deliver us from evil!" (habits and results of wine-drinking, dancing, card-playing, base-ball associations and all other unhappy consequences of a society Church education?) After the commencement exercises in the chapel the various residents, Bishops, professors, and others, I am credibly informed, had lunch for their friends, a chief feature of which was wine, poured often by rectors and divinity students' as well as women's hands, for all who would drink. What is the probable, not say natural, or necessary outcome of this? I may not be a true prophet, but, reasoning from simple facts, as from cause to effect, I would greatly fear that the church is educating many a youth to be a scholarly drunkard, for which the direct responsibility will rest on the shoulders of the church whose duty it is to teach "Abstain from all appearance of evil," and to say, "I pray God thy whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

That is written by a responsible pen. If incorrectly reported, those interested should see that the facts are given. Indeed, the "Bishops and other clergy" who compose the Board of Curators of that institution owe it to themselves, their church and the cause of Christian education to make denial if they can.

This is another argument in favor of a positive and practical Christian education in our church schools. But, alas! for a college and clergy that will condone wine-bibbling and the dancing craze. What parent would not shudder at the thought of his son filling a wine-glass at a feast even for a Bishop! But we forbear. The occurrence carries its own condemnation.

The Advocate, of September 3.

The ADVOCATE, of September 3, leads off with an article by Bro. Steel—"Oracle of Norwood." It was a reply to an article from Bro. Dym which must have been a little anomalous. Some might think that drop of gall had fallen even in good Bro. Steel's inkstand. Toward the latter part of the article a little was said about the change of our church name. I feel but little interest in that subject. I might be somewhat stirred if I thought there was any probability of a change. When the name was given us I suppose the intention was to distinguish us from the Northern branch of the Methodist Church in the United States. "South" was added because we occupied the Southern portion of the country, and not to represent harm or ill will to anyone. As the word "South" in our name does not and never did signify any ill or unkind feeling toward our Northern brethren, nor any intense sectional prejudice, I am not willing to have it changed thereby leaving the inference that such was or ever had been the case. If "South" in our name means "hated of Yankees," I would say Strike it out; and if it was not done I should feel like striking out to see a church-name elsewhere.

Next, "Summer's Canvas." Dr. Grace. I have made many fine home institutions. Other things being equal, the school nearest home is the best one for your children. Then comes "China Letter," by Bro. Royall. He tells of crops, the physical condition of the missionaries, Anglo-Chinese School, clothed with remarks on preaching—the important instrument in saving the world.

Then an article by Bro. J. Jones, the patriarch of Methodism in the South-west. His trumpet gives no uncertain sound. His article before this caused me to buy book. His style is clear. No more or gall in his inkstand.

Then we have the Sunday-school lesson expounded. I like that. It helps me in my prayer meeting. I frequently comment on the lesson at prayer meeting.

Then comes "Rights and Privileges of Laymen." I have no objection to a layman from each district in the cabinet of the Bishop. He desires their aid; but they ought to be unselfish, broadly cultured and deeply pious. No need of trouble the General Conference with this matter. "Progressive," on "Fossilized Presiding Elders," has a level head. Let the presiding elders return to their parsonages at least every four years. Some men are peculiarly and admirably suited to the presiding eldership, and they are the very men that make the best pastors. Don't place a man in office that is fit for nothing else and keep him there until he is not fit for that.

Bro. Holloman has in this issue about a column on "Church Name." He says much

Christian Advocate

Obituaries.

ELLIS—Died at his residence, near Amite City, La., August 11, 1884, JUDGE ELLIS PARKER ELLIS.

Judge Ellis was the youngest son of John Ellis and Sarah Johnson, and was born in Georgia, January 5, 1807. In his infancy, his parents removed to Louisiana, where his life was passed. Heared amid the stirring scenes of a frontier life, he was trained to mental labor, and formed habits of industry, which he retained ever afterwards. The country, then, afforded but limited school facilities, but his was a bright, retentive mind, which early took hold upon knowledge; and, a student by nature, he laid the foundation of a sound and liberal education. His mother was a woman of deep piety, and his youthful mind was early imbued with the truths of the Christian religion.

In 1830 he was converted and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. John P. Haney, and of this church he continued a zealous, consistent, faithful member until his death.

In 1831 he was married to Miss Tabitha Emily, the youngest daughter of that eminent citizen and devoted Christian, Judge Thomas C. Warner; and, soon afterwards, he located in Covington, La., where he resided until 1835, when he removed to Clinton, La. In 1839 he changed his residence to the vicinity of Amite City, La., where he spent the remainder of his days, and closed his life.

In his early manhood his sterling character and ability found ready recognition, and he was called to the public service, filling acceptably the offices of recorder and clerk of the probate and district courts.

While thus engaged, he devoted his leisure moments to the study of the law, and, in 1837, he was admitted, by the Supreme Court of the State, to the bar, and recognized as a practitioner before the State and Federal Courts.

Subsequently, he was chosen, by the general Assembly, in which he served for several terms. He actively practiced his profession, then, and continued, until the year 1843, when he became the judge of the judicial district, composed of the parishes of Tangipahoa, Washington, Livingston, St. Helena, and St. Tammany. This position he filled until the year 1873, and to it he was re-elected by a large popular majority, at the general election of November, 1872, but was excluded from its functions by the fraudulent and usurpation of the government of that State. From this time he devoted himself to agricultural pursuits, in which he had always taken interest and delight; though, in 1877, after the restoration of legitimate government, he was induced to accept the appointment of president of the Board of Public Education, a position which he filled with fidelity and zeal, for the cause of popular education was ever dear to his heart.

In this office, which was honorary and without emolument, he rendered his last public service.

Of his marriage, eight children were born, five of whom with their widowed mother, survive him. In his domestic relations, his life was one of unbroken peace and happiness, save when the death-angel cast the shadow of its dark wing across the hearth-stone, to hear some loved one to the spirit world. In his sisters, he was reasonably prosperous, educating his children, and providing comfortably for his household. Not coveting riches, nor amassing great wealth, he yet saw much of fortune's vicissitudes, for the accumulations of his life were, in great part, swept away by the results of our civil war.

Such is a brief resume of his long and useful life.

In deportment, Judge Ellis was modest, affable, of engaging manners, courteous and kind. He was even-tempered, tender-hearted, devoted to friends and country, charitable, true as steel, to his convictions of duty, and eminently pure in thought, word, and personal conduct. He was a man of clear intellect, sound judgment, active habits, and strong and decided character. He hated shame, and he loved truth for his own sake. His methods of life were always characterized by directness and simplicity in conception and in execution. He had the courage of his convictions, and, while never obtruding his opinions upon others, yet, in the support of what he deemed the right, he was bold and inflexible.

As a lawyer, he was conscientious, and the practice of his profession was characterized by fidelity to his clients, by fairness and courtesy to his opponents, and by candor and respect to the bench. He was a safe counselor, and an able and earnest, but never a biased, advocate.

As a judge, he was patient, painstaking, independent, and just. His administration of this high office was during the most trying period of our history, as a State, and yet it was such as to win the approbation of the people. He regarded the judge as the monthly piece of the law, and what it required, he fearlessly declared and enforced; but, where a margin was left for judicial discretion, his conclusions were moulded on the purest principles of justice, and tempered by a mercy which was alive to every appeal of misfortune or suffering.

It has been said that his firm, but, at the same time, humane bearing, as a judge, towards the newly enfranchised class, had great influence in saving his district from the disorders and bloodshed that afflicted some portions of the State.

It is a fair commentary upon his judicial character to note the fact, that, in the last reported case, decided by the Supreme Court, under a former constitution, the opinion of Judge Ellis was signed as the opinion of the court, and that, in the first case, decided by the judges of the succeeding Supreme Court, his opinion was commended for his learning and ability.

But it was in the family circle and at his hospitable home that his nature found its perfect expression. There was in his beaming face and gentle voice and noble simplicity of manner, the very soul of hospitality for all who came beneath his roof. To his children and grandchildren, he stood forth as an exemplar of all that was good and noble. Firm, but without harshness, always just, sympathetic, pleasant, considerate, he was, at times, the companion and father, the counselling oblique by the law of love, rather than by the rule of force; so that their young selections twined around him as the tender vine around the majestic tree; and to them, precious as the record, came the memories of his life.

To him and the noble woman who was the wife of his youth, and the partner of all his joys and sorrows, were given fifty-three years of wedded life, and yet his closing days were marked by the same tender consideration, the same delicate attentions, the same endearing words, the same implicit confidence and soul communion that characterized the earlier days of their union. He was absolutely loyal to all his duties as a husband and a father, and ever faithful to his marriage vows.

And during more than forty years of the writer's acquaintance with Judge Ellis, there has been no time, when some orphan, or widow, or unfortunate was not an inmate of his home and the recipient of his bounty, and there are many whose hearts warm with love and gratitude at the recollection of his words of cheer and his deeds of charity.

As a Christian, he was consistent and faithful. His piety was not ostentatious, but it was deep and abiding. He was a man of prayer, and his house was a house of prayer. In the merry and loving kindness of his heavenly Father he had implicit trust, and his faith in the promises of God lighted his pathway through life, and at its close even down into the shadowy valley of death.

For over half a century, his home was the home of the Methodist minister. In him the "preacher in charge" always found a friend, and a safe counsellor; and there are many among the ministers of God in the church militant whose eyes will brighten at the recollection of his kindly words of encouragement and his generous deeds, when there was need of help; eye, and we believe that scores of ministers who knew and loved him here, and who had transferred to the church triumphant, made haste to bid him welcome there.

In all the affairs of the church, he took a deep interest. To its support he contributed of his means, and he served throughout his life as steward, sometimes as class leader, and often as lay delegate to the Conferences, district and annual.

His last illness was of several months duration, and his sufferings were great, but, throughout, he was patient and resigned. He knew that his life was nearing its close, but, with unquenching heart and a steady eye that told of victory, he met the "last enemy."

His grave repeated assurance that all was well with him, and those who knew him best, have no shadow of doubt that he has entered upon that rest which is the reward of the faithful. Surrounded by loved ones—his wife, his children and children's children—he breathed his life away as peacefully as if falling into a pleasant slumber.

In the family graveyard, near his home, he was laid to rest; and, there, life's duties done, he sweetly sleeps, awaiting the resurrection of the just.

"And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

MANNING—ORA ARRETTA, daughter of W. L. and S. A. Manning, was transplanted to heaven, August 20, 1885. Her beautiful life began January 19, 1878, consequently she was seven years, seven months and one day old when she passed over the river of death.

After five days of intense suffering she gained the victory, and she went to meet Christ our Savior, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

She was rational to the last; gave her mother specific directions how she should be dressed, and what disposition to make of her toys and flowers. This passed away one of the sweetest flowers of our community. She was a member of Hebrew Sunday-school, and delighted in singing the Sunday-school songs. Her favorite was, "Only an Armor Bearer." This is the fifth child of Bro. and Sister Manning have buried at Hebrew, all under eight years of age. What an incentive to live godly! Five little children waiting and watching for their father's return.

J. F. ROBINSON, Pastor.

PATRICK—SISTER CATHERINE M. PATRICK, the widow of James Patrick, died in New Orleans, her native city, July 28, 1885, aged forty-five years.

For many years she had been afflicted with consumption, which, by its slow and steady progress, kept her constantly warned of her approaching dissolution. In 1856 she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Jackson, Miss., thereby sealing her covenant with her Lord and Master. Death did not find her laying plans for her future life, or greatly troubled with the daily cares which beset her path.

Her last hours were tranquil, peaceful and happy. She had no fear of death, was willing to exchange worlds, and longed to be with the saints of all ages. After the struggle of life was over, she crossed the river to possess the promised inheritance.

J. F. SCHUBLOCK.

CARRILL—BANKER LENA CARRILL, daughter of Rev. D. B. and Mrs. R. F. Carrill, was born on May 12, 1837. She died at her father's residence, in Natchitoches parish, La., August 8, 1885.

Only for eight years was this little girl permitted to pass in her earthly home, when God the Father called her to an eternal one. Her life was short but, but was long enough for God's purpose. His ways are past finding out, but a trustful faith bids us see a loving Father's hand in all afflictions. May his grace sustain the parents, and may their hopes of heaven brighten now that there is another to above.

S. J. DAVIES.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

IVORY SOAP.

99<sup>44</sup>/<sub>100</sub> Pure.

Is really wonderful.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it at their grocer, if six two-cent stamps to pay postage, are sent to J. C. Morris & Co., Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BRODIE'S CORDIAL is prescribed by our leading Physicians as a family remedy for Diarrhoea, Dysentery, and all summer complaints. For sale by all Druggists.

I. L. LYONS & CO., Proprietors.

COFFEE! TEA!

DELIVERED FREE!
Any quantity—2 lbs. or more Tea.
GREEN TEA OR BLACK,
50c, 60c, 70c to 80c per pound.
One dollar's worth or more.
COFFEE,
12 1/2c, 15c to 25c per pound.
Shipped payable on delivery.

JAMES DURNO,
111 FOYDRAST ST., NEW ORLEANS.
Correspondence solicited.

The Oldest Machinery Agency
—IN—
NEW ORLEANS.
ESTABLISHED FOR 30 YEARS.

Agent for Eagle Cotton Gins, Eagle Eclipse Cotton Gins, Stedman's Cotton Presses, Schofield Cotton Presses, Van Winkle Cotton Presses, Winslow Cotton Presses, Whitman's Hay Presses (known as Seely Patent), Stedman Engines, Blymer Engines, Niles Sugar Mills, Victor Sugar Mills, Great Western Sugar Mills, Cook Evaporators, Saw Mills, Strain Queen Sawn Corn Mills, PULLEYS, SHAFING, ETC., BELTING. Send for circulars of above to W. L. CUSHING, Agent, 105 Gravier St., NEW ORLEANS.

VICTOR SUGAR MILLS.
The prices have been reduced on Sugar Mills. W. L. CUSHING, Agent, NEW ORLEANS.
QUEEN OF SOUTH CORN MILLS.
The prices of Straub's Queen of South Corn Mills have been greatly reduced. W. L. CUSHING, Agent, New Orleans.
THE BEST COTTON GINS.

EAGLE ECLIPSE COTTON GINS.
The most successful Cotton Gins are the Eagle and Eagle Eclipse. They have the endorsement of the largest planters. Col. E. Richardson has rejected the Eagle and other Gins, and now has five of the Eagle Eclipse Gins. Over 5000 of these Gins in use. They make an extra sample of Cotton, from some kinds of heavy cotton the Eagle Eclipse will produce a sample worth two cents a pound more than that it turned on ordinary Gins. Send for circulars to W. L. CUSHING, NEW ORLEANS.

STEEDMAN'S COTTON PRESSES.
These Presses were awarded the first prize over all others at the New Orleans Exposition. Col. E. Richardson has five of the Steedman Presses in use. Each Press making 10 bales a day of 500 pounds each. W. L. CUSHING, AGT., NEW ORLEANS.

THE NEW HIGH ARM SINGER Sewing Machine
IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!
—FOR—
Range of Work, Perfection of Stitch, Ease of Operation, Rapidity, and almost Noiseless.

Call, examine and be convinced. Singer Needles 10c per dozen, two dozen 25c; Shuttle 50c, oil 10c per bottle. Send for Catalogue and Price List. McCull's Bazar Patterns. Catalogues free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.
185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
N. E. RUNDLE, Agent.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE,
Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cordage.

Ammunition, Hammocks, Base Balls & Bats, Ice Cream Freezers, Back Tubs, Lamp & Lanterns, Baskets, all kinds, Oil Stoves, Clocks, Saws, Croquet, Stationery, Extracts, Water Colors, Fishing Tackle, Whips, etc., etc.

Hodgins' Earthenware Cooking Trucks.
Send for new catalogue.

J. C. MORRIS,
40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

BUCKEY BELL FOUNDRY.
Bellevue, La. Foundry and Tin for Church Bells, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. E. J. VANOUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MCHANE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bellevue, La. Foundry and Tin for Church Bells, Fire Alarm Bells, etc. E. J. VANOUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

FIRE INSURANCE.

MECHANIC'S TRADER'S Insurance Company.

14 CARondelet STREET, New Orleans, La.
Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks, AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

GEO. H. FROST, Secretary.
F. C. GILKINSON, Asst. Sec. and Fire Clk.
R. O. RICHMOND, Collector.

LLOYD R. COLEMAN, President.
J. M. CRAWFORD, Vice President.
(Late Sec. and Fire Clk. of the Union Ins. Co.)
F. A. VIZOUT, Inspector.

TRUSTEES:
J. A. Braxelton, Simon E. Marx, J. B. Britton, E. J. O'Brien, J. J. Carver, E. J. O'Brien, W. A. Phillips, H. C. Cockburn, Ben O. L. Hayne, D. C. Gilman, C. C. Gilman, A. N. Siffertingol, O. Kluer, W. B. Thompson, J. M. Frankenhach, J. A. Gilman, J. G. Gilbert, J. M. Walsh, L. L. Macon, J. L. Williams, Laurent Lacasse, Frederick Wing, R. B. Maxwell, W. G. Wheeler, Lloyd R. Coleman.

Factors and Traders' Insurance Company.

49 CARondelet STREET.
Paid Up Capital $1,000,000.
ED. A. PALFREY, President.
JOHN PHELPS, Vice President.
THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Issues Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest Tariff Rates.

TRUSTEES:
John I. Kohle, John Chaffo, Richard Miller, Sam'l F. Pender, R. M. Walmsley, A. H. May, T. Lytt, Lyon, Samuel H. Boyd, J. L. Macon, Wm. A. Phillips, L. O. Jurey, Wm. Hartwell, O. J. Leach, A. T. Jenin, A. B. Richman, Henry Abraham, Louis Nash, A. Brullin, G. W. Benson, Wm. Cunningham, John Adams, R. T. Buckner, Chas. E. Black.

CRESCENT INSURANCE COMPANY

Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1840—Re-organized as a Stock Company in 1850.
CASH CAPITAL, $400,000.
Has paid over NINE MILLIONS for losses since 1840.
Annual and Term Policies issued on Desirable Fire Risks.

W. R. LYMAN, President.
CHAS. H. DOLGER, Vice President.
CHAS. E. RICE, Secretary.

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Attention, Planters!
Warner & Hoelzel,
—PROPRIETORS OF—
LOUISIANA RICE MILL,
Cor. Challope and Tchoupitoulas Sts.
MILLERS AND DEALERS IN
Rough and Clean Rice.

Shipments solicited. Liberal advancements made on consignments of Rough Rice.
Also Agents for C. A. LITMAN & CO., Canton, O.
Miller's New Model Thrasher.
Awarded First Prize over all other competitors at the late New Orleans Exposition.
Rice Cutting Machines.
The Buckeye Binder.
The Buckeye Reapers.
Buckeye Reapers.
Also Agents for B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Elmira, N.Y. Highest Award at New Orleans Exposition and 3 Gold Medals for Portable and Stationary Engines.

Planters wishing to purchase will find our terms satisfactory.

PEOPLE'S HAND-BOOK ON BAPTISM.
IN FOUR PARTS.
Second Edition. Revised and Enlarged.

1. Immersion. 2. Infant Baptism. 3. Close Communion. 4. Plan of Salvation—Or Justification by Water (the Campbellite and Roman theory) VS. Justification by Faith (the Bible theory).

BY THE REV. Z. A. PARKER, Of the North Alabama Conference.

WHITTEN FOR ALL CLASSES, OLD AND YOUNG. Many points new. The arguments conclusive in every case. Part First puts immersion out of the Bible. Part Fourth absolutely drives every creek, pool and branch between Christ and the sinner. Very highly recommended by Dr. Fitzgerald, Dr. McManly, Dr. Cunningham, with many other editors and a host of ministers and laymen in Methodist and Presbyterian Churches. Let a copy of this book go into every Pulpit-Baptist Family, South and North. Circulate in every home from a dozen to one hundred copies. One hundred and fifty-nine pages, neatly bound in paper or cloth. Price per copy, 25 cents in pamphlet form. 75 cents in cloth. Liberal discount to ministers. Address

REV. Z. A. PARKER, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., or

Carver & Jamieson,
112 Camp Street,
New Orleans.

SOAPINA.

Washes in Hard Water as well as in Rain Water. Invented by J. H. HELLER, who received the FIRST PREMIUM At Exposition for the best Laundry Soap in the World. Office 110 Gravier St., New Orleans.

HEADQUARTERS
—FOR—
Sunday-School Supplies:
Consisting in part of GOBBEL HYMNS, Single and Combined, With and Without Music.
Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Trenchard's Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible Dictionaries, etc.
Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books, Catechisms, Bible Books, Union Question Books, Catechisms, Howard Cards, Scripture Text Cards, Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of Books suitable for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $2.50 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.

W. D. SKILLMAN, Business Manager,
40 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WM. H. PIERSON, SUCCESSOR TO WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.
Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 15.
6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them. Rates for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.

ANDERSON, HARRIS & Co.

—MANUFACTURERS OF—

Platform and Half Platform Spring Wagons, CINCINNATI, OHIO, U. S. A.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

The Southern Insurance Company,

OF NEW ORLEANS.
Office, No. 31 Camp Street.

Capital subscribed $200,000.00
Capital paid in $100,000.00
Assets, 1st of January, 1885 $31,720.97

Fire, River and Marine Insurance at fair and equitable rates. Losses promptly adjusted and paid. Ample security offered to insured both by the resources and conservative policy of the company.

ERNEST MILTENBERGER, President. H. GALLY, Vice President. SCOTT McGUIRE, Secretary.

John T. Moore, Jr., M. Schuchmacher, J. H. Meigs, Louis Hush, J. A. Lafaye.

No. 56 USE St. Charles St

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European scientists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can, in some cases, restore the sight, if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in taking glasses after one or two hours use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, MEDICATED.
Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these spectacles, can send for a circular containing description, prices, etc., and directions for insuring a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

A. ANSELL,
SUCCESSOR TO
HERC. HOUSAH,
CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY,
56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

In writing mention this paper.

T. J. CARVER, B. O. L. RAYNE.

T. J. CARVER & CO.,
Cotton actors and Commission Merchants,
44 Perdido Street.

The patronage of our friends and the public respectfully solicited.

PRAYER AND PRAISE.

Edited by Rev. ATTIOUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D., and Prof. R. M. M'INTOSH.

We confidently believe this to be the most powerful compilation of Gospel Songs for Prayer meetings. From meetings, Sunday-schools, Christian unions, Missionary societies, Revivals and religious Festivals, ever published in this or any other country.

Prayer and Praise contains 48 pages, bound in the best style of art, with a beautifully illustrated outside title, and neatly printed from new type, in three editions, as follows:

Round Notes, Character or Seven-voiced Notes, and Words Without Notes.
Prayer and Praise is certainly without a rival in all that constitutes a direct, practical hymn and tune book; and if you are in need of such a book, order a copy for examination before you supply the demand with any other.

PRICES:—New Edition—75 cents per copy; 48 per dozen; 50 per hundred.
—Old Edition—35 cents per copy; 42 per dozen; 50 per hundred.

Specimen copies of Music Edit on for examination mailed, non-paid, 25 cents; specimen copy of Word Edition, 25 cents. Agents, make an order, be sure to specify THE REV. OF NOTES DESKED. Address
W. D. SKILLMAN, 40 CAMP ST., OF CARVER & JAMIESON, 112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Wesleyan Female Institute,

Staunton, Virginia.

— Opens September 21st, 1885. One of the FIRST SCHOOLS FOR YOUNG LADIES IN THE UNITED STATES. Thorough in all departments. Buildings and surroundings beautiful. Climate and home comforts unsurpassed. Boarding pupils from eighteen States. Teaching sound and liberal, practical accomplishments. Religious training, economy in dress, self-supporting vocations for young ladies. Its graduates are sought far and wide as teachers. Refers to a thousand pupils and patrons. TERMS AMONG THE BEST IN THE UNION. German, English Course, Latin, French, German, Music, etc., for entire scholastic year from September to June, 1886. For Catalogue write to

REV. WM. A. HARRIS, D. D., President, Staunton, Virginia.

PHILIP HALLAHAN, B. D. WOOD & BROS.,
—MANUFACTURERS OF—
Plain Tin and Japan Ware, COAL and COKE,
—ALSO DEALER IN—
25 Camp Street, New Orleans.
Families supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

COOKING AND HEATING STOVES AND RANGES.
Sole Agent for New Goodway Range and Cottage Stove, 54 CAMP ST., Below FOYDRAST, NEW ORLEANS.

—OFFICE OF TUGBOATS—
Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood, Manile Wood, Will H. Wood.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 39.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1521.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

PRINTED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
WEBB & JAMIESON, Publishers.

115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Singles and wives of deceased preachers half price.

Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELLS, Editor.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.
REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

A SONG OF A LILY.

BY CLARA THWAITES.

There was a song in the air,
A song of love and of life,
A song that came from the heart,
A song that came from the life,
A song that came from the heart,
A song that came from the life,<
A song that came from the heart,
A song that came from the life,

It was a song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,
A song of a lily,

Rights and Privileges of Laymen.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

Mr. Editor: Allow me a final word to Bros. Upton and Van Valkenburg. They mistake if they think I wish to restrict the fullest possible usefulness of laymen in our church. I only think that usefulness is already provided for in the Bible now open to them. These brethren differ from me; but I do not adopt of their proposition would be a radical change in our fundamental law and would destroy the very end they seek to promote.

The integrity of the episcopal action in American Methodism has been regarded as vital to the efficiency of her work. As early as 1828 a formal attack was made on this function by James O'Kelley in a proposition to the Conference of 1828 to give to a preacher the right of appeal from the Bishops to the Conference if the preacher should be dissatisfied with his appointment. The proposition was rejected after thorough discussion and Kelley withdrew. By this action the Conference declared that the sole power of appointment was with the Bishops; both as to preachers in charge and presiding elders.

In the General Conference of 1860 Bro. Wells moved that the new Bishop, in stationing the preachers, be aided by a committee of not less than three nor more than four members, chosen by the Conference, to meet next day.

Bro. Orinoid moved "that the Conference be authorized to nominate and elect their own presiding elders." This was voted out. In the General Conference of 1868 it was moved that "each Annual Conference respectively, without delay, shall annually choose by ballot its own presiding elders." The question was debated for three days, and was lost by a vote of fifty-two yeas and seventy-three nays. In the same Conference adopted a plan of a delegated General Conference, and a constitution for the same, was moved up by Joshua Soule. This was as he drew it, with the exception of that item which regulates the mode of representation. The third of these restrictive rules reads: They shall not change or alter any part of our government, so as to do away with episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency. The proposition to authorize Annual Conferences to elect their presiding elders was voted down by an increased majority in the General Conference of 1816. Four years later Joshua Soule was elected Bishop. Six days afterwards these resolutions making presiding elders elective by the Annual Conferences were introduced and passed. Joshua Soule, believing this to be a violation of the constitution of the church and of the function of the episcopal office, declined to be consecrated. The resolutions were suspended for four years. The General Conference of 1820 took the following action in reference to them:

Whereas, A majority of the Annual Conferences have judged the resolutions making presiding elders elective, and which were passed and then suspended at the last General Conference, unconstitutional; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the said resolutions are not of authority, and shall not be carried into effect.

Joshua Soule was again elected Bishop and then consecrated. From all this it is evident, first, that the power to appoint the preachers to their work was lodged, and was designed to remain, in the Bishop. That this responsibility entitled him to the choice of his advisers and that the selection of presiding elders must be left with him.

Now, if the simple election of presiding elders by the Annual Conference would be violence to the episcopal function, much more would such violence be done if the law made the appointments dependent on the will of presiding elders. To divide this power still further by adding laymen to the appointing college would certainly be a radical change in the episcopal function in our church and a destruction of "the plan of our itinerant general superintendency."

I insist that under the existing polity both the clerical and lay elements of our church have influential access to the appointing power. The Bishop seeks information from his cabinet, from other preachers, from laymen; the Conference-room tells him much. The lay delegates to the Annual Conference have a kind of official access to the Bishop and to the presiding elders during the session of Conference. The Bishop makes mistakes, sometimes grievous ones. But so do his advisers; and he is likely to correct far more of theirs than he makes of his own. Presiding elders have the largest share of influence over the appointments, no doubt. Let us not say, "They have axes to grind." That is an unworthy impeachment. They have their infirmities like the rest of us, but are yet as good and true as any. It is not that laymen lack goodness and fidelity, that they should be excluded from controlling appointments, but that ours is a connectional itinerant system in which every part is to be served in reference to the best interests of the whole, and a layman is incompetent under such a system; he simply can not have the information and that freedom from local bias which will enable him to act for the whole. It is only an inevitable deduction from the workings of human nature in even good men, that to divide the appointing power as these good brethren propose would produce dissensions, strife and disintegration. To say that this is only my opinion is no answer, so long as the opinion is based on facts and sound principles.

Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep it Holy.

MR. EDITOR: The obligation to keep the Sabbath holy is of universal authority. In this article I am not going to argue this point. It is so clearly and so often asserted in the Bible that no argument is necessary with those who credit its divine authority. The "Sabbath was made for man," and properly observed by him is of incalculable value to his pecuniary, physical and spiritual interests as well as emblematical of the heavenly Sabbath. Sabbath breaking is one of the sins for which God usually begins the punishment of the guilty in this world. No man ever acquires any real good to himself in the end by trampling under foot the sanctities of the holy Sabbath. The judgments of God often fall on Sabbath breakers in the very act. Witness the many disasters of Sabbath excursionists for pleasure or worldly gain, both by land and water. The downfall of the kingdom of Judah; the destruction of Jerusalem and burning of the first temple and the seventy years' captivity of the nation was mainly attributed to their Sabbath breaking and its attendant sins. Let Sabbath breakers make a note of this. They expose themselves to the wrath of God by disregarding his law of the Sabbath. I have been led to these reflections by the information that another exposition is soon to be opened in New Orleans. After the experience of last winter all Christian peoples should be doubly on their guard against being entrapped again.

When the World's Exposition was first spoken of I was very favorable to the enterprise; but when the management, in defiance both of the laws of God and every State in the Union except one, as well as against the respectful petitions of every leading Christian church in the land, determined to keep their gates open and their machinery running on the holy Sabbath, I at once determined never to see that exposition because I could not "follow a multitude to do evil" nor become "a partaker of other men's sins." I expected to stand in a minority in this matter, but I felt it due to our outraged Christian Sabbath not to patronize such a persistent desecration of its holy sanctities.

When our forefathers—both Puritans and Cavaliers—came to settle the original American colonies they brought their Bibles containing their Sabbath and Sabbath laws with them and immediately continued its observance and enforced it on their families and co-colonists, since which time its recognition and observance has been universal by all truly Christian people. We are glad to believe that by far the greater part of our American citizens, both in and out of the church, are in favor of maintaining our Christian Sabbath. If anyone wishes to know more about what is implied in "Remembering the Sabbath day to keep it holy," in reading your Bibles pause a moment and consider what is said by the pen of inspiration wherever the Sabbath is mentioned and consult our Bible dictionaries under the article, "Sabbath," and you will not again be misled about keeping the day holy.

It is time for all who believe in the Bible to rise up in vindication of our desecrated Christian Sabbath. We should not patronize anything that implies Sabbath breaking, whether exposition, excursion by boat or railroad for pleasure or business, or any other lumping that may be gotten up by ungodly men to draw others to be partakers of their sins. I am truly glad that you, as our representative editor, have taken a bold stand against official Sabbath breaking at our coming exposition. Your patrons approve of your course. If there should seem to be a disposition to outrage the settled religious convictions of Christian people, as it was done last winter, please give us due and timely notice and we will not be there.

J. G. JONES.

HAILEBURST, Mississippi.

The Missouri Conference.

We have just closed a delightful session of our Conference at Columbia. Bishop Granbery presided, and John D. Vinell was, for the twenty-third time, elected secretary of the body, with J. H. Pritchett and A. V. Bayley as his assistants. The past year has been one of great prosperity within our bounds, there having been a number of extensive revivals, and the net increase in membership is 1,885. There was over $2,000 increase in missionary contributions, and all the other interests of the church showed a similar advance. The proposition of the Church Extension Board to place the Centenary contributions of our Conference to the loan fund, in a separate fund which the Conference might name, provided the amount was increased to $5,000, was accepted, and the remaining sum of $1,000 was subscribed and the fund named "The Marvin Loan Fund." It is hoped that the other Conferences will follow the good example of the Missouri Conference and that by the General Conference the loan fund will reach the sum of one hundred thousand dollars.

Rev. W. C. Dunlap, commissioner of education and agent of Palme Institute, was present, and communicated to the Conference the generous offer of a well-known Missouri Methodist to endow the Palme Institute with $25,000, as soon as the church will erect suitable buildings free of debt. Bro. Dunlap is calling on the various Conferences to pay their pro rata of the $15,000 needed to put up these buildings, and our Conference promptly responded with the $550 asked for us.

Great interest was felt in the proposed change of name, and a warm discussion was elicited when the question came up. The name proposed by the General Conference was rejected by a vote of 105 yeas to 21 nays; but the following memorial to the General Conference was adopted by a vote of 78 yeas to 40 nays:

Resolved, That in case the proposed change of name, to wit, "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America," is not adopted by the Annual Conferences, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to assemble at Richmond, Va., in May, 1886, be and is hereby memorialized by this Conference to eliminate the word "South" from the name of our church, and to otherwise modify said name as said General Conference may, in its wisdom, judge best.

The Conference also passed a resolution memorializing the General Conference "to provide for the church a hymn book, with such adaptations to our need that there may be one uniform hymn book throughout our connection."

The following are the delegates to the General Conference: Clerical—W. M. Rush, W. G. Miller, E. R. Henrich and M. B. Chapman. Lay—T. D. Woodson, John D. Vinell, P. P. Ellis and Thomas Shackelford.

Columbia, the most beautiful little city in the West, the seat of the State University and of two large female colleges, entertained the Conference with a large-hearted hospitality, which won all hearts. You may well imagine how fortunate your correspondent esteems himself to be appointed to serve such a people after having had for several years the arduous work of a district.

The next session of the Conference is to be at St. Joseph. I inclose a list of the appointments.

M. D. CHAPMAN.

ST. JOSEPH, Missouri.

APPOINTMENTS.

ST. CHARLES DISTRICT.—W. E. Bell, P. E. St. Charles station, J. A. Swift, O'Fallon, M. B. Broadus; Warrenton and Wright City, L. Rush; Jonesburg, S. L. Woody; Troy and Wentzville, J. H. Pritchett; Brussels, C. McCluer; Prairieville, T. M. Patterson; Ashley, T. R. Keudall; Louisiana station, J. S. Allen; Clarksville, H. D. Groves; Frankford, J. M. L. Hoyle; New Florence, John Holman; Palmetto Institute, J. H. Pritchett; St. Charles College, H. M. Myers.

MEXICO DISTRICT.—J. H. Ledbetter, P. E. Mexico station, to be supplied by J. S. Smith; Mexico circuit, to be supplied by J. T. Moreman; Auxvasse, M. L. Gray; Cedar City, H. D. Houston; Rendeville, W. G. Shackelford; Fulton station, John A. Beagle; Millersburg, D. N. Epperson; Montgomery City, W. H. Lewis; Wellsburg, John Rowan; Centralia, W. H. Younger; Surgeon, F. L. Lynn; Madison, G. W. Rich; Fulton circuit, C. G. Hill.

FAYETTE DISTRICT.—John A. Munroe, P. E. Fayette station, W. T. Bolling; Fayette circuit, to be supplied; Glasgow station, H. B. Watson; Booneville circuit, W. Toole; Columbia station, M. B. Chapman; Ashland, J. F. Shores; Rocheport, D. R. Shackelford; Franklin, J. H. Hager; Benick, M. T. E. Potter; Hanterville, S. W. A. Berry; Salisbury, H. P. Bond; Keytesville, C. W. Hurley; president of Central College, E. R. Hendrix; Columbia circuit, W. H. Phillips.

CHILLICOTHE DISTRICT.—John Anderson, P. E. Chillicothe station, C. Holmes; Chillicothe circuit, J. T. Carney; Brunswick station, Thompson Penn; Carrollton station, D. M. Proctor; R. A. Austin, supernumerary; Bedford and Tins, S. W. Gope; Black Oak, J. H. Hubbard; Norborne, C. W. Watts; DeWitt, Henry Kay; J. A. Hydr, supernumerary; Triplett, W. C. Maggart; Bucklin, W. H. Roper; Linneus, J. L. Meffert; Brookfield, to be supplied; Milan, C. N. Broadhurst; Brownsville, to be supplied; Bogard, J. L. Gilbert.

PLATTSBURG DISTRICT.—D. C. O'Jewell, P. E. Plattsburg station, Robert White; Osborn circuit, W.

M. Wainwright; Cameron station, W. E. Dockery; Parkville circuit, T. M. Rucker; Platte City, L. Pulliam; Weston, H. L. Davis; Hardin, J. P. Godbey; Richmond station, J. W. Ranney; Milledge circuit, Thomas H. Swearingen; Edgerton, G. Tanquary; Kingston, to be supplied (by E. C. McClintock and W. T. Cary); Holt, J. T. Winstead; Lawson and Lathrop, J. Y. Blakey; Liberty and Kearney, J. W. Jordan; Missouri City, to be supplied.

ST. JOSEPH DISTRICT.—M. R. Jones, P. E. Francis Street, St. Joseph, W. G. Miller; Tenth Street and Centenary, A. Mizell; Hundley Chapel, C. I. Van Deventer; St. Joseph circuit, R. P. Jones; Dearborn, H. W. Howerton; Forest City, J. B. Farnell; Craig, to be supplied; Hanniburg, W. O. Medley; Elm, H. C. Bolen; Maryville station, R. H. Cooper; Bartard, B. H. Stillwell; T. R. Hedepeth, supernumerary; Savannah, D. F. Bone; Marysville, J. T. McDonald; missionary to China, A. P. Parker.

HANNIBAL DISTRICT.—W. W. McMurtry, P. E. Hannibal, Park Church, E. K. Miller; Hannibal, Arch Street, Z. M. Williams; Palmyra circuit, H. W. Jones; Philadelphia, to be supplied (by T. B. Newby); Palmyra station, J. S. Frazier; Monroe City, to be supplied (by C. W. Tucker); Monroe circuit, B. F. Johnson; Shelbyville, J. M. O'Brien; Hannibal, S. H. Milan; Monticello, J. A. Wallis; Kahoka, Jacob McEwen; Colony, to be supplied; LaBelle, J. D. Shook; Canton, C. E. Wallis; Novelty, W. H. Uter.

GALLATIN DISTRICT.—George J. Warren, P. E. Gallatin station, A. V. Baxley; Junesport, S. S. Hardin; Elmhurst, to be supplied; Jamestown, J. D. Hunt; Albany station, J. W. Keltney; Albany circuit, W. S. Rooker; Lorraine, S. B. Tabor and B. F. Hall; Lineville, H. T. Leeper; Graet City, F. M. Cooper; Breckenridge, W. B. Johnson; Spring Hill, R. M. Dameron.

MACON DISTRICT.—J. P. Nolan, P. E. Macon station, W. A. Hanna; Bloomington circuit, J. S. Todd; Cairo, J. R. Divilbiss; Moberly station, L. B. Madison; Paris circuit, J. W. Owen; Shelby, J. O. Edmonston; Clarence, W. A. Tarwater; LaPlata, J. S. Rooker; Kirksville station, J. E. Squires; Brashears circuit, J. T. Kinsey; Edina, J. M. Settle; Memphis, W. B. Beagle; Queen City, John V. Humphreys.

TRANSFERRED.—W. W. Jones, to South-west Missouri Conference.

Nichols, on Campbellism.

The Rev. George H. Nichols, of Bethel, Giles Co., Tenn., has furnished yet another pamphlet on the errors of Campbellism. This last of the series is a tract of fifty-three pages in colloquial form, published at our Publishing House in Nashville. He calls it The Furnace—ten cents a copy. Mr. Nichols is a rare genius. He conducts his arguments in a way peculiar to himself. He goes directly to the Scripture text for proof in every case. He proves not so much by argument or reasoning as by the liberal testimony of the words of the book. He handles these passages with most remarkable dexterity. Unlike many other polemical writers, he addresses himself only to the specific and peculiar errors of Campbellism and not to that denunciations indiscriminately. He points out these errors clearly one by one and refutes them with clearness and distinctness. And, withal, he is brief and always to the point. These errors are grouped in convenient form so as to appear very plain and distinct. It is one of the very best essays on that subject I have seen.

The practical importance of those peculiar and specious errors in the Christian system is frequently overlooked. To the average citizen of tolerably fair intelligence they are not apparent. In the affirmative form in which they are generally put they seem unobjectionable. For instance, one of these errors, and one of the most important, is set forth usually in this wise: "Do religion—do what Christianity requires—that is all." Well, that is true. "Go into the city and it will be told there what thou must do." "Ye shall, therefore, keep my statutes and my judgments; which if a man do, he shall live in them." "They say and do not." "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" "This do and live." "So speak ye and so do as they that shall be judged," etc. "Learn to do well." "If a man be a hearer of the word and not a doer," etc. But our Campbellite friends make a strange perversion of this doing religion. "Have you repented of your sins?" "Yes." "And been baptized?"

"Yes." "Then you have done religion, for this is precisely what is required."

A homely illustration is at hand. Cotton was beginning to open in August, and a little negro was told, "Jim, you are big enough to pick cotton, get you a little sack and go to the field with the rest." "Oh, yes!" said Jim, and off he went very cheerfully to picking cotton. Next day Jim was playing about the quarter. "Jim, I thought you were going to pick cotton." "Oh, yes sir, I did pick it." Jim certainly complied with the letter of the law, but this did not greatly benefit the cotton field.

This error is by no means confined to our Campbellite friends. It is visible in many, if not most of our pulpits. "I have been converted," answers too many questions. "Have been converted" is of itself of no present value whatever. Conversion is by many regarded as equivalent to a diploma. It has no such character. It stood for that, then, present experience. Historic religion is of no real value to-day any more than is the historic health or food of last year.

Campbellism has had away for the last forty years in the blue grass region of Kentucky. The editor of the Central Methodist said to Sam Jones the other day, "You can succeed as easily in taking any ten cities in the United States as in capturing the blue grass region of Kentucky for the Lord." And the editor's own comment on this expression is as follows:

A rich soil, increase of goods, dexterity and foolery, whiskey and cards, progressive eudie and hugging dances, a superficial view of repentance and faith, want of conversion in persons joining the churches and an almost total failure of administering discipline, have placed the devil in the lead, and for a time he owns the land. Some day, by some providence or means, we will have to go back to the old paths with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and when we all the lamp with oil we must fill the vessel also with enough to last until midnight.

Savior, visit thy plantation;
Send us, Lord, a gracious rain.
All will come to desolation
Unless thou return again.

N. ARREY.

MINISTERING.—Pure religion and unadorned is "ministering," not the other thing, "being ministered unto." It is hauding over the morning paper to another for first perusal. It is vacating a pleasant seat by the fire for one who comes in chilled. It is giving up the most restful arm-chair or sofa-corner for one who is weary. It is "moving up" in the pew to let the newcomer sit down by the entrance. It is rising from your place to darken the blind when the sun's rays stream in too brightly upon some face in the circle. It is giving your own comfort and convenience of another. This is at once true courtesy and real Christianity. If we mean to copy the spirit of the Master, we must be ready in every relation of life and at every hour of the day to give up being valued upon, and to practice this self-sacrificing, beneficent and "ministering" graciousness of spirit and conduct.—Rev. A. L. Stoue, D. D.

EASTERN POSTMEN.—The postman runs or trots with a letter bag on a stick which he carries across his shoulder. On the end of the stick is a cluster of bells to warn people to clear the way. Some carry a horn, which they blow, if any one is in the road. The distance between the real houses is seven miles. The men go with a peculiar motion, the body bent forward, one hand holding the stick on which the mail bag hangs, the other spread out as though to ward off anything that might come in the way. They half trot, half run. Their clothing consists of a white cloth on the head and one worn around the waist, extending to the knees. With the exception of a glance, they never notice anyone they meet. A postman always brings to my mind the words of Elisha to his servant: "Gird up thy loins, and take thy staff in thine hand and go thy way; if thou meet any man, salute him not; and, if any salute thee, answer him not again."

The Bible is the Christian's great textbook, and should be made the constant and authoritative rule of his faith and practice. He should meditate in it day and night. "The duty of searching the Scriptures is enjoined by Christ himself and the habit is highly commended by the Apostle Paul. It is a duty which no Christian can neglect without great spiritual loss. A portion of God's word should be read every day. Its truths should be treasured up in the mind, that they may exert a controlling influence on the life." "By the words of the lips," says the Psalmist, "I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer." Do not neglect this great revelation of divine truth and love.—Methodist Recorder.

Two Post-graduate Fellowships (worth $200 each), and four Graduate Fellowships (worth $200 each), are annually awarded. Board from $12 to $30 per month. Register sent on application to Wila Williams, Secretary of Faculty.

L. C. GARLAND, Chancellor.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending September 22, 1885.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	62	@	—
Ordinary	72	—	—
Good ordinary	82	—	—
Low middling	9	—	—
Middling	9 1/2	—	—
Good middling	9 13-16	—	—
Fair	10 5-16	—	—
Galveston middling	8 1/2	—	—
Mobile middling	9 1-14	—	—
St. Louis middling	9 1/2	—	—

SUGAR.

Interlof.	—	—	—
Common	—	—	—
Good common	—	—	—
Fair	—	—	—
Good fair	—	—	—
Fully fair	—	—	—
Prime	—	—	—
Strictly Prime	—	—	—
Choice	—	—	—
Choice	—	—	—
Yellow clarified	—	—	—
White clarified	—	—	—
Choice whites	—	—	—
Granulated	—	—	—

MOLASSES.

Syrup	—	—	—
Fair	—	—	—
Strictly Prime	—	—	—
Choice	—	—	—
Fancy	—	—	—

RICE.

Fancy	—	—	—
Choice	—	—	—
Prime	—	—	—
Good	—	—	—
Fair	—	—	—
Ordinary	—	—	—
Common	—	—	—
No. 2	—	—	—
Rough	—	—	—

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	4 7/8	—	—
Minnesota patents	5 5/8	—	—
Extra fancy	5 3/8	—	—
Winter wheat patents	5 7/8	—	—
Choice	4 4/8	—	—
Fancy	4 7/8	—	—
Extra fancy	5 3/8	—	—

CORN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 1/2	—	—
Corn meal	2 4/8	—	—
Grits	3 3/8	—	—
Hominy	3 2/8	—	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn:	—	—	—
White	—	—	—
Yellow	—	—	—
Mixed	—	—	—
Oats:	—	—	—
Western	5 1/2	—	—
Texas rust-proof	5 7/8	—	—
Barley:	—	—	—
W. cut	90	—	—
Hay:	—	—	—
Choice	18 50	—	—
Prime	17 00	—	—

PROVISIONS.

Pork:	—	—	—
Mess	10 00	—	—
Prime mess	9 75	—	—
Rump	9 50	—	—
Bacon:	—	—	—
Breakfast	9 1/2	—	—
Shoulders	4 1/2	—	—
Sides, clear	4 1/2	—	—
Sides, clear rib	4 1/2	—	—
Hams:	—	—	—
Sugar-cured	11	—	—
Dry salt meat:	—	—	—
Shoulders	4 1/2	—	—
Sides, clear	4 1/2	—	—
Sides, clear rib	4 1/2	—	—

FISH.

Maackerel:	—	—	—
Extra No. 1, in bbls.	15 00	—	—
Half bbls.	8 00	—	—
No. 1, in bbls.	9 00	—	—
Half bbls.	4 50	—	—
No. 2, in bbls.	7 50	—	—
Half bbls.	4 10	—	—

GROCERIES.

Coffee:	—	—	—
Rio, choice	9 1/2	—	—
Ordinary, choice	12	—	—
Java, choice	22	—	—
Butter:	—	—	—
Western dairy	16	—	—
New York dairy	16	—	—
Country	—	—	—
Lard:	—	—	—
Choice	6 1/2	—	—
Teas:	—	—	—
Choice	50	—	—
Fair	25	—	—
Oils:	—	—	—
Coal, cases	17	—	—
Coal, bbls	12	—	—
Cotton seed	35	—	—
Lard	6 1/2	—	—

VEGETABLES.

Cabbages:	—	—	—
Western, per crate	75	—	—
Chicago, per 100	10 00	—	—
Potatoes:	—	—	—
Louisiana	1 25	—	—
Western	1 25	—	—
Onions:	—	—	—
Kentucky	5 50	—	—
Louisiana	1 75	—	—
Western	1 75	—	—

BALING STUFFS.

Baling:	—	—	—
No. 1	10 1/2	—	—
No. 2	11 1/2	—	—
Baling twine:	—	—	—
No. 1	15	—	—
No. 2	15	—	—
Ties:	—	—	—
Bundle	1 25	—	—

SUNDRIES.

Poultry:	—	—	—
Chickens, Western	4 00	—	—
Young	2 10	—	—
Chickens, South	2 75	—	—
Young	1 50	—	—
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	—	—
Eggs:	—	—	—
Western	15	—	—
Southern	17	—	—
Wool:	—	—	—
Lake	17	—	—
Louisiana	15	—	—
Burly	7 1/2	—	—
Hides:	—	—	—
Green salted	7	—	—
Dried salted	10	—	—
Braves:	—	—	—
Oak, kegs	—	—	—
Oak, barrels	75 00	—	—
Oak, casks	100 00	—	—
Oak, hogheads	130 00	—	—
Hoop poles:	—	—	—
Hoghead	50 00	—	—
Barrels	24 00	—	—
Half barrels	—	—	—
Fertilizers:	—	—	—
Cotton seed	10 00	—	—
Meal	23 50	—	—
Pure ground bone	42 00	—	—
Muriatic acid	—	—	—
Sulphuric acid	—	—	—
Bone black	—	—	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Mr. Cleveland's position on the silver question is to-day precisely what it was last winter, when before he was inaugurated President he declared himself in favor of suspending the coinage of silver dollars. Nothing has occurred to change or in any measure modify his views, and in all human probability nothing will between now and the meeting of Congress.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 16.—For the first time in Maryland a State convention of the Prohibition party assembled here to-day, and the delegates were larger than was expected. They propose to contend for the State officers to be voted for at the November elections.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 16.—The grand jury to-day found five indictments under the United States laws, Judge Kane, responding to a request for instructions, ruled that indictments for unlawful cohabitation were proper for every distinct violation of the law shown. The offender might be indicted every day for one offense shown. Ellen Birmingham, second wife of Thomas Birmingham, before the grand jury, to-day, said she had been married eight years. She had three children—one four years of age by Birmingham, and two other since, but did not know who was the father; couldn't remember like some folks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Genesta was heated 1 minute and 38 seconds corrected time, and 2 minutes 38 seconds actual time. The course was twenty miles to leeward and return, from the Scotland Lightship, the wind being west-northwest.

RAWLINS, W. T., Sept. 16.—The Knights of Labor have taken up the mud against the Chinese, and their ultimate expulsion from the Territory is probable. The Chinese here are becoming demoralized. Thirty of them boarded yesterday's west-bound train, and were all disposed of for the west on foot, with their baggage on their backs. The white miners were told they could go back to work this morning, and will likely do so if there is no attempt to work the Chinese with them.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 17.—Rev. Benj. F. Teft, D. D., died yesterday evening, aged seventy-two years. He was once president of the Genesee College, editor of the Methodist Book Concern, author of several religious works, and United States consul to Stockholm in 1882, and acting minister.

RINDOLPH, N. Y., Sept. 17.—In the election for school commissioner the women generally voted, which had the effect of bringing out a very large male vote. The total number of ballots cast was twenty times as many as usual. Many young ladies tried to vote, but their ballots were rejected. The women as a whole were more electioneering than novel.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The United States Treasurer is in receipt from all parts of the country for $3 and $10 in large quantities. He says the supply of these notes is sufficient to meet all demands. The Treasurer added in response to an inquiry on the subject that so far as he knew there was no immediate prospect of a resumption of the issue of $1 and $2 notes.

CHRYSENE, W. T., Sept. 21.—Work was resumed at the Rock Springs collieries this morning. All the Chinese miners went to work, and also all the white mechanics, engineers, blacksmiths, firemen and carpenters employed in the mine. The white coal miners who declined to work were paid off. Everything is quiet, and no more trouble is anticipated.

MERIDIAN, Miss., Sept. 21.—The anti-prohibitionists were again victorious to-day. A fight has been made on the application of M. R. Jones for retail license, which was finally terminated this evening by the council granting the license, and Jones will open in the morning. The prohibitionists took exceptions and will carry the matter to the courts.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—The Rev. Father Jas. McCaffrey, of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, in this city, created a sensation yesterday morning by announcing from the pulpit that the Catholic children of his parish who attend the public schools will be heretofore barred from the celebration of the holy communion. St. Patrick's parish is one of the most wealthy and influential in the city. He said: "We have no time to prepare children who attend public schools for their first communion. We have a large school here and we teach every child that is brought to us, and no one can get away on the plea of poverty, for we will teach them free. They must be taught in the parish schools if they are to become Catholics. They are in no way prepared to receive the sacraments in the public schools. Now, we don't propose to permit our children to attend the public schools and then to come here and get a special preparation for their first communion. Children who go to public schools are not fit to receive their first communion. They have received no religious instruction, and what I say now is, that they shall not be given their first communion in this church."

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—At the Mormon conference held in London to-day delegates were present from Norway, Sweden, Holland and Germany. President Penrose, of Salt Lake City, in his address boasted that Mormonism was spreading in England, Scotland and Wales, but admitted that small results were being met with in Ireland. He said there were six Mormon meeting houses in London, and several thousand converts, and that two years ago last January 1200 Mormon emigrants had been sent to Iowa and Utah. He predicted the defeat of the United States government in its efforts to suppress polygamy.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Mr. Gladstone to-day issued a four column manifesto to his constituents in Midlothian. He invites a comparison of the work of the recent Parliament with that of the Parliament which preceded it, and confidently appeals to the electors for a verdict.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Admiral Mot telegraphed the Minister of War from Tientsin, under date of the twelfth instant, that he recommended the country on the tenth to ascertain whether the Hovas were erecting forts at Tarsat. He led a column of troops toward Gueouam on the enemy's right, and discovered a strong force of Hovas entrenched. An engagement ensued, in which the French loss was thirty-three men wounded, including four officers, and two men killed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20.—A council of ministers was held to-day, presided over by the Sultan, at which it was decided to appeal to the powers to maintain the rights of the Porte in Roumelia. Orders have been issued to collect an army corps at Adrianople.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Ludwig II, King of Bavaria, is hopelessly insane. The King's insanity has lately taken a less fantastic and more furious form. He no longer delights in listening in solitude to costly opera or in building palaces where they can never be used, but he amuses himself by knocking down his courtiers and in beating his soldiers and attendants with the most disgraceful brutality.

There is a rumor in Odessa over the uprising in Roumelia and Bulgaria amount to 50,000 men. The Turkish forces have not yet crossed the frontier, but the authorities are greatly excited and active preparations are being made.

ROME, Sept. 21.—Repeated shocks of earthquake were felt in Benevento to-day, causing a panic among the inhabitants, many of whom fled from town. A large portion of the population is camping out in anticipation of further shocks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 21.—Anarchy prevails in Albania. Turkish troops and a body of Albanians have had an engagement at Pirizend. Five battalions of Turkish troops have been dispatched to the scene of the trouble.

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 21.—There were 37 new cases of cholera and 14 deaths reported in the Spanish lines here yesterday.

PALESTINE, Italy, Sept. 21.—During the past twenty-four hours 182 new cases of cholera and 123 deaths from the disease were reported here.

A REMARKABLE CONVERSION.—Those citizens of Atlanta who were converted about the Kimball House, at 8 o'clock, were considerably surprised to see Mr. Sam Small, the well-known humorist and journalist, mount the platform in front of the fire bell and begin a sermon. A large portion of the crowd of 300 or 400 who gathered here were at first disposed to treat the matter as a joke, but Mr. Small's earnestness soon sobered them, and they listened attentively to a short but eloquent speech.

Mr. Small has not taught the theological style. He used the similes of a politician rather than an exhorter, but the sermon was well timed and sensible, and the concluding prayer was excellent. The speaker told his audience that he appeared before them on this occasion simply to publicly announce his conversion, and his intention to hereafter be found battling for the cause of his Savior. He asked the prayers of all in his behalf, that he might not stray from the path of Christianity. He announced that he would soon enter the service of what he called Christianity. At the conclusion of his talk he asked that all uncover while he prayed, which was done.

Mr. Small told the reporter that his conversion came upon him this morning like a flash of lightning. He had something to do with it, but the chief reason was that having run through the gamut of sin and merriment he had concluded that his life was all wrong.

Mr. Small was congratulated at the conclusion of his brief but a number of converts. To one who was known to him, Mr. Small replied, "No, you are not, Col. Zacharia, and I hope I shall fight as bravely for Christ as you fought during the war. The general opinion here to-night is that another Sam Jones will soon excite the minds of the religious world. It is said Mr. Small has just recovered from a spree."—Times-Democrat.

The Greatest City in the World.

A correspondent of the New Orleans Times-Democrat has supplied the following particulars: London, England, is the greatest city the world ever saw. It is the heart of the British Empire and the world. It covers with its fifteen square miles. It numbers within its boundaries 5,000,000 of inhabitants. It comprises over 200,000 foreigners from every quarter of the globe. It contains more Roman Catholics than Rome itself; more Jews than the whole of Palestine; more Irish than Dublin; more Scotchmen than Edinburgh; more Welshmen than Cardiff; more country-raised persons than the counties of Devon, Warwickshire and Durham combined. It has a birth in it every five minutes, has a death in it every five minutes, and has an average of 15,000 new houses built in it every year. In 1883 there were added 22,110 new houses to the vast aggregate of dwellings which is called the metropolis, thus forming a distance of sixty square miles and sixty-four yards.

It is difficult to form any mental picture from these figures. Brighton (the queen of watering places) in 1881 had 23,739 inhabitants, so that London in 1883 added to itself a town bigger than Brighton. It would be like two Charing Crosses or Oxford, or quite to represent the additions made in London in a single year. London has 40,000 annually added (by birth) to its population; has over 1,000 ships and 10,000 sailboats in its port every day; has as many beer-shops and gin-palaces as would be needed to supply a stretch of Charing Cross to Portsmouth, a distance of seventy-eight miles; has 38,000 drunkards annually brought before its magistrates; has seventy miles of open shops every Sunday; has an influence with all parts of the world represented by a yearly delivery in its post of one hundred and fifty trains passing Clapham Junction every day, and the Transportation (underground) Railroad runs 1,211 trains every day. The London Omnibus Company have over 700 vehicles, which carry 50,000 passengers annually.

It is more dangerous to walk the streets of London than to travel by railroad or cross the Atlantic from New Orleans to Liverpool. Last year 130 persons were killed and 2,600 injured by vehicles in the streets. There are in London 15,000 persons connected with the post-office. The cost of gas for lighting London annually is $3,000,000. London has 400 daily and weekly newspapers. Last year there were nearly 600 fires. The ancient and famous city of London was first founded by Britons, and since the first building it is 3,000 years. The draining system of London is superb, and the death rate very low.

Those who live without faith must die without hope.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The camp meeting at Spring Creek Camp Ground, Spring Creek circuit, Alexandria district, will commence Friday before the second Sabbath in October. There will be a boarding tent on the ground. Provisions for sale for tent holders and guests. Preachers and their families will be taken care of, and are cordially invited to come. This camp ground is fifteen miles from Leconte and twenty-five miles from Alexandria.

The Palmer Camp Meeting, fifteen miles north of Mississippi City, will commence Friday night before the first Sunday in October. Ministers of the gospel cordially invited, and conveyance will be furnished from Mississippi City to Camp Ground to all preachers attending.

Camp meeting will commence at the Salem Camp Ground, Friday night before the second Sunday in October. All preachers are invited to attend with their families. Those coming by rail will be met at 6 o'clock Friday morning at Scranton, with conveyance to the camp ground.

The Deulah Camp Meeting will commence on Friday night before the first Sunday in October. All ministers are invited and will be well provided for. Conveyance will be furnished from Nashville to the camp ground.

The camp meeting at Union Camp Ground, twelve miles east of DeSoto, commences on Friday night before the first Sunday in October. Preachers are invited, and will be taken care of from DeSoto if they let me know they are coming. My address is Shubuta, Miss.

Shiloh Camp Meeting will begin on Thursday night before the second Sabbath in October. Preachers are invited, and will be met with conveyance at Pelahatchie, Miss.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

EUFALIA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Enon and Midway, at Enon, Oct. 10, 11.
Bentley circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11.
Skippers circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11.
Oak circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11.
Echo circuit, at Center, Oct. 11.
Pawling circuit, at Center, Oct. 11.
Columbia circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Pawling circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Hendry circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Eufaula circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Pawling circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Hendry circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.
Eufaula circuit, at Gordon, Oct. 11.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Greensboro station, at Bethel, Oct. 10, 11.
Green circuit, at Bethel, Oct. 10, 11.
Havana circuit, at Havana, Oct. 10, 11.
Livingston circuit, at Livingston, Oct. 10, 11.
Bentley circuit, at Center, Oct. 10, 11.
Bentley circuit, at Center, Oct. 10, 11.
Bentley circuit, at Center, Oct. 10, 11.

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Pensacola station, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.
Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola, Oct. 10, 11.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.
Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 10, 11.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Spring Creek, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.
Alexandria circuit, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.

DELHI DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Richland, at Little Creek, Oct. 10, 11.
Tensas, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.
Waterford, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.
Waterford, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.
Waterford, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.
Waterford, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.
Waterford, at Water Chapel, Oct. 10, 11.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.
Carondelet, at New Orleans, Oct. 10, 11.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—THIRD ROUND.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.
Shreveport, at Shreveport, Oct. 10, 11.

SEASIDE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.
Seaside, at Seaside, Oct. 10, 11.

WINONA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.
Winona, at Winona, Oct. 10, 11.

ABERDEEN DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.
Aberdeen, at Aberdeen, Oct. 10, 11.

SAVANNAH DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Savannah, at Savannah, Oct. 10, 11.
Savannah, at Savannah, Oct. 10, 11.
Savannah, at Savannah, Oct. 10, 11.
Savannah, at Savannah, Oct. 10, 11.
Sav

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 40.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1522.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

WAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
HARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.
Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WHELEIN,
REV. ORAS W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
REV. W. T. J. HULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. F. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

ONLY.

BY CHARLOTTE MUELLER, M. A.

Only a word for the Master,
Lovingly, quietly said,
Only a word!
Yet the Master heard,
And some fainting hearts were led,
Only a look of remembrance,
Sorrowful, gentle and deep,
Only a look!
Yet the strong man shook,
And he went alone to weep.
Only some act of devotion,
Willingly, joyfully done,
"Surely 'twas naught!"
(So the proud world thought.)
But yet souls for Christ were won!
Only an hour with the children,
Fleeting, cheerfully given,
Yet seed was sown
In that hour alone
Which would bring forth fruit for heaven!
Only—but Jesus is looking Constantly, tenderly down
To earth and sees
Those who strive to please,
And their love he loves to crown.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South,
in the West.

Will you publish one more article on a change of name, or rather on the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the West? Of course it will make very little difference with the church in the South whether the name is changed or not. There the name is appropriate, although it is seldom mentioned; but instead we say, "The Methodist Church." We claim the world as our parish, and the question should be, Can we cultivate other portions of this parish successfully while wearing this as another name? If we can, we should wear it still; if not, we should change it for another.

It is natural for us to first inquire, What have we done under our present name? When we review our history we may well exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" A little of about one hundred per cent. Twenty years is not to be laughed at, and it is no wonder that many, while counting our numbers, say, "We are doing well enough." Notwithstanding such rapid progress has been made, if it has been made mainly in the South, where the name is not a misnomer, it does not furnish a reason why the name should not be changed. The time was when our name was to some extent a help to us, even in the West. It was known as the "South Church," and men united with it and supported it because of their political and sectional prejudices. That time is rapidly passing by, sectional prejudices are dying out and the North and the South are beginning to understand each other and love each other more.

A California D. D. recently stated in a communication to one of the Advocates, "Our name in this country is regarded as a synonym of all that is good." If this be true, it is an easy matter to prove it. Do the people, as sectional prejudice dies out, join and support us? I believe reported to the Christian Advocate that we had made considerable gains in the Pacific Conference last year. The report was based upon the statistical secretary's report, which was afterwards found to be incorrect, and instead of gaining we lost about one hundred.

In order to ascertain whether our name hinders us it is also necessary to inquire, At what points in the Western Conferences are we successful—when we come in contact with the Methodist Episcopal Church or when we do not come in contact with it? You may send intelligent, consecrated men into any community where there are not other churches and they will make converts and add members to their church, be its name what it may; but will these same men be equally successful when they come in contact with other churches? We will take the Pacific Conference for an example. At most points in the country the two Methodist Churches do not come in contact with each other; so to ascertain which is the successful church we will compare statistics in the towns and cities. The Pacific Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had last year 4,401 members; of these, 1,503 were in cities and towns of 1,500 or more inhabitants. The California Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, had 9,115 full members, 5,572 of which were in towns and cities. Another thing is to be considered: A constant stream of emigration is flowing into this State, and in this stream there are certainly enough Southern Methodists to keep up our numbers, if we gained nothing from the outside and did not save our own children. The truth stares us in the face that we are losing ground. Many who were members of our church in the South here join other churches that have not sectional names. In many of our towns parents are struggling or determined to stand by the old ship till she sinks, but they are not saving their children. Some of them go to other churches; but the majority go to the dogs. Men who a few years ago paid their money into "the South Church" freely will now refuse to give it a dollar, saying, "There are too many churches." These are facts. And we had just as well look them in the face. We are wasting men and money unless some remedy is found.

Whether a change of name is the best remedy or not it is certain that the church without a sectional name has greatly the advantage. I know that some say the other church has also a sectional name, but such talk is all twaddle. It really does not make any difference to the heathen which is the name of the church that brings them the gospel, and the word "South" does not recall to their minds past strife, but in the United States of America it does. To the masses in the West it means Democratic or rebel or it means nothing, and we do not catch all Democrats and ex-rebels either, not by a jug full—the Methodist Episcopal Church gets ten, yes fifty such, when we gain one of their political opponents. If there is really enough difference in the two churches to justify them in continuing in the same territory, we have everything to gain and nothing to lose by a change of name, though of course we will not make the change suggested by the General Conference.

At this late date perhaps a rennion of American Methodism would be the best remedy. No doubt many will say as Bishop Cranberry said at the last session of our Conference, "We are not tired of life, do not want to die," as if anybody had said anything about dying. There is no necessity for our dying any more than the other. Of course there are differences between us, and so were these differences among the Canadian Methodists. Each of them appointed commissioners who consulted together, mutual concessions were made and a union formed alike honorable to all. So it must be with us. I favor the Scarlett plan, and who knows that is not the plan that such a commission would recommend?

Mark what I say, one of those steps must be taken, or the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will eventually be compelled to confine itself to the territory that it occupied when it assumed its present name. It would be better if in this instance the older men would listen to the younger. Those who have grown up since sectional strife began to cease are better prepared to render an impartial decision—this in spite of the fact that many Southerners teach their children to hate Yankees and many Yankees teach theirs to hate rebels. We ask our fathers to lay aside their prejudices and vote in the interest of their children and their children's children. Do not be like the woman who would not allow her children to speak to her neighbor's children because their grandfather's did not like one another.

W. F. ANDREWS,
GILROY, CAL., Sept. 11, 1885.

Shreveport District Conference.

The nineteenth session of the Shreveport District Conference convened in Coushatta, La., September 3, 1885. In the absence of a Bishop our genial presiding elder presided. Bro. Alexander read for our mutual encouragement and instruction I Corinthians IV, sung hymn No. 258 and invoked the blessing of God upon the assembly and the business about to be undertaken. After the usual preliminaries Bro. D. H. Hayes, of Coushatta, was elected secretary.

The Conference then resolved itself into a committee of the whole to conduct its business and hear the news. One after another, circuits and stations were called and reported. We may safely say the reports heard were cheering. Some circuits were not heard from only through the presiding elder. I suppose the absent brethren had full confidence in his reportorial ability. He was equal to the emergency, and the conditions of the unrepresented works enabled him to give good reports. But all of us would much rather have seen the delegates, lay and clerical, looked into their eyes, grasped their hands and given them a word of cheer, and we exceedingly regretted the circumstances which kept these away. Several very interesting questions were discussed by the body. Some pertinent inquiries were made by the president and also by the delegates. Much earnestness was manifested by the members in the elucidation of the various subjects brought before them for consideration. Good attention was paid to the debates. Though a petit corps the spirit was fine. Church interests, Sunday-schools, education, prohibition, representation were all in turn discussed.

Coushatta was fully equal to the occasion in the way of entertaining the delegates. A resolution was started by some grateful brethren and passed unanimously—not a dissenting voice—sincerely thanking the good people of our town for their hospitality.

We must not forget to mention the preaching. The grand old truths of the gospel were never, in the opinion of the writer, more clearly enunciated. No sleeping "sibboleths" characterized those messages. The solemn warning, the promises sure and steadfast, the bright and glorious hopes which comfort, cheer and quicken, all were proclaimed in no uncertain tones. Let those that heard the clarion notes of this trumpet prepare for battle. The day is at hand.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we hear with pleasure such favorable reports from Mansfield Female College and are pleased with the administration of Dr. F. M. Grace.

Resolved, That we heartily pledge our support to said institution and will use our influence to procure patronage for the same.

T. J. UFTON,
R. S. TRIPPETT.

Parentally, let me here say that Dr. Grace was present at our meeting and gave a very encouraging account of our college at Mansfield. His labors were not in vain since he tore away as trophies some three of our young ladies. At least he has them now if he did not exactly bear them away. Later reports from this school are very flattering. The doctor has the promise of a successful and prosperous session.

An alumnus and one of the students, represented Centenary College. We can not forget the fact nor can we reiterate it too often that at Jackson we have one of the finest schools in the South.

We remembered alma mater in the following resolution:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Shreveport District Conference, do heartily recommend Centenary College to the patronage and support of our people and fully endorse its present management.

S. J. DAVIES,
F. M. GRACE,
D. H. HAYES,
S. J. DAVIES.

By request,
Seashore Camp Ground and Wire Fence.

On the seashore recently I heard much said about the wire fence that enclosed the camp ground and the gate fees. Some things said were wise; some I thought otherwise. Some seemed to have a pretty fair comprehension of the matter; others evidently were charlatans on unknown seas. The leading facts in the case they did not know. When the fence and gate fees were first spoken of, my soul revolted at the idea. What! Methodists put a barbed wire fence between God's poor and precious gospel privileges! Mirabile dictum!

But I was once present at a meeting of the Board of Trustees. I then learned that the grounds had a debt of about $2,500. And that the income from tent rents, cartage and public collections, the sources of revenue, was insufficient for current expenses. Various modes of reducing expenses or raising the revenue were discussed. But liquidating this large and annually increasing debt was a question even more difficult. Some one present proposed that we take a collection immediately to cancel this debt and then we would consider the other question of providing for current expenses.

Then and there—by the trustees and two or three friends present—the $2,500 was subscribed. This was given in amounts varying from one to five hundred dollars. A year later it was found that a new debt had begun to accumulate by current expenses exceeding the income. And, moreover, one of the sources of revenue, the public collection, was becoming exceedingly wearisome and annually falling off in amount. Now the fence question began to be vigorously debated; for it was evident that something must be done or these beautiful grounds would pass out of our hands and become merely a seaside resort for worldly pleasure seekers. The preachers' tent might be converted into a drinking saloon, the tabernacle into a ball room and the restaurant into a skating rink. So in this extremity as a desperate resort the fence and gate fees were adopted. And now that which the trustees mostly want in this connection is a better plan to balance the expenditures and income. The man that devises something, practical and judicious that is better, would be worth more to them than a thousand ordinary critics.

Upon equitable grounds I suppose no one objects to the gate fees, for it divides among the many a burden that has heretofore been borne mainly by a few. The cry is against the idea of fencing out the poor from the preached word. The very thing that our Savior pointed to as evidence of his divine mission and Messiahship and which has been one of the chief characteristics of Methodism, preaching the gospel to the poor, now seems to receive a blow. And that by a body of loyal Methodists. But after all is there not a shade of sentimentality about this idea of fencing out the poor from gospel privileges with barbed wires. How many of the poor, that are at all likely to attend Seashore Camp Ground, and would attend if they were only able to pay the fifty cents for a season ticket, would be found short of that fifty cents if a show was to come along? I have known great numbers of people that managed to have fifty cents for the camp, but not a cent for the support of the gospel. I know Methodists that for years have not been able to pay anything for the support of the gospel, for they tell me so; but they were able to go to the great Cotton Centennial last winter. The frugality that saves for one of these purposes, gratifying the desire of the eyes, might save a little for the others, furnishing food for the soul. But there are some upon whom the hard times press so heavily that they have nothing to spare for shows and nothing to give to the Lord's cause. I wish they could be found out and presented with season tickets to enter the camp ground if they live near enough to it. Some object to the gate fees because it is a new feature without much thought on the subject. They objected at first to paying for meals at the restaurant because "that was not the way they used to do at camp meetings," and they did not want to depart from usage. Indeed, one man at the last camp meeting called on the trustees to assign him to some place for meals and lodging, as he was a stranger.

The trustees had better go back to the old paths as soon as the man is found that can point out some practical way by which the annual receipts can be made to cover the necessary expenses of the year. Until this is done it appears to me that—its gate fees or give up the ground.

T. S. WEST,
WOODVILLE, MISS., Aug. 25, 1885.

A Church Dedication.

MR. EDITOR: There is no report from the work of so much importance, except it may be the conversion of a sinner, as the erection of a new church edifice. It serves for a whole generation as a sort of workshop where souls are converted and fitted for a place as living stones in the spiritual temple of our Lord Jesus Christ. Last Sabbath, the thirteenth instant, we had the pleasure of dedicating New Hope Church in the neighborhood of old Fort Jessup, in Sabine parish, La. This church was built this year, considered the hardest year since the war, by the efficient and persistent labors of the preachers on the circuit, the Rev. J. M. Franklin and Bro. Bolts. It is indeed a beautiful house, finished from top to bottom, painted inside and out, and furnished with tasteful lamps and chandeliers. Best of all when we asked the question, Are there any claims against this house? The preacher answered the emphatic No! Then the house was formally consecrated to the Lord exclusively for his worship.

Then we indulged in some remarks as to our behavior in so sacred a place as the house of God. We should at least have as much regard for the house of God as we would for that of even a distinguished friend. Hats should be taken off, ordinary conversation upon topics of the day should not be indulged in the annoyance of the more serious until the preacher enters the pulpit. Chewing tobacco and spitting on the floor is not considered in good taste, and above all the house of God should not be used for any other purpose than for his worship. Sunday it rained and thundered and was very unpropitious for going to church, yet by eleven o'clock A. M. the house was well filled with an intelligent, substantial congregation.

After service they had a sumptuous dinner spread and plenty for the multitude. Sabine seems to be the most prosperous portion of this part of Louisiana which we have seen. They have prospects of a fine and abundant crop of every variety. The parish is settling up with immigrants from other States of the substantial sort of people. And best of all local option is a practical fact in this parish. The good people exult in this. A gentleman, who is well posted with regard to the condition of things, said to me, It was truly gratifying to witness the changes which are taking place since they voted whisky out of the parish; instead of cross-road groceries and signs of poverty may be seen new fields cleared up and good fences, and signs of thrift on every hand. Let other parishes go and do likewise.

Our trip to New Hope was a most enjoyable one. Accompanied by my wife, we went by rail to Robeline, the nearest point to the church, thence by spring wagon, with Bro. Franklin to drive us, twelve miles west, over hills and valleys, containing broad acres of good, uncultivated land inviting immigration. If you want to find a home in a good community of people with a good church to worship in and good Sunday and day schools for your children, New Hope is the place. We met with many old friends, some of antebellum date, whose cordial greeting to us was a real benediction. After public consecration and pledges to be faithful we parted to meet, if not before, in the sweet by-and-by.

MANVELL, LA., Sept. 17, 1885.
J. P.

"South, or no South."

"South, or no South" is the most vital question ever submitted to our church. The issue is upon us, and must be decided now. If it was changed to Methodist Episcopal Church, East, or West, no doubt the vote would be against the prefix; then why should we chain our beloved Zion to "South" for all coming time? The Gulf States are not good standpoints to view this question in its true light, anywhere else is better. Here in the interior of the great State of Missouri, the incubus of our name is seen and felt, and the conviction is forced on us that if "South" is retained, we have seen our most prosperous days.

The logic of events for the past twenty-five years, and especially for the last ten months, has been against every thing sectional, and shuns our name, as a reminder of the "gory garment" which we are supposed to have had some hand in making. And it is certainly not in keeping with the signs of the times to be asking sinners to go to heaven with us by the Southern route. Nor do we find any relief in the proposed name of "Methodist Episcopal Church of America." It is too long, and not broad enough. Give us a name that can stand on its own firm pedestal the world over, with no pent-up significance. As our first choice, "Methodist," simple and pure, has been pre-occupied, it seems that Episcopal-Methodist is the best we can do, even at the risk of absorbing our little old mother church. It will serve our purpose for legal and organic distinction, and with it we can go any and everywhere fulfilling our grand destiny of aiding to conquer the world for Christ.

F. D. R.
JENKINS CITY, MO., Sept. 15, 1885.

Petitions in Prayer.

In the last Advocate there was an article from the Christian Observer correcting the expressions, "May we be faithful in duty," "May we be earnest in our efforts," saying they should be, "Make us faithful in duty," "Create within us earnestness in our efforts." This correction is faulty. The expressions should be, "Help us to be faithful in duty," "Help us to be earnest in our efforts." There is quite a difference in viewing a subject from a Calvinistic standpoint and from an Arminian standpoint. We are "coworkers with God." He gives us gracious ability to do what we ought to do, but he does not perform the act for us. He will not do for us what is required to be done through our moral agency.

I have heard persons at the meal-board in asking a blessing use language similar to this, "O Lord, make us thankful for these favors." This implies that they are not thankful, but desire to be thankful. I suppose all who would ask a blessing at such a time could say, "O Lord, we thank thee for these favors."

J. M. PUGH.

AMITE CITY, LA., Sept. 21, 1885.

From Arcadia, La.

We are just back from Bro. Billingsly's glorious meeting. Our dear brother, possessed of the spirit of unyielding battle and determined on a decisive victory, continues his efforts; and when the smoke of conflict clears away and he writes you the results we feel sure it will be that our God has gotten great glory unto his name in Minden. After the sermon, Sunday morning, a collection for foreign missions, church extension, education, etc., was taken, the people cheerfully giving more than was asked of them. The pastor will bring up in full all the assessments made upon the church. Bless God! One night at home, and we take our way to the Mt. Zion Camp Ground. We long to be that "one district in Southern Methodism" of which you wrote. Pray for us, and we will work toward that mark and try to reach it.

S.
SEPTEMBER 24, 1885.

saloon. This is one of the many instances where failure to have a saloon does not injure trade.

In conclusion I may say the preacher and his family are on safe footing. Things brighten as days go by. We think Oxford circuit will come up with a "clear deck" at Conference.

Q. A. OATS.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.

Mr. Editor: Our town is still shaking itself and rapidly assuming larger parts. Strangers are crowding our streets every day. All our mills, except one, which was totally destroyed by fire on the night of the twelfth instant, are running on full time. And the one burnt will soon be replaced by another. Now all these mills whose roar and scream can be heard all day are running "by faith." They expect a monstrous crop in Texas, and therefore a great demand for lumber. And they believe that they will sell all their millions of feet to supply this demand, and we hope it will be so. Now this thing called faith is the moving force of the world to-day, and they will not turn a wheel without it. And yet they deride us who compose the army of Christ for living and acting by faith. How can we help thinking of "the beam" and "the mote" and of "Physician, heal thyself?"

The new bank is an accomplished fact—finished for the second time. It is to our town what the engine is to the ocean steamer; and, besides, is quite a feature of beauty. Just think, our church occupies one corner of the block; the bank another and the paragon between. Quite suggestive, is it not?

The saloon business here is swelling like an old blot—that is, it is on the increase. Cards are not growing warmer, and the ball is in sympathy; and, of course, the slaughter of morals and men continue with no decrease. Temperance organizations as such have not effected the desired end, and have long since "stepped down and out." The church is a temperance body good enough for religious people; but as we have many who do not sail under these colors, we propose to try the forces of the Young Men's Christian Association. We propose to establish a permanent organization as soon as the weather breaks.

Our church here has received about thirty persons since the close of last January. Almost every Sabbath one or two more. So the good work goes on. Our Sunday-school is healthy and strong. We have every night in the week occupied except Saturday night, and we may have to crowd into that. This field is very promising for future Methodist here.

The rain has continued four days, and is working harm. There is a good deal of sickness in and out of town; but "the Lord reigns."

JAS. E. BRADLEY.

God's Album.

BY MRS. L. CHARY SADLER.

(Written for the Women's Missionary Society of Memphis, Miss.)

DEAR SISTERS: The Prophet Malachi has written before him for them that read the Lord, and that thought upon his name. As I read this over to-day I thought this book was God's album, and they that feared the Lord and spoke often one to another should have their names inscribed in that heavenly album by angel hands. These names shall never be erased. Like the superscription that came caused to be written over our blessed Saviour when he was crucified as it can not be changed. "What is written is written." It could not be written otherwise to please anyone. We prize our albums, because the names of our dear friends are inscribed therein. How proud we are of distinguished names! We show them to strangers and to other friends and try to get all the names we can and yet not at an earthly pleasure. These beautiful souvenirs we prize so fondly all perish in the years to come. We can not take them with us when we die. The names will fade, the book will decay and the names with our own forgotten for aye; but in God's album the names written therein will remain when the world with its fleetings is burned up. Yes, this is a shining thought to all the tired sinner in the Lord's vineyard. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make my jewels. This book of remembrance will be brought up to the throne "where the lamb and the white robed elders are met," and the names will be read out and the jewels shined by the angel band and the martyrs of joy will be theirs. Sisters, with this cheering consolation before us let us go on with redoubled zeal to labor for the "kingdom of God." Let us never be discouraged by any obstacle in our way or let the power of one moment cause us to forget the words of the doubters: "It is vain to serve God." No, not let us forget the words in God's album and we will "rejoice evermore."

The Hundred Dollars

BY DR. PIERRE OFFERS FOR THE

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

THE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Letter from Switzerland.

BY DR. A. STEVENS.

THE LAST HAS BEEN A GREAT WEEK HERE

IN GENEVA, AND YESTERDAY (SUNDAY,

AUG. 23d) CLOSED THE GREATEST SAUCED

FETE OF THE FAMOUS LITTLE CITY. IT HAS

BEEN CELEBRATING THE "JUBILEE" OF THE REFORMATION—NOT THAT OF GERMANY, NOR

OF SWITZERLAND GENERALLY, BUT ITS OWN

THAT OF THE OLD AND WORLD RENOWNED

GENEVAN REPUBLIC; FOR GENEVA WAS AN INDEPENDENT COMMONWEALTH DOWN TO

1814, WHEN IT VOLUNTARILY MERGED ITSELF

IN THE SWISS CONFEDERATION, AND HAS

SINCE BEEN THE CHIEF STATE OF THE HELVETIAN

REPUBLIC. THE JUBILEE IS CELEBRATED

EVERY HALF CENTURY, AND THIS IS THE

350TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MEMORABLE

EPOCH.

AT THE REVOLUTION OF THE MAP OF EUROPE,

AFTER THE DOWNFALL OF BONAPARTE, THE

GREAT POWERS GAVE GENEVA SOME ADDITIONAL

TERRITORY, THE INHABITANTS OF WHICH

WERE NEARLY ALL CATHOLICS, SO THAT

NEARLY HALF THE PRESENT POPULATION

OF THE STATE, OR CANTON, AS SUCH, THIS

MIGHT SEEM TO MAKE IT A DELICATE MATTER

TO KEEP UP THE ANCIENT CUSTOM OF THE

JUBILEE; BUT THE PEOPLE ARE SO INTELLIGENT

UNDER THEIR SYSTEM OF FREE SCHOOLS,

AND THE GOVERNMENT SO IMPARTIAL, THAT

ACTUALITY HAS LITTLE SWAY HERE, AND,

INSTEAD, THE CATHOLIC CITIZENS HAVE LARGE

REVOLVED FROM THE POPE, AND THEIR

OBEDIENT CHURCHES ARE NOW "AUSTRIAN,"

AS THE REFORMED ROMANIST NAME THEM.

THEY ARE PART OF THE STATE CHURCH,

AND, ALIKE WITH THE PROTESTANTS, SUSTAINED

BY THE STATE TREASURY.

THE PROCLAMATION OF THE PRESENT JUBILEE,

BY PLACARDS ON THE STREET CORNERS,

IS A NOTEWORTHY DOCUMENT. IT SAYS:

"THE 10 AUGUST (OLD STYLE), 1535, WAS

THE POINT OF DEPARTURE OF A NEW AND

GLORIOUS ERA. THE COUNCIL DECLARED

THAT DAY THE REFORMATION WITHIN OUR

WALLS, AND THIS ASSURED TO OUR CITY THE

SPIRITUAL PRIVILEGES WHICH HAVE MADE IT,

DURING MORE THAN THREE CENTURIES, INDEPENDENT

AND PROSPEROUS. THE BIBLE WAS GIVEN,

IN ITS COMPLETENESS, TO OUR PEOPLE; THE

GOspel ESTABLISHED IN ITS PRIMITIVE

PURITY, DISPELLING DARKNESS, AND OFFERING

TO SOULS THE WAY OF SALVATION, OF MORALITY,

AND OF HOPE. THE RIGHTS OF CONSCIENCE,

MISUNDERSTOOD AND SUPPRESSED, WERE RECOGNIZED.

ON THIS RELIGIOUS EMANCIPATION WERE

FOUNDED THE INDEPENDENCE AND ANTONOMY

OF OUR REPUBLIC; THE POPULAR SCHOOL WAS OPENED FOR THE SPREAD OF KNOWLEDGE

IN ALL RANKS OF SOCIETY; PIETY AND INTELLIGENCE

BECAME THE BASIS OF THE PROSPERITY

OF THE COUNTRY. THREE HUNDRED AND

FIFTY YEARS HAVE PASSED AND THE EDIFICE

IS STILL ERECT! WHAT A BENEDICTION OF

GOD! WHAT GLORY FOR OUR FATHERS! WHAT

DUTIES FOR US! LET US MEET, AS A

MARRIED PEOPLE, TO CELEBRATE THIS

ANNIVERSARY OF OUR RELIGIOUS AND

POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE WITH THANKSGIVING

TO GOD. LET US ENTER THE SAME

TEMPLES WHICH SHELTERED OUR FATHERS, TO

MEDIATE THE EXAMPLES OF PIETY, HUMANITY,

AND MORALITY, WHICH THEY HAVE

FAITHFULLY TRANSMITTED FROM GENERATION

TO GENERATION. LET US ENGAGE OURSELVES

TO BE NOT ONLY THEIR HEIRS, BUT THEIR

SONS. BANISHING THE SPIRIT OF RELIGIOUS

HOSTILITY, LET US FORTIFY OUR SENTIMENTS

OF CHARITY AND FRATERNITY. MAY THIS

DAY, IN REFRESHING OUR RELIGIOUS AND

PATRIOTIC MEMORIES, VIVIDLY IN ALL OUR HEARTS LOVE OUR HEAVENLY FATHER, ATTACHMENT

TO OUR SAVIOR, AND FAITHFULTY TO HIS

WORLD. MAY IT SERVE TO CONFIRM US

IN OUR RELIGIOUS CONVICTIONS, AND TO

DEVELOP IN THE MIDST OF US THOSE

CHRISTIAN VIRTUES WHICH ALONE CAN MAKE

PROSPEROUS OUR CHURCH AND COUNTRY.

FOUR DAYS HAVE BEEN GIVEN TO THE

CELEBRATION. THE STATE FLAG HAS WAVED,

BY ORDER OF THE MUNICIPALITY, ON ALL THE

PROTESTANT SPIRES OF THE CITY. CROWDS,

LAY AND ECCLESIASTICAL, FROM ALL PARTS OF

THE CANTON, HAVE THROUGED THE CHURCHES

TO HEAR APPOINTED DISCOURSES ON THE "HISTORY

OF THE REFORMATION;" OR "GENEVA AS

THE ANCIENT ASYLUM OF PROTESTANT

REFUGEES;" OR "THE JUBILEE OF 1735

AND 1835," ETC.

SUNDAY WAS THE "GREAT DAY OF THE FEAST." AT SIX O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING,

THERE WAS JOYFUL "RINGING OF THE BELLS

OF ALL THE TEMPLES OF THE CITY AND COUNTRY,"

AT EIGHT, SERMONS, WITH SPECIAL

MUSIC, IN THE TWO OLDEST CHURCHES, THE

CATHEDRAL AND THE MADEIRA; AT TEN,

SERMONS AGAIN, "IN ALL THE TEMPLES OF

THE CITY AND COUNTRY." THE AFTERNOON

WAS ENTIRELY DEVOTED TO THE CHILDREN.

THERE WAS NO CITY OF THE WORLD WHERE THE

CHILDREN ARE MORE PRECIOUS TO THE

COMMONWEALTH THAN HERE; FOR IT WELL UNDER-

STANDS THAT ITS CHILDREN ARE ITS FUTURE;

THAT ITS DESTINY IS IN THEIR HANDS. EDU-

after thousands, and with banners and two military bands of music proceeded to a city park where a dinner, provided by public expense, awaited them on neatly spread tables under shelter of trees. Four lines of tables extended across the entire park; in a straight line I think they would have reached at least a half mile. After the meal sports were allowed the children—swings, merry-go-rounds, "Punch and Judy," etc. In America some of these incidents would hardly be admitted on Sunday; but the "European Sunday" prevails here as elsewhere, and only, so strict in other respects, taught a theory of the Sabbath which sanctifies it.

I have seen in Europe many processions, religious and civic, popular and military, but never one so thrillingly suggestive as that of these thousands of well-trained children, marching through the renowned old city, commemorating the religious emancipation of their country, 350 years after the event, and rejoicing, this bright summer day, in the full light and liberty of the era then inaugurated by their fathers. Everywhere here you see the signs of competence and comfort, of thrift and intelligence—no beggars except interlopers from abroad; no person shoeless or in rags, and hardly ever a drunkard; never even a priest, monk, or nun in costume on the streets, except as a passenger and then only for two days. Do you ask the reason of this prosperity through all these hundreds of years? The reply is in two words—the Reformation and education.

—Western Christian Advocate.

Test Healy Consumption?

Many a case supposed to be radical long disease is really one of liver complaint and indigestion, but unless that diseased liver can be restored to healthy action, it will close the lungs with verminous matter as to bring on their speedy decay, and then indeed we have consumption, which is a scourge of the lungs, in its worst form. Nothing can be more happily calculated to nip this danger in the bud than is Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By druggists.

Siamese Logic.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK.

Years ago some English travelers visited Siam and had an interview with the Siamese king. His majesty was highly entertained with their descriptions of various things in their native country, and at last, as a marriage of convenience, he told him that in their country at certain seasons of the year it was so cold that water became as solid as stone. "This was too much for his royal highness. He declared that these foreigners were the most ardent lovers of heat, and he dismissed them from his presence. No laugh at the stupidity of this crowned barbarian, and yet there are in this enlightened age and in this highly civilized land, persons whose logical faculties are as entirely under-located as were his. The king repeated: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." His experience was a measure of the possibilities of nature. Now, strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless true that many opinions advanced at the present day rest upon a foundation as unsubstantial as this. "My experience," says one, "is that the law has been, is, or is to be,"—this is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead, Esq., who formerly resided in the town of Sandburg in the province of Sleepy Hollow. His royal highness, the Siamese king, said: "Water never freezes in Siam; therefore it never freezes anywhere." This is the foundation upon which men frequently build their opinions. For instance, here is Louis Littlehead,

Politico-Ecclesiastical Rights.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1885.

Our honored friend, Dr. C. K. Marshall, is publishing some ringing letters to the church on the subject of tract publication and distribution. He is on the right line, and we hope will stir the entire Connection on the subject. We have writers among us who might bless the world for generations if their thoughts were put in leaflets and scattered abroad. Canon J. C. Ryle, the charming writer of tracts, will be remembered in the years to come long after the Rt. Rev. J. C. Ryle, the Bishop of Liverpool, is forgotten. Great is the power of Newman Hall's pulpit in the city of London; but his little tract, "Come to Jesus," will most surely perpetuate the name and fame of Rowland Hill's successor. And, then, multitudes will read a leaflet who grow impatient at the very sight of a book. The cream of a great discussion compressed into a few pages will enrich thousands, which would never be discovered in an elaborate treatise. We applaud the zeal and ability Dr. Marshall has thrown into this cause, and will rejoice in his success. His large experience and thorough investigation entitles him to speak as one having authority. And now that a burdensome debt no longer embarrasses our Publishing House, some of its earnings might be profitably employed in the way indicated. We favor a tract society in connection with the Sunday-school department of the church.

This suggests a practical line of operation in the administration of home missions. The policy of making small appropriations to maintain for a term of years only devoted "serenely satisfied babyhood," is not true soldiering of Christ. The expectation of an annuity becomes a habit and they dread a family God's word without it. In our Conferences we have met for more than a quarter of a century. Every year they have received $50 to $200, and took to it as a necessary means of subsistence. They are satisfied with being pensioners and have no desire or expectation of coming self-reliant. It is far better and more business-like to make a liberal appropriation, secure the best available man, arouse the interest of the people, and in one or two years still dismission off the list of beneficiaries. Supporting chronic babyhood is a righteous use of the Lord's money. And yet this is not necessary in our present policy. It is against the spirit of the people and prevents every ambition to be independent. The demands of our home work are urgent and it encourages no development. We are progressing abroad without a reliable base of supply. The importance of wise administration

St. Louis Conference.

The Conference voted, without debate, on the proposition to change the name, and unanimously rejected the name sent down by the

APPOINTMENTS.

LEBANON DISTRICT.—E. H. Morrison, P. E. Lebanon, D. I. C. Bard-slown, C. Y. Boggers; S. field, J. M. Phillips; Bradford, J. G. Freeman; New Haven, J. Love; Campbellsville, M. M. H. Mannsville, G. F. Chudliff; C. burg, E. C. Alexander; Meryville, J. T. Cherry; Shepherd, Y. P. Thomas; Magnolia, Buckner; Mt. Lebanon, Murrell.

COLUMBIA DISTRICT.—J. A. Ham, P. E., Columbia, L. B.
Ham, Breeding, D. F. W.
Harksville, J. V. Guthrie; R.
J. P. Stubblefield; Edmond
H. Davis; Summersshade,
Hogard; Monticello, G. W. S.
Wayne, R. B. Campbell; All
K. Powell; Creelsboro, L. M.

in the treatment of servants is often manifest. They are looked upon with disdain. Certainly employees should be humble; but employers should, at the same time, be arrogant, overbearing and proud. The pious employers prevent his proud men and women from attaining the honorable position of servant and maid-servant. Among preachers, I have been told, pride is often found. Should they seek their own honor less and their Master more, their service would certainly be more intelligent and effective.

Men should be humble in re-to God. As sinners, we are lo-

In 1870 Rev. J. E. Evans was appointed for the fourth charge in Savannah. Since Trinity pulpit has been filled by H. Parks, E. H. Myers, who died of yellow fever in 1878, R. J. James O. Branch and Rev. Christian, the present pastor.

The new Houston Street Church was built in 1877. The first pastor was Rev. J. W. Simmons, who had but 20 members when he took charge. Now the membership is 200, while that of Wesley Church is 400, and that of Trinity 700, making a total of 1,300. Since the first of 1884 the membership of Trinity has increased 75 per cent., 171 members having been admitted in 1884, and 133 in 1885.

"To a Good Place."

About this time of Annual Conference sessions Methodist preachers are concerned on the subject of appointments. Where they are to go next year is the leading question, and, with many, one of much anxiety. They pray over it, submit it into the hands of Providence, imagine they have completely mastered their feelings and fears, and then go, though sometimes disappointed, and with heavy hearts. The average itinerant prays for a field for usefulness and good work, but considers it rather disloyal to ask the Lord for a good place. However much desired, it is not publicly or privately acknowledged. But no such sentiment dominates our old friend, Dr. John Mathews. He wants a good place, with all that it implies, and he never fails to do good work. In a letter to the South-western Presbyterian, from Missouri, Dr. A. J. Witherspoon tells this story:

I have not seen my dear friend, Rev. Dr. John Mathews, yet. His time at Kansas City is out. There is talk that he will be sent to another church in the same city. I heard of a prayer he offered—prayed the Lord to send his people a true man, one that did not preach science or politics, but only the pure gospel; and he further prayed the Lord to send old John Mathews anywhere, but please send him to a good place. The career of Dr. John Mathews has been remarkable and successful, faithful, true and courageous. His record in the epidemic of New Orleans is well known to your readers. They will also remember how he often referred to his Presbyterian home.

A TEMPERANCE PEN.—The Mississippi has been shown a most beautiful silver pen, containing the pen with which Gov. McRae signed the great temperance reform bill passed by the last Legislature of Mississippi. It is intended as a present by the ladies of Jackson to the Rev. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg. The box bears this inscription: "Presented to the Rev. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg, the Apostle of Temperance in Mississippi, by the Ladies of Jackson."

In looking over the files of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for 1884 we found the above in the editorial columns. We are glad that the eloquent "apostle of temperance" in that day still abides with us, and that his voice is yet heard in behalf of moral reform.

Death of Martin W. Eagan.

MR. EDITOR: We have just buried one of the oldest members of our church at this place—Martin W. Eagan. He was born March 20, 1809, was converted and joined the church in 1830, and died September 24, 1885. He had been twice married: first to Miss Laura Stackhouse, in 1832, and then, in 1865, to Mrs. Kate Willis. He was the father of a large family of children—all of whom are members of the church. He died at a good old age, in the midst of his children and grandchildren, in peace with God and all men, lamented by the church to which he belonged and the community in which he lived. A more extended notice of him will be sent you for publication.

W. H. EKWIS.
CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Miss., Sept. 24, 1885.

Mr. Spurgeon has hit the nail squarely on the head in these words: "The teaching of revelation is fitted for the capacity of a child; but our wise men are choked with such simple fare. We confess we have not enough faith to be an infidel, or an agnostic, nor even an evolutionist."

The next great battle the church has to fight in America is for the purity and preservation of the Christian Sabbath. With the incoming of Romanism and communistic ideas, aided by the amazing growth of commerce and the impatient spirit of the age, the authority of the Sabbath law is being undermined and its sanctity grossly disregarded.

Rev. Dr. J. C. Simmons, of the Pacific Conference, writes a vigorous article in the Pacific Methodist against the change of name. He has been on the border and knows full well the good or evil of the name. After reviewing the history of our church on the coast, for whose benefit largely the change is suggested, he concludes that "the evils of the name are imaginary," and that the adoption of another would create "much dissatisfaction in many quarters."

"The grand old book of God still stands, and this old earth, the more its leaves are turned over and pondered, the more it will sustain and illustrate the sacred word.—Prof. Dana.

—Miss Lizzie Carter, second daughter of Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter, of this city, has been selected as one of the students from Louisiana to attend the Peabody Normal Institute at Nashville, Tenn. She stood a highly creditable examination and achieved an easy election.

—The Protestants of France purpose to commemorate, on the eighteenth of October, the second centenary of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. They desire to signalize the occasion by making a new effort to extend the blessings of evangelical Christianity in that country.

—A special telegram to the Picayune from Minden, La., reports a glorious revival there in the Methodist Church. About thirty-three had been added to the church up to Saturday. Rev. J. J. Billingsley, the pastor, was assisted by the indefatigable presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Sawyer.

—Rev. L. Carley, of Vicksburg, writes us good tidings as follows: "We have just closed a fine meeting at this place, resulting in fourteen accessions to the church. A number of boys have organized a prayer meeting which bids fair to result in great good."

—Sunday last was a blessed day at old Moreau Street. There were five additions to the church, and at night not less than twenty penitents at the altar. Bro. Kimball was assisted on Sunday by Rev. H. J. Harris, of the Mississippi Conference. The meeting continues, and with every prospect of a glorious revival.

—The Nashville Advocate reports a fine opening at Vanderbilt University—"considerably in advance of the opening last year." The old students have generally returned, many of them to pursue post-graduate courses. Chancellor Garland's opening address to the students was profoundly impressive, and will be published.

—The temperance cause in England is pushing itself to the front. It is demanding further and more stringent parliamentary legislation. Rev. Charles Garrett, ex-President of the Wesleyan Conference, and an active temperance leader, has issued a ringing address to the people of England, concluding with these words: "Let party landmarks go. Vote straight for a sober country."

—We were honored with a pleasant visit from Bishop Keener on Monday. He had expected to leave the city last week for his tour of episcopal visitations, but a slight indisposition prevented. Though not robust, we have never seen the Bishop more cheerful and full of instructive talk. He left on Monday evening to attend the Illinois Conference. We have a partial promise of some correspondence from his pen.

—Whitworth College opened well last week with prospects of a prosperous term. Dr. Johnson has associated with him an able faculty of instruction in all departments, and they do most thorough work. The college has enjoyed remarkable prosperity under the present management and is worthy of its proud distinction.

—October 18 is "Good Things Day" with the Sunday-schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Vincent has prepared a beautiful service to be used on the occasion, and the day promises to become very popular in their ecclesiastical annals. Collections on that day will be taken for tracts and Sunday-schools.

—Rev. Hester P. Tucker writes of another Pentecost in his charge as follows: "I write to record another successful meeting on the Columbus circuit. I closed on last Thursday night a most powerful revival at Piney Grove. The revival was thorough in the church, and resulted in powerful convictions and conversions. The Rev. W. Spillman and Rev. John Egger, L. P., assisted in the meeting and did great good."

—Last Sunday was a field day at Louisiana Avenue, (the "Parker Memorial Church.") The pastor, Rev. B. F. White, received fifteen new members, nine on profession of faith and six by letter. This makes an aggregate of forty-four accessions since last Conference. An Oxford League has been organized in the congregation and commenced successful operations. The pastor is receiving responses to his appeal for the new church, and hopes to see the cap-stone brought forth with rejoicing at no distant day.

—Modern enterprise has invaded the land of Palestine and is thrusting its profane hand into places long held sacred. A bridge has been thrown across the Jordan near Jericho, and $8,000 is to be spent on the road from Jericho to Jerusalem this year. The road to Hebron, begun in 1881, is being pushed to completion. Soon the scream of the steam whistle (the "American devil") will be heard amid the solitudes where our Lord sought a quiet place to commune with the Father.

—The Indian Mission Conference was held at Oak Lodge, in the Indian Territory, sixteen miles from Fort Smith, Ark., on the seventeenth instant, Bishop Granbery presiding. Most of the preachers, but few lay delegates, were present. Dr. Young was on hand, and telegraphed home the payment in full of the missionary assessment. Six young men were admitted on trial and five were received by transfer. The Conference voted unanimously against the change of name. Rev. T. F. Brewer was elected clerical delegate to the General Conference, and Rev. E. R. Shapard, alternate. G. B. Hester was elected lay delegate, and Rev. W. F. Fulson alternate. The following is the statistical summary: Local preachers, 112; white members, 2,434; Indian members, 4,850; colored members, 23; Sunday-schools, 87; teachers, 393; scholars, 3,354.

—Rev. J. H. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference, announces the death of a Methodist veteran:

Ferrell Jones died in Cockrum, Miss., Sept. 19. He was in his seventy-first year, had been in the Methodist Church over fifty years, and filled the offices of trustee, class-leader, exhorter, Sunday-school superintendent and steward. He impressed anything he undertook with his individuality; kind to young preachers, a friend to all who were trying to do good—a very decided Methodist. His place will be very hard to fill. I preached his funeral to a very large audience on Sept. 20.

—Rev. D. M. Cogdell writes of the Lord's doings in his charge as follows:

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my round of protracted meetings. Not very many conversions, but a fine revival in the church at every appointment except one. At the old Marshall Institute the revival was sweeping—eight or ten conversions and a complete revolution in the church; the grandest experience I ever saw. Two new elegant churches have been built in the last fifteen months.

—MR. PARKER, Mississippi.

There has been quite a revival on the Sharon circuit, Rev. J. S. Parker, pastor. Most of that work is embraced in this editor's first pastoral charge. How those good people bore with his inexperience, and how the Lord blessed the labors of that year, are among the precious memories that will never fade.—Bro. Parker writes as follows:

We have just closed our round of protracted meetings on the Sharon circuit. Results: Forty conversions and sixty-five additions to our church. Bro. J. A. Ellis, our excellent presiding elder, and Bro. H. R. Singleton, the much-beloved pastor of Canton Station, preached us some fine and effective sermons. Quite a number of our young converts are now active workers in the church, holding prayer and class meetings. Our collections will be very good.

MR. EDITOR: Those who wish instruction on baptism that will give satisfaction can get it from "The Lost Key Found," which can be had for ten cents per copy. Preachers desiring them can get them without money unless they have convenient, and pay me at Conference, or remit money when the books are sold. Brethren, send your orders to me J. W. ELLISON.

MR. EDITOR: The new Methodist Church at West is now completed. It is a gem, and will be dedicated the fourth Sunday in October (25) by Rev. Charles B. Galloway, D. D., the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

O. W. BROWN.
WEST STATION, Miss., Sept. 24, 1885.

CHILDREN'S BIBLE.—Messrs. Cassell & Co., of New York, have issued a new edition of their Children's Bible at about one-half the cost of the English edition. This volume is beautifully illustrated and elegantly bound, the type is large and clear, and the material throughout is of the best. The work is in story form, each story illustrated and in Bible language, word for word; therefore giving no false impression to the little reader as to the use of the Bible for little people, but rather showing that it is for them, from Genesis to Revelation. The book is sold by subscription only. Any of our agents in Louisiana wishing to take hold of this work, will receive full information, etc., by addressing

CARVER & JAMIESON.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1885.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP BARBOUR.
Denver.....	July 16.....	Trinidad, Col.
Montana.....	Aug. 1.....	Willow Creek.
Columbia.....	Sept. 10.....	Albany, Oregon.
Pacific.....	Sept. 30.....	Sacramento, Cal.
Los Angeles.....	Oct. 2.....	Los Angeles, Cal.
North Mississippi.....	Dec. 2.....	Kosciusko, Miss.
Memphis.....	Dec. 10.....	Paducah, Ky.
Florida.....	Jan. 6.....	Orlando, Fla.

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP O'BANNEY.
Western.....	Sept. 2.....	Wynndotte, Kan.
Missouri.....	Sept. 9.....	Columbia, Mo.
Indian Mission.....	Sept. 17.....	Oak Lodge, I. T.
St. Louis.....	Sept. 23.....	St. Louis, Mo.
Southwest Missouri.....	Sept. 30.....	Lexington, Mo.
Arkansas.....	Nov. 25.....	Morrilton, Ark.
Little Rock.....	Dec. 2.....	Arkadelphia, "
White River.....	Dec. 9.....	Helena, Ark.

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP M'FEE.
Mexican Border.....	Oct. 19.....	San Antonio.
West Texas.....	Nov. 4.....	Gonzales, Texas.
North Texas.....	Nov. 11.....	Corpus, Texas.
German Mission.....	Nov. 18.....	Paris, Texas.
Texas.....	Dec. 2.....	New Potosi, Texas.
East Texas.....	Dec. 9.....	Beaumont, "
Mississippi.....	Dec. 16.....	Meridian, Miss.
Baltimore.....	March 10.....	Stanton, Va.

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEENER.
Illinois.....	Sept. 30.....	Pana, Ill.
West Virginia.....	Oct. 7.....	Ashland, Ky.
Indiana.....	Oct. 21.....	Cleveland, Tenn.
Virginia.....	Nov. 11.....	Petersburg, Va.
North Carolina.....	Nov. 18.....	Charlotte, N. C.
South Carolina.....	Dec. 2.....	Columbia, S. C.
Louisiana.....	Jan. 6.....	Baton Rouge.
Central Mexican Miss.....	Feb. 24.....	City of Mexico.

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky.....	Sept. 9.....	Versailles, Ky.
Louisville.....	Sept. 16.....	Greenville, Ky.
Tennessee.....	Oct. 7.....	Columbia, Tenn.
North Alabama.....	Nov. 16.....	Gadsden, Ala.
North Georgia.....	Nov. 23.....	Newnan, Ga.
South Georgia.....	Dec. 9.....	Brunswick, Ga.
Alabama.....	Dec. 16.....	Union Springs.

Bishop McTear has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop Graubert has charge of the mission in Brazil.

Bishop Keener has charge of the Central Mexican Mission.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

Old Mr. Bentley: "I see that at this time of year the home club in its strongest form." Old Mrs. Bentley: "You don't tell me. I wonder what they'll do with electricity next?"

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

The Post says: "The time has arrived for bidding farewell in these columns to Keely and his motor." "Why this unceremonious haste?" They are not going away. The motor can't go, and Keely won't go without it." answers the Herald.

WREIN'S PIANOS.—Probably no Piano House in the city has met with more success than that of Mr. Philip Weir, 135 Canal street. In the conduct of his extensive business, Mr. Weir has ever had in view the excellence of the grade of article he sells, together with economy for the purchaser. In this way he has established himself well in popularity, and thousands recognize in him the medium through which they have been enabled to secure a good Piano on the easiest monthly payment and most accommodating terms. Mr. Weir has won for himself a reputation of which he may justly be proud, in the extensive sale of the world-renowned "Mason & Hamlin" Pianos. Mr. Weir has also a number of second-hand Pianos in thorough repair, at very low prices. Good second-hand Pianos as low as $50, and brand new Pianos at $175. The repairing of Old Pianos is made a specialty. Actions are thoroughly renewed, and the cases polished by an experienced polisher, looking as good as new, at very lowest prices. See his advertisement.

They have some of the latest Negroes in the world in Palatka, and in summer they live on catfish and melons. We saw one of those lazy creatures the other day. He had his fishing line tied to his dog's hind leg, and when a fish would bite he would give his dog a kick.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Butcher (to inexperienced young housekeeper): "Now, how would a joint please ye to-day, mum?" Young Housekeeper (relieved): "That would do nicely." Butcher: "And what kind will it be, mum?" Young Housekeeper: "Oh! the second joint. My husband is very fond of that."

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

Send fifteen cents in stamps for a copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittance to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERO'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. THAYER, New York.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS. Mrs. WISLAW'S SCOTT'S EMULSION should always be used for children's teething. It soothes the child, soothes the gums, allays pain, cures wind, colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. 25c. a bottle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A MARVEL OF PURITY.

Royal a Perfect Baking Powder—Absolutely Free from Lime.

The Royal Baking Powder is considered by all chemists and food analysts to be a marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. Furthermore, it is now the only baking powder before the public free from lime and absolutely pure.

This is due largely to the improved method by the use of which it has been made possible to produce a perfectly pure cream of tartar, from which all the lime has been eliminated.

This chemically pure cream of tartar is exclusively employed in the manufacture of the Royal Baking Powder, so that its absolute freedom from lime and all other extraneous substances is guaranteed.

Professor McMurtrie, late chemist in chief to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, after analyzing many samples of cream of tartar of the market, testified to the absolute purity of that used in the Royal Baking Powder as follows:

"I have examined the cream of tartar manufactured by the New York Tartar Company and used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of their baking powder, and find it to be perfectly pure, and free from lime in any form.

"All chemical tests to which I have submitted it have proved the Royal Baking Powder perfectly healthful, of uniform, excellent quality, and free from any deleterious substance.

WM. McMURTRIE, E.M., Ph.D.,

"Chemist in Chief U. S. Dept of Agriculture."

THE BEST WASHER

We will guarantee the "LOVELL" WASHER to do better work and cost less in less time than any other machine in the world. Warranted five years, and if it don't wash the clothes clean without rubbing, we will refund the money.

AGENTS WANTED in every country. PROOF that Agents are making from $75 to $150 per month. Farmers make $25 to $50 during the winter. Ladies have great success selling this Washer. Retail price only $5. Sample to those desiring an agency $2. Also the celebrated KEYSTONE WINGERS at manufacturers' lowest price. We invite the strictest investigation. Send your address on a postal card for further particulars.

LOVELL WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, selling such popular and attractive books as Hon. Alex. H. Stephens' "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix: "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR," "BURIED CITIES RECOVERED"—one of the best and fastest selling religious books. Also the Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription. Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., Richmond, Va.

ANDERSON, HARRIS & Co.

—MANUFACTURERS OF—

Carriages, Phaetons,

Platform and Half Platform Spring Wagons, CINCINNATI, OHIO, U. S. A.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

PHILIP HALLARAN,

—MANUFACTURER OF—

Plain Tin and Japan Ware,

—ALSO DEALER IN—

COOKING AND HEATING STOVES AND RANGES.

Sole Agent for New Goods: Range and Cottage Stove, 34 CAMP ST., BELOW POYORAH, NEW ORLEANS.

KENMORE UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL,

NEAR AMHERST C. H., VA.

FOURTEENTH SESSION begins Sept. 10th, 1885. W. A. STROUD (Math. Medallist, U. Va.), Principal. W. A. STROUD, M. A., U. Va., in charge of Language. A High Grade Select School. For catalogue, address the PRINCIPAL.

JAMES DUNO,

DEALER IN

TEA AND COFFEE,

111 Poydras street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Family supplies delivered free. Send for samples and price list.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Family Bibles

Agents Wanted

H. L. WARREN & Co., 1117 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending September 29, 1885.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	6 15-16	@
Ordinary	7 15-16
Good ordinary	8 15-16
Low middling	9 1-16
Middling	9 5-16
Good middling	10 1-16
Middling fair	10 5-16
Fair	10 10-16
Galveston middling	9 5-16
Mohile middling	9 5-16
St. Louis middling	9 5-16

SUGAR.

Interior	—	—
Common	—	—
Good common	—	—
Fair	—	—
Good fair	—	—
Fully fair	—	—
Prime	—	—
Strictly Prime	—	—
Choice	—	—
Fancy	—	—

MOLASSES.

Fancy	—	—
Prime	—	—
Good	—	—
Fair	—	—
Ordinary	—	—
Common	—	—
No. 2	—	—
Rough	—	—

RICE.

Fancy	—	—
Prime	—	—
Good	—	—
Fair	—	—
Ordinary	—	—
Common	—	—
No. 2	—	—
Rough	—	—

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 00	—
Minnesota bakers	5 50	5 50
Extra wheat	5 20	5 30
Winter wheat	5 75	6 12 1/2
Choice	4 75	—
Fancy	5 00	5 05
Extra Fancy	5 35	—

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 10	2 40
Corn meal	3 00	3 10
Grits	—	—
Hominy	—	—

GRAIN, ETC.

Corn	—	—
White	—	58
Yellow	—	58
Mixed	—	57
Wheat	—	35 1/2
Western	—	36
Texas rust-proof	—	37
BRAN	—	—
S. owl	—	95
HAY	—	—
Choice	18 50	19 50
Prime	17 50	18 50

PROVISIONS.

PORK	—	—
Mess.	10 00	—
Prime mess.	9 75	10 00
Rumps	9 50	9 75

BACON.

Fancy breakfast	9 1/2	10
Shoulders	—	4 1/2
Sides, clear	6 1/2	6 1/2
Sides, clear rib	6 1/2	6 1/2

HAMS.

Sugar-cured	11	11 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT	—	—
Shoulders	4 1/2	4 1/2
Sides, clear	6 1/2	6 1/2
Sides, clear rib	6 1/2	6 1/2

FISH.

MAKERAL	—	—
Extra No. 1, in bbls.	15 00	—
Half bbls.	9 00	—
No. 1, in bbls.	4 50	—
Half bbls.	4 75	—
No. 2, in bbls., large	4 50	—
Half bbls.	4 10	—

GROCERIES.

COFFEE	—	—
Rio, choice	9 1/2	11 1/2
Cordova, choice	12	13
Java, choice	12	13
BUTTER	—	—
Western dairy	16	17
New York dairy	16	17
Country	—	—

LARD.

Choice	6 1/2	6 1/2
TEAS	—	—
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	60
Oil	—	—
Coal, cases	17	—
Coal, bbls	12	—
Cotton seed	35	38
Lard	6 1/2	—

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES	—	—
Western, per crate	75	1 25
Chicago, per 100	12 00	—
POTATOES	—	—
Louisiana	—	—
Western	1 25	1 50

KROUT.

S. bbl	5 50	6 50
ONIONS	—	—
Louisiana	—	—
Western	1 75	1 90

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING	—	—
1 1/2 b.	10 1/2	—
2 b.	11 1/2	—
BALING TWINE	—	—
1 b.	15	—
TIES	—	—
1 bundle	1 25	—

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY	—	—
Chickens, Western	4 00	4 50
Young	1 50	3 00
Chickens, South	3 00	3 25
Young	1 75	2 25
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	12 00

Eggs	—	—
Western	15	17
Southern	17	18
WOOL	—	—
Lake	17	—
Louisiana	15	—
Burly	7 1/2	—

HIDES	—	—
Green salted	7	—
Dry salted	10	—
STEVES	—	—
Oak, kegs	—	—
Oak, barrels	75 00	—
Oak, casks	100 00	110 00
Oak, hogheads	130 00	135 00

HOOF POLLS	—	—
Hoghead	5 00	—
Barrels	24 00	—
Half barrels	—	—
FALIZERS	—	—
Cotton seed	10 00	12 00
Meal	25 50	24 00
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	8	6
Sulphuric acid	2	4
Bone black	2	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 27.—A serious accident this afternoon. The big tent, holding 10,000 spectators, suddenly collapsed in a violent wind and rain storm. Half the people were inside but cut their way through with their knives or crept out under the canvas. Twenty-five persons were slightly injured, but none were killed or seriously hurt.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—The Centennial Temperance Conference convened today with Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, of New Jersey, in the chair. A telegram of greeting from the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Texas, was received and appropriately responded to. Resolutions of greeting and good will to Canon Farrar were adopted. The committee on credentials reported that there were present 346 delegates from twenty States, one Territory, the District of Columbia, the Provinces of Ontario and Nova Scotia.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 23.—A very heavy northerly gale prevailed throughout the entire lake region yesterday and last night. Vessel masters who arrived during the night state that the storm was a terrible one, and that the sea is running higher than at any previous time this season. Fears are felt for the safety of numerous vessels known to be outside of the port.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—At a meeting of wire manufacturers held here to-day, at which seventeen of the leading mills of the country, including those at Cleveland, were represented, the prices of wire were advanced 10 to 15 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—The Centennial Temperance Conference reassembled this morning, Miss Frances E. Willard in the chair. The report of the order of Sons of Temperance showed that 2,250,000 persons had been initiated into membership and that the order had raised $4,500,000 for temperance purposes.

BLOOMING, Miss., Sept. 24.—Rev. Robert Moore, a Methodist minister and principal of a school at Franklin, Washington parish, La., after a week's sojourn here in quest of health, died here last night of chronic diarrhea. He was formerly from North Alabama, and had been in Louisiana only about two years. The Rev. Dr. Hunsdale, of the Episcopal Church, visited, nursed and sat up with him during his illness, and officiated at his burial to-day, which took place from the church.

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 24.—During the evening exhibition of a circus here last night a heavy gale began to blow and a strong gust snapped the ropes and centre-pole, and the tent fell with a crash upon the heads of the audience. Two or three thousand people and a number of animals were beneath the canvas. It was not till an hour had passed that the panic ceased and all had been rescued. About twenty persons were wounded, many of them seriously, but no lives were lost.

MINDEN, La., Sept. 25.—The first shipment of steel rails for the Minden Tap Railroad arrived at the Junction this morning. Track laying will be commenced in a few days. If nothing unforeseen happens, the road will be completed by Nov. 1.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—The latest from Washington, Wilkes county, is that Gen. Robert Toombs has lost his mind and is dying.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 26.—At 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon a shock resembling an earthquake was felt at various points along the railroad between Mansfield and Washington, this State, a distance of thirty miles. The shock was accompanied by a low, rumbling sound.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 26.—The Sam Jones' camp meeting opened here to-day. An immense tent with a seating capacity of 8000 people has been erected in the heart of the city, and four meetings will be held daily. Many people were turned away during each service from the crowded hall.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 26.—The Howe Sewing Machine Company has outstanding obligations to the amount of $300,000, secured by bond and mortgages. There is an unsecured floating debt of $150,000. The company has nominal assets of $1,100,000, and $30,000 in arrears to employees. The corporation has voted to wind up its affairs as soon as possible.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Cape May challenge cup, presented by James Gordon Bennett in 1872, will also go to England as one of the Genesta's prizes, she having won her last and perhaps easiest victory by beating her former competitor, the schooner Dauntless, in a race from Sandy Hook around the Cape May lighthouse and return. The Genesta had the lead at the start, and kept it throughout the race. At a late hour to-night no tidings of the yacht Dauntless have reached this city.

There is some uneasiness coming to be felt as to her condition and whereabouts, as she is known to have lost her topmast.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Upon the President's return from the Adirondacks he found awaiting him the following letter from Mrs. Helen Hunt Jackson, the well-known authoress of "H. H." and advocate of Indian rights, which was written by her four days before her death:

From my deathbed I send you a message of heartfelt thanks for what you have already done for the Indians. I ask you to read my "Century of Dishonor." I am dying happier for the belief that it is your hand that is destined to strike the first steady blow toward lifting this burden of infamy from our country and righting the wrongs of the Indian race. With respect and gratitude.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The clerical news papers here declare that fully 2100 Christians were murdered in the recent outbreak in Annam.

Messrs. Renard and Crebs to-day reported, in the presence of Gen. Canby, an their successful experiments in balloon steering.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A serious riot has occurred at Rouen, France. The employees at one of the dockyards there broached a number of casks of wine and became drunk upon the contents. They then assaulted several custom-house officials; some received injuries which are thought to be fatal. The rioters were ultimately dispersed at the point of the bayonet by two battalions of infantry.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In the northeast portion of Lancashire there are now idle 100,000 spindles and 50,000 looms, and 15,000 operatives unemployed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 27.—The English government is considered here to have sustained a defeat in the formation of the new Turkish ministry.

tion of the new Turkish ministry. Said Pasha, the Turkish Foreign Minister, is known to sympathize with Russia. The government journals here are rejoicing over the new aspect of affairs.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.—While all the powers have notified the Porte that they denounce the recent Bulgarian action, it is believed that it will be certainly confirmed, provided Prince Alexander continues to pay the regular tribute to Turkey.

PHILIPPOPOLES, Sept. 26.—Agitation in favor of Macedonia is stringently forbidden, and offenders are tried by court-martial. The officials on the frontier have been instructed to prevent order and prevent any acts of provocation on the part of the people. Prince Alexander visited a mosque here and gave the officiating priest permission to offer prayers for the Sultan. The Prince assured the Mussulmans that their rights would be protected. He left amidst blessings. War preparations are being made with unabated activity.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The cholera has appeared at Nice, France, and 8 deaths from the disease have already occurred there.

MADRID, Sept. 27.—Throughout Spain yesterday there were 521 deaths from cholera and 2000 new cases.

ROME, Sept. 27.—At Palermo to-day there were 164 deaths from cholera and 84 new cases, at Ferrara 9 deaths and two new cases, and at Parma 6 deaths and 6 new cases.

The Pope has consented to act as mediator in the Caroline Islands' difficulty in the event that the direct negotiations between the powers interested shall prove resultless. All the documents relating to the Caroline dispute between Spain and Germany have been delivered to the Pope. Besides Cardinal Jacobini the Pope will consult various experts in regard to the matter.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—Thirty-two deaths from small-pox occurred in this city yesterday. A circular in favor of vaccination was read in most of the city pulpits to-day.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 23.—It is now six days since there has been any mail and passenger communication by rail and by the train in here to-morrow could get no further than San Juan del Rio, and a train which should have reached here last Tuesday only got as far as Sinaloa, where it was compelled to stop on account of renewed warfare. It is hoped to get the track in condition to bring the train in here to-morrow with all the delayed passengers and mail.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 28.—The Czar continues greatly irritated over the Roumanian revolution, and has summoned an important council to consider the situation.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Lord Salisbury, Mr. Gladstone, the Duke of Argyll and Mr. W. E. Gladstone have received telegrams from Roumanians, entreating them to recognize the union of Roumania and Bulgaria.

BELGRADE, Sept. 28.—The military authorities have taken possession of the railways throughout Serbia, and ordinary travel has been stopped. In addition to the reserves 6000 of the Landwehr have been called out for active service.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—In consequence of the inauguration of compulsory vaccination to-day, at about 7 o'clock this evening a howling mob surrounded the East End branch health office and completely wrecked the building. The police on duty were powerless, and the mob gathered strength from this, marched upon the health office in the City Hall. After the mob had smashed the central office they turned their attention to the Central Police Station and soon had all the windows in that building broken.

The constables succeeded in dispersing the mob, but not before they had wrecked the greater portion of the courthouses and the City Hall. The mob broke up into different bodies and proceeded to wreck the windows of the offices of the Medical Health Officer, Chairman of the Finance Committee and Public Vaccinators. A number of arrests were made. The city is in a state of excitement. It is thought that the riots will be continued to-morrow night. The police will patrol around the public building all night, while the military will to-morrow be held in readiness to quickly put a stop to a repetition of such scenes.

WORK FOR WOMEN.—Work for women is taking on a new and most interesting phase. No longer limited to the school-room, devoted Christian women are gaining access to the homes of the poor, as was not possible a few years since. They can visit from village to village and gather companies of women about them for religious instruction. They can multiply their own personal influence by instructing Bible women and superintending their labors. This is largely true of Turkey, India, and to some extent also of China, and recent years. This work requires peculiar qualifications—good health, good ability, good education, ripened Christian character; not mere girls, but young women, from twenty-five to thirty-five years of age, of practical experience in Christian work, as successful teachers of school children and deaconesses, under the care of pastors who know how to turn their abilities to the best account—devoted Christian women who want to make more of their lives, who seek larger opportunities of service for the Master, young women, in short, whom their pastors and churches can spare, but who will nevertheless give them up to go abroad, and be the better and happier for it when the time comes. A dozen such women are needed upon the instant for Japan, India and China—Missionary Herald.

He was very tired and hungry. The letter was an ordinary, unimportant looking missive. He put it in his pocket, and delivered it on the first round next day. What consequences followed? For want of the letter a great firm had failed to meet their engagements, their notes had gone unpaid, and a million closed, and hundreds of poor workmen were thrown out of employment. The letter carrier himself was discharged for his oversight and neglect. His family suffered during the winter for want of the letter of life. But the letter was of small value, compared to the enormous amount of misery caused by his single failure in duty. Evening Telegram.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The clerical news papers here declare that fully 2100 Christians were murdered in the recent outbreak in Annam.

Messrs. Renard and Crebs to-day reported, in the presence of Gen. Canby, an their successful experiments in balloon steering.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A serious riot has occurred at Rouen, France. The employees at one of the dockyards there broached a number of casks of wine and became drunk upon the contents. They then assaulted several custom-house officials; some received injuries which are thought to be fatal. The rioters were ultimately dispersed at the point of the bayonet by two battalions of infantry.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In the northeast portion of Lancashire there are now idle 100,000 spindles and 50,000 looms, and 15,000 operatives unemployed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 27.—The English government is considered here to have sustained a defeat in the formation of the new Turkish ministry.

tion of the new Turkish ministry. Said Pasha, the Turkish Foreign Minister, is known to sympathize with Russia. The government journals here are rejoicing over the new aspect of affairs.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27.—While all the powers have notified the Porte that they denounce the recent Bulgarian action, it is believed that it will be certainly confirmed, provided Prince Alexander continues to pay the regular tribute to Turkey.

PHILIPPOPOLES, Sept. 26.—Agitation in favor of Macedonia is stringently forbidden, and offenders are tried by court-martial. The officials on the frontier have been instructed to prevent order and prevent any acts of provocation on the part of the people. Prince Alexander visited a mosque here and gave the officiating priest permission to offer prayers for the Sultan. The Prince assured the Mussulmans that their rights would be protected. He left amidst blessings. War preparations are being made with unabated activity.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The cholera has appeared at Nice, France, and 8 deaths from the disease have already occurred there.

MADRID, Sept. 27.—Throughout Spain yesterday there were 521 deaths from cholera and 2000 new cases.

ROME, Sept. 27.—At Palermo to-day there were 164 deaths from cholera and 84 new cases, at Ferrara 9 deaths and two new cases, and at Parma 6 deaths and 6 new cases.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The camp meeting at New Prospect, Vandevan circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, will commence on Friday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1885. There will be conveniences at the Seashore Station, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, for ministers on the arrival of each train, Friday the twenty-third. There will be a public tent on the grounds, where all who desire to defray their own expenses can be amply accommodated at reasonable rates.

A. P. COX, P. C.

The camp meeting at Spring Creek Camp Ground, Spring Creek circuit, Alexandria district, will commence Friday before the second Sabbath in October. There will be a boarding tent on the ground. Provisions for sale for tent holders and horses. Preachers and their families will be taken care of, and are cordially invited to come. This camp ground is fifteen miles from Leconte and twenty-five miles from Alexandria.

DANIEL BREWER.

Camp meeting will commence at the Salem Camp Ground, Friday night before the second Sunday in October. All preachers are invited to attend with their families. Those coming by rail will be met at 6 o'clock Friday morning at Seaton, with conveyance to the camp ground.

J. J. LOVETT, P. C.

The camp meeting at Union Camp Ground, twelve miles east of DeSoto, commences on Friday night before the third Sunday in October. Ministers are invited, and will be conveyed out from DeSoto if they let me know they are coming. My address is Shubuta, Miss.

J. C. HOGAN, P. C.

Shiloh Camp Meeting will begin on Thursday night before the second Sabbath in October. Preachers are invited. Those who come by railroad will be met with conveyance at Falmouth, Miss.

C. McDONALD, P. C.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

EUPAULIA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Enon and Midway, at Enon, Oct. 10, 11. Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 12, 13. Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 12, 13. Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 12, 13.

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Greensboro station, at Greensboro, Sept. 28, 29. Greensboro station, at Greensboro, Sept. 28, 29. Greensboro station, at Greensboro, Sept. 28, 29.

PENACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Powhatan, at Powhatan, Sept. 29, 30. Powhatan, at Powhatan, Sept. 29, 30. Powhatan, at Powhatan, Sept. 29, 30.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 5, 6. Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 5, 6. Franklin Street Church, at Mobile, Oct. 5, 6.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Spring Creek, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11. Spring Creek, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11. Spring Creek, at Rocky Hill, Oct. 10, 11.

DELHI DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Richland, at Little Creek, Oct. 17, 18. Richland, at Little Creek, Oct. 17, 18. Richland, at Little Creek, Oct. 17, 18.

HOMER DIST.—THIRD ROUND.

Indian Village circuit, at Bethel, July 4, 5. Indian Village circuit, at Bethel, July 4, 5. Indian Village circuit, at Bethel, July 4, 5.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—THIRD ROUND.

Canal Street, at Canal Street, Aug. 2, 3. Canal Street, at Canal Street, Aug. 2, 3. Canal Street, at Canal Street, Aug. 2, 3.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—THIRD ROUND.

South Bonier, at Cotton Valley, July 4, 5. South Bonier, at Cotton Valley, July 4, 5. South Bonier, at Cotton Valley, July 4, 5.

SEASHORE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19. Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19. Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

SEASHORE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19. Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19. Seashore, at Seashore, Sept. 18, 19.

JACKSON DIST.—FOUR

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 41.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1523.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

AS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
NEVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Postmasters and wives of deceased Preachers and Priests.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELLES,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNEL.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

WHEN, WHERE AND FOR WHAT SHALL I PRAY?

When the morning shineth, go when the noon is bright,
When the eve declineth, go in the hush of night,
With pure mind and free-ing, sing earthily thoughts away,
And in thy chamber kneeling, so there in secret pray.

Remember all who love thee—all that are loved by thee,
For, for those who hate thee, if any such there be,
Pray for thyself in meekness a blessing humbly claim,
And link with each petition the great Redeemer's name.

Pray for the dear departed in solitude to pray,
Should holy souls come o'er thee when friends are away,
Pray like the silent breathing of thy spirit raised above,
Pray with this throne of glory, who is mercy, truth and love.

Pray for sorrow or blessing with this can compare,
The power that he hath given us, to your souls to pray;
Pray for those pined in sadness, before his footstall fall,
Remember in thy gladness his grace who gave thee all.

"Our Father Who Art in Heaven."
BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

This introduction to "The Lord's Prayer" is full of instruction and encouragement. It brings before us the Father of our spirits, the Father of our bodies. He is "the King in glory, eternal, invisible, the only God, our Savior." Heaven is the metropolis of his kingdom. He is glorious in holiness, fearful in his judgments, doing wonders. Children have the position of their Father. Christians are a royal nation, the only true nobility of earth. Children enjoy the security and wealth of their Father. Who can estimate the value of the fact, "Beneath these are everlasting arms, and the eternal God is thy refuge?" Paul says, "Our God shall supply all your needs according to the riches of his glory." Before him an exultant soul exclaimeth, "He shall guide thee by his counsel and afterwards receive thee to glory." What instructive, precious logic! "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

"Our Father." We should study his character in his word and works and in our gracious experience under the teachings of the Holy Spirit. The excellencies of the divine nature, his government, should be understood and appreciated by reverent man. Gratitude should ever be offering its hymns of praise, bowing the knee in trust and consecrating the life to our loving, heavenly Father.

"Our Father" is the source of life and blessing. He is especially near this relation to those who are born of the Spirit and adopted into his family as his children and heirs. He does not afford us light and strength only as we need it in our religious growth; for in this family there is every grade of development from the babe to the grey-headed saint. Thy day is, so shall thy strength.

"Our Father" endows us differently, and the same individual differently at different periods. It would be folly equally manifest to the experienced man a nickel in the stock in trade in business, and the two year old "a thousand dollars with which to buy candy or toys." In our childhood Christian life, we have the endowments, resources, duties, responsibilities of childhood. These are increased as we approach manhood, and our sphere becomes larger and our spiritual necessities become increased.

"Our Father" delights in seeing his children happy. But this happiness is not mere emotion; the out-gush of feeling, however pure. It is the exercise of our ability, the employment of our talents, the use of our opportunities for making others happy in accordance with divine direction. We are happy when we feel that God approves us and our work, and the soul reflects the gleam of joy from other souls and we are enabled with the idea we have imitated Christ.

"Our Father" is the model of our conduct as well as of our nature. Like him we are to exercise forgiveness of injury and to bless even those who curse us. Like him we are to teach the divine theology of Christianity; not in mere didactic lessons, but in the mighty, wordless teachings of deeds of kindness. Here is the universal language all can understand. It is the unwritten, instinctive language of love. As we gaze on him with love and trust and delight to obey him, we learn that mere self is to be lost in effort for others good and nothing is too costly to be placed on the altar of effort for human blessing and salvation.

"Our Father" uses discipline in his family. "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth and scourgeth every one that he receiveth." My Father holds the rod should recall the fact that he gave Christ to the cross. The hand that chasteneth is guided by infinite wisdom and love. The hand that lays the stripes on our backs and destroys our human idols, opens the gates of heaven and offers the crown of glory to fidelity until death. He is teaching us daily the initial letters and vowel sounds of our holy religion in self-denial and cross bearing for Christ's sake. Deprivation of self of some apparent good for Jesus' sake is true heroism; it is strengthening the muscles of the arm that shall grasp the crown, the limbs that shall tread the golden streets and the tongue that shall swell heaven's anthems. In deepest sorrow trust looks up and says, "Our Father, which art in heaven," and feels the quiet of the storm-tossed dove received again into the ark. "Thou shalt know hereafter," is precious balm.

"Our Father." This should tenderly the Christian hearts together. Born of the same parentage, sanctified by the same Holy Spirit and washed in the same crimson blood and sustained by the same grace and traveling to the same homestead on high, we should not "fall out by the way." True Christian love, amid all denominational differences, should live in a higher, nobler atmosphere than mere sectarianism.

"Our Father." Children distant from home often turn their thoughts to the family circle, the fireside, the trees, the well, the fields. All have their touching, unwritten history. Though years have elapsed since our departure, memory rebuilds the scenes of the past. We hear our mother's voice, we kneel again at her knee. The father stands before us, our protector, our ruler, our true friend. We forget the broken links now laid in graves distant from each other and memory makes the chain of dear ones again complete; and love, in its beauty and fragrance and purity, flashed from link to link in the dear circle of hearts. Oh, how oft do we think of heaven! Prisoners, here we sigh for home and heaven. We soothe our sorrows with anticipated joys. The exile princes long for their sceptre and crown.

"Our Father who art in heaven." His eye lovingly watches our footsteps, counts our sorrows, numbers our tears. He knows all our wants but to supply them; our dependence but to honor our trust; our responsibility but to reward our fidelity. The deeds for Christ's sake are written in the memory of God. What an incentive to most intelligent activity directed by Christian principles. Our Father's eye is on us. We are hourly not only forming and exhibiting and illustrating character, but writing history, furnishing facts to be lit up by the judgment fires and to constitute part of the memories of heaven, the joys of redeemed. It is very unkind to disappoint divine expectation and rob our Christ of his glory by giving imperfect, hasty exhibitions to men and angels of the force of truth and the power of divine grace. The world looks to the church for living Christianity. Jesus is yet on trial. We are his witnesses. "Our Father who art in heaven." Words that childhood loves, manhood prizes and old age tenderly repeats as it approaches the tomb.

—CHILLICK, Kentucky.

Thoughts on Complete Sanctification.

MR. EDITOR: It is with no little encouragement that I have noticed within the past few years a revival of the doctrine and experience of Bible holiness in our church in various localities. It indicates a healthy growth in grace among our people. But while I rejoice to see this evidence of prosperity in the church, I very much regret to find such a variety of conflicting opinions among our preachers and members on the subject of what we call in our Wesleyan theology "entire sanctification." One says, "We are not to seek it as a specific blessing to be obtained instantaneously by an act of faith in the all-cleansing blood of Jesus Christ; that by continuance in well doing we are gradually and imperceptibly to grow into this experience without knowing when or where the work is completed." No Christian objects to a growth in grace. If we do not grow, we will backslide. No class of Christians more zealously advocate a constant growing up into Christ in all things than our believers in complete sanctification. But old as I am and extensive as has been my observations on this subject, I have never known one who had gradually and imperceptibly grown into this experience so as to know that they were sanctified wholly; were now in the enjoyment of perfect love; had the witness in themselves, and could testify the enjoyment of this state of grace to their fellow-Christians. If there are any such, I would like to cultivate their acquaintance. Another dwells much on "you should live; not profess it." Every professor of complete sanctification admits the indispensable importance of it. By their fruits ye shall know them. Not to live it is not to have it. To have it and to keep it is both to live it and to profess it. The saluted Fletcher lost the witness and enjoyment of the blessing of perfect love three times by refusing to tell his fellow-Christians what great things the Lord had done for him, and it was only after he got his consent to tell his fellow-Christians what God had wrought in his soul that he became established in the enjoyment of a clean heart. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord." God does not light a candle to put it under a bushel; but on a candlestick, that it may give light to all in the house.

A prominent minister in one of the Texas Conferences some years ago wrote a lengthy article for the Texas Christian Advocate, the object of which was to accuse all who professed instantaneous sanctification of having lost their first love; and, finding themselves in a lukewarm and spiritually dead condition became alarmed and sought and obtained a healing of their backslidings and called it entire sanctification. This, I think, was a very uncharitable and erroneous opinion. If he had known the private experience of those seekers after holiness of heart, he would have found them to be the most earnest and consistent members in the church. They were the men and women who sought specifically for a clean heart, filled with perfect love, until they obtained it. I have heard a number of flings of this sort made at the humble professors of sanctification by men who knew nothing about the experience of this grace themselves. And this reminds me of many things I have read of late years in pamphlets and church papers against our scriptural, simple and plain doctrine of complete sanctification by men of high grade in the church, but who really seemed to compliment themselves because they had no such experience. How can anyone write understandingly on any phase of Christian experience unless he has himself experienced what he undertakes to describe? What did Mr. Wesley, with all his critical theological training, know about justification by faith until that night in Aldergate Street when he felt his heart so strangely warmed and received the assurance that his sins were all forgiven? It was only then he understood this cardinal doctrine of the New Testament, and so preached it everywhere that England was soon in a blaze of revival. If brethren would themselves become the subjects of this great salvation, they could then preach and write about it more understandingly. A good deal of what I have read is calculated to bewilder and mislead the hitherto uninstructed. I would recommend all who are interested on the subject, in addition to reading carefully what the Bible says about heart purity and perfect love, to read "Wesley's Plain Account of Christian Perfection." What Fletcher says in his celebrated checks on the same subject, with the biographies of Hester Ann Rogers, Mary Fletcher and other deeply experienced Christians. Have no controversy with anybody about it. Avoid all extremists and fanatics. Study the subject out carefully and prayerfully for yourself. The enjoyment of this great salvation is "the rest that remains" for the people of God in this world. Its enjoyment is the true secret of a happy and useful life here below and the scriptural preparation for a life in heaven.

J. G. JONES.

Hazlehurst, Mississippi.

Explanatory.

"Fossil Hunter," in the Advocate, of September 24, appears to be on the "war path," but I hope this little "passage at arms" may be settled without a pitched battle. Progressive is not aware that he wrote anything in his article of September 3 that can be characterized as "remarkable for bold assertions and severe accusations against presiding elders and our Bishops." "Fossil Hunter" may think it remarkably "bold" in Progressive to call in question the infallibility of these high functionaries of the church and that the "severe accusations" are contained in the boldness. However that may be, it is certain he did not quote from the article criticised any language that justifies this "severe accusation" against Progressive.

Our critic appeals to facts and figures to confound and overwhelm Progressive, but prudently confines himself to the Mississippi Conference. We must take these on trust, as the writer has not at hand the means of verifying them. Assuming their correctness, there is one, at least, that might be characterized as a "fossil" without intending any reproach by the use of the epithet. Besides, it may be possible that some fossilize soon after being put into office. And it is well to recollect that Mississippi is not the only Conference.

Dr. West comes in for a good share of rebuke for commending "enthusiastically" the "level-headed" of Progressive and closing his indorsement by a "fervent exhortation." The Doctor will no doubt learn caution by this end experience. A "fervent exhortation" contained in a short paragraph is a greater curiosity than a fossilized presiding elder even in the Mississippi Conference.

"Fossil Hunter" scents treason in the air, and he is out with his cudgel to exterminate traitors. But really he is indebted to his imagination for his valorous exploits. Progressive is loyal, and Dr. West is a true, good man. No traitors in the camp. But Progressive and his indorser think they have a right to make a few suggestions without being called to account in the way and manner employed by "Fossil Hunter."

Progressive disclaims for himself any sentiment of disloyalty or unkindness in what he has written. He loves the church and has in view its best interests in what he writes, says or does.

That "museum" business was intended as a bit of pleasantry. Just that, and nothing more. If any venerable brethren, who have served long and faithfully in the presiding elder's office, feel reproached by what was playfully written in my former article, I beg to assure them I intended no harm.

PROGRESSIVE.

Letter from Brazil.

Our mission rents here the large house in which I now write—nine rooms, kitchen, pantry and four halls. We pay a high rent—nearly thirty dollars per month. Bro. Kennedy and I have a house here when we come up, and we always have one or two helpers in the house. The large dining-room has seats in it (handiwork of Bro. Elliot) for forty or fifty people. We have two services in Portuguese and two in German in this house weekly. About a mile from here is a large cotton factory, where we have English preaching two or three times monthly; congregations, from eight to twenty; congregations in the central house, from four to fifty. About a mile beyond the cotton factory is a large brick yard, and under one of the brick sheds, shut in by bricks placed temporarily around the sides, are rough seats (without backs) for one hundred people. There the sermons are all in German, and congregations vary from twenty-five to one hundred persons. About two leagues away from here, up in the mountains, more than a thousand feet higher than the city, is a point at which we have preaching in German and Portuguese alternately, twice monthly in each language. Our young brother, Ludizero de Miranda, preached there yesterday to about thirty persons, first time in Portuguese. I was much pleased with the sermon. Boyish certainly, but full of fire, well delivered and the preacher (exhorter), showed his good sense by choosing a grand text, "For God so loved the world," etc. The brethren there have undertaken to build a chapel to cost $150 (they say); $157 50 (I say). They will need a little help—$157 50 or $37 50, which I have been able to promise them. One of the brethren has given me the land, so that we shall have a secure title and a fine foothold, though our chapel will only seat seventy-five or one hundred people. We have thus a beautiful circuit, in a fine region, much resembling the part of San Paulo in which you live, though far surpassing it in beauty and grandeur of scenery, and have accessible to us a German population of several thousand and a large Brazilian element kindly disposed toward our work. We have projected a church close to the cotton factory on a street car line, accessible from every part of the city for 7 cents. The church will cost $1,500 or $2,250. The subscription list here and in Rio runs up to more than $25—will reach $750. I paid for the ground about $337 50, and expect to advance on the church $750 or $937 50 more, and then we shall have a lovely building, a thing of beauty, in which to worship God. When the chapel and church are finished in October we shall have a properly worth $2,437 50 or $2,587 50, for which we shall have paid out, on my personal responsibility, only $1,293 75.

And now as to the results. It is something harder to speak just along this line. We have the congregations above mentioned. We have about a dozen subscribers to my Sunday-school papers, Apologist and House and Home. I brought up with me last week two dozen German hymn books and have four dozen more, all of which we shall doubtless dispose of. We have received one full-blooded Brazilian, a Bahiano, who has expressed a desire to prepare for the ministry and who returns with me to Rio this week. Before I leave for the United States I hope to see the German congregation supporting its own pastor entirely. We have some twenty-two or twenty-three full members, and nearly that many probationers, though these figures will have to be revised.

This is a plain matter of fact showing of this charge as it appears to me. Bro. Kennedy and his wife did some good work on their visit here. Bros.

Elliot and Ludizero wrought faithfully; the latter is still here. And Bro. Gartner, with some defects and lack of careful training, has shown himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Such were the instruments. To God be the glory.

J. J. HANSON.

Apiz de Fora.

St. Louis Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.—T. M. Finney, P. E. First Church, E. R. Hill; Centenary, W. V. Taylor; St. John's, J. W. Lewis; Marvin Chapel, E. J. Hinkle; Chouteau Avenue, (to be supplied); Cook Avenue, C. O. Jones; St. Paul's, W. R. Mays; Carondelet, (to be supplied); Eden, C. N. Riegh; Bridgeton, C. E. W. South; Kirkwood, J. E. Godbey; Mt. Zion and Olivet, A. H. Rogers; Bellefontaine, B. K. Throver; Platin, A. J. Green; Ironside, C. M. Hensley; Caledonia and Potosi, J. H. Headlee; Hannibal, S. W. Enory; editors St. Louis Advocate, D. R. McAnally, E. M. Bounds; Southwestern Methodist, J. E. Godbey; Somerville Institute, R. F. Chew.

CHARLESTON DISTRICT.—H. Hancroft, P. E. Charleston, J. W. Johnson; Farndington, J. W. Robinson; Farmington circuit, S. C. Bille; Fredericksburg, W. C. Hogan; Marquand, to be supplied (by E. V. Glass); Lutesville, J. A. Russell; Oak Ridge, H. A. Smith; Cape Girardeau, J. B. McNeill—S. C. Alexander, supernumerary; Benton, S. A. Mason; Cross Plains, W. Parker; Charleston circuit, J. A. Matthews; Sikeston and Bertrand, A. T. Thawell; New Madrid and Prospect, W. Foll; York Chapel, C. P. Brewer; Caruthersville, J. C. Davis; Point Pleasant, E. A. Ewlog.

POPULAR BLUFF DISTRICT.—J. L. Fulton, P. E. Bellevue, B. E. H. Warren; Arading, J. W. Workshop; Piedmont, W. P. Gibson; St. Francis, J. B. Morris; Williamsville, W. C. Enochs; Popular Bluff, R. A. McClintock; Bloomfield, G. H. Adams; Picketon, E. McClintock; Clarkton, J. A. Jenkins; Grand Prairie, T. Lord; Doniphan, H. D. Overton; Current River, J. A. Cox; Alton, R. Walton; Eminence, (to be supplied); West Plains, W. S. Trull; Centerville, L. W. Pickens.

SALEM DISTRICT.—L. F. Aspley, P. E. Fenton, W. S. Tyler; Mercersburg, J. R. Eddleman; Labadie, W. H. Blalock; Washington, G. W. Nollner; St. Clair, D. J. Marquis; Cuba, (to be supplied); Steelville, S. Richmond; St. James, S. H. Renfro; Rolla, J. R. Ledbetter; Salem and Lake Springs, O. Rogers; Salem circuit, (to be supplied); Leaking, D. F. Renfro; Houston, W. F. Young; Manchester, J. B. Rice; Somerville, J. M. Roberts.

TRANSFERRED.—R. J. Nelson, to South-west Missouri Conference.

North Louisiana Notes.

It was good to be at the Mt. Zion Camp Meeting, especially on Monday. At eleven o'clock we listened to the eloquent funeral discourse on Father Harrison Camp, delivered by Rev. John A. Miller. At three o'clock Mrs. Wilmot H. Goodale addressed the people upon the objects and work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the very important subject of the legal prohibition of the liquor traffic. At night God's power descended upon sinners and sinners, and as mourners were comforted and the church wondrously stirred and blessed, tears of joy filled many eyes and shouts and hal-lalujahs uot a few, with the unmistakable ring of the blessed Spirit, peeled forth the running over joy that flooded happy hearts. We left at four o'clock in the morning, thanking God and taking courage and praying fervently for the Mt. Zion flock.

SEPTEMBER 27, 1885.

A Note from Bro. Dye.

MR. EDITOR: As you would not publish my "love letter" to Dr. Steel—and you did right, perhaps—I ask you to publish this short note: Dr. Steel, you say I "scented all the laws of logic and honor" in the attempt to make you say what you did not. Now, if I am guilty of such a charge, then am I a great sinner. I ask you to make an analysis of your sentence, "The mock heroic phrase—the South," and tell us what does the adjective element qualify if not "the South"? Now, if you will give us the true interpretation of your delphian speech, and by so doing convict me as charged, then in such case I will no more write of suppression of the veritas loci et veritas rei, and will not toss back your Webster's Unabridged Latin, "falsum in uno," etc., at you.

T. W. DYE.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1885.

RELIGION, NOT CREMONA.

No stated priest nor chanting boys
Can give me true, enduring joys;
External things affect me not;
If Christ be true, he'll be my lot;
No golden cross nor candles bright
Can fill my soul with heavenly light;
But Jesus' smile can chase away
The clouds of sin with piercing ray.
No pillar'd wave nor rich stained glass
Can bring that mighty thing to pass—
A soul redeemed from all iniquity,
Made beautiful and clean within.
These things we ought to disregard,
And rob the soul of what 'twould find—
Pardon and peace through Jesus' blood
And sweet communion with his God.
When Jesus preached upon the mount,
We read not in the bluest account
Of gaudy robes or splendid choir,
But of his words we were more fire.
The soul which bows before the Lord,
And needs the teachings of his word,
Needs not these things to help it rise
On wings of faith to paradise.

Sunday-School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson III.

OCTOBER 13, 1885.—II Kings 2, 13-41.

Jehu's False Zeal.

Golden Text. "Blessed is the man that walketh in the counsel of the upright,—" Psalm 1, 1.

HOME READINGS

MOX. Jehu's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
TO. Jehu's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
WRO. Ahab's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
THU. Ahab's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
FEL. Ahab's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
RAE. Ahab's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.
NEW. Ahab's False Zeal. II Kings 2, 13-14.

Soon after the events related in our last lesson great changes took place. Ben-hadad was slain, and Hazael succeeded to the throne of Syria. Jehu became King of Israel, and Ahab's family were all slain, as was predicted. Of Jehu, the tenth King of Israel, a commentator says: "He was a cautious, crafty man, who was slow to commit himself to any irrevocable course of action, but energetic and unrelenting in prosecuting it when resolved upon it."

15.—Departed thence. When Jehu was returning from the slaughter of Ahab's family he met Jehonadab, the head of the Rechabites and the author of their peculiar rite of life. Jehu blessed him—that is, saluted him with the respect due his position and godly life. He then inquired if Jehonadab's heart was right with his way of ascertaining if he approved his administration. The king's invitation to occupy a seat in his chariot was more gratifying to Jehu than honoring to Jehonadab. He wanted the counsel and companionship of the Rechabites more than he needed royal approval and attention.

16.—See my zeal for the Lord. Jehu referred, of course, to his work of extermination against the house of Ahab. He was over zealous and ambitious, and while God commended his course in some respects, he condemned it in others. This invitation was to secure pious approval of his conduct, on which Matthew Henry happily remarks: "This was not the only time that the piety of some has been made to serve the policy of others, and that designing men have strengthened themselves by drawing good men into their interests."

18.—Gathered the people. After coming into Samaria, and completing his bloody work by destroying the last remnant of the house of Ahab, he summoned the people to gather together and announced his purpose against the worshippers of Baal.

Then follows the story of a slaughter that is shocking to consider, and which we need not comment upon in detail.

But, as a practical lesson to be gathered from the whole narrative, we quote the admirable words of President Carleton, in the Sunday-school Magazine:

"It seems a great pity that we have to speak of Jehu's false zeal. Zeal is so precious an element it is sad to see any perverted specimens in it. And yet if church history, ancient or modern, could be fully and truly written, would not many Jehus of all sizes be seen driving furiously about all through the pages? We all have the Jahu blood in us. And even the true anointing oil may not restrain it. Some controversialists are in danger of driving too furiously. The startling truth is written on many pages of the Old Testament that a man may be providentially called to a post, and yet he may not meet the just demands of his high calling. Adam was placed providentially in the garden of Eden; yet he fell. Jahu was called to take the place of unworthy men. He had mingled good and evil in him. The patient and impartial Lord of all saw some things in Jehu that could be approved, and for which some blessing could be promised to him and his children. 'Because thou hast done well,' etc. (II Kings 10, 30.) And yet there was a fatal defect running through his work and his character and his life. Jehu took no heed to walk in the law of the Lord God of Israel with all his heart. May a similar defect run through the life and office of a man today who is called to membership in the church, and even to position in it? Is there possible in our day a zeal which is untiring, unparalyzing, and yet false? Let those who are called on to denounce errors and wrong doctrine look to this point. It is well to root out all the Ahab in our reach; but there is a zeal that draws its inspiration from below, and not from above. Jehu reigned twenty-eight years. For one hundred years his descendants sat on the throne of Israel. Then others pushed them aside, as Jehu had been chosen to displace the wicked sons of Ahab.

"Not only was wickedness found in the camps of Samaria, but in the army of Israel. In one who worked his way up to the chief place in the army, one chosen to sit on the throne, there was great selfishness as well as great zeal. There was selfish zeal and zealous selfishness. We can not wear Jehu's robe or crown, or drive his chariot, or literally repeat his strange career; but we may do many things to benefit Church and State, and yet we may never, with all the heart, take heed to walk in the law of the Lord."

Retrospective.

TWENTY-SEVENTH PAPER.

In the latter part of September, 1881, the writer attended a Sabbath service at a camp meeting held on Cedar Creek circuit, in Jones county, Ga. The Rev. John Howard, presiding elder of the Macon district, was in charge of the meeting, and preached the eleven o'clock sermon to a large audience. The text is still remembered—"To this have I found that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions." Not only the text is remembered, but many of the "inventions" the preacher spoke of which men had sought out to ward off the influences of the Holy Spirit. It seemed as though he was tracking methrough every lane of my life; that he understood my case thoroughly and was making it a personal matter. I went to this camp meeting with no intention of seeking religion at that time. As I was young, I thought there would be "time enough yet." Alas! how many souls have wrecked their hopes of heaven on this specious plea!

Like
The hoary fool who all his days
Has labored with continued sorrow,
Yet still goes on, and fondly says
The desperate bet upon to-morrow.
"To-morrow comes 'tis noon, 'tis night—
This day, like all the former, flies;
I, too, am going to seek delight
To-morrow—till to-night he dies."

It was made clear to my mind that procrastination was one of the devil's inventions.

Mr. Howard in person was a model Georgian—rather over medium size, a portly man of commanding appearance, with a countenance beaming with benevolence; a clear, full, trumpet-toned voice, and with a pathos few could equal. I thought him the most pious man I had ever seen. The Spirit of God accompanied the word, and I was a deeply convicted sinner at the close of the sermon. The arrow, dipped in love divine, had pierced my heart. Then and there I resolved, if religion was for me, I would seek for it with my whole heart. The afternoon service tended to deepen my convictions. I returned to Hillsboro, fully determined to become an earnest seeker of salvation. Notice had been given that a protracted meeting, to commence in two weeks, would be held at Hillsboro, Jasper county, where I was then living, conducted by Revs. Thomas Mabry and Caleb W. Key, who were the preachers, on the Cedar Creek circuit. I anxiously awaited the time for this meeting to commence, for I felt impressed that the Lord would pardon my sins at that time. The intervening days and nights seemed longer than usual. My feelings and purposes were kept secret from all except the Lord.

The wished-for time came, and with it the preachers who were to be instrumental in my conversion. At the close of the first service Mr. Mabry commenced singing a song, going through the congregation, having something to say to us personally. He was the first preacher who had placed his hand on my head. There seemed to be an indescribable magic in the touch. I realized my unfitness for either living or dying. At the next service mourners were called. One young lady responded to the call. I did not. How miserable I afterwards felt! I thought I had lied to my Maker by promising to seek religion, and then refusing to avail myself of the prayers of God's people. Leaving the church with a heavy heart, I sought solitude, where I wept in secret and prayed to be forgiven. My case became more and more desperate until I was ready to inquire with the Psalmist: "Is his mercy clean gone forever?"

At the night service I took a seat near the altar, determined to go forward as a seeker of salvation at the next call. While Mr. Mabry was preaching I felt that I would be lost, and lost forever, without the interposition of a higher power than man. While I wanted religion and relief from an overburdened heart, I wanted that voiceless kind my mother had. Others might cry aloud and shout as an inhabitant of Zion; but I much preferred the "still small voice." It was not long before I became willing to abandon my terms and accept the Lord's or any terms that would afford me that peace of mind Christians enjoyed. If a calm could only be realized, a whirlwind and storm had broken up the foundations of self-will, then let it come. Just as a still voice would whisper peace to a troubled heart—anything rather than carry longer an accusing conscience and troubled heart! While lost to all surrounding objects, and seeing nothing but "sorrow and trouble," I was enabled by faith to look beyond myself, catching a view of the cross, realizing that Christ was my personal Savior, and that his blood availed for me.

This bright spot on the page of my history was indelibly written on October 11, 1881, at which time I connected myself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, from which to the present time the connection has never been severed. A young man and the writer had not been on speaking terms for several months. At the close of the service I hunted him up, told him I had nothing against him, wanted him to seek religion and wished to be friendly with him. Before the eleven days' protracted meeting closed this young man was numbered among the forty members who were received into the Methodist Church.

More about Mr. Mabry and his sad experience in my next.

DANIEL MORSE.

MARSHALL, TEXAS.

Melchisedek.

Mr. Editor: The question, "Who was Melchisedek?" has puzzled the world for many generations, and been the cause of much infidelity and some downright contempt of holy writ. I have seen many attempted explanations, but none of them were satisfactory; hence I feel it my duty to give your readers, with your permission, my views upon this important subject, as I verily believe I have solved the problem.

St. Paul tells us, concerning God, that "the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse;" hence the tabernacle of God in heaven was to be understood by the tabernacle of God in the wilderness, and the worship of God in heaven by the worship of God on earth, which Messiah fulfilled and simplified by his incarnation. Up to the time of Moses there was no tabernacle of God with man, and no earthly priest authorized to receive tithes or to look after God's interests in any other way. Wherefore the appearance of Melchisedek, in Genesis xiv, to represent God and to receive what was due Him from Abraham?

This tabernacle in the wilderness, of which Aaron and his sons were priests, was built by the Hebrews under the superintendence of Moses, "after the pattern shown him in the mount," which pattern was evidently that of the tabernacle of God in heaven, where the angels worshiped and still worship, and of which Melchisedek was and is high priest. Before the time of Aaron, Melchisedek must have appeared often upon earth to mediate between God and man, for we see no evidence in sacred writ that his presence before Abraham and his servants was in anywise a matter of surprise to them. On the other hand, they seemed to regard it as an ordinary transaction, to which all the world was then accustomed; as witness the fact that Abraham paid tithes without a murmur and went on his way satisfied with himself and rejoicing in God.

Observe that Melchisedek is styled "King of Salem," which is, by interpretation, "King of Righteousness—King of Peace." "Salem" is a term that denotes a condition or an attribute—not a territory or state, and was, in its interpreted sense, applied to Christ: "Prince of Peace—Sun of Righteousness." Observe, further, that Melchisedek "brought forth bread and wine." So did Jesus at the institution of "the Lord's Supper." It was the same ceremony, and Christ gave us nothing new when he established it permanently on earth because it was already hoary with age in heaven. Christ only gave it a new significance, connecting it with his death and suffering. In heaven it was used before the death of Christ as a renewal of the bond of allegiance made to God by the angels who remained steadfast when Satan fell, and after the death of Christ in that sense as well as in the further sense in which it is used on earth.

Aaron was the first priest on earth that was man; so he was not made after the order of Melchisedek, nor was Christ made after the order of Aaron. Melchisedek was made of the dust of heaven, as was Adam out of the dust of earth. He, therefore, "had neither father nor mother," nor "ending of days," nor, so far as earth is concerned, "beginning of days," because he was made before earth was; and in heaven he is not regarded as having had a beginning of "days" (an earthly period of time), but simply as having had a beginning of existence, and that, too, before most of the angels in heaven had theirs. He, therefore, has no "descent" because he was created in matured form, to commence with, and there is "no marriage nor giving in marriage" in heaven. Jesus Christ, as man, had a mother, while God was his Father; but as God, or as the Priest of God, in which capacity alone he is compared to Melchisedek, he had "neither father nor mother, beginning nor ending of days," and was likewise without "descent," for he was and is God, "and beside him is no other."

After the present heaven and earth are destroyed on account of sin and death, and the new heaven and new earth created out of their ruins, "all things are to be made new," and the tabernacle of God will be with men forever on the new earth (Vide Revelation xxi, 3), just as its shadow was previously for a short while. The temple, superceded the typical tabernacle on earth; but in the universal regeneration spoken of above, and also referred to in Matthew xix, 28, the real tabernacle in the real New Jerusalem is to be given to earth, and there is to be no temple, "for the Lord God Almighty (Revelation xxi, 22) and the Lamb are the light of it."

It is useless to try to account for Melchisedek upon the hypothesis that he is or was a man. The Scriptures plainly contradict any system of reasoning that would describe this eternal being as mere man. Melchisedek was priest of God, and will always be in that house of God not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, and Jesus Christ is "a Priest forever after the order of Melchisedek."

W. W. HOSKINS.

GREENWOOD, MISS., Sept. 25, 1885.

A Sketch.

BY ELROY.

Standing one day on the main street of a capital city of a Southern State, my attention was directed to the reeling, staggering form of a man possibly, then, some sixty years of age.

"That," said an acquaintance standing at my side, "is Col. Hammond."

"You don't tell me," said I. "Not Col. Hammond, of Glendale?"

"Indeed it is," replied my acquaintance.

In another moment my mind forsook all else around, and I was soliloquizing: That man I once of towering intellect, the brightest in all the State, one of its profoundest lawyers—nay, its profoundest; that man once the ideal of all manly perfection, the exemplar of all propriety—such a gentleman and scholar that fathers and mothers held him up to their sons as a pattern whose example they would have them emulate, and whose virtuous deeds they would have them follow—come down to this? Was it possible? I was loth to believe it.

I remembered that I had sometimes heard that man upon the rostrum and on the hustings. I could almost hear his eloquent voice now and almost behold the beautiful images he eloquently was once wont to paint. His deep, sonorous voice would delve deep down into the earth and roll through its chasms; then he would rise like fire and flow, lava-like, out on the bosom of the ocean, popping, sizzling, fizzing; then it would pass into the lakelets and streamlets and go rippling, floating, calling along; then, as if on spirit wings, would rise and rise, and circle and circle, and rise higher, and higher, away up and above the clouds, chasing the meteors althwart the heavens and tickling the little stars until their tiny eyes would glisten and smile, and smile and glisten, lighting up the whole canopy of heaven and reflecting back to earth one great golden sheen of glory; and thrice-crowned cherubs clasped their dimpled little hands, while seraphic hosts, bedecked with diamonds and sapphires, pulled aside the gorgeous veil and revealed to repentant man the home of his immortal soul and beckoned him to come!

God had given this wonderful power and art to the Colonel, as I had known him; man and his worst enemy, drink, had robbed him and had made him the wreck, the miserable wretch that he was that day.

"Unconscious Memory."

Mr. Editor: In my readings somewhere of late I was struck with the strange promulgation of something new under the sun.

President Adams, of Cornell University, says there is such a thing as "unconscious memory," and that writers for the press and authors sometimes unconsciously use the same words and sentences they have read without any effort to memorize at the time of reading or plagiarize at the time of writing. There is considerable plausibility in this new idea; but it strikes me as being almost as dangerous as "a little learning." For instance, a retentive memory would seize upon and lay up a whole sketch or poem in some of the brain shelves of a well-developed cranium which could be utilized any moment when there was an occasion to call on this bump of "unconscious memory."

The mneuse would not have to be "cured"; they could retire to their Ghaolan grove where first they sang, while the new genius of "unconscious memory" could scribble off the easy flowing rhymes with a rapidity that would astonish an expert types writer. No such treasure brain puzzles as the vain effort to make "has flown" rhyme with "sweet home" or "strewn with flowers" come in exactly the right place while writing in a young lady's album. No; the lines would meander along and the rhymes fall into place as gracefully as a West Point cadet at a parade.

But what puzzles me, Mr. Editor, is how to distinguish this new theory from outright plagiarism. Where is Fowler? Perhaps he could locate this wonderful bump somewhere upon the undeveloped cavities of mental faculties so that we could grasp the idea and enjoy its reality. Until that nice point is defined we will have to doubt the feasibility of a memory that could write off a whole poem verbatim and call it a case of "unconscious memory" instead of conscious plagiarism. Suppose we make a test case and decide the matter.

Last June I wrote a poem addressed to Mr. and Mrs. E. Walsh on the death of their infant son, Arthur. They had it published in the Advocate; and, not a week or two ago the same poem, verbatim et literatim, appeared in the same columns by G. L. King to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor. Nothing was changed but the names.

If this be a clear case of Dr. Adams' unconscious memory, let every scribbler and all the tribe of Zephulans handle the pen of the writer's bring their leaves of laurel and crown G. L. King, the king of an "unconscious memory."

ALICE CARY SADDLER.

WEST POINT, LA., Sept. 18, 1885.

From the Work.

ANDERPOLE, ALA.

Mr. Editor: This has been a year of unusual spiritual growth on this (Perot) circuit. One hundred and forty dollars worth of work done on the parsonage. And within the last eight weeks fifty-one have been added to the membership on profession of faith, and no less than sixty have found peace with God. Many family altars have been erected, and the church at large evidently brought to a loftier conception of the real value of a religious life.

J. L. SKIFFER.

BAYOU BARBARY, LA.

Mr. Editor: Perhaps a few lines from Livingston will be of interest to some of your readers. During protracted meetings, held at different places in this charge, there have been eighteen accessions, most of whom were on profession of faith, several conversions and the church wonderfully revived. We have here, as I have seen at other places, too much world in the church; but there are also a great many whose constant song is,

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess."

There is at Bayou Barbary what I think is the grandest sight I ever saw—a boys' prayer meeting, it is conducted exclusively by boys, who meet regularly every week and do their singing and praying. Oh! it is a lovely sight to see them taking up the cross so young. Our pastor, Bro. Scarborough, is generally loved by the people.

Prohibition does prohibit in Livingston. This writer visited the parish jail a few days ago and it would rejoice you, Mr. Editor, to see it. The jail is not prepossessing in appearance; but on examining the lock I found that it was almost impossible to turn the key on account of rust. The jail was empty! Would you not be surprised if I told you that there have been but two imprisonments since the first of January? Besides depriving the jail of inhabitants, how many homes have been made heaven which were hells before! So much for prohibition. May the good work continue until all in our land shall have tasted the fruits of prohibition!

FRANK KENN.

WINONA, MISS.

Mr. Editor: At our meeting at Emory, which closed September 2, the power and presence of the Spirit was felt at the first service and continued its manifestations at every service to the close. Christians were eager every morning in the prayer meeting to bear testimony to the power of saving grace. The entire community was benefited, congregations large, people eager to hear the word and take a part in the worship of God. The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge. We closed a six days' meeting at Howell's Chapel, September 18, which resulted in much good. One man, over seventy years of age, professed religion and joined the church. Thanks to Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Lexington, for three days' efficient labor. W. D. and E. R. Brock, two efficient lay workers, have kept up a weekly prayer meeting and Sunday-school at this church for six years without intermission. We have held three protracted meetings and received twenty-two into the church.

G. W. BROWN.

LEXINGTON, MISS.

Mr. Editor: We have just closed a gracious revival of religion at old Oregon Church, five miles north-west of Lexington, Miss. I was assisted by Rev. N. G. Augustus, of the Bellzona circuit, and Rev. M. M. Broadway, of the Baptist Church. Owing to the incessant rain we had no service on Saturday and Sunday; our last service being held on Friday night. The meeting resulted in thirty-five conversions and seventeen accessions to our church and four to the Baptist Church, with more to follow. I expect five or six more to join at my next appointment. This was one of the most powerful meetings I ever held.

The converts embrace all ages and ages from the little girl of ten summers to the old lady of fifty-five or more. The church members were greatly revived. Uncle Joe McGee, a layman from the Richland circuit, was present and rendered us valuable assistance. We instituted the Sunset Grove Meeting, which resulted in great good to all who attended. One evening in particular the power of God was manifest, and many Christians rejoiced aloud and many sinners cried for mercy. The young men who are members of the church take an active part in the services and are ready to pray, sing or lead the prayer meeting, and some of them testify publicly to their devotion and love to God. I have had sixty conversions to date on the Lexington circuit. I hope to have three hundred members to report at the next Annual Conference. I have all my Conference collections in cash and good subscription. I hope to report full collections at Conference. I was rejoiced to see a letter from my old friend, Bro. R. F. Witt, in the last issue of the Advocate. I understand he is doing a good work at Marion.

T. W. LEWIS.

(This is a capital report. Revivals and good collections should go together. Now let the Advocate be circulated.—Editor.)

VERONA, MISS.

Mr. Editor: The good Lord has blessed us wonderfully this year on Shannon circuit. We have held five protracted meetings with fine results. One more still to hold. Have had between sixty and seventy conversions, and the church moved to a more consecrated and holy life. We do not hesitate to say that there is not a circuit of six appointments in the North Mississippi Conference that can boast of as good church-houses. We have expended about $600 for church repairs. We have in good subscriptions, with $40 or $50 margin—all the collections ordered by the Conference. Peace and harmony prevail throughout the work.

J. B. STORER.

MADVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: For some time I have been wanting to tell what the Lord has been doing for us on this circuit, but have been waiting until I could close up my round of protracted meetings. I am not done holding them yet, but I can not wait any longer; the news is good that I must tell it. About two years ago this circuit was called the "little end of the Vicksburg district" or the "little end of the Nicksburg trumpet." I do not think it would be right to call it by that name now, because it may be the other end of the horn now, at least in some things. Before our protracted meetings commenced nineteen had joined the church. On the first Sunday in August I commenced a protracted meeting at Beach Grove and continued five days. Results: Three accessions and the church greatly revived. From Beach Grove to Greenwood—here we had a good meeting and one accession in the church. Thence to Nemo, where we enjoyed the grandest outpouring of the Holy Ghost in converting and edifying power that has ever been witnessed by this preacher. The Lord blessed and we worshiped! Results: Twenty-five accessions and about as many conversions. From Nemo to Oak Grove—here the Lord let down the foot of his power in the salvation of the people. Results: Twenty-one accessions and a number of conversions. From Oak Grove to Meadville—here we enjoyed a "time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." Results: Twenty-two accessions, some conversions and a revived membership. From Meadville to Providence, where we again enjoyed a wonderful manifestation of the power of Christ to save sinners. Results: Seventeen accessions and as many conversions. We have had a great revival all over the circuit. Many have been converted, many have shouted the praises of God and a great many have promised to live better and try to get to heaven. One hundred and four have joined the church, and more to follow. Thanks to Bros. Flowers, Anders, Davis, H. Bradford, T. C. Bradford, Sullivan, Willis, McLeurin and Holloway, but unto God be all the praise.

V. D. SKIFFER, P. C.

NORTH WILKINSON, MISS.

Mr. Editor: The Lord has greatly blessed us in this charge. Owing to the health of the pastor we were late beginning our protracted services and have held meetings at only two churches out of six. Our meeting at Macedonia, the first held, began on Saturday, August 29, and continued one week. We were assisted by Dr. S. West, Bros. Polty and White. Bro. West did all the preaching, and carried the meeting on until Tuesday, when Bro. Cecil came to assist. All this time I could do nothing but pray, as I was confined to my bed; but Tuesday morning I was able to ride to the church and attend every service thereafter. Bros. West and Cecil were all hearts, and will long be remembered by the Macedonians. Many thanks for their valuable services. The results of this meeting were about twenty-five conversions and thirteen accessions to the church. On Sunday a most excellent, but very worldly minded, young lady remarked to a friend that she would not go to the altar to be prayed for; but Tuesday morning she was converted and prayed publicly for the conversion of others. Bro. West remarked to me after service that every one in the house felt the power and presence of the Holy Spirit.

We closed a meeting at Mt. Carmel last Wednesday of five days' continuance, which resulted in sixteen conversions and nine accessions to the church. Bros. Anders and Polty closed Sunday and remained until it closed. Bros. Whitehead and White were also present one day. These brethren did good work. At both of these churches we organized prayer meetings and the class meetings will follow. Twelve young men have taken up their crosses and now pray whenever called on. I have never attended more gracious revivals than these were. All praise unto God.

J. A. NEWSON, P. C.

I read a beautiful Countess and raised a considerable amount of blood and mucus; besides, I was very thin, and so weak I could scarcely get about the house. This was the work of a man with consumption in cash and liver complaint. He was cured by Placoe's "Golden Medical Discovery." Thousands of others bear similar testimony.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HENNING.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1885.

Wanted—An ADVOCATE in every family.

This ADVOCATE is only two dollars a year—a very cheap pastoral helper.

Now is the time to circulate the ADVOCATE. The good news from the churches will thaw out many an old iceberg. Let the people know what the Lord is doing for Zion.

The Conferences are responding to Dr. Kelley's appeal right royally. Daylight begins to dawn on our missionary darkness. In the meantime let pastors resolve to bring up the full assessment for foreign missions.

The question of "disestablishment" is one of the leading issues in the present political campaign in England. Nearly every Liberal candidate is an outspoken advocate for liberating the church from State control. A few more years the union may continue, but the trend of English politics will inevitably achieve the needed reform.

The elections in France have quite taken the world by surprise. The large gains of the royalists on the one hand and the extreme radicals on the other complicates the political situation and, we fear, rather imperils the future of the republic. The moderate republicans, led by such conservative men as ex-President Ferry, have been overwhelmingly defeated. What the next few months or years will develop, no political prophet can forecast.

The sons of Demetrius are yet a numerous generation. Their craft is to make merchandise out of the popular religion. We do not wonder, therefore, that they often avail themselves of the fame of some great evangelist to stimulate trade and get gain. But not always has the zealous apostle the ready discernment to detect and expose their evil designs. Sam Jones, as we might readily imagine, is no such "innocent abroad." He has the gift of discerning spirits, an evidence of which is given in the special dispatches from St. Joseph, Mo. The telegraphic statement may be an exaggeration, and we hesitate to give it entire credence, but it serves to point a moral. It is said that Sam Jones created a genuine sensation at our service by charging that some of the merchants of St. Joseph favored his coming as a commercial enterprise. They wanted him to draw crowds that they might sell goods. He said if he had known such was their purpose, he would have declined the invitation. If the story is true, it is only a repetition of a chapter in the Acts of the Apostles. The gospel has a commercial value that shrewd tradesmen are not slow to recognize.

We judge from a recent double-leaded utterance in the New York Advocate that our confrere is hard pressed by clamorous partisans of the several political parties. Some insist upon the "great official" becoming an outspoken advocate of the Prohibition party, and yet others, of the Republican organization. We are not advised as to whether any Democratic made demands; but, if not, it was on account of certainty of failure, and not excessive modesty. Dr. Buckley makes candid reply and takes high ground. He clearly announces the true doctrine on which all religious journalism should stand. While courageously advocating the right and boldly rebuking wrong, whether in high places or low, a church paper should never be the organ of any political party or person. On that subject the New York editor well says: "As it circulates among men of all political parties, it should not discuss mere partisan issues, nor obtrude the political prejudices and prepossessions of the editor upon the people, nor descend to the details of party organization and action." And in this connection we may properly state that, while every religious journal in the land ought to battle for the legal suppression of the liquor traffic, it should not be under the dictation of any caucus or convention. We plead for its triumph, not as a party shibboleth, but as a great moral principle entrenched far above mere contests for place and patronage. And to this course we advise every pastor of every religious denomination.

Wise above What is Written.

When ecclesiastical get so hard pressed that they have to correct Scripture language for fear it may "concede" too much they exult in commiseration. Too much Scripture will make the people mad and the sect will lose members. We find the following in the Watchman, of Boston:

In a recent Baptist gathering we heard brethren pray, "May the baptism of the Holy Spirit be upon us!" Now, however natural this form of words may be to pious Baptists, we submit that it is well nigh unpardonable for a Baptist to use it. It is as if he said, "May the immersion of the Holy Spirit be upon us!" The incongruity of the language is most obvious, and it concedes an error which we, as a people, stand to correct. That which is really desired is to be baptized in the Spirit as completely as the true Baptist is baptized in water. Let the language used consistently express this. Pouring of the Spirit is one scriptural figure; baptism of the Spirit is quite another. God grant us all such abundance of the Holy Spirit that we may be baptized, or immersed, therein.

That is certainly rich. If pouring of the Spirit is a different thing from baptism of the Spirit, Peter didn't know it, for he said: "And as I (Peter) began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John, indeed, baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." So the Holy Ghost which fell on the people suggested to Peter the promised baptism. And all through the Scriptures the Spirit is represented as descending, falling, being poured out, shed forth, and never as that into which persons are said to be plunged or immersed. A few passages will expose the folly and absurdity of the above extract. "Behold, I will pour out my Spirit unto you." (Proverbs 1, 23.) "I will pour my Spirit upon thine offspring." (Isaiah xlv, 3.) "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." (Joel ii, 28.) "And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him." (John 1, 32.) "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word." (Acts x, 44.) Now, this pouring out of the Holy Ghost is by Divine authority declared to be a baptism of the Holy Ghost.

From the passages quoted, which associate the two baptisms, we know that the baptism of water represented, or symbolized, the baptism of the Spirit; and, as they show clearly the mode of the Spirit's baptism, a writer has well said, "the mode of water baptism settles itself." This we consider a demonstration. How language could be made plainer it is difficult to understand. And to us it seems a violent "incongruity" to rebuke a good brother for using the very language of the Spirit. We have never attached great importance to the modal significance of baptism. Its Divine import—its blessed spiritual suggestiveness—has been our chief concern. Regarding water baptism as the symbol of the baptism of the Holy Ghost, we have rather prayed for the latter than factually contended for a mere mode of administering the former. It is the act, and not the manner of its administration, that the Lord regards. On this account, and in the spirit of the gospel, we have allowed large liberty of opinion as to the mode of water baptism. There is as much reason in contending for observing exactly and in every particular the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as did the apostles, as the other and no less important ordinance of baptism. And yet what church insists on reclining at the table when the elements are received? This we do say, however, that so far as any special mode of baptism is indicated in the Scriptures and was practiced by the apostles, it is affusion; and that, together with the collateral, legitimate evidence in its support, has been sufficient to satisfy the entire Christian world on the subject, except a small sect better known in America than elsewhere on the globe.

The Watchman is afraid of conceding an error if the Baptists pray for the baptism of the Holy Ghost to rest "upon" them. Yet the expression is scriptural and conveys the mind of the Spirit. John saw the Spirit descending upon our Lord, and "it abode upon him." Alas! for such nonsense.

The "latter-day saints" are having a hard time in finding a quiet resting-place. Pressed by the United States authorities under the operation of the "Edmunds bill," they have negotiated for large estates in Mexico, and are preparing to remove thither. But information comes that the Mexican government protests against a polygamous colony settling within the republic, and will take measures to prevent it.

A Sabbath in the City.

The editor spent Sabbath last in the city, and much enjoyed the day. Pulpit neighborhood is profitable. Visiting among the churches gives ample opportunity for making observations upon the spirit and methods of our Methodism in different localities, and this we have done in large measure for the past several years. The coincidences are many, the contrasts very few. The spirit of Methodism in city and country is quite the same. Though it is very common for rural Christians to imagine their urban brethren "stiff" and "stuck up," the proportionate number of earnest, witnessing church members in town will probably exceed the country. There are probably more class meetings regularly held in Carondelet Street Church, in this city, than in any other congregation in Southern Methodism. They speak the same well-known "language of Zion" with their brethren in the rural districts, and feed on the same gospel meat. Nor is there any difference as to the preaching needed and enjoyed. "Country preaching" is what the city wants, and not that transcendental, nondescript something supposed to circulate in metropolitan pulpits. It is the gospel preached with unction and plainness of speech for which the soul hungers whether in "country" vast or city full.

We attended the Sunday-school at Carondelet, in the morning, which is under the efficient superintendency of Bro. T. J. Carver. The number present seemed small as compared with the membership of the church; but many reasons are given for that. This is a "down-town church," some of the families living several miles away, and the expense of getting the children to Sunday-school is considerable—that is, for those who have the good old orthodox Methodist families as to size. The slinging was a special and pleasant feature of the exercises—general and joyous. It was missionary day also, and the little ones generously made their offerings to extend the Redeemer's kingdom. At eleven A. M. quite a good congregation gave respectful, helpful attention to the word preached. In those pews sat some of our Methodist patriarchs—the burden bearers of the cause in the city during the day of small things. One venerable brother links us to the days of Asbury, having been baptized by the sainted Bishop and presented with a Bible containing his autograph. A sister we met, still active and punctual at the church services, was a Methodist in New Orleans before the first little frame chapel on Gravier street was built by Dr. B. M. Drake. These dear old people abide as a benediction upon the churches, and to perpetuate the spirit of the fathers. The communion service was most solemn, and we have nowhere seen so large a proportion of the congregation partake of this sacrament. Dr. Carter expects to commence a meeting in his church on Sunday, next, beginning with a collection for domestic missions.

At night we worshipped down at Moreau Street. This was a special appointment in the interest of temperance reform, and a rousing congregation was in attendance. At the conclusion of a lengthy discourse nine or ten persons signed a total abstinence pledge. That sentiment, we are glad to know, is growing in this city. One temperance organization alone has over nineteen hundred members. And thus closed another Sabbath day's work for the Master. May the fruits appear in "that day!"

South-West Missouri Conference.

This Conference met in the city of Lexington, Mo., on the morning of September 30, with Bishop Granbery in the chair. Quite a number of promising young men were admitted into full connection. Bishop Granbery's address to the class was admirable in spirit and in the points emphasized. Among the transfers received we see the name of Rev. J. M. Boon, of the North Mississippi Conference. We regret to lose him from his old Conference, and commend him most heartily to his brethren in Missouri. The administration of Paine Institute was endorsed, and it was agreed to raise the $400 assessed that Conference to complete the projected buildings.

There was an interesting debate over the change of name, albeit the Conference had resolved to take the vote without discussion. A division of the resolution introduced occasioned the episode. At last a memorial was adopted, favoring "Episcopal Methodist Church" as our church name, by a vote of 61 to 41. There is much division of sentiment on that question in the border Conferences, for whose benefit the change is asked.

The following delegates to the General Conference were elected:

Clerical—W. C. Godbey, T. M. Cobb, M. M. Pugh and C. C. Woods. Lay—N. Scarritt, J. E. Ryland, W. H. Pepkin and I. F. Garner.

Archdeacon Farrar on Education.

In an address at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, last Thursday, Archdeacon Farrar gave expression to some eminently wise and conservative sentiments. Both as to the scope and purpose of education he uttered words that deserve wide republication. Without repressing the importance of scientific study, he pleads for the old Latin and Greek curriculum; and, above all, he enforces the necessity of sanctifying all educational methods and institutions with the spirit of our Christian religion. We quote his concluding words:

"I must pause if I seem to be expressing hostility to the study of the dead languages. My object was to destroy the absolute autocracy of the classics—not to destroy the study of them. For in them are enshrined the noblest thoughts of the noblest history of the noblest nations of antiquity. My object, then, was only to plead that the study of Latin and Greek should not be exclusive. The study of Latin and Greek—thanks to the development of comparative philology—has become a science. We are the children, after all, of the past, and a comprehension of the laws of nature must not exclude the law of man, who is part of nature. The past lives and tingles in every particle of our body. The exclusive domination of Latin and Greek was due to their inherent power. Greek and Latin are worthy of study if only for the beauty and grandeur of the languages. They are among the greatest instruments of thought, and we can not neglect those languages without damage to ourselves. Besides their beauty and grandeur, they have been enriched by the greatest thoughts of great artists. Let me add a word as to the beneficence of science. She has not only revealed infinite time, infinite space and infinite organism; but she has been a great angel, hovering beneficently over mankind. She economizes labor, extends human life and extinguishes human pain. She restores sight to the blind, mitigates madness and tramples upon disease. After all these enormous services she ought to be cultivated, and we congratulate the university devoting so much to the subject. Whether our education be in the sciences or in the languages, we must set steadily before us the one great object we are to obtain. Some wish to know only to know; some to be known—this is vanity; some to sell their knowledge—this is base covetousness; some to edify, and some to be edified. But the great object is to learn to see and know God here and to glorify him hereafter. Our education is that we may become profitable members of the church and community, and hereafter partake of the glories of an immortal resurrection. Whatever removes us from the power of our senses, that elevates us in the scale of manhood, and that is the object of education. Try to be a man. If I don't succeed in being a man, I shall never succeed in being anything else. Behind the clerk, the scholar, the man of business, towers the man. It is not right to throw away life in the effort of getting the means of living. The truest form of education is education in righteousness and in the essential truths of one of the great forms of religion. We have bodies; but we are spirits, and education in its highest function is education of the spirit. Always be faithful to God, to country, to fellow-men and to yourselves. It is only a religious education that can give us real happiness and permanent success."

Few men in the American pulpit have ever said so many bright and breezy things as Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, and nothing lately from his pen is better than the following. The picture is true to life:

"A well-built Christian is harmonious in all his parts. No one trait shames another. He is not a jumble of inconsistencies—to-day liberal to one cause, to-morrow, niggardly toward another; to-day, fluent in prayer, and to-morrow, fluent in polite falsehoods. He does not keep the fourth commandment on Sunday and break the eighth on Monday. He does not shrink an honest debt to make a huge donation. He is not in favor of temperance for other folks and a glass of toddy for himself. He does not exhort or pray at each of the few meetings he attends to make up arrears for the meetings which he neglects. He does not consume his spiritual fuel during revival seasons so that he is as cold as Nova Zembla during all the rest of the time; nor does his spiritual fervor ever outrun his well-ordered conversation."

A Judge's View of the Traffic.

The insolence of the rum power must be rebuked by an aroused public sentiment that will make the business odious and demand the rigid, impartial enforcement of the liquor laws. We have more than once been disgusted at the mild treatment whisky offenders receive in courts of justice. Judges sometimes assume the mock-heroic, and threaten the extreme penalty of the law if the accused appear before them again. At the next court, however, they fare no worse, and laugh in their sleeves at their power over the administration of law. Solon keepers who violate plain statutes, sell whisky on Sunday and to minors, are counted shrewd rather than criminal. But why this tenderness toward them rather than other offenders? Some of our dignified judges on the bench might profitably ruminate a little on this subject.

It is refreshing, therefore, to read of such a deliverance, as we give below, from Judge Johnson, of California. He states the truth in language forceful and graphic, in passing the sentence of death upon a criminal.

"Nor shall the place be forgotten in which occurred the shedding of blood. It was one of those antechambers of hell which mark, like plague-spots, the fair face of our State."

"You need not be told that I mean a tippling-shop, the meeting-place of Satan's minions, and the foul cesspool which, by spontaneous generation, breeds and nurtures all that is loathsome and disgusting in profanity and babbling and vulgarity and Sabbath breaking. I would not be the owner of a grocery for the price of this globe converted into ore. For the pitiful soul of a drunkard furnished the poison which made the deceased a fool and this trembling culprit a demon! How paltry a sum for two human lives!"

"This traffic is tolerated by law, and, therefore, the vendor has committed an act not recognized by earthly tribunals; but in the sight of him who is unerring in wisdom he who furnishes the intoxicating draught which inflames into him violence and anger and bloodshed is particeps criminis indeed. Is it not high time that all these sinks of vice and crime should be held rigidly accountable to the laws of the land and placed under the ban of an enlightened and virtuous public opinion?"

A Curious Discovery!

The discovery that I refer to may be no discovery at all to some other people. I don't know but that the suddenness with which the thing came upon me is the only reason I call it a discovery. We are told that Columbus discovered America; but the old Genoese was looking for America. So if I discover a thing is to be looking for it, then mine is not a discovery. I was not even thinking of discovering anything. Indeed, I can't say that I was thinking at all. But to the discovery.

My ancestors, as far back as I can trace them, were all Methodist people. I have been a member of the Methodist Church for thirty-three years. I have lived on circuits and in stations. I have made the acquaintance of Bishops, presiding elders, station preachers, circuit riders and missionaries. I have mingled much with what is called the "rank and file" of the church. I have often visited the rich Methodists. I have enjoyed the frugal hospitality of poor Methodists. I have been in the company of literary Methodists. I have had pleasant times with Methodists whose education had not compassed the curriculum of the three R's. I have looked in upon the assembled wisdom of several Methodist bodies in Conference congregated. I have all my life been accustomed to prayer meetings, love-feasts, class meetings and experience meetings. I have learned that the Methodists are great on experience. They believe in having an experience, and a great many of them believe in telling that experience. This is proper when it is well guarded, for it was evidently the practice of the New Testament saints. Religion comes by faith. Testimony is essential to faith. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Something must be published in order to faith. That "something" is experience. The apostles themselves were shut up in Jerusalem to wait until they had an experience to tell; so the Methodists are the real successors of the apostles—that is, those of them who have an experience. They believe in the Christian graces. They believe in the possibility and privilege and absolute duty of "growing in grace." Their class meetings and experience meetings are held for the express purpose of telling to others of their progress or want of progress on this line.

Their talks invariably take one of the other of two directions. They experience, when expressed in words, assume either the form of complaints against self or of praises to God.

Now, it is here that my discovery was made. I have been attending these experience meetings all my life. I have heard men and women complain against themselves for a lack of faith and a cold and lifeless love and a dead zeal and a want of earnestness; I have heard them complain of the remains of carnality in them; I have heard them lament their ungovernable tempers and hasty words; I have heard them lament the fact that their lives were often a disgrace to the cause of Christ. In fact, I have heard confessions of all sorts of sins and crimes; but there is one complaint I never heard made or woman make—one great, black, wide-spread, withering sin that I never heard man or woman lament as afflicting their hearts and lives. Among all these complaints and lamentations I have never heard a single man or woman in telling a experience confess to have been in the least troubled by the sin of covetousness! That is just one side of my discovery.

In these experience meetings I have heard men and women praising God for things innumerable. I have heard them praise him for a large faith, for his precious love, for his blessed Son, for his Spirit; I have heard them thank God for power to master evil temper, for strength to overcome the temptations of the devil, for wisdom to deal gently with foes, as so to win them; I have heard them praise the Lord for help afforded in their conflicts with the world and in their efforts to cultivate the grace of patience and fortitude! And these praises have often burst forth in glad songs of gratitude! But there is one New Testament grace—one strongly emphasized by the apostles and most beautifully illustrated by the first Christians—which I have never heard any man or woman say that they were growing in! I have never heard a single man or woman thank God for growth in the grace of liberality! This is the other side of my discovery.

In view of these observations I find myself asking these questions: Is there no covetousness in the church? If the answer be negative, then the question arises: Why, then, is it that two-thirds of her members ship never contribute anything for the support of the cause of Christ? If there is covetousness in the church, why is it not confessed? Confession is necessary to pardon! Do people whose souls are scorched by this sin expect to get to heaven? The covetous are classed among white-mongers and liars!

Church Rededication.

The church at Crystal Springs under the pastorate of Rev. W. B. Lewis has prospered greatly. We do not wonder, therefore, that the congregation wanted to memorialize the fact by a thorough renovation and beautifying of their spacious temple of worship. After a tasteful expenditure of considerable money in important alterations and improvements they now have quite a beautiful edifice. On the third Sunday in last month the house was recaptured with formal and appropriate ceremonies, an account of which we take from The Meteor:

It was a bright and beautiful day, and there being no service at the Presbyterian Church, the congregation attended the Methodist Church, and the house was well filled. At the appointed time the official members of the church assembled around the altar, and W. C. Wilkinson, Esq., in a most graceful and appropriate speech, presented the house for rededication. The ceremony thence to conclusion was conducted according to the ritual of the church.

Next in order came the administration of the solemn and beautiful rite of infant baptism. After this came the dedication sermon. It was founded upon the text: "We worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." The beloved pastor seemed to be inspired for the occasion, and we are sure from the universal expression we have heard that he has not preached a sermon more to the edification and delight of his hearers. The exercises of the morning hour closed most appropriately with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It was, indeed, a most enjoyable day, and will be long remembered by those who participated in its pleasures.

What is the matter with the Baptists in Missouri, that so many should attain unto larger conceptions of the truth at once? Three Baptist preachers, who presented themselves at the St. Louis Conference—two for admission and the other for the recognition of his orders as a local preacher. And yet another, the Rev. B. Freeman, was up for ordination at the Southern West Missouri Conference on Saturday last. The mode of administering an ordinance is a very narrow plank on which to establish a church.

one from Semkiong, thirty miles distant; the other from this place. The man from Semkiong had been a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He had been reading the Scriptures and seeking light for a year, and is now a truly converted man.

fact has been pretty freely commented on in the city, as the club keeps an open house and has a big assortment of drinks, and boasts a bar-keeper who does not "drink, smoke or swear." The question is often asked: "Will we have to make an open fight with the Episcopal Church?"

same places and things through different eyes, and read the impressions of different students. Our interest in the emphyry once troubled by patriarchs, judges, kings and prophets, and by the Savior himself and his apostles, never flags or fails. Each observer gains new views, and his descriptions shed fresh light upon the teachings of Scripture.

to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly, than by doubling the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUAX, New York.

—♦—

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

HAS WINKLOW'S BIRTHDAY SYRUP should always be used for children's teething. It soothes the child, softens the gum, alleviates all pains, and colics, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. 25c. a bottle.

AT 5c In Zen we will sell your choice of 7 gold new metal dress balloons, latest styles.
Yard-wide Satens at 10, 12 and 15c a yard.
Our Catalogue will be out in a few days, and w

DANZ

TIGER'S,
131 Canal street; New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

Marriages.

HINSON-KAYNAUGH.—At the residence of Miss Jones, in Jackson parish La., September 17, 1885, by Rev. J. H. Stone, Mr. S. H. Hinson to Miss Kaynaugh.

HINSON-MARION.—In the Methodist Church, in Poplarville, Miss., September 20, 1885, by Rev. J. W. McArthur, assisted by Rev. Dr. Galloway, editor of the Advocate, Mr. J. F. Hinson, of Purvis, Miss., to Miss Marion P. Marion, of Poplarville, Miss.

Obituaries.

VAUGHAN.—The death of Miss Edna Vaughan, daughter of Mr. H. C. Vaughan, that occurred at her home, 1115 Poydras street, August 23, 1885, cast the shadow of sorrow over a whole community, and gave a fearful shock to many loving hearts. Though she had been quite ill for more than two weeks, no one was prepared for her death. She was so fresh and blooming, so fair and lovely, so bright and happy, full of hope and optimism, so loving and appreciated, that no one thought of her as an early victim of death. She had never before been sick, and under the continuous enjoyment of health had just developed into perfect, beautiful womanhood. Two days before her death she completed her eighteenth year, and was just entering upon that stage where life becomes most interesting and hopeful. No pain nor disease had left its touch upon her fine form, no trouble nor sorrow had ever cast a shadow over her fair face. Full of life and under the freshness and glow of its perfect powers, she loved to live, and looked forward with sweet anticipation and bright hope to many fair scenes and bright days to come. Surely the promise of long life to her was the fairest and its prospects the most flattering and bright.

Her social position and surroundings, her intellectual development and culture were all such as to make this to her a bright and happy world. She was the loved and idolized daughter of affectionate parents, and the bright light of a happy home. Consolation of her power and influence in that home, it was her happiness to throw the radiance of her presence over it, and to give cheer and gladness to the hearts that were so devoted to her. Her social and affectionate nature, her kind and genial disposition, her love of the company of others, and her sweet and generous heart, and her confidence of a large number of true, warm-hearted friends, her beauty and grace of manner, her accomplishments of mind and heart, and her genuine worth won the admiration of many, and commanded the respect of all.

Thus surrounded, thus endowed and accomplished, thus honored and loved, how happy and joyous must life have been, and how fondly and lovingly she must have clung to it and cherished its bright plans and hopes. And when death withered the flower so fair, quenched the light so bright, and snuffed the pulsations of a heart so warm and fresh and pure, and forever blighted such fair, fond hopes, there was such an unnatural shock to the feelings and affections that we were almost constrained to say, "This could not be so."

But Edna is dead. Disease did its fearful work in opposition to the skill of physicians, the prayers of loved ones, and the ministrations of friends; and her spirit went forth from this world, and her loved form we laid away in the grave. And now we turn our thoughts upward and think of her with reference to the world to which she has after her thus we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We believe she sleeps in Jesus and God will bring her with him.

Edna was a Christian. Baptized and consecrated to God in her infancy by Christian parents, she grew up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, the ratified and honored that dedication and training in her adult life. She made a public profession of faith in Christ, and assumed the vows of membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Divine truth, religious conviction, and Christian principles and purposes, ruled, trained, and developed her life almost from the beginning; and these convictions and feelings were marked and strong in all her conduct and intercourse. Prominent among them was her love and devotion to her parents. Seldom, perhaps, are parents ever blessed with a child more dutiful, respectful, confiding, obedient and loving. So quick to anticipate every wish, so solicitous for their happiness, so happy and confiding in their love, she honored them by loving and serving them, and by all her intercourse with others she breathed the spirit of kindness and manifested gentleness and love. Deeply conscientious, she wanted to know the right and to do the right. This seemed to be the noblest ambition and purpose of life. So modest and unassuming in her ways, and so that of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

She lived by faith in the Son of God, who loved her and gave himself for her. She loved the church of her parents, and was devoted to its welfare and to its prosperity. She was a member of the Sunday-school and a regular attendant upon its exercises and instructions. As the organist of the Sunday-school she contributed largely to its interest and success, and was always happy in leading the chorus of joy and praise. Her heart was constantly in the prayer meeting and public devotion, ever ready to devote her musical skill and powers to the service of praise.

Such was Edna as a Christian, as we have known and loved her as a member of the pastoral staff at New Point; and now that she is gone from our midst and association, we love to think and speak of those graces and virtues that were so manifest in her young life.

Having so deeply impressed herself upon an entire community, so loved and respected while living, now, that she is dead, she is sadly missed.

Miss Edna in the circle of young friends, where her presence always carried the light of a godly life to her family and friends. She loved the church and had great interest in the cause of Christ; but her heart was now turned, her songs of praise hushed her on earth, for the Master said, "Come up higher to the joy of thy Lord." Her illness was joyful and peaceful, and she seemed to have had a conviction from the beginning of her illness that her end was near, for she often spoke of her death and her children. Her great struggle was to give them up, but at the end came her Savior, and gave her the assurance of his presence, and she was able to satisfy her mind, leaving all in the hands of her Savior. Among one of her last acts while reason remained was to put her arms around her sister's neck, that had watched so faithfully at her bedside, and say, "Oh, sister, go with me to heaven." Thus, friends, your loved one has passed away. And now may her Christian life and happy death be as holy incense on all her friends and loved ones, to bring them to the rest of God's people, where our reunion will be sweet at our dear Redeemer's feet.

JONES.—Died at her residence in Jackson, La., at 4:05 o'clock A. M., Friday, August 21, 1885, Mrs. HALLIE M. JONES, wife of Dr. J. S. Jones, aged thirty-two years.

A more gifted pen than mine is necessary to portray the true character of this most amiable lady. She was a native of East Feliciana parish, and one of her most estimable daughters. She was from an early date a consistent member of the Methodist Church. She was a kind and obedient daughter, a devoted wife, a fond and affectionate mother, a true and faithful Christian. Having been converted to the Methodist Church at a camp meeting in 1830, in 1833 he was licensed to preach, and was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference, in December, 1833. In November, 1838, he married Miss Frances A. McGowan. By this marriage he had four children—two daughters and two sons. In the year 1850 his wife died. He was again married to Miss E. A. Wilson, by whom he has four children—three sons and one daughter; also two granddaughters, which were left orphans during the war. Kind Providence permitted him to be surrounded by his last children and grandchildren, during his confinement to his bed, which was twelve days before his death.

On the morning of April 15, he fell to rise and dress, which was the first day since his confinement that he could not be up during some portion of the day; but when at last he was prostrate, he declined rapidly, but his mind was vigorous to the last. Although he often could not speak above a whisper, he seemed at all times to recognize every one who came in to his room. Many friends came to see him, all expressing a desire to see him, if only to look once more on the face of their friend and brother, and to clasp that hand that had so often pointed out the way of life to them for the last twenty-five years.

As a preacher, Bro. Crowson was earnest in his efforts to win sinners to Christ, and this earnestness at times almost rose to that of eloquence. In conversation with me about three weeks before his death, he stated that he had never sought to be anything else but a humble Christian, and that his every day life might be a living epistle to all his family and friends.

Our personal acquaintance with Bro. Crowson was short, but all that we ever saw of him, was to impress us with the fact that he was what he professed to be—a faithful and devoted minister of the gospel, to this fact all that I ever heard speak heart testimony, and not only did they speak by words, but by their acts; for during his illness, friend after friend called to see him, all anxious to do something for his comfort.

But, alas! all efforts failed. Death came on the morning of April 27, and found him ready. On Sunday, the nineteenth, we surrounded his bed, with his now bereaved wife and children and a few friends, and gave him the sacrament. Although his voice had almost failed him, yet his soul was full of love and praise, and he exhorted all to prepare for death. I visited Bro. Crowson often during his illness, and never found him, but what he professed perfect peace, and he often expressed a desire to depart and be with Christ. I do not think I ever felt nearer heaven than I often did in conversation with him on the subject of death, and reading the scriptures to him. A few mornings before his death, after I closed reading the fourteenth chapter of John, he raised his hands and said, "Oh, how precious is the words of our Savior. I am only tired." When I would leave him to go out among his friends and brethren, he would often say, "Tell my friends I am ready." And we would say to his bereaved companion, "He is ready to go, and he is ready to follow the footsteps of your loved one as he followed Christ, and has led the way to that rest that remains for the people of God."

At the regular meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Sabbath-school, which convened at Sparta, La., Sunday, May 3, 1885, R. B. Howell, superintendent, presiding, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

"Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Rev. R. M. Crowson, who died at his residence in this place, Monday morning, April 27, 1885; therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Crowson, Methodist has lost one of its oldest and most zealous advocates, the Sabbath-school a faithful co-worker, and the community an estimable citizen; and while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Master, who death all things well, we know that our great loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be handed to the Rural Times and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication; and that an issue of each be handed to the grief-stricken family, to whom we tender our profoundest sympathies in their greatest loss.

R. B. HOWELL, Supt.
R. M. CARVER, JR., Sec'y & Treas.

KOONCE.—Mrs. S. J. KOONCE, wife of R. A. Koonce, was born in Caldwell parish, La., June 17, 1845, and died at her home, near Sparta, La., April 21, 1885. She was twice married. Her first marriage was to Mr. John Havard, by whom she had one son. By her last marriage she leaves four children.

Sister Koonce professed religion when young, and her life ever after was one of submission to the will of her Savior, endeavoring to be the light of her household. While her husband was actively engaged in agriculture, she was active in the care of all her domestic duties, so as to make her home a comfort to her family.

But best of all, she has left the heritage of a godly life to her family and friends. She loved the church and had great interest in the cause of Christ; but her heart is now turned, her songs of praise hushed her on earth, for the Master said, "Come up higher to the joy of thy Lord." Her illness was joyful and peaceful, and she seemed to have had a conviction from the beginning of her illness that her end was near, for she often spoke of her death and her children. Her great struggle was to give them up, but at the end came her Savior, and gave her the assurance of his presence, and she was able to satisfy her mind, leaving all in the hands of her Savior. Among one of her last acts while reason remained was to put her arms around her sister's neck, that had watched so faithfully at her bedside, and say, "Oh, sister, go with me to heaven." Thus, friends, your loved one has passed away. And now may her Christian life and happy death be as holy incense on all her friends and loved ones, to bring them to the rest of God's people, where our reunion will be sweet at our dear Redeemer's feet.

JONES.—Died at her residence in Jackson, La., at 4:05 o'clock A. M., Friday, August 21, 1885, Mrs. HALLIE M. JONES, wife of Dr. J. S. Jones, aged thirty-two years.

A more gifted pen than mine is necessary to portray the true character of this most amiable lady. She was a native of East Feliciana parish, and one of her most estimable daughters. She was from an early date a consistent member of the Methodist Church. She was a kind and obedient daughter, a devoted wife, a fond and affectionate mother, a true and faithful Christian. Having been converted to the Methodist Church at a camp meeting in 1830, in 1833 he was licensed to preach, and was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference, in December, 1833. In November, 1838, he married Miss Frances A. McGowan. By this marriage he had four children—two daughters and two sons. In the year 1850 his wife died. He was again married to Miss E. A. Wilson, by whom he has four children—three sons and one daughter; also two granddaughters, which were left orphans during the war. Kind Providence permitted him to be surrounded by his last children and grandchildren, during his confinement to his bed, which was twelve days before his death.

On the morning of April 15, he fell to rise and dress, which was the first day since his confinement that he could not be up during some portion of the day; but when at last he was prostrate, he declined rapidly, but his mind was vigorous to the last. Although he often could not speak above a whisper, he seemed at all times to recognize every one who came in to his room. Many friends came to see him, all expressing a desire to see him, if only to look once more on the face of their friend and brother, and to clasp that hand that had so often pointed out the way of life to them for the last twenty-five years.

As a preacher, Bro. Crowson was earnest in his efforts to win sinners to Christ, and this earnestness at times almost rose to that of eloquence. In conversation with me about three weeks before his death, he stated that he had never sought to be anything else but a humble Christian, and that his every day life might be a living epistle to all his family and friends.

Our personal acquaintance with Bro. Crowson was short, but all that we ever saw of him, was to impress us with the fact that he was what he professed to be—a faithful and devoted minister of the gospel, to this fact all that I ever heard speak heart testimony, and not only did they speak by words, but by their acts; for during his illness, friend after friend called to see him, all anxious to do something for his comfort.

But, alas! all efforts failed. Death came on the morning of April 27, and found him ready. On Sunday, the nineteenth, we surrounded his bed, with his now bereaved wife and children and a few friends, and gave him the sacrament. Although his voice had almost failed him, yet his soul was full of love and praise, and he exhorted all to prepare for death. I visited Bro. Crowson often during his illness, and never found him, but what he professed perfect peace, and he often expressed a desire to depart and be with Christ. I do not think I ever felt nearer heaven than I often did in conversation with him on the subject of death, and reading the scriptures to him. A few mornings before his death, after I closed reading the fourteenth chapter of John, he raised his hands and said, "Oh, how precious is the words of our Savior. I am only tired." When I would leave him to go out among his friends and brethren, he would often say, "Tell my friends I am ready." And we would say to his bereaved companion, "He is ready to go, and he is ready to follow the footsteps of your loved one as he followed Christ, and has led the way to that rest that remains for the people of God."

At the regular meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Sabbath-school, which convened at Sparta, La., Sunday, May 3, 1885, R. B. Howell, superintendent, presiding, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

"Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Rev. R. M. Crowson, who died at his residence in this place, Monday morning, April 27, 1885; therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Crowson, Methodist has lost one of its oldest and most zealous advocates, the Sabbath-school a faithful co-worker, and the community an estimable citizen; and while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Master, who death all things well, we know that our great loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be handed to the Rural Times and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication; and that an issue of each be handed to the grief-stricken family, to whom we tender our profoundest sympathies in their greatest loss.

R. B. HOWELL, Supt.
R. M. CARVER, JR., Sec'y & Treas.

KOONCE.—Mrs. S. J. KOONCE, wife of R. A. Koonce, was born in Caldwell parish, La., June 17, 1845, and died at her home, near Sparta, La., April 21, 1885. She was twice married. Her first marriage was to Mr. John Havard, by whom she had one son. By her last marriage she leaves four children.

Sister Koonce professed religion when young, and her life ever after was one of submission to the will of her Savior, endeavoring to be the light of her household. While her husband was actively engaged in agriculture, she was active in the care of all her domestic duties, so as to make her home a comfort to her family.

But best of all, she has left the heritage of a godly life to her family and friends. She loved the church and had great interest in the cause of Christ; but her heart is now turned, her songs of praise hushed her on earth, for the Master said, "Come up higher to the joy of thy Lord." Her illness was joyful and peaceful, and she seemed to have had a conviction from the beginning of her illness that her end was near, for she often spoke of her death and her children. Her great struggle was to give them up, but at the end came her Savior, and gave her the assurance of his presence, and she was able to satisfy her mind, leaving all in the hands of her Savior. Among one of her last acts while reason remained was to put her arms around her sister's neck, that had watched so faithfully at her bedside, and say, "Oh, sister, go with me to heaven." Thus, friends, your loved one has passed away. And now may her Christian life and happy death be as holy incense on all her friends and loved ones, to bring them to the rest of God's people, where our reunion will be sweet at our dear Redeemer's feet.

JONES.—Died at her residence in Jackson, La., at 4:05 o'clock A. M., Friday, August 21, 1885, Mrs. HALLIE M. JONES, wife of Dr. J. S. Jones, aged thirty-two years.

A more gifted pen than mine is necessary to portray the true character of this most amiable lady. She was a native of East Feliciana parish, and one of her most estimable daughters. She was from an early date a consistent member of the Methodist Church. She was a kind and obedient daughter, a devoted wife, a fond and affectionate mother, a true and faithful Christian. Having been converted to the Methodist Church at a camp meeting in 1830, in 1833 he was licensed to preach, and was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference, in December, 1833. In November, 1838, he married Miss Frances A. McGowan. By this marriage he had four children—two daughters and two sons. In the year 1850 his wife died. He was again married to Miss E. A. Wilson, by whom he has four children—three sons and one daughter; also two granddaughters, which were left orphans during the war. Kind Providence permitted him to be surrounded by his last children and grandchildren, during his confinement to his bed, which was twelve days before his death.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ANDERSON, HARRIS & Co.
—MANUFACTURERS OF—

Carriages,

Phaetons,
Platform and Half Platform Spring Wagons,
CINCINNATI, OHIO, U. S. A.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, selling the most popular and attractive books in the world. "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix; "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR," "BURIED CITIES RECOVERED"—one of the best and most interesting religious books. Also fine Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription. Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., Richmond, Va.

WM. H. PIERSON
SUCCESSOR TO
WHEELER & PIERSON
CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,
Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 1
Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent O. D.

The Southern Insurance Company,
OF NEW ORLEANS.
Office, No. 31 Camp Street.

Capital Subscribed $200,000.00
Capital Paid in $100,000.00
Assets, Feb. 1st, 1885 $21,700.97

Fire, River and Marine Insurance at fair and equitable rates. Losses promptly adjusted and paid. Ample security offered to insured both by the resources and conservative policy of the company.

ERNEST MILTENBERGER, President. H. GALLY, Vice-President. SCOTT MCGHEE, Secretary.

Finance Committee: John T. Moore, Jr., M. Schwaebler, J. H. Frame, Louis Bush, J. A. LaHaye.

No. 56 USE St. Charles St.

GLASSES.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can, in some cases, restore the sight, if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use. No more, but sweet memories of this will ever exist within our hearts.

M. L. N.

MORE—MRS. JANE C. MORE departed this life in Brandon, Miss., June 25, 1885. Grandmother More lived in this world nearly eighty-seven years, and the world was greatly blessed by her having lived in it.

In early life she professed religion, and she found the peace and joy of heart that made her happy all her long life. The last three months of grandmother's life she was confined to her bed, but no word of complaint was heard; yet she wished to depart and be at rest. Often she would say that her time was out, and would wonder why she lingered here so long. But when the last moment came, it was as the setting sun without a single cloud. Grandmother has left us all radiant with her beautiful life and triumphant death.

Our church in Brandon has lost two of their jewels this year; but our loss is their gain.

F. M. FRATHERSTON.

COLLIER—IDA, only daughter of Cass and Mary Collier, and only granddaughter of Bro. and Sister T. G. James, of Sharkey, Miss., was born February 29, 1850, and died September 6, 1885.

It was a sad scene at her burial the next day, for, though so young, she had undergone to herself the heaviest of many. Numbers who were unused to weeping as if it were a personal bereavement. It seems so unreal not to see her leading her brothers in their childish plays; but maybe she will thus more surely help her sorrowing parents and lead them to heaven. "Alas! We have lost all ministering spirits, etc." Even the remembrance that she "is waiting and watching" will have a salutary and winning influence.

J. L. FUTRELL.

Beware of Counterfeits—None Genuine Unless Stamped.
THE MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame, H. HOUSAH, MEDICATED.
Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

A. ANSELL,
SUCCESSOR TO
HERC. HOUSAH,
CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY
56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

In writing mention this paper.

T. J. CARVER & CO.,
Cotton actors and Commission Merchants,
44 Perdido Street.

PRAYER AND PRAISE.
Edited by Rev. ATTIOUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D., and Prof. R. M. M'INTOSH.

We confidently believe this to be the most powerful combination of Gospel Songs for Prayer meetings, Prayers, Camp meetings, Exhortations, Missionary meetings, Breviaries, and Religious Festivals, ever published in this or any other country.

Part 1, 10 pages, bound in the best style of the art, with a beautifully illustrated outside title, and each copy contains a copy of the following:

Round Notes, Character or Seven-stamped Notes, and Words Without Notes.
Chorus and Parting Chorus, with a list in all that contains a first class vocal team and a tune book; and if you are in need of such a book, order a copy for examination before you supply the demand, at any other.

PRICES—Music Edition—25 cents per copy; $1 per dozen; $10 per hundred.
Words Edition—25 cents per copy; $2 per dozen; $20 per hundred.
Specimen copies: Music Edition—examined in hand, postpaid, 5 cents; specimen copy of "Word Edition," 25 cents. Send an order, be sure to specify the kind of notes desired. Address: W. G. KILLMAN, 10 CAMP ST., or CARVER & JAMIESON, 112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

W. G. WHEELER,
Clothing and Furnishing GOODS.
Successor in Wholesale to
WHEELER & PIERSON,
55 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

IRON AND SLATE MANTLES.
—MANUFACTURER OF—
GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES
—AND—
Ornamental Work.
GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING.
GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION.
I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country.
The best Stone in the market is the Celebrated
CHAMPION MONITOR.
I have stores varying in prices from $4 to $100.
J. H. CARMAN,
101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

FOR SALE.
Juvenile Herd of Jerseys; Registered, A. J. C. C. Thoroughly accredited. Home raised, 3 Hifers, 1 Bull, at Farmers' prices—Cheap.
W. B. STUART, Ochsens Springs, Miss.

FIRE INSURANCE.
MECHANIC'S TRADER'S
Insurance Company.
14 CARondelet STREET,
New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks,
AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

GRD. H. FLOUNT, LLOYD R. COLMAN,
Secretary. J. M. COLEMAN,
P. O. Secretary. J. W. CHAFFORD,
Assn. Sec. and Fire Officer. Marion and River City, (Late Sec. of Union Ins. Co.)
F. AUZOT,
Inspector.

TRUSTEES:
J. A. BRASS, Simon E. Marx,
J. D. BRASS, Samuel J. Gillette,
T. J. Carver, P. J. (Monsieur),
H. C. Gillette, Wm. A. Phelps,
H. C. Gillette, Ben. G. L. Bayne,
O. K. Gillette, G. W. Heulett,
J. M. Frankenstein, A. W. Sutherland,
Walter C. Flower, W. H. Thompson,
P. Gillette, J. M. Walsh,
Chas. Hollaway, T. S. Waterman,
L. L. Lyons, Frederick W. King,
Laurent Lecomte, W. Y. Wood,
T. L. Mason, W. D. Wheeler,
Robt. Maxwell, Lloyd R. Colman.

Factors' and Traders'
INSURANCE COMPANY.
49 CARondelet STREET.

Paid Up Capital $1,000,000.

ED. A. PALFREY, President.
JOHN PHILIPS, Vice President.
THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Insurance Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest Tariff Rates.

TRUSTEES:
John I. Noble, John Chas.
Richard Milliken, Sam'l Friedman,
E. M. Wainwright, A. H. Mayfield,
T. Lytt. Lyon, Samuel H. Boyd,
Wm. J. Bohan, B. F. Kahlemann,
Chas. Chas. L. C. Jurey,
Wm. Hartwell, G. J. Lewis,
T. J. Janin, A. M. Richman,
Henry Abraham, Louis Bush,
A. B. B. B. G. W. Bental,
Wm. Orlinham, John I. Adams,
R. T. Buckner, Wm. G. Gwyn,
Chas. R. Black.

CRESCENT INSURANCE COMPANY
Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1880—Rechartered as a Stock Company in 1880.

CASH CAPITAL $400,000.

Has paid over NINE MILLIONS for losses Since 1880.

Annual and Term Policies issued on Desirable Fire Business.

W. B. LYMAN, President.
CHAS. H. MILLER, Vice President.
URBAN E. RICE, Secretary.

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Attention, Planters!
Warner & Hoelzel,
—PROPRIETORS OF—
LOUISIANA RICE MILL,
Cor. Calhoun and Tchoupitoulas Sts.
MILLERS AND DEALERS IN
Rough and Clean Rice.

Shipments solicited. Liberal advancements made as Consignments of Rough Rice.

At agents for C. AULMAN & CO., Canton, O.

Miller's New Model Thresher, Awarded First Prize over all other competitors at the New Orleans Exposition.

Rice-cutting Machines.
The Hussey Tuble Rake.
The Hussey Binder.
Hussey's Reapers.
Hussey's Druggers.
Also Agents for R. W. PAYNE & SONS, Florida, N.Y.

Highest Award at the New Orleans Exposition and 3 Gold Medals for Portable and Stationary Engines.

Planters wishing to purchase will find our terms most satisfactory.

PEOPLE'S HAND-BOOK ON BAPTISM.
IN FOUR PARTS.
Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

1. Immersion. 2. Infant Baptism. 3. Close Communion. 4. Plan of Salvation—Or Justification by Water the Compulsive and Compulsive theory. 5. Justification by Faith (the Bible theory).

BY THE REV. Z. A. PARKER, of the North Alabama Conference.

WRITTEN FOR ALL CLASSES, OLD AND YOUNG. Many points new. The arguments conclusive and irresistible. Part First puts immersion out of the Bible. Part Fourth absolutely proves every creek, pool and branch lake is a Christian and the river. Very highly recommended by Dr. Fitzgerald, Dr. McManis, Dr. Cunningham, with many other authors and a host of ministers and laymen in the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches. Let a copy of this book go into every "Prize Contest" family, youth and North Alabama is very glad to furnish a dozen to one hundred copies. One hundred and fifty-nine pages, really bound in paper or cloth. Price per copy, 10 cents in paper form, 15 cents in cloth. Liberal discount to ministers. Address: Rev. Z. A. PARKER, Birmingham, Ala., or

Carver & Jamieson,
112 Camp Street,
New Orleans.

SOAPINA.

TRADE MARK

Washes in Hot Water as well as in Cold Water. Invented by J. H. KELLER, who received the

FIRST PREMIUM
At Exposition for the best Laundry Soap in the World. Others: 110 Gravel St., New Orleans.

HEADQUARTERS
—FOR—
Sunday-School Supplies:
Containing in part of GOSPEL HYMNS, Single and Combined,
With and without Music.
Bibles and Testaments (cheap edition) Teachers' Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible Dictionaries, etc.
Psalms, First and Second Reading Books; Psalm Spelling Books; Psalm Question Books; Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards; Tickets, etc. Also a large assortment of Book material for Sunday-School, Libraries, or presents to children. Psalm and Family Bibles from $2.50 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-Schools. Catalogues sent on application.
W. D. KILLMAN.
Business Manager,
54 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 42.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1524.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers 50%
All members of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELLS.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFE.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

A PRAYER.

BY J. W. WHITTIER.

Suffer it that I to thee
As a hired servant be;
Let the lowliest task be mine,
Grateful so the work be thine.
Let me find the humblest place
In the shadow of thy grace;
Nest to me were any spot
Where temptation whispers not.
If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Help me guide him nearer thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I vain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me find in thy employ
Peace that dearest is than joy.
Out of self love led
And to heaven ascending,
Faint all things sweet and good
Seem my natural habitude.

The Basis of Prohibitory Legislation.

BY M. L. PIPES.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read the article in your issue of the seventeenth instant, entitled, "A phase of the temperance question," by "J. F.," whose son I have the honor to be. The phase discussed there is an important one, because the denial of the right of the government to prohibit the liquor traffic is the last rock of defense against the advocates of prohibition. The right of the Legislature to restrict the sale of intoxicating liquors can not now be denied without disregarding the uniform decisions of the courts of every English-speaking country from a time beyond which the "memory of man runneth not to the contrary." The reason of the rule in favor of the right of restriction applies, with equal force, in favor of the right of prohibition.

The power to levy a special tax against the liquor business—a tax not laid on other kinds of business—is not derived from the taxing power of the State; for under that power taxes must be equal and uniform. No discrimination is allowed to be made, under that power, against any class of individuals or any kind of legitimate business. Hence, courts have referred the right to tax the liquor business specialty and heavily to the police power of the State. Now, this power proceeds always upon the assumption that the act, or conduct, or business restricted, or regulated, or prohibited, is injurious to the lives, health or property of the citizens or inimical to the preservation of good order and public morals. To the objection, then, that special taxation against the liquor business is unconstitutional, because unequal and ununiform, or without the functions of the government, the courts have, with great unanimity, replied that the business is injurious to the public morals and health and destructive of good order; and, therefore, the right to interfere with and restrict it is properly referred to the police power of the State. It is worthy to be noted, too, that the question as to whether the business is injurious is one that seems never to have been mooted. It is so notorious that it is so that the courts have taken judicial notice of the fact as one of that class of facts beyond the need of controversy. The right of the State to restrict the business on the ground of its injurious nature being conceded, it follows that the extent of that restriction, whether partial or complete, is a question not of legislative power, but of legislative discretion.

It is often difficult to determine just what conduct of the individual is properly subject to the interference of the State. There is a test, however, that may reasonably be applied in this case. The supreme aim and design of all government is now conceded to be to insure to each individual thereof the right to do as he pleases so long as he hurts no one. Whatever other objects government may be designed to effect it finds the great and primary reason of its being in the protection of the individual against the wrongful aggressions of others. Therefore, when we come to inquire whether the prohibition of an act is within the proper scope of the governmental functions we need only ask, "Does the act injure anyone?"

Does the selling of whisky injure anyone? Millions of its victims affirm that it does. The courts proclaim it. Nobody denies it. It is a fact so notorious that I have never heard of a man who was willing to deny that it is the author of woes innumerable. The whisky seller's defense is not that his business does not injure others, but that it is nobody's business if it does. If his immediate victim can stand it, no one else has a right to complain. I shall not stop here to argue the question of the right of the State to protect individuals from the consequences of their own wrong doing. The right of prohibition can be placed upon other safe ground. The injury does not stop with the drunkard, or his immediate family, or his friends. Crime and poverty and insanity are increased by this business, and these entail burdens upon every man who pays taxes to support his government, and every man who lives pays taxes in one form or another. Besides, every drunken man is a dangerous man. The plea for temperance legislation has been made again and again in behalf of the drunkard himself and the immediate victims of his vice, and I do not say that it is not noble to seek his aid and their redemption and protection. But other people have rights. People who do not drink have rights as sacred as those of people who do. You have the right to demand from your government that your property shall not be taken away; your children and family deprived of the fruits of your toil; your life made insecure by the vicious conduct of other people. You have the right to ask and to have protection for yourself. In this view the question is not one of morals nor of sympathy for the drunkard, nor even one of public welfare, but it is a question of your own individual right. In this regard prohibition stands upon the same ground as a law against any other aggression upon the rights of person and property. In this respect prohibition has no possible resemblance to sumptuary legislation.

The siren Circe, as the fable tells us, could transform men into beasts. If she were now changing five hundred of our citizens every morning into royal Bengal tigers, you would not think it met the case to appoint policemen to cage them. You would wish to banish Circe.

CORVALLIS, ORE., Sept. 26, 1885.

Shocking Pulpit Habits.

MR. EDITOR: As you were good enough to the young men to print my suggestions of amendment, I send a few more lines, and I begin with one habit that gives pain to multitudes of hearers.

It is the constant and almost unvarying use of the name of the Infinite One by a few preachers. I heard it used thus, "God Almighty, pity and forgive you." Now, just think of designating the heavenly Father throughout an entire discourse and then repeating it round the circuit for twelve months by the name of "God Almighty," and you must feel shocked at the thoughtlessness and irreverence of such a habit. Only once or twice in the darkest epochs of revelation did any worshiper of God so designate him. The misuse of the name in its relation to the thought expressed should have corrected the habit. Think of it! Is it to "God Almighty" we look for "pity and forgiveness"? Is it not rather to "the Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth?"

The name "God Almighty" refers solely to the omnipotence of his nature—his strength—almightiness—power to do all things. "Pity and forgiveness" is not dispensed from reasons of omnipotence and creative ability. It is, therefore, simply a great error and confusion of ideas to address an inquirer after truth in the above harsh sounding and unbecoming form of speech. So I think.

The brother that clings to this unseemly habit was the man whom the little Sunday-school pupil accused of swearing in the pulpit. Remember that Jesus taught us the touching name of "Our Father," and not once in the New Testament is he denominated "God Almighty." If the dear brethren who have fallen into this habit could hear themselves preach, or hear the remarks of a regretful kind, not criticizing, but grieving over the inappropriateness of language, surely amendment would follow. Think of it.

Another most shocking form of speech is the following, which I tremble to write, and would not but from inward compulsion. A brother said, "We must have a Holy Ghost revival." Another said, "We have had a Holy Ghost revival," and then he wrote it, and shocking as it sounds, to a reverent mind, it got into print. Just think of converting the awful name of the third person of the adorable triunity into a mere descriptive adjective! It is absolutely fearful and shocking to a sensitive mind to the last degree. And were I an editor no persuasion should permit such a desecration to enter my paper. No article can be good enough to justify its admission to print with such profanation disfiguring it. And in the pulpit it sounds to very many like profane swearing.

Another evil ought to be remedied if a young man means to be the part of a useful minister. It is the monotony of prayer, and I especially refer to the closing of a prayer. The Rev. Joseph Parker, of London, always shuts down a prayer so as to relieve his audience by a sort of sweet surprise. He says nothing to indicate that the prayer is coming to a close, but at a period he says, "Amen! Get his volume of the 'Inner life of Christ' and see. Now, how different is this from habits we know of, as for instance: A most excellent preacher and valuable pastor wears out his people's patience and ruins, often times, the effects of his public and pastoral family prayers by spinning out an old worn-out set of phrases that a crow would scorn for nest building. He will say in ending his prayers, "And when the solemn and weary journey of life is over and we have all done our duty and done it well and have nothing to do but to die, then may we joyfully bid farewell to all sublunary cares and sorrows." Well, it is needless to tell it all. But the worst of it is that just as you are waiting to hear his "amen" a new thought may strike him and away he goes for another long petition and then closes again with a sort of luted and dogmatical repetition of his stereotyped insipidities, and the worn-out audience wonders that a man of sense can so far make a burden of himself and provoke the criticism of the youths that hear. He has now gone far away to new and untrodden fields—sorry for the new fields. But are not his style and habits in a weak way, limited to a fearful extent? Be short, too, and do not pray your flock into and out of the spirit of worship. A local preacher was recently called on to pray for some persons kneeling at the altar for prayers. The young, zealous pastor, fearing the hour was getting late, was looking at his watch. When the prayer ended he could but look again. The preacher had prayed just fifteen minutes, and had not by word or reference in any manner, direct or indirect, referred to the persons kneeling and for whom prayer was to have been made. One would wish to blot out the—well, not all the local preachers, but certainly a big lot of them who never study, have not improved a particle in many years and rarely do anything to magnify either their office or their manhood. What do Quarterly Conferences mean by piling up more dead lumber in the garrets of the church? If nine-tenths of the existing licenses were never renewed, it would prove a God-send to the whole church. Excuse the divergence.

One more habit I must notice in connection with public prayer. It is the habit a few brethren have of squatting down upon their heels instead of holding the body erect upon knees. A squatting attitude is so grotesque and undignified that it is a wonder the plainest backwoods caddy-hopper does not see and avoid it. Will you do so? In the pulpit or elsewhere it is inadmissible. But in the pulpit the method brings the head of the preacher below the book-form and his voice is changed by contact with the Bible and pulpit and often sounds like a boy hallooing in an empty hoghead. All ridiculous. Now, the proper thing is to have a stool on which to kneel, and no pulpit should be without it, then the preacher's head and shoulders would be above the form and his voice would fall naturally upon the ears of the entire audience and both preacher and people would realize a great improvement. Should I be appointed to a district as the presiding elder I would ask every preacher concerning every church, "Is there a kneeling stool in the pulpit?" If a preacher asks a Bishop of a stranger to preach for him and he has no kneeling stool, it is a downright act of discourtesy. There are many reasons why it is so. You can reason them out, brother, if you are guilty. Yours, ASTAR.

Delhi District Conference.

"MR. EDITOR: I desired and expected that some one else would give a brief statement of facts relating to the Delhi District Conference, but it has been neglected. My business has so occupied my time that I have not had the time. I can not now give it the time desired.

The Conference convened July 22 at Delhi; about thirty members were present during the session; all of the pastors except Bro. Isbell, who was in Virginia visiting his father, and Bro. Nelson, who was called off by sickness in his family. We had a very quiet and harmonious session. Reports from the works were not flattering, but show an advance, and much more has been accomplished since.

Dr. H. F. Johnson, of Whitworth Female College, was present, and gave a very edifying sermon and a very encouraging report of the college and did the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE good service as substitute for the editor, though we would have greatly preferred having both of the D. D.'s present. He, with Sister Goodale, of Baton Rouge, and Rev. A. C. Calhoun, of the Homer district, constituted our visitors from other sections.

Dr. A. S. Helmie, W. S. H. Wallis, T. H. Dalton and Dr. Y. S. Bousley were elected lay delegates to the next Annual Conference to be held at Baton Rouge; Rev. T. B. Renau and Joseph Gordon, alternates. The Conference expressed, by resolution, a desire that there should be no change of name of the church. A second resolution, expressed, in case that a change was forced upon us a preference for "Episcopal Methodist."

RORER HANDLE.

DELHI, LA., Oct. 8, 1885.

P. S.—We are moving up on most of the works of the district.

Illinois Conference.

The vote on the change of name was as follows: 3 yeas and 37 nays. Delegates to the General Conference: Clerical—J. W. Westcott; alternate, C. C. Mayhew. Lay—Logan D. Cameron; alternate, Amos Watts.

APPOINTMENTS.

PANA DISTRICT.—T. R. Ward, P. E. Pana, C. M. Cagle; Mansfield, M. Crews; Mt. Zion and Heyworth, D. T. Hinkle; Cowden, J. C. Stamper; Worden, J. M. Buford; Shelbyville, B. A. Nance; Taylorville, F. Rogers; New Douglas circuit, T. E. Walmsley; Keyport, J. F. Hensley.

RUSHVILLE DISTRICT.—T. M. Long, P. E. Rushville, J. M. Long; Girard circuit, M. White; Waverly and Jacksonville, J. W. Toothaker; Midway and Marietta, M. Lewis; Toga circuit, James D. Crooke; Canton and Union Chapel, A. F. Rogers.

SALEM DISTRICT.—C. C. Mayhew, P. E. Salem, G. W. Gilmore; Martinsville, F. C. Mabry; Effingham, (to be supplied); Altamont, A. B. Davidson; Rhoads, H. J. Jones; Clay City, H. Reid and Ezra Barringer; Hickory Hill, W. Perdue; Rome, G. T. Clawson; Xenia, H. N. Walters; Putoka, N. A. And; Kimmunity, J. W. Westcott; Oden and Centralia, (to be supplied).

ASHLEY DISTRICT.—C. T. McAnally, P. E. Nashville, G. T. Loyd; Blair and Baldwin, W. D. Haylock; DeSoto and Duquoin, J. R. Bell; Marion, J. H. Lewis; Palsaki, P. L. Davis; Alexander mission, H. J. Brown; Murphysboro, (to be supplied); Hoodsville circuit, M. N. Durand; Columbia, (to be supplied).

South-West Missouri Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

KANSAS CITY DISTRICT.—C. C. Woods, P. E. Walnut Street, J. C. Morris; Centenary Church, J. W. Lowrance; Washington Street, John Matthews; Holmes Chapel, W. J. Carpenter; Brooklyn Street Church, (to be supplied); Independence station, A. R. Farris; Westport circuit, W. F. Wagoner; Belton Court, J. C. Gliven; Chapel Hill circuit, T. W. Watts; Columbus circuit, J. D. Payne; Harrisonville circuit, J. M. Weems; Index circuit, H. L. Anderson; Freeman circuit, W. J. Nelson; Archie mission, (to be supplied); Butler station, W. C. Bewley; Altoona circuit, N. L. Congblan.

LEXINGTON DISTRICT.—M. M. Pugh, P. E. Lexington station, D. C. Browne; Wellington circuit, W. T. Eastwood; Dover circuit, T. P. Cobb; Waverly station, J. M. Dempsey; Miami and Mount Carmel, W. M. Bewley; Elmwood and Grand Pass, J. A. Greening; Herndon circuit, (to be supplied); Odesa and Higginsville, J. C. Shackelford; Odesa circuit, (to be supplied); Hedsforth, Brownsville and Back Water, William M. Prottanan; Sedalia station, J. M. Boon; Lamonte circuit, J. Y. Busby; Warrensburg station, J. Spencer; Chilhowee circuit, A. L. Houston; Clinton circuit, W. M. King.

BOONVILLE DISTRICT.—M. Adkins, P. E. Boonville station, C. M. Haskins; Pilot Grove circuit, H. Shaeffer; Arrow Rock, E. G. Frazier and M. Rader; Gilliam circuit, W. B. McFarland; Cambridge circuit, Preston Phillips; Slater station, R. A. Holloway; Marshall station, R. S. Hunter; Longwood circuit, W. W. Jones; Clinton circuit, B. H. Gragg; Baneeton circuit, C. K. Elliott; J. L. D. B. Prairie circuit, M. Bahrenburg; California circuit, J. C. Cross; Aurora circuit, R. J. Pyke; Jefferson City station, T. M. Cobb; Chamois circuit, (to be supplied).

NEOSHO DISTRICT.—C. H. Briggs, P. E. Neosho station, J. King; Newton circuit, J. W. Ezell and J. W. L. Phillips; Exeter circuit, C. T. Wallace; Pierce City station, E. H. Morrison; Searsville circuit, J. J. Keller; Webb City and Cartersville, J. D. Wood; Carthage station, J. N. Huggins; Jasper circuit, C. A. Emmons; Sheldon circuit, D. B. Price; Nevada station, W. L. McClure; Hume circuit, V. J. Sevier; Sprague circuit, L. H. Vandiver; Rich Hill station, J. J. Hill.

SPRINGFIELD DISTRICT.—J. B. Ellis, P. E. Springfield station, W. B. Palmore; Springfield circuit, W. N. McAllister; Marshallfield circuit, R. W. Reynolds; Morrisonville station, J. J. Reed; Bolivar mission, W. H. Winton; Montevallo circuit, W. H. Morehead; Stockton circuit, G. G. Mitchell; Greenfield circuit, R. G. Plummer; Ash Grove circuit, L. H. Davis; Mount Vernon circuit, J. A. Matthews; Henderson circuit, W. T. McGuire; Ozard mission, J. N. Stutz.

CLINTON DISTRICT.—J. F. Hogan, P. E. Clinton station, L. P. Norfleet; Windsor and Calhoun, L. M. Phillips; Green Ridge circuit, M. A. Nance; Sedalia circuit, J. N. Anthony; Versailles station, N. M. Dowdy; Versailles circuit, C. J. Polston; Alkenville circuit, J. L. Logan; Warsaw circuit, B. M. Crutzyner; Osceola circuit, L. J. Springfield; Roscoe circuit, S. M. Chase; Lowry City circuit, W. D. Stewart; Montrose circuit, J. F. Rabb; Painsville circuit, P. Nason; Walker circuit, L. P. Steele.

LEBANON DISTRICT.—J. C. Dabney, P. E. Lebanon and Marvin Chapel, W. L. Dempsey; Richland circuit, J. F. DeWitt; Decaturville circuit, J. L. Rogers; Waynesville circuit, W. H. Son; Dixon mission, James Nye, supply; Vienna circuit, W. F. Wright; Climax mission, W. K. White; Cross Timbers circuit, J. G. Huff; Buffalo circuit, J. M. Proctor; Hartwell circuit, S. Loop, supplied; Plate circuit, D. F. Freeman; Monmouth Grove mission, J. A. Thomas; Arno mission, J. F. Davis.

Beware of Dogs!

Cynics and cynicism never cure moral evils. Beware of the snappish Christian. Bristles are no better than cynics. A dog that wags his tail for anyone carrying meat will not do to trust against the sly fable who goes prepared to bait him. The promiscuous dog is not of any advantage to any community. A man who sees no difference in churches and has no preferences will fleece a sheep out of any fold. This dog is found in the social and family world. He wants to be received by both elite and hoodlum circles, and thinks the lady pround who does not recognize him after seeing him tele. a tele with the hoyden. Fat dogs do not bark. Do not invest largely in the favorites of the great—not even of the religiously great. They may be a necessity to the great; but ordinary people can not afford the expensive luxury of a well-combed parlor pet. He may be harmless and affectionate; but one may overload with even those virtues.

Paine Institute.

BY BISHOP H. N. WYTHE.

MR. EDITOR: Your editorial last week set forth the character and claims of this Institute, established at Augusta, Ga., for teaching the teachers of the colored people, in so just a light, that I must the benefit will be real and liberal. Your colleagues of the Southern Methodist press are also giving a full and strong showing to the cause in their columns. If we do not act in the right direction nothing but want of ability will excuse our people.

Let us finish up and carry through this scheme by the next General Conference that was inaugurated at the last one; and report at Richmond, the thing done that was devised at Nashville.

A brother, whose name is an open secret, the agent tells us, has pledged $25,000 toward the endowment of Paine Institute if others will raise $15,000 to buy and equip the buildings. I have known this brother since my pastorate in New Orleans. This is not his first large gift. He is able to carry out what he promises, and will do it, if we fulfill the easy and reasonable preliminary conditions. The time is short. Many hands make light work. Such a generous offer ought to have a ready response. I have before subscribed, and paid the subscription, to Paine Institute, and propose to duplicate it.

The agent has divided out the sum among the Annual Conferences, and the amount of the $15,000 each is expected to furnish is known. The Conferences already held have responded favorably. Allow me to suggest to brethren and friends that if the collection depends altogether on what clerical and lay members do at the Conference sessions, the burden will fall unequally. Let those who, of a willing mind, would have a share in this important charity, put their money into the hand of their pastor before he starts for Conference, to be reported there.—Nashville Advocate.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, New York, on Thursday, September 4, 1885, H. M. Forrester, Esq., vice-president, in the chair. The religious services were conducted by Secretary Hunt.

Among the communications from agents and correspondents in foreign lands presented for the information or action of the Board were letters from the European Turkey mission of the American Board, written by Dr. Elias Riggs; from the North China mission, commending Dr. Biddett's work in rendering the Mandarin Scriptures into Easy Wenli; from Dr. Gulick, forwarding an unique copy of the New Testament in the Ningpo Colloquial; from Dr. Trumbull, of Valparaiso; from Mr. Milne, still detained in Argentina; from Mr. A. B. King, of Liberia; from Rev. J. M. Kyle, of Rio de Janeiro, respecting the proposed new version in Portuguese; from the Methodist Episcopal mission in Bremen, and Rev. W. H. Gulick, of San Sebastian, and from Rev. W. L. Whipple, of Persia, with an account of the celebration at Oranmiah of the formation of the mission to the Nestorians.

Grants of books were made for benevolent distribution in the United States and in foreign countries, the aggregate value of which was about $5,900, more than one-half being for colportage. It was reported that during August 7,750 volumes had been consigned to colporters laboring in sixteen different States.

Four auxiliary societies were recognized in Dakota, and one in each of the States of Michigan, Minnesota and Nebraska. The total receipts for August were $38,969.66. The total issues of the Scriptures from the Bible House were 50,342 volumes.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1885.

WHO WILL TAKE CARE OF ME?

BY MISS F. B. HAYDOCK.

Who will take care of me? Darling, you say!
Lovingly, tenderly, watched as you are!
Lovers! I give you the answer to-day
One who is never forgetful or far!

He will take care of you! All through the day
Jesus is near you to keep you from ill;
Walking or resting, at lessons or play,
Jesus is with you and watching you still.

He will take care of you! All through the night
Jesus, the Shepherd, his little one keeps;
Darkness to him is the same as the light;
He never lets his beloved sleep.

He will take care of you! All through the year,
Crowning each day with his kindness and love,
Seeing you blessing and shirking from fear,
Leading you on to the bright home above.

He will take care of you!—yes, to the end!
Nothing can alter his love to his own.
Darling, be glad that you have such a friend—
He will not leave you a moment alone.

Sunday-School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson IV.

OCTOBER 15, 1885.—11 KINGS III, 1-14.

THE TEMPLE REPAIRS.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."—Psalm cxlii, 1.

HOME READINGS.

MON. The Temple Repaired. 11 Kings III, 1-14.
TUE. Building of the Temple. 1 Kings VI, 1-10.
WED. Temple of Jerusalem. Ezra II, 1-17.
THU. Symbol of God's Presence. Joshua II, 9-17.
FRI. House of God. 1 Thessalonians II, 1-10.
SAT. Beautiful Temple. 11 Chronicles III, 1-10.
SUN. Glory of God. 11 Chronicles VII, 1-4.

The chapter of which our lesson is a part recounts the history of the reign of Josiah, or Jehoshaphat, the sixth king of Judah, who was slain by Jehu, and his mother, Athaliah, usurped the throne. A revolution led by the high priest, Jehoiada, succeeded in deposing the usurper. She was slain, and Jehoshaphat, then a boy of only eight years of age, was made king. Though pious and upright in his early life, after the death of his faithful counselor he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and allowed the people to lapse again into idolatry. On the restoration of the temple a writer says: "It must be the chief task of the new king of the dynasty of David, who had sworn to the covenant of his accession, to restore the temple during his reign. As David was the founder, and Solomon, the builder, of the house of Jehovah, so Jehoshaphat, with whom the house of David recommenced, as it were, was the restorer of the sanctuary."

1 v.—The young king and his instructor. Coming to the throne in early childhood, Josiah had a safe counselor in Jehoiada, the high priest. He instructed him carefully not only in the mysteries and duties of statecraft, but also in the religion of Jehovah. There were not many strong, manly elements of character in the young king; but as long as Jehoiada lived, whom he implicitly trusted and greatly honored, he "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord." Under the tutelage of Jehoiada he became a better man and nobler sovereign than if he had been raised amid the idolatries and wickedness of his father's court.

3.—The high places. This had been a custom in Israel for many years. The objection to it was its resemblance to the idolatrous practices of the heathen, whose altars were always erected on the tops of the hills, "presuming they were nearer Deity and heaven." It was feared that the practice might be construed into a confession to heathenism, and at length degenerate into idolatry. Not only was this objected to as possibly affecting the purity of religious worship, but also as menacing to the stability of the kingdom. Matthew Henry supposes that these private altars on the high places had increased during the late bad reigns because it was not safe to go up to Jerusalem, and the temple service had been perverted and desecrated.

4.—The king's command. He issued orders to make preparation for the temple's restoration. And in this good work he took the initiative rather than the counsel of Jehoiada. The high priest's allowance in this matter is difficult to understand. On this fact Bishop Hall comments as follows: "Jehoiada, the priest, has ruled the infancy of King Josiah in matters of state, and now Josiah, the king, commands aged Jehoiada, the priest, in matters of devotion." "The money of the dedicated things" was from three sources, to be named: (1) "The money of everyone that passeth the account"—that is, the half-shekel poll tax on all over twenty years of age. (2) "The money that everyone is set at"—the assessment on each one who makes a singular vow, according to the law of Leviticus xxvii, 1-8. It is said large revenues came from that source alone. (3) "Money that cometh into any man's heart to bring"—that is, the free-will offerings of the people. These were given in money, or in kind, and were in addition to the other payments mentioned. These offerings the priests were to receive, and apply them to repairing the breaches in the temple. This was not a part of the priests' stipend. They had their regular sources of income for their support, which was not to be used for this purpose.

6.—The tithes. The king's command was not obeyed. Three and twenty years passed, and the temple was yet neglected. The people were slow to give for this purpose, and the priests had lost their zeal for the Lord's house. Possibly they misappropriated the amounts received to other and selfish ends.

7.—The king changes his plans. As the priests had failed or refused to carry out his orders, the king forbade their receiving any more money for temple repairs. They "consented," either from a readiness to be relieved of difficult work or because of a consciousness of dereliction.

8.—Jehoiada's chest. This device was resorted to in order to separate the building fund from the general treasury, and also to stimulate the people to larger giving. The altar on which the chest was placed was in the court of the temple, known as the altar of burnt offering. Matthew Henry thinks there was a spiritual suggestiveness in the chest being placed on the right hand as they went in—allusion to our Savior's rule of charity, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

10.—Increased revenue. The plan succeeded. There was "much money in the chest." The people gave readily and liberally, because, as one intimates, "when public distributions are made faithfully, public contributions will be made cheerfully." This is an invariable rule; but wise administration certainly encourages intelligent, liberal giving. The king's secretary and the high priest counted the money in the chest at stated times, and made immediate payment to the masons, carpenters and builders at work on the temple. Thus the repairs were pushed forward to completion. They "told" the money—that is, weighed it and estimated its value. It was not in stamped coin, readily reckoned, as our national money, but was valued by weight.

15.—Faithful disbursement.—The work went on rapidly, the builders were regularly paid, and the breaches very soon repaired. And the administrators of the fund received special commendation. "They reckoned not with the men." So efficiently and honestly had they discharged their duties that an examination of their accounts was not considered necessary.

The lesson contains many practical suggestions on the subject of church obligation: (1) It enthrones the importance of the financial interests of Christ's kingdom. (2) The intimate relation between church and national prosperity. (3) The value of system in giving—in small amounts, but often and regularly. (4) The wisdom of associating money offerings with the temple service. Giving is, or ought to be, a part of worship. (5) Our interest in religion is very generally determined by our care for the home in which we worship.

Reaping the Whirlwind.

BY HON. W. H. OGDON.

In accordance with the laws of growth, men ordinarily reap what they sow—more of it, perhaps, but the same in kind. The Prophet Hosea, speaking of the idolatry of the Israelites, said, "For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind." Even here the law of growth was recognized, for the whirlwind is only the wind after all, but a mischievous kind and too much of it.

The United States government derives an annual revenue of about one hundred millions of dollars from the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits. For this bribe she pays in dollars through her citizens, according to the carefully prepared statistics of Dr. William Hargreaves, based upon the census of 1880, $914,629,580, directly as the actual cost of the liquor drunk, and $921,514,383, indirectly as the cost of the damage done by the liquor after it has been swallowed. We can disregard the odd dollars where the figures are so large, and, for the sake of having numbers that we can easily remember, we can say one billion dollars for the direct and one billion more for the indirect cost—that is, the nation pays for the privilege of having the liquor sold twenty times as much in dollars as it receives. (This begins to look a good deal like a whirlwind already.) It takes in two dollars a head for each of its population, and pays out, or they pay out—which amounts practically to the same thing—forty dollars a head in consequence thereof.

But neither the table of the direct nor that of the indirect cost includes the most important elements in this loss. There are some things that can not be estimated in numbers. Even the "arithmetical heaven" has failed to record the value of a single soul of the 700,000 drunkards—the annual crop swept by this whirlwind, not "upward to heaven," as the whirlwind bore Elijah, the prophet, but downward to the lowest depths of an endless despair. We can estimate the loss to the State of their productive labor and the cost of their restraint, punishment and maintenance; but there are no figures large enough to express the loss to themselves of their own characters, the irreparable loss of all hope for time and eternity.

This is true also for the most part of the $3,893,000,000 of the 59,110 paupers included in this annual whirlwind crop produced as the result of a nation's investment of twenty for one. They have lost all their health, themselves included, and what matters it to them whether or not there be joy if they can not share it, whether or not there be heaven if they can not enter it! Oh! it is terrible! This whirlwind crop of human souls sown each year to death! Our round numbers give us again one million. One million souls! One hundred million dollars! One hundred dollars for each soul! One hundred taken in, twenty hundred paid out, and the soul sent shrieking to the gates of hell! Such is the wisdom of the "license system."

We have no figures for the heart-burnings and the griefs, the wasted cheeks and sunken eyes—none for the moral depression upon wife and children of the depraved example of the whirlwind crop. But there is yet another phase in this onward sweep of death more appalling, if possible, than any and all of these combined—more terrible even than the eternal loss of all the direct victims of this fearful traffic, than those who have drunk damnation to themselves. We refer to the physical, intellectual and moral loss entailed by these fathers upon their children, even to the third and fourth generation. We submit that it is easier for us to be reconciled in our minds to the thought of even the endless loss of one who has been, at least, to some extent, the author of his own destruction than to the doom of a helpless infant born into the world with propensities almost sure to lead him to the same doom as are the sparks to fly upward, and that through no fault of his own, but through some blood-stain inherited from a father, a grandfather, or even a great-grandfather.

It is time the laws of heredity were better understood. These fearful facts of science should be written where "he who runs may read."

1. The inebriety of the parent is the frequent cause of insanity, idiocy, epilepsy and the alcoholic mania in the child.

2. The law is "more and more"—that is to say, the tendency increases by transmission, so that the child inherits frequently a stronger propensity for drink than the parent had from whom he received this "doom of death."

3. The propensity may lie dormant through one, two, or even three generations and assert itself with increased power in the fourth.

These are the terrible facts concerning which science has spoken with no uncertain sound. Oh! is it not enough that this soul-destroying fiend should wreak its vengeance upon the living and the dead! More than this—must it hide its loathsome coils in the pillow of the young bride whose locks are still redolent of the perfume of the orange flowers, and kiss into those ears, in which still ring the merry chimes of the wedding bells, the curse of its deep damnation of her unborn child! This is a refinement of cruelty that brings hell very close to earth.

And we are responsible. The nation is made up of individuals, and you and I are partners in the infamy.

One hundred dollars a soul paid in; twenty hundred dollars and the soul paid out, with other souls to follow in the endless path of death.

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 12, 1885.

Retrospective.

TWENTY-EIGHTH PAPER.

In my last paper I spoke of my conviction under the preaching of Rev. John Howard, and my conversion under the ministry of Rev. Thomas Mabry. As I was converted while the latter was preaching, I claimed him as my spiritual father. At the time alluded to Mr. Mabry was a very effective preacher, and much beloved as a faithful pastor. Although not highly educated, he was a ready extempore speaker. His social qualities were pleasant, and he was much beloved on Cedar Creek circuit.

The writer is of the opinion that he sometimes suffered his prejudices to warp his better judgment. He became displeased with at least one of the leading members of the Georgia Conference, with whom he had been previously on the most intimate terms so much so that he named one of his children for him. But after his feelings had become alienated he changed the name of his child. After traveling in the Georgia Conference for several years (against the advice of his best friends) he located, which, as he afterwards informed me, proved disastrous to his religious enjoyment. The writer has been a close observer for many years, and has long since come to the conclusion that after a minister has felt called to the itinerant work, entered the same, taking the vows required, he should not cease to travel or remain in the connection unless providentially hindered. If he does, and enters the arena of life, coming in competition with the abashed politician or the well-trained in secular matters, in search for preferment or the riches of this world, his religion (?) will be at a heavy discount, and, as a finality, he will close out with a bankrupt purse. Numerous instances might be cited as a warning to those who, like Deanna, forsook the Apostle Paul and departed, "having loved this present world."

Allow me to indulge still farther in my retrospect. We have known some young men (not a few) who took a ground start, "little and unknown" until brought into notice and endorsed by the church, who after traveling a few years, ascertained that their accomplishments, acquirements and talents (?) eminently qualified them for first-class lawyers, physicians or politicians—that they mistook their calling, which necessitated a change. Unfortunately for them, the change necessitated a fallure! If God calls a man to preach the gospel, he may rest assured that the One who called him will give him success in proportion to his strict adherence and faithfulness in his calling. "A double-minded man" is not "unstable in all his ways," but unsuccessful in all his undertakings.

Such was the case with my friend, Mr. Mabry. He gradually declined in plenty, forfeited his membership in the church to which his labors had added many communicants.

Leaving Georgia for Mississippi, in 1836, the writer heard nothing more of him for twenty years, when we met in Sharon, Miss., the year I traveled the Madison circuit. On hearing that he was in the place, and not in a condition to walk without crutches (as he had been paralyzed for several years), I found him seated in a buggy, and, without a formal introduction, said to him: "Bro. Mabry, you do not recognize me; but I can never forget you. I claim you as my spiritual father. You baptized me and received me into the Methodist Episcopal Church." He looked at me with surprise until I reminded him of the revival at Hillsboro, Ga., in 1811, and told my name. He said he remembered me. Tears coursed down his furrowed cheeks; he was too full for utterance. After recovering from the excitement from the unexpected interview, he said: "Well, my brother, I received you into the church, and now, as I am not a member, I want you to receive me." I told him I would be happy to do so. He afterwards joined the church, had his credentials restored, and occasionally preached. After my transfer to the Texas Conference, before leaving for my new field of ministerial labor, I appointed a two days' meeting in the bounds of the Atalla circuit, inviting Mr. Mabry to assist in the services. He did so; but could only preach while seated in a chair. At eleven o'clock, on Sabbath, he preached; but not with the zeal and pathos he did in former years. On closing the services the writer remarked to the large and attentive audience that he knew "a youth who left his native State without the consent of his parents; that traveled two thousand miles by sea and land from the old homestead. Although blessed with pious parents, he knew nothing of the Methodists or Methodism except what he had heard from others, who represented them as being a noisy, fanatical people. This youth attended the preaching of a zealous Methodist minister, who manifested great interest in him, giving him private counsel and much encouragement. While under deep conviction, and while listening to a plain, pointed, scriptural sermon, this youth was happily converted and afterwards became a traveling Methodist preacher. Now, would you like to know who this wayward youth was, and who the minister who was instrumental in his conversion?" Placing my hand on the head of Mr. Mabry, as he sat in front of the pulpit, I said: "He who sits before you and has just addressed you as that minister, and he who now speaks as the converted youth." Both preachers wept and rejoiced, while many in the congregation were bathed in tears.

Not long thereafter I took leave of my old friend, with a hope that he was reinstated to the favor of God. He has long since passed away; but his memory is still cherished by the writer of these retrospective papers.

DANIEL MORSE.

Merrill, Texas.

Ordination of the Twelve.

MR. EDITOR: In the Advocate, some weeks ago, Rev. J. W. Ellison suggested that the disciples of Christ, who were chosen to be preachers of the gospel, were ordained when he washed their feet and that this baptism was the mode of their ordination. I think this a forced construction, and that the Savior had another object in view. By this simple ceremony he designed to teach his disciples a lesson of humility and courtesy, and to curb that spirit of worldly ambition which had been exhibited by some of them. "If that would be greatest let him be servant of all," was the language of the Savior. If he were ordaining them at that time, he would not have kept them ignorant of the fact; for he said to Peter, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter." He then explains his own act in washing the disciples' feet, "Ye ought also to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you." The washing of feet was a custom of the times and an "office of humanity," and arose from the fact that sandals were worn. It was expected that the guest should receive this courtesy, and the Savior on one occasion upbraided Simon for a neglect of this act of civility. "Simon, seest thou this woman? I entered into thy house, thou gavest me no water for my feet; but she has washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head." We must look elsewhere for the ordination of the apostles than to the occasion of the washing of their feet by the Savior. By referring to Mark III, 13-15, we find this language: "And he went up into a mountain and called unto him whom he would; and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils." Jesus was so thronged and pressed by the multitude seeking his kind offices that, as he could not be everywhere in person, he deemed it proper to select twelve of his disciples and send them forth to preach the gospel and heal diseases. Then and there he changed the name of some of them and gave them names indicative of their characters and ordained twelve. In the passage quoted we find the fact of ordination stated, but not the manner. The imposition of hands may have been the mode, but the form is not essential. We are more concerned about the fact. And here on the mountain, apart from the busy throng, having called together whom he desired, having held a Conference, he selected and appointed (epoised), or ordained twelve, and sent them forth to preach the gospel. Though the manner of this ordination does not appear, it may be inferred from an act of the apostles subsequently. When Stephen and others were selected to perform certain work in the church the apostles prayed and laid their hands on them. Where did this form originate, if not with the Master? And the presumption is that in the same way Christ ordained the twelve, who followed his example. The washing of the disciples' feet occurred about two years after the twelve were ordained, and if there was any form of ordination by Christ it must have taken place at the time he sent them forth with power to work miracles. It may not be out of place here to say that I have examined four Greek lexicons, and I do not find or deduce a meaning of epoise (poise), but words that may be considered as synonymous. They give as some of its meanings, to ordain, to constitute, to qualify, to appoint, as to an office, to send forth. The new version has appointed, and Dr. Packhurst gives, in loco, Mark III, 14, to make, appoint, constitute. With all the lights before us I do not think Bro. Ellison can make the baptism of the disciples feet by Christ the line and mode of their ministerial ordination.

J. M. PUOH.

AMITE CITY, LA., AUG. 19, 1885.

From the Work.

BUENA VISTA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord has done great things for us in this charge, whereof we are glad. Held four meetings—resulting in fifty conversions, thirty-five accessions, many church members reclaimed, and, in fact, the entire membership has been quickened. Have never had a more pleasant and prosperous year. Received valuable aid from Revs. E. M. Carey, H. B. Scruggs, T. J. Lowery, J. R. Robinson, and J. L. Guinn, L. P., for which we return many thanks. Hope to bring up all the collections in full. Since I came to this charge in December, we have built a $1,000 college at this place, in which Professors J. S. and J. L. Dickey, of Kentucky, opened a normal school September 1. They now have one hundred and twenty-five pupils and fifty or sixty boarders. They teach anything that is taught in any college. Board, everything furnished, with president or private families, $7 per month; tuition, $2 to $4 per month; location healthy; society good; seven miles from railroad shop. Any young man, lady, boy or girl would do well here.

T. J. TAYLOR, P. O.

HILLSBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just completed my round of protracted meetings on the Hillsboro circuit and the results were good. We have fifty-five accessions to the church and about sixty conversions. There has been quite a reformation in the church all over the work. There has been prayer meetings established and family altars erected. The people on the Hillsboro circuit are in the spirit of building. We have built two new churches and have secured a parsonage, a home for the preacher. This circuit is getting up from a lower to a higher degree. We are financially poor; but the people seem to be alive to their duty; they will not let their pastor suffer. We think it will get to the point that any of our preachers will be glad to be assigned to this work. The collections ordered by the Conference will be tolerably good, though we fear that they will not be paid up in full. We are on rising ground. May the Lord continue to bless us! Pray for us.

J. C. LONG, Pastor.

BOLIVAR, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have entered on my fourth round of quarterly meetings on the Greenville district, and can report success. We shall report about two hundred accessions and over one hundred conversions during the year. All consider this encouraging when we consider the number of white inhabitants on the district. We will make an advance on the collections ordered by the Conference of about one hundred per cent; but will still be along ways behind what we should do. We have had great revivals on nearly every charge in the district on the Jones Bayou circuit, which had been left without a preacher for two years. Bro. W. T. Sholt has had a successful year; built up good Sunday-schools at every appointment; has had twenty conversions and twenty-five accessions to the church; will receive all his salary and make a favorable report on all his collections. Every preacher on the district has been at his post during the year. We are moving forward in the temperance cause. Have gained much ground this year. The whisky traffic is the greatest enemy we have here. It kills more men than the malarial poison, and against it we must wage an unceasing warfare.

We have been steadily advancing on this district for three years; but there are many difficulties to overcome here, and it will take time and patient work. If whisky could be taken out of this district, it would soon "blossom like the rose." But the whisky traffic is breaking hearts, blighting hopes and dragging thousands down to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell. Oh, how long will this demon be suffered to destroy our race!

J. W. HONNOLD.

ZILPHA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed our last protracted meeting, and have had times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The Lord has been with us and his spirit rested on the churches. We have witnessed the conversion of many sinners. Many backsliders have been reclaimed, and many in the church, whose zeal was dead, have been revived. They actually lived again as from the dead, and the church is wonderfully alive. At Shiloh the church was strengthened by an increase of spiritual life among the members and by the addition of about twenty-eight fresh, strong converts and eighteen accessions to the church. At North Mountain we have had a most glorious revival. Results: The church wonderfully blessed, about twenty-five conversions and seventeen additions to the church. At Friendship we had about twenty-four conversions and ten additions to the church, and at other places great good has been accomplished. The church is generally revived, and there have been on the circuit about ninety-five conversions and sixty-eight additions to the church. It is impossible to tell what the results of these meetings will be. Nearly all know that this circuit was in a low condition spiritually and financially. We have not had a revival on this circuit in four or five years. Hence the churches were all spiritually dead. The results have not been what we would like to have seen; but there has been great good accomplished and the good work is still going on among the people. We have organized prayer meetings and class meetings; and, no doubt, these will result in great good. This is my first year in the ranks. I am young and inexperienced, and do fully realize my incompetency for the great work. Nevertheless the Lord has blessed my labors, for which I feel very thankful. May God bless this people and send them a better man next year! I think I will bring up all my collections. May God bless you and our dear Advocate!

JAMES WOOLAM.

ANDREW CHAPPEL CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The meeting opened on Friday night, September 25, and closed the following Tuesday night. During the whole time the rain was either falling or threatening clouds overcast the heavens, which kept many away who expected to be with us. For a time the unpromising weather cast a gloom over the spirits of preachers and people; but we all soon saw marked signs of the fulfillment of the Lord's promise, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." We had one of the most glorious meetings I ever attended. The old soldiers of the cross were there in a long established and a strong faith, while their sons and daughters, in great numbers, proved themselves worthy successors of their fathers in the active labors of the great evangelist. There were twenty-six conversions and seven accessions, and others went away to join at their homes. The ministers present were J. C. Brogan, pastor, J. A. Godfrey, P. R. E. F. Edgar, W. Spillman and the writer, and Horter and Gordon, of the local brethren.

On Tuesday the writer, assisted by the brethren and some elect women, organized two auxiliary societies of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. One at Andrew's Chapel with ten members and four subscribers to the Woman's Advocate of Missions, with the following officers: Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, president; Mrs. A. Wiggins, first vice-president; Mrs. S. J. Clark, second vice-president; Miss M. E. Long, recording secretary; Miss Belle Bell, corresponding secretary; Miss Jane Bell, treasurer. The other was at Liberty with fourteen members and two subscribers to the Woman's Advocate, with others to follow soon, with the following officers: Mrs. C. D. Pettus, president; Mrs. T. E. Carter, first vice-president; Miss Jennie Gates, second vice-president; Miss Ella Brogan, recording secretary; Miss Maggie Parker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hartwell Parker, treasurer. Bro. Brogan is finishing up his fourth year on this work and the people part with him reluctantly.

J. M. WRENS.

BLACK HAWK, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed our meeting at this place (Forks) which was greatly revived. Quite a number were converted and several joined the church. It is said to be the best meeting they have had at this place for many years. We were assisted by Bros. T. W. Dye, T. Y. Ramsey, Sr. and H. E. Smith. I have engaged in eight protracted meetings this year, and all of them were excellent except one.

We are moving up in this country.

J. F. EVANS.

FORKS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I closed a protracted meeting at this place (Forks) on Tuesday night, September 23, which lasted five days and nights and was preached only at night for nine nights, which resulted in the church being wonderfully and graciously revived, and between thirty-five and forty con-

LANE. |

Christian Advocate.

OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors: REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER, REV. W. L. U. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1885.

There is good news from all the mission fields. Surely the day of the right hand of God is ready to dawn. Among other testimonies this is cheering: Rev. B. H. Badly, a Methodist missionary in India, writing from Lucknow, says: "We are having a prosperous year. The kingdom is coming, and hearts are warming toward the blessed Jesus. The darkness breaks away, and the day is dawning."

Drunkennes is a plea for pardon. It seems, even with the President of the United States. The press dispatches of Sunday last said the President had pardoned a Washington, D. C., policeman sentenced to two years' imprisonment for assault upon a woman with intent to kill—the ground for pardon being that he shot the woman when intoxicated. So, so. A villain has only to get drunk or play drunk to plead judicial mercy or executive clemency. Oh! he is a clever man, and would never have done it but for little too much drink. And that entitles him to favor! Alas! for such a travesty of justice—such a false, foolish sentiment! Whisky is no justification for crime. But this sentiment is another argument in favor of prohibition.

In a letter published in the Dublin Review, entitled "How Catholics Ought to Vote in the Coming Election," Cardinal Manning praises Liberalism and a change of the land laws, and pronounces in favor of local option. This last is good doctrine from His Eminence, and we hope his friends may be a majority on that issue. But we can only view with alarm any ecclesiastic using his authority in the church to carry an issue. To appeal to "Catholic voters" as such, and try to mass them on any proposition, is making the church a dangerous political agent. And that fact, so common in the history of Romanism, necessarily excites alarm in our country. When priests and bishops control Catholic voters on political issues, they become dangerous and dreaded factors in republican governments.

The ninety-fifth anniversary of the birth of Father Mathew, the apostle of temperance, was celebrated throughout the country, on Sunday last, by the Catholic Total Abstinence Societies. His is a worthy name, and deserves to be honored. He began his temperance work in 1833, and by his great eloquence soon caught the ear of the Irish people. Under his leadership the reform swept like a resistless wave of the sea over the country, and wonderful were the results. He seemed to hold the nation in his hand. As many as 150,000 persons in and around the city of Cork signed the pledge within a few days. He traveled over England and Scotland, and his journeys were like a triumphal procession. The Queen of England settled an annuity upon him in recognition of his successful labors. Everywhere drunkenness decreased, crime was reduced and some jails were without prisoners. Father Mathew visited the United States in 1851, and spent some weeks in New Orleans, administering the pledge to hundreds. He returned to Ireland, and died at his home in Cork, December 8, 1851. There was one fatal mistake in his career: When he had Ireland in his power he should have perpetuated the spirit of reform by a prohibitory law. He saw it and regretted it.

Centenary College is located here. This is the school of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. The buildings are large and imposing, but we were grieved to see how our Methodist brethren neglect their institution. We believe in denominational schools. They are the safest for the country.

Centenary, with her sixty years of honorable existence, her long roll of alumni, many of whom are now rich, has but a meager patronage and next to no endowment.

What is the matter with our Methodist brethren? We call on Dr. Galloway to explain.

We find the above in the editorial correspondence of the Baptist Record. The question proposed by our brother is a serious and pertinent one. There are many theories of explanation, but none that relieve our people of their great responsibility. Our boys go to other Methodist colleges and help them to large prosperity at the expense of their own home institution.

"An Incentive to Hypocrisy."

With the fierce party contest in Ohio settled, at the ballot-box on Tuesday we have nothing to do as a religious journalist. There were many issues involved, and many factors entered into the campaign. But as to a great moral question discussed and its fair presentation we have a right to speak. In a joint discussion at Toledo between Judge Hoadly, the Democratic candidate for governor, and Judge Foraker, the Republican candidate for the same office, the question of prohibition was treated at length. With neither of the speakers do we agree. Both favor license—one, high, and the other, low—as the best means of dealing with a great evil. That doctrine we repudiate, except as a necessary means to a nobler end. But in the discussion Judge Hoadly uttered sentiments unworthy of his high position and reputation as a jurist. He denounced prohibition as a failure, which is disproved by facts, and raged the changes on the old threadbare objection against abridging "personal liberty," which has been exploded by five different deliverances of the Supreme Court of the United States. That sort of harangue would be pardonable in a ward politician or a little plume-woods stump orator, but is not creditable to a distinguished lawyer and candidate for governor of a great State. Not a single eminent law writer sustains his position, and it was evidently uttered for use in the campaign to catch the stupid elements in the large cities.

But with another declaration are we more concerned, because it announces a new ground of opposition to prohibitory legislation. The report says Judge Hoadly "pronounced prohibition an incentive to hypocrisy." Just wherein it develops and utters hypocrisy, and by what logic he arrives at that conclusion, he does not state; but the declaration was made with an ex-cathedra air of unquestioned infallibility. The idea, doubtless, is that, if the sale of liquor is prohibited by law, old toilers will swear falsely to get it and grasping tradesmen will prostitute their consciences to sell it. In other words—prohibiting certain offenses intensifies desire and increases provocation to commit them. If so, the converse of the proposition must be true—that the removal of legal prohibitions decreases the measure of crime. But to what ridiculous conclusions will such reasoning lead! According to that argument the pages of our statute books ought to be pure, unlettered white paper, without a restraint upon "personal liberty" or a threatened penalty against any offense, however injurious or inhuman. Laws against larceny increase stealing; against arson, house burning; against murder, the number of homicides. Then courts ought to be abolished, judges disrobed, prisons destroyed and the people allowed to exercise their virtuous wills without the menaces of legal restraints. To that conclusion Mr. Hoadly's doctrine inexorably leads, which is the essence of falsity and absurdity.

But the statement is purely gratuitous and unwarranted. It hasn't even the merit of plausibility. That low, debased men would try to evade a prohibitory law no one doubts; but the law did not brutalize their consciences and make them criminals. On the other hand, thousands would be deterred because of their sacred regard for the law of the land, and hundreds of thousands prevented from forming a habit that breeds crime. And in support of that view we quote the words of Senator Frye, of Maine. He says: "The 'Maine Law' has not been a failure in that, first, it has made rum selling a crime, so that only the lowest and most debased will engage in it. 2. The rum buyer is a participant in a crime, and a large majority of moderate respectable drinkers have become abstainers. 3. It has gradually created a public sentiment against both selling and drinking. 4. In all of the country portions of the State, where twenty years ago there was a grocery or tavern at every four corners, and within a circuit of two miles unpainted houses, broken windows, neglected farms, poor school-houses, broken hearts and homes, it has banished almost every such grocery and tavern and introduced peace, plenty, happiness and prosperity."

A Protestant Episcopal revival is contemplated in New York City. Six or seven evangelists from England have come over to direct the movement. The clergy of that city, with Assistant Bishop Potter, have gone into a "retreat" for preparation, and will commence work about the first of November. We hope they may have a deep, wide-spread revival, and see many souls soundly converted to God. Just that the Episcopal and other churches, very much need.

The Case of Galileo.

In his anniversary address before the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, Dr. Deems stated in detail the oft-quoted, but superficially understood case of Galileo, the Italian astronomer. On a previous occasion he had used these words in a public address: "It was not religion which brought Galileo to his humiliating retraction, about which we hear so much declamation; it was 'the church.' But why should writers of the history of sciences so frequently conceal the fact that 'the church' was instigated thereto, not by religious people, but scientific men—by Galileo's collaborators? It was the jealousy of the scientists which made use of the bigotry of the churchmen to degrade a rival in science." These sentences led to much correspondence with Christian scientists and finally to the preparation of an elaborate paper for an English periodical. The anniversary address is, in part, a reproduction of that discussion. If the statement made above can be sustained by the facts, it will be an important contribution to the history of science. No other fact is so glibly quoted as proof of the inveterate, unreasoning hostility of the Christian religion to the advancement of pure science. As generally understood, its reputation has a damaging influence; but if it transpires that scientific rivals, inflamed with jealousy because of his great gifts and growing success, are responsible for the recantation of Galileo, much fiery declamation against Christianity will have to be revised or recalled. The religious spirit is not intolerant toward scientific truth, and never has been. Indeed, it quickens thought and stimulates investigation into all the secrets of nature and the vast arcana of knowledge. And wherever truth established by science has met with opposition in the ranks of Christianity it has not come from religion, but a narrow, bigoted churchmanship. Two truths can not be hostile and need no reconciliation. It is, therefore, a work of supererogation to reconcile true science and pure religion. But unproved dicta and wild vagaries are not truths of science; nor is narrow sectarianism or indiscriminate dogmatism to be dignified as the religion of Christ.

The facts in the case of Galileo are as follows: He lived in Italy during the latter part of the sixteenth and the beginning of the seventeenth century, and made some astronomical discoveries that hastened the acceptance of the Copernican system. He was an extraordinary genius, very eloquent, and rapidly rose to distinction. At twenty-five, he was mathematical lecturer in the University of Pisa. At twenty-seven he was professor of mathematics in the University of Padua. Afterwards he was a professor in Florence, and there enjoyed the special friendship of Cardinals Barberini and Barberini—both very learned men—the latter of whom ascended the pontifical throne as Urban VIII. Galileo was a man of brilliant imagination, and discussed scientific details with popular eloquence. He had rivals, therefore, whose opposition grew more intense as his popularity increased; hence his troubles. At this time the Copernican theory was thought by some ignorant men to be in contradiction to some passages of Scripture. On this fact his philosophic and scientific opponents seized and used the theory to their personal advantage. He was, therefore, summoned before the Roman College, which was a scientific as well as theological tribunal, and admonished not to teach the condemned doctrine. He consented. But after five years he published a book, in which he ridiculed certain of his opponents so severely that the old intolerance was revived. The result was his book was prohibited; but his condemnation was never ratified by the Pope, who himself was a firm believer in the heliocentric theory of astronomy. He was never imprisoned, and that little story about his reciting an abjuration while kneeling, and then leaping up with the exclamation, "E pur si muove!" was not invented until Galileo had been dead nearly a century and a half.

For an elaborate and satisfactory account of the case we refer our readers to the September-October number of Christian Thought. Dr. Deems deserves thanks for bringing to light the facts of this much discussed affair. He concludes the paper with these words: "His life was only another illustration of the general law of inertia, which pervades mind as it does matter, showing what any new motion requires for its initiation, and that it will meet resistance in its progress. Historically, the case in hand was not the case of the Church of Rome versus Galileo, but was the case of the Aristotelians versus a new scientist, in which the defendant was at some cost to defeat the plaintiff, and in which the plaintiff was finally "thrown out of court."

The Tennessee Conference.

The Tennessee Conference met at Columbia, Tenn., on Wednesday of last week, with Bishop Wilson presiding. Bishop McTear was also present, and relieved his colleague at times in the duties of the chair. Dr. W. M. Leitch was elected secretary. There was a full attendance of preachers and a large delegation of lay members. The question of change of name was taken up on Thursday morning, and the proposition was rejected by a vote of 175 to 25. The memorial in favor of "Episcopal Methodist Church" was also voted down by a large majority. On Thursday night, by request of the Conference, Dr. McFerrill delivered a special sermon, it being the sixtieth anniversary of his license to preach. Bishop Lane, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, addressed the Conference in the interest of the colored institution at Jackson, and received in cash $68. Dr. Winfield, of Arkansas, was present, and spoke eloquently at a temperance mass meeting on Thursday afternoon. Other visitors in attendance were Rev. W. J. Jackson, of the Denver Conference; Rev. R. A. Timmons, of the North Alabama Conference, and Dr. G. S. Savage, of Kentucky.

One thousand dollars were raised for Paine Institute after an earnest appeal and two Methodist choruses by Commissioner Dunlap. Dr. Kelley delivered an able missionary address brimful of thrilling facts and figures. We have 175 mission stations, the total value of which amounts to $457,965. In response to his appeal the preachers pledged to raise $4,000 of their missionary assessments by January 1, 1886. The collections for this cause the present year amounted to $16,000 against $14,000 the past year. A woman's missionary meeting was held on Friday night, addressed by Mrs. Watkins, of Mexico, and Mrs. Green, of Nashville.

On Saturday the following delegates were elected to the General Conference: Clerical—J. B. McFerrill, R. A. Young, D. C. Kelley, R. K. Brown, J. W. Hill, T. J. Duncan; alternates—J. B. West, J. A. Orman, J. D. Barbee, Lay—E. W. Macrea, B. J. Tarver, E. W. Cole, T. B. Holt, Dr. S. E. H. Dance, T. D. Fite; alternates—W. H. Morgan, W. H. Morrow.

Comparative Church Statistics.

From Zion's Herald we take the following. It is not a matter of much importance to us as a denomination; but for the truth of history the facts ought to be known. Numbers do not necessarily indicate prosperity, but should not be depreciated or misrepresented: "We take but little interest in the matter of comparative church statistics. Every little while, however, we find in one of our Baptist exchanges, or in a quotation from one, a statement apparently showing that the members of that denomination far outnumber the Methodists in the United States. If they do, an increased responsibility rests upon our brethren of that order, and we trust their evangelical fruitfulness will be in equal proportion to their numerical success. But our ecclesiastical arithmetic differs somewhat from the Baptist authorities. The Leader quotes the Watchman as saying: "According to the latest accessible statistics, however, the Baptists considerably outnumber the Methodists. The last Baptist Year Book states the number of actual members in regular Baptist Churches to be 2,557,793, and in a compilation therein of denominational statistics the number of members in full fellowship in the Methodist Episcopal Churches, North and South, is shown to be only 1,617,223—a number 890,480 less than that of the Baptists."

"We have 'accessible statistics' as late as the authentic tables prepared for the late Centennial Conference, in Baltimore, showing that in the two Methodist Episcopal Churches, North and South, alone there were 2,704,398, and that in all the Methodist family of churches in the United States there were 3,716,318 members. There are two cognate Methodist bodies—the United Brethren and the Evangelical Association—numbering 297,622, making a total of 4,013,940. Deducting all members living in foreign stations, we have as Methodist communicants in the United States, 3,951,026. There are 177,236 probationers, leaving in full membership, 3,773,790, which gives a verge, after subtracting 2,557,793 'actual members' of regular Baptist Churches, of 1,216,002 in favor of the Methodists. Our vigorous Baptist brethren have considerable work ahead to catch up. We bid them God-speed in seeking to do so. This is a much better way than in attempting to figure down carefully computed tables of church statistics."

Restitution.

BY REV. J. B. A. AURENS, D. D.

To make pecuniary or oral restitution is a sacred duty. In Leviticus vi it is specifically enjoined. The wrongfully acquired valuables, with one-fifth of their market value super-added, were to be restored to the legitimate owner. But, even independent of this express command, justice requires the surrender of possessions to whose acquisition the least dishonesty attaches. Not to do so is to convert the heart into what, in police parlance, is known as a "fence." We retain and hide what rightfully belongs to others.

It is self-evident that without scrupulous restitution forgiveness of sin and Divine favor can not be acquired. In the bestowal of mercy God occupies the heart, makes common cause with the one who receives mercy; hence God would become particeps criminis in the unrighteous wrong. Such supposition is sacrilegious. When men claim to have obtained Divine favor and to enjoy the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, without having previously made restitution, they grievously deceive themselves. God forgives us our sins, but requires at the same time that we shall pay our debts ourselves. What we owe we must pay, for iniquity inflicted we must make amends, our wrongs we must set right, our encroachments on the possessions, good name and peace of others we must conscientiously atone for ere we can expect to enjoy the benefit of the Divine atonement. True, in some instances it may be impossible to make restitution. In such an emergency God may be satisfied with a fervent desire to make it, with the strenuous, though futile, effort to bring it about, with the unaffected grief because of our inability to right our wrong.

Instead of being possibly merciful to those who do not make restitution, God is, indeed, angry with them. On account of Achan's sin, who had hidden golden commodities in his possession, Israel suffered severe defeat. It was only after the culprit had been stoned and the commodities disposed of according to law that the anger of God was allayed. This may be the reason why so many have for these many years prayed in vain for the bestowal of God's favor. They continue to write beneath his frowns. God can not bless a man who is at war with the strictest conceptions of honesty. Many have received their weekly or monthly wages without having honestly performed their work; others dishonestly deducted from the honestly earned wages. Some excessively extol their merchandise in order to secure an unduly high price; others depreciate the same in order to secure it below market value. Many avail themselves of the ignorance, confidence and friendship of their fellow-men to "fleece" them.

In all such and kindred cases we must make restitution if we expect ever to enjoy God's approval. This is the experience of every converted person. As soon as true repentance asserts itself the desire to make restitution becomes irresistible. This was apparent in Zaccheus. The half of his goods he was ready to give to the poor, and out of the remaining half he was prepared to make four-fold restitution to all whom he had wronged. Now, he encountered no difficulty in acquiring saving faith.

Not only peculiarly have we encroached on the rights of our fellow-men—men compared with whose value the fullest purse is trash. It is their good name. But that name is often defiled. Men are defamed, slandered, vilified. Because of villainous lies the best of men sometimes are suspected of great wrong; they enjoy no confidence because of infamous slander. What! and such liars, slanderers and robbers of confidence and good will should possibly obtain Divine mercy without having previously made restitution? Never! If such were possible, many true Christians would disdain to share such relation. But no danger that liars and slanderers obtain mercy without having previously made the amende honorable. Those to whom we feel must be informed of the true nature of our communication, and those about whom we feel must be asked to forgive us. The slander must be made inoperative by confessing that it was slander, and not founded in truth. But who can do that? No matter how bitter, the draught must be swallowed—restitution must be made if we expect ever to become the children of God.

I remarked above that in some instances it is impossible to make restitution. Death, the lack of funds, the widespread circulation and inextricable complications resulting from the lie or defamation deprives us often of the ability to right our wrong. May we not in such dilemma make restitution substitutionally? Yes. If the party or the party's heirs to whom you owe restitution are dead, give what you owe them to the mission cause, to church enterprises, to the widows and orphans. Do not, oh! do not keep it in your possession, if those whom you have defamed have passed away, make restitution by being specially kind to the fallen, the erring ones, the poor, forsaken, helpless, the low, base and wicked, and with your labor of love win them for Christ. God will certainly accept the substitutional restitution, and you are in a condition to receive his forgiveness and favor.

"The Voice of a King Is in the Camp."

The royalty of the Hebrew family was slow in developing. In fact, it was not given to kingly modes of thought. None of the branches of the family, except the descendants of Lot, had assumed the title, and they, doubtless, little more. Esau's sons had become dukes, and Ishmael's about the same. Five hundred years had not yet brought out of Abraham's seed to a throne.

Balaam hears "the voice of a king." I suppose this may be interpreted: 1. The tone of authority characterizes the voice. Speech is wonderful; but the voice which inspires it with life is vastly more so. Voice alone may make speech sublime or ridiculous, imperious or supplicatory, laughable or tear producing, cheery or frightful. We know the servile voice instantly. 2. As yet the seed is undeveloped; but men have caught the idea. The nation has at least a faint conception of its mission and destiny. There is nothing to be achieved in battling with this nation which has possessed a people. It will reach its goal, or infinite mischief will be done. This conception of mission or destiny is the lion which crouches for its prey. Get out of its way! 3. The voice of a king—the utterances of the mount. "God is in the midst of her." The authority is unquestionable. 4. The promise of the Messiah. "The Star out of Jacob" is predicted by Balaam. His triumph and long reign are vividly depicted. This hope is inspired in every breast—"Who knows but that King may come of my family?"

Royalty is by the grace of God; but it is not limited to a few nobles. It is the heritage of the race repurchased in Jesus Christ. It is not of might nor power nor wisdom, but by the Spirit of God. Cultus has nothing to do with its prerogatives; wealth, wisdom and social status, nothing. These have their place in the kingdoms of this world, which come to nought; but not in the universal kingdom. In that rights are not the accidents of acquisition or discovery; they are inherent, inalienable. Even though the possessor be unconscious or refuse to claim his rights, woe to him who disregards them! God is their avenger.

"Spiritual Quackery."

A Virginia clergyman writes a letter to the Churchman, and declaims spiritedly against that "ecclesiastical nuisance known as the 'mourner's bench,' or the 'anxious seat.'" Dr. Lafferty has looked him up, and finds that he came into the church by way of the "mourner's bench," was a candidate for the Baptist ministry and had the advantage of a college education of that church, and that at a recent revival he preached zealously and talked to penitents at the "anxious seat." Our confro sharply characterizes him as "merely an estray runt among the monarchs of the Herd Book, belligerent and bellowing in inverse ratio of size and significance." His raving is rather ill-timed in view of the contemplated Episcopal protracted meeting in the City of New York. The following is an extract from his letter:

Something must be done to effect the work of Methodist and Baptist "protracted meetings." * * * We believe that these people are doing a great deal of harm with their foolish superstitions and their spiritual quackery. It will take certainly a century, perhaps longer, for the Christian Church to get over the positively evil influences that gather around that ecclesiastical nuisance known as the "mourner's bench," or the "anxious seat." Still the "bench" is used and used to fill the Methodist Church with people who need the instruction that the Episcopal Church alone can give them.

Rev. F. M. Featherstun, D. D., our pastor at Braudon, Miss., thus reports a gracious work in his charge. We rejoice with our friends in that excellent, hospitable community.

We have just closed a good meeting at this place. Bro. T. L. McLean was with us and did noble work for the Master. Many backsliders were claimed and fifteen conversions. We have added thirty-two to our church here this year, and more of the An. Please say to the readers of the Advocate that I have no idea of going to the Pacific coast this fall. I know not how the Pacific Methodist got such news.

The Times-Democrat, of Friday last, contained an interesting letter from Hattiesburg, Miss., giving an account of the Methodist High School opened there under the principalship of Rev. W. R. Sims. We rejoice in the flattering prospects of that enterprise and most cordially endorse every word said of the school principal. He is eminently equipped for the work and will have large children's service was held at 3 M., Sunday. The whole church was a state of revival, and will pay a hundred cents on the dollar on all assessments.

It was a most precious meeting the memory of which will long gladden many hearts. The brethren propose improvements that will accommodate more people, and yet lighten the care and burden of the self-sustaining families who tent there.

W. H. WALKER

—When a man drinks hard, blood boils over, and the passion rises and grows tumultuous. In such dangerous juncture the gun should be doublet, and twice much sense summoned in as would serve for an ordinary occasion. Not to part with one's reason, when he have need of as much more, if could get it, is like breaking compass, and throwing the point overboard in a gorm. — Collier.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe
the ADVOCATE.

Will wash Cleaner, Easier, and with less labor by Cleaning all sizes of dirt in the World. Washes any manufacturer to produce a better
Every 7 Machines Warranted for FIVE Years, and Satisfaction Guaranteed. The only Washer that can be clamped to any sized tire like a Wrecker. Made of polished steel, painted and will outlast any wooden machine. Agents wanted. Exclusive Territory. Do not fail to cover the country and from $75 to $200 per month. Metal price $7.
Easible to acquire, $85. Also our literature.

KEYSTONE DRUMMERS AT LOWEST WHOLESALE PRICES

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.-NO. 43.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1525.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

THAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
HARVEY & JAMESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers Ad. price

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. S. H. WELLES.

REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.

REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY.

REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

REV. W. P. BARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE BELLS OF THE SOUL.

BY MRS. C. A. E. POORE.

Within each curtain heart a bell

With golden voice aloft is hung;

Its sound is tones more richly swell

In hearts that are no longer young.

They gently mark the flight of years

That pass on joyous pinions by;

On youthful hearts and careless ears

Their echoes all unheeded die.

But when along Time's onward roll

We catch a muffled minor strain,

Till through the chambers of the soul

More clearly rings the sad refrain.

The bells ring low when lovers part,

And have a hope to meet again;

But when love dies they ring the heart

With throbs of agonizing pain.

Over ocean depths from distant lands

By grateful touch these bells are rung.

And yet anon by shadowy hands

Across the grave the cords are swung.

For friends departing beat their bound

To other bells within their hearts;

And so their knells more loudly sound

As one by one our loved depart.

Oh, wondrous power! oh, magic bell!

That vibrates through each human soul;

Its secret workings none may tell—

No hand its mystery unroll.

But to the land of life and light

Attuned in symphony sublime,

These mystic bells may all unite

In one grand harmony of chime.

—Good Housekeeping.

Woman As a Reformer.

BY REV. W. O. BLACK.

Having already sent you copies of

The Tribune, containing reports of the proceedings of the State convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance

Union, I will not occupy your space with a detailed report of the convention's doings. I wish,

however, to make a few remarks concerning the convention and the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. In the first place the convention was larger than

I had supposed it would be, as only a few months have elapsed since the

Woman's Christian Temperance

Union took root in Mississippi.

Thirty-one delegates were present from nineteen local unions, and a number of other unions sent up written reports. The places that sent were Brookhaven, Port Gibson,

Natchez, Yazoo City, Marion, Clinton,

Fayette, Edwards and Aberdeen.

The personnel of the convention was very fine indeed. They were an intellectual, cultured, refined body of Christian women. Several things were noticeable in the proceedings.

In the first place every union that was represented by a delegate was represented in a written report. I could not help thinking that if it had been a convention of men several members would have made an oral report, prefaced by some flimsy excuse for not writing. The reports were in the main well written and carefully prepared as to subject matter, presenting details as to work done, difficulties encountered, etc. In most cases the written report was supplemented by interesting impromptu remarks. In the consideration of the various questions that came before the convention there was full and free discussion and yet there was absolutely none of that wrangling and bad temper and bad breeding that so frequently characterize the proceedings of a convention composed of "the lords of creation." Not one unkind word or ill-natured remark marred the harmony of the occasion.

It was pre-eminently a religious conversation, a spirit of deep-toned pleasure was manifested throughout.

The proceedings were interspersed with devotional exercises. Reports alternated with prayer. Resolutions were sandwiched with the songs of Zion. And such singing! The songs were not a mere perfunctory performance for human ears. They came from the heart, and as they fell in majestic sweetness upon the ears of lookers on they told of faith in God, of heaven-born love for the souls of men and of a zeal that is willing to do and to dare in the cause of the right. This convention has been a priceless blessing to this city. It has not only strengthened the temperance cause and added largely to the number of our Woman's Christian Temperance Union workers; it has also enlarged the faith and inflamed the zeal and intensified the piety of our people. Some of our women say they feel as if they "been to a glorious camp meeting." We were so delighted that we tried to have the next session held here, but after discussion it was decided that "the city on the Pearl," where "the best men of the State" so often congregate in Legislature and convention had claims paramount to ours.

Public addresses were delivered during the convention by Mr. R. D. Gambrell, of Clinton; Mr. T. D. Marshall, of Edwards; Mrs. Ervin, of Columbus, (the president); Mrs. H. B. Kells, of Fayette, and Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, of Baton Rouge, La. The addresses of Messrs. Gambrell and Marshall were good. It is decidedly refreshing and encouraging to see our talented, educated young men joining in this holy crusade against that vilest of all abominations—the liquor traffic. The president presented, in a well-written report, an outline of the history of the introduction of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union into Mississippi and of its progress up to the present time. The address of Mrs. H. B. Kells I wish could have been heard by all of my sex who talk loftily about "woman's inferiority." Very few of these boasting masculines can produce such an address. Mrs. Kells was for a number of years principal of Fairmount Institute, near Sewanee, Tenn. Many minds in the noble ranks of Mississippi and Tennessee womanhood bear the impress of Mrs. Kells' genius. Mrs. Mary Read Goodale gave two addresses that were superb. They were learned without pedantry, logical without stiffness and ornate without meretricious finery of speech. And Mrs. Goodale is withal a very pleasing speaker. A fine face, a countenance that bespeaks a candid, honest soul within, a perfect ease and self-possession of manner, a voice soft and sweet and yet strong enough to fill any ordinary auditorium, a thorough mastery of the principles of the elocutionist's art, an intense glowing zeal in that noble cause which battles for "God and home and native land"—these qualifications make Mrs. Goodale, woman though she is, a foe to be dreaded by the hosts of Bacchus. She is the Frances Willard of the South. She has already dealt the rum traffic terrible crushing blows in North Louisiana. Through her instrumentalities, unions have been formed which have swept this hellish traffic from whole parishes. As I look upon such noble women I have a more exalted estimate of our fallen humanity. To do the work which she is doing requires in the first place a vast amount of arduous toil to acquire a fitness for the work, requires long absences from home, requires the worry and manifold inconveniences of constant travel, requires a hundred things that are not pleasing to a modest, refined, home-loving woman as Mrs. Goodale is. Yet all this she is willing to endure in order to save the souls of men from a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's hell. All honor to such noble, self-denying, cross-bearing, God-fearing, humanity-loving women. They will never be appreciated at their true worth until God comes to "gather up his jewels." If ever my soul has been with holy indignation, it has been when I have heard men denounce and ridicule these heroic women "of whom the world is so worthy." I as much believe these Woman's Christian Temperance Union women are divinely called to do the work they are doing as that I am called to "minister in holy things." And not alone do I honor these leaders of the hosts of reform; I honor the rank and file as well. Not all can be leaders. Not all have speaking and organizing talent. Not all can be spared from the home circle for distant journeys. Yet these whose labors are more circumscribed manifest the same spirit of consecration that characterizes their more widely known co-laborers. For a modest, refined, sensitive woman to take an anti-rum petition and go tramping through the streets, into stores, offices, depots, shops, everywhere; to do this in the face of opposition, scorn and ridicule from what the world sometimes calls its best citizens; to do this while a hostile press huris its sneers and slurs upon them; to do this day after day with aching heart and wearied limbs, and then to see all these labors come to naught by means of names fished up from the dregs of society with the almighty dollar for a bait; then to start out in a new campaign of the same sort and with the same results; to go through a number of campaigns like this: Do you tell me there is no heroism in this? And this is only one department of the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. In a great variety of ways the Christian womanhood of this land is working, working, working persistently, energetically, heroically to banish from our heaven-favored land this vile traffic in human damnation. I thank God that I live in this age when in fulfillment of ancient prophecy he has poured out his spirit upon his "hand maidens" and emboldened them to take their stand in the very forefront of this warfare between heaven and hell. Naught but the spirit of God could have put woman there, and naught but that spirit could help her there. None but the Searcher of all hearts can measure the true heroism, the self-abnegation, the soaring faith, the fervent piety and the pure philanthropy that are embodied in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MEMPHIS, MISS., Sept. 21, 1885.

Letter from Mrs. Judge Merrick.

The town of Greensboro is not far from the center of North Carolina, and six lines of railroads converge and meet here. Unlike Durham, which is wholly a tobacco-made town, this is characterized by other specialties and features, though of course there is a large tobacco manufactory here of necessity where so much of the filthy weed is bought and sold and shipped.

The Greensboro Female College was established in 1835, and is the oldest chartered school for girls in the State. While this is a denominational institution and patronized chiefly by Methodists, the Presbyterian, Congregational and Episcopal Churches are represented in the faculty and no interference with the church relations of pupils prevents them from attending the church of their preference.

The college buildings are located beautifully near the western limits of Greensboro on an eminence surrounded by grounds which afford pleasant walks beneath trees, the whole covering an area of forty acres. For several years Dr. Deems, now pastor of the Church of the Strangers in New York, was the president of this college. After a long absence Dr. Deems visited the institution this summer during their commencement and preached the annual sermon. The most interesting portion of the whole thing is the two hundred girls which I saw file into the church last Sunday in their pretty uniform with their uniformly good-looking faces and ruddy cheeks. A man might easily go farther with his girls and fare worse than to send them here to this lovely old Greensboro, in North Carolina, just three miles out of town. You will find the plantation called "Warrington" in his book, where Judge Tourgee lived just after the war and wrote "The Fool's Errand." The house stands upon a gently sloping hill surrounded by a noble oak grove, and there is a clear stream flowing at the base of the elevator. Here the judge enjoyed the delights of a winter in the South, and as he arrived at this very season

I really supposed it seemed quite warm to a Canadian, but if you could look in on me here in the Benton House in my cosy room, with my writing table very near a glowing hot stove, you would think there was cold weather in North Carolina even in October and you would not be making a mistake either.

On Sunday I heard a sermon preached upon the story of Ananias and Sapphira, in which crookedness in money matters among church members was handled fearlessly and plainly, and the equal responsibility of the wife in church giving was also taught by the equal punishment of the woman who had agreed with her husband to make a liberal appearance before men and lied to God. I had on a previous Sunday listened to a preacher in the mountains of Tennessee, where it was very interesting to see the congregation collect a little before the hour for morning service. A young woman in front of me took off her bonnet and let down a magnificent mass of long hair, which perhaps had become disarranged in a horseback ride, and then twisted it into a coil, secured it with a comb, unaltered by a single hair-pin and replaced her bonnet, calmly unconscious of time, place or the curious eyes regarding her. The church was just completed and was to be dedicated that day, and I felt sure its benign and civilizing influence in time would do wonders with the mountaineers who hitherto had been out of reach of such benefits. The preacher's text was from Genesis xxviii, 16, 17: "And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." The preacher said it was God's power which had set these mountains and dug out these valleys, and he told a touching story of a drowned child and woman's faith showing Christ was the link between things seen and the invisible. He was the only way, and looking out upon the cars traversing the gorge cut between these stately mountains, he said heaven is near—there is no other railroad track which leads to the heavenly kingdom of the Everlasting Father. The blessed Savior is himself the line of communication. This, he said, was typified by the ladder by which the angels came down to Jacob. After all our misadventures—oh! God, let thy angels come and fan us with their white wings and take us home to glory. I wish I could really give some idea of this eloquent strain. Then all the congregation joined in singing, "Jesus, lover of my soul," after which the money was collected, which paid for the last finishing of our little church, which was a miniature gem being furnished inside with the native woods, cherry and ash, varnished after being put on in alternate stripes, the pulpit was carved and ornamented with cherry wood also, which is now exported and used in large quantities, having become once more a fashionable material for house decorators and furniture dealers. The architect who designed the church lives in Philadelphia, and I procured a photograph of the building which cost only fifteen hundred dollars, without the parlor organ which it contained! After this sum was paid the house was dedicated and then the excursionists and the mountaineers had a basket dinner.

The town of Greensboro has a Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a monthly paper is published as the organ of that organization for North Carolina. One of the lady members is building a hall for the society, and regrets being expressed that they were not more alive to the work. I freely told them I should rejoice if the New Orleans Union was dying out in the same way. We had no newspaper of our own I said, and I had not heard of any lady or gentleman building a hall for us in the whole State of Louisiana where we had fifty unions. It has always been a surprising fact that when women had money for benevolent enterprises that they generally forget their own sex to whom they were ready to bestow it. Apropos of this a true story was related to me of some kind old ladies who were anxious to do some good work before they died. They joined together and furnished from their frugal purses the means of educating a promising young man for the ministry. After some years they went together to hear the young man preach his first sermon and to exult in the result of their generous self-denial. The text selected on this occasion was the apostles injunction, "Let women keep silence in the churches."

GREENSBORO, N. C., Oct. 10, 1885.

Some Words Misused.

Many use "Hily"—an awkward and ill-sounding word—which ought not to be used, since "Hil," as an adverb, is better authorized. Several editors and others have been known recently to write "sage grass," when they meant "sedge grass." "Resurrect" is often used, though there is no such word. We should say "resurge" if we wish to make a verb in harmony with the noun "resurrection," derived from the Latin resurgo. The Bible furnishes a beautiful and faultless illustration of the use of the words "rise," "raise" and "resurrection" in I Corinthians xv. "Un-exceptional" should not be used; "unexceptionable" is the word. Let us not say, "Slug the 'four first verses.' Rather say, the 'first four,' as in eight there would be a "second four." And "stanzas" instead of "verses," since a verse is a single line, so named because men once wrote forth and back, as they plow. "Avocation" is frequently used for "vocation." An avocation is something which calls us away from our regular vocation. "Creditably informed," says one. Rather say, "credibly" informed of a "credit-able" act. "If he had have gone" is a common form of expression, which should be corrected in every case by leaving out the "have." "Meet up with" is often heard, but is inelegant. "Meet with" is enough, and "meet" alone is generally best. "A one" is proper—not "an one," since "one" is pronounced as if it were spelled w-u-n. "A" should be used before consonant sounds, and "an" before vowel sounds. Among many adverbs often misplaced "only" is especially to be noted. "Graduate" is sometimes misapplied. We should not say a student "graduates," but "is graduated," or "graduated," by the trustees. The students are graduated, the college graduates them. It seems desirable to use the word "marry" in a similar manner, and to say Miss Martin "was married" to Mr. Allison, and the Rev. Mr. Jackson "married" them. Otherwise, when it is said that the Rev. Mr. Jackson married Miss Martin, it is uncertain whether he became her husband or united her in marriage to another. To avoid this ambiguity a distinguished Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church proposes and uses "marry" to signify the performing of the marriage ceremony, allowing "marry" to be used either in active or passive form of those who are joined in wedlock. Yet the passive form of "marry" would suffice in speaking of those who are married, while the active form of the same verb fitly expresses the work of the minister. "Marry" is neither euphonious in sound nor classical in form, and is wholly unnecessary if the above proposed distinction be observed in using the word "marry."

W. L. G. H.

The Great Revival at Minden.

Minden, too, has had a revival, and such a revival! Three weeks ago Rev. J. J. Billingsley began a protracted meeting at the Minden Church, preaching the gospel pure and undiluted, with an eye single to the glory of God in the upbuilding of Zion and without fear of men. Throughout the meeting the sermons were pungent, pointed and sometimes exhorting. On the third day Rev. J. T. Sawyer, P. E., stepped in to hold his Quarterly Conference and remained long enough to preach eight sermons and to see some twenty-odd become applicants for church membership. After the departure of Bro. Sawyer the morning prayer meetings were turned over to the lay members so that the preacher might economize his strength for the night services. The Holy Spirit was, indeed, with us. The house was crowded each night, and after the first few sermons it was a touching sight to see so many prostrating themselves before the altar as seekers of peace and pardon in the religion of our Savior. Many times during the meeting not only was the altar filled with penitents, but also was the front bench and the "amen" corners and all the available floor space around the railing. It is everywhere said that the Lord has not visited Minden in such power in very many years—some say not since the war. Twelve joined the church on one night and ten on another. The new converts number among them nearly all of the better element of the young people, of some of whom it may be truly said that they "came to scoff, but remained to pray." It is a healthful sign that the new converts went immediately to work to bring their fellows within the fold; and, indeed, much of the success of the meeting was due to the labors of the young men.

The Lord has done much for Minden. It is no small thing that "the meeting" is the all-absorbing topic of conversation on the street and in the stores. It is no trill that young people organize and traverse the town, Bible in hand, and strive to point sinners to Christ. It is no small matter that when called upon aged sisters, whose locks are fast whitening for a not far distant grave, cheerfully make their first public prayer. It is not an insignificant thing that when a voluntary prayer is called for the audience is not upon their knees before the fervent petition comes swelling from the lips of—not a strong man, but a timid, shrinking young lady. It is something that a Young Men's Christian Association is established with a large roll of earnest young men—no ladies; something that the church roll is doubled; something that the preacher has in cash and subscription nearly forty per cent. in excess of his Conference collections. This will serve as a key to what the Lord has done for us.

The exact number of accessions, I believe, is fifty-nine, and it was a noble sight to see these, in about equal numbers, taken into the church on two successive Sabbaths. Our gratitude is due to several of our Baptist friends for interest, good will and co-operation in the meeting. May the Lord bless and forward his cause everywhere! J. W. P.

MINDEN, LA., Oct. 5, 1885.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, New York, on Thursday, October 1, 1885, the Hon. John Lay, vice-president, in the chair.

Devotional services were conducted by Secretary Hunt.

Letters were presented from various correspondents in foreign lands: from Rev. C. B. Newton, of Louisiana, announcing the transfer of Scriptures from the mission press to the Punjab Bible Society; from Rev. T. S. Smith, of the Ceylon mission of the American Board; from Miss West, of the Central Turkey mission; from Dr. Isaac G. Bliss, mentioning the baptism of a convert from Mohammedanism; from Mr. Loomis, about his proposed trip to Corea; from Mr. McKim, reporting success in the sale of Scriptures in Cuba, and from Mr. Prince, with cheering words of the results of colportage last summer between Irkutsk and Yakutsk.

Grants and consignments of books for colportage and for sale and distribution in the United States and in foreign lands were made to the value of about $4,300. This includes 1,500 copies of the Ebon New Testament for the Marshall Islands. Funds were also granted to the amount of $1,500, the same being a supplementary grant to the Russian Bible Society for colportage in Russia.

It having been announced that intelligence had been received by cablegram of the death of Lord Shaftesbury, the president of the British and Foreign Bible Society, the corresponding secretaries were requested, on behalf of the managers of this society, to prepare and forward a letter of sympathy with the British and Foreign Bible Society in their great bereavement.

Two auxiliary societies were recognized in Dakota Territory, one in the State of Missouri and one in Kansas.

The total receipts for September were $22,551 01. The number of volumes issued from the Bible House during the same month was 60,980.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1885.

THIS SHALL BE IMMANUEL'S LAND.

BY MISS LAYN.

Native land, thy wondrous story
Sounded abroad through all the earth,
Thou art the home of freedom's birth,
Teaching truth to every nation
Welcome world to every land,
Thou hast still a noble mission,
This shall be Immanuel's land.

From thy broad Atlantic harbor
Where the thronging thousands wait,
To the West whose sunset glows
Floods Pacific's Golden Gate,
O'er the blooming plains and prairies,
O'er the mountain summits grand,
Every breeze the message carries,
This shall be Immanuel's land.

Rivers from their distant sources
On through forest wild and free,
Sweeping to their mighty courses
Bear the things to the sea;
Echoed by the low waves dashing
On the sunny Southern strand,
Back to lakes in sunlight flashing,
This shall be Immanuel's land.

Dusty hands from fetters lifted,
Savage tribes that friendly live,
Call to us so richly gifted,
Tell us of a Savior's love;
Bound in chains of superstition
Slavish yoke and cruel hand,
Break their bonds of dark oppression,
Make this now Immanuel's land.

While the Christian footstep follows,
Lo! they crowd our open doors,
Vain shrines and heathen altars
Rise upon Columbia's shores,
Hate to tell the gospel story,
Heed the Master's last command,
He shall come to reign in glory,
This shall be Immanuel's land.

Sunday-School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson V.

NOVEMBER 4, 1885.—11 KINGS III, 14-26.

DEATH OF ELISHA.
GOLDEN TEXT: "He being dead, yet speaketh."
Hebrews 11, 4.

HOME READINGS.
MON. Death of Elisha. II Kings xiii, 14-26.
TUE. Death of Moses. Deuteronomy xxxiv, 1-12.
WED. Death of Aaron. Numbers xx, 22-29.
THUR. Death of Joshua. Joshua xxiv, 26-33.
FRI. Death of David. I Chronicles xxii, 29-33.
SAT. Death of Stephen. Acts vii, 54-60.
SUN. Destruction of the Temple. I Cor. xv, 12-26.

This lesson considers the closing scenes of a remarkable career. Israel continued to sin under Jehoshaphat in the days of Jehu; but the new king did occasionally humble himself before God. At all events, he had some just appreciation of the virtue and power there was in a good man's life and ministry like Elisha. No doubt the condition of Israel would have been far worse but for his quiet labors and godly intercessions.

14 v.—The prophet's sickness.—At an advanced age—probably ninety years—and after more than sixty years of service as a prophet of the Lord, Elisha composes himself for his last sleep. He was "fallen sick," and passed away in the order of nature with bodily disease. This harmonizes with his natural, quiet, gentle ministry. And at his bedside a nation weeps, represented by the sorrowing king. He knew how the country had been blessed and saved by his prayers, and dreaded the result of his death. Even rulers feel more secure when they have humble prophets to pray. But this is another illustration of the fact that God's servants are more highly appreciated in death than in life. When about to pass away their true value is recognized.

15-19.—The prophet preaching on his death-bed. Elisha's dying thoughts were for the prosperity of Israel. The prophetic spirit was the last to fade, and his farewell words to the king were a promise of deliverance from the Syrians. The use of how and arrows in the king's hand was a symbolic act designed to indicate the victories Israel were to gain and, furthermore, to show that the Lord's presence would abide after the prophet's death. His own hands placed upon the king's hands was designed to show that it was not alone in the skill and strength with which the weapons were used that the success would be assured, but in the presence and power of God. On this passage Wordsworth moralizes beautifully as follows: "We put our hands on the how when we take the word of God into our hands, and we discharge arrows from the bow when we send forth missiles of that word against the enemies of our faith. Christ himself desires to put his hand upon our hand in order that we may draw the bow aright." The arrow was shot eastward to indicate the place of Joash's victories—the scenes of recent Syrian successes. They were to recover lost territory and regain fallen prestige. And so the dying prophet put life and courage in the armies of Israel.

After assuring the king of his overthrow of the Syrians the prophet directed him to take other arrows and "smite upon the ground." The fact that he did not use all his arrows, but only smote upon the ground thrice, betrayed the king's weakness of faith. His slack hand indicated an incomplete conquest. Our whole strength and energy must be put into the Lord's work to claim his guarantee of success. And so the prophet chided the king and showed him how his unfaithfulness had limited the Divine goodness.

20.—The prophet's death. He passed away, not as he had seen Elisha—in a chariot of fire—but by the slow processes of fatal disease. And so there are different ways for us to pass out of this world; but, if faithful, we shall go up to a common blessedness. He was buried with becoming respect. Josephus says he was honored with a magnificent funeral.

21.—Miracle of the prophet's bones. The Moabites, robbing eastward of the Dead Sea, had greatly increased in strength, and began a predatory war upon Israel. So in the spring they poured their invading hands into the country. While a company were out burying a man they spied a band of these marauding Moabites, and, in order to escape them, hastily dropped the corpse into the wrong grave. The graves were not pits in the ground, but caves or cells in the rock. When the corpse touched the bones of the Prophet Elisha, he revived and stood upon his feet. This incident furnishes boundless field for speculation and homiletic teaching. Its primary significance doubtless was to show the eternity of truth and perpetual influence of a holy life.

The closing verses record the fulfillment of prophecy—how the Lord kept his word as spoken by the mouth of his prophet.

Alcoholic Heredity—A Few Quotations.

BY HON. W. H. GOODALE.

"Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children unto the third and to the fourth generation." (Exodus xxxiv, 7.)

"Drunk women bring forth children like unto themselves." (Aristotle.)

"One drunkard begets another." (Plutarch.)

"Another potent agency in vitiating the quality of the brain is habitual intemperance, and the effect is far oftener witnessed in the offspring than in the drunkard himself. His habits may induce an attack of insanity where the predisposition exists; but he generally escapes with nothing worse than the loss of some of his natural vigor and hardihood of mind. In the offspring, however, on whom the consequences of the parental vice may be visited to the third, if not to the fourth, generation, the cerebral disorder may take the form of intemperance, or idiosyncrasy, or insanity, or vicious habits, or impulses to crime, or some minor mental obliquities." (Dr. Ray, Mental Hygiene, p. 44.)

"Dr. S. G. Howe, in a report to the Massachusetts Legislature, on 'Idiocy,' says: 'By pretty careful inquiry as to the number of idiots of the lowest class, whose parents were known to be temperate persons, not one-quarter can be considered. But this terrible fact is more significant in what it points to. If so many cases idiocy were produced, in vastly how many more is there reason to believe that degeneration, falling short of this recognized status, resulted.'" (Pittman, Alcohol and the State, p. 56.)

"Under the influence of these poisonous agents there have been produced perversions so great in the functions of the nervous system that in the result, as we have demonstrated, are the true degenerates of the present time, whether in influence direct from the poisonous agent or by the transmission of hereditary power in the child." (Morel des Degenerescences de l'Espece Humaine.)

"We have a far larger experience of the results of habitual alcoholic excess than we have in regard to any other 'nervine stimulant,' and all such experience is decidedly in favor of the hereditary transmission of that acquired perversion of the normal nutrition of the nervous system which it has induced. That this manifests itself sometimes in congenital idiocy, sometimes in a predisposition to insanity, which requires but a very slight exciting cause to develop it, and sometimes in a strong craving for alcoholic drinks, which the unhappy subject strives in vain to resist, is the concurrent testimony of all who have directed their attention to the inquiry." (Dr. Carpenter, Contemporary Review.)

"It is remarkable that all the diseases arising from drinking spirituous or fermented liquors are liable to become hereditary even to the third generation, increasing, if the cause be continued, till the family becomes extinct." (Darwin.)

"The facts and considerations just named make clear the sad truth that the children of parents whose systems were tainted by alcoholic poison do start in life under great disadvantage. While they inherit strong animal propensities and morbid appetites and tendencies constantly craving indulgence, they have weak restraining faculties. Their temptation is greater and their power of resistance is less than in children of purer stock. They are, therefore, more likely to fall into the pauper or criminal class." (Report of Mass. Board of State Charities.)

"It entails diseased appetites and enfeebled constitutions upon offspring." (Report of Nat. Med. Association.)

"Once in a while one overcomes the bad tendency he has received from drunken parents—once in a while one struggles up out of the poverty and degradation of a drunken home; but the tendencies of drunkenness are to keep right on multiplying their fatal effects from father to son." (Nobis Law and the Liquor Traffic, p. 15.)

"In communities where take wine, as a general custom, there exists a system of breeding the custom, which is not dispelled in one nor completely in two generations. This is a peculiarity of the action of alcohol on the nervous organization, or on that essence of nervous organization subtler than the mere nerve-matter into which the impressions are instilled, that the impression it makes remains and is transmitted, like feature and taste and disease, from the parent to the child." (Dr. Richardson, Results of Researches on Alcohol, p. 7.)

"There lies behind it an hereditary crave, which makes the whole life of thousands one long scene of anguish." (Canon Farrar, Talks on Temperance, p. 171.)

"No vice is more hereditary than intemperance. I believe that the more habit of an individual rarely produces this condition (insanity), but that it is usually the result of the baneful heritage entailed on their descendants by intemperate progenitors, the vice of one generation becoming the weakness of the next, liable to be evoked at any time by (indulgence in) the parental vice, and thus bringing a double curse." (Dr. Fellowes, p. 80.)

"Not one of the transmitted wrongs, physical or mental, is more certainly passed on to those yet unborn than the wrongs that are inflicted by alcohol." (Dr. Richardson, Canton Lectures, p. 178.)

"With the single exception of hereditary predisposition, intemperance is by far the most fruitful of all the causes of brain disease, and even hereditary predisposition is often but another name for parental intemperance." (Dr. Fellowes, medical sup't Glamorgan Co. Asylum, before the Physiological Section of British Medical Ass'n, in London.)

"No vice is more hereditary than intemperance." (Ibid.)

"The offspring of the confirmed drunkard will inherit either the original vice or some of its countless protean transformations. * * * As a rule, none can escape the inevitable law written in the most hidden recesses of our nature * * * that the children do suffer for the sins of the parent even to the third and fourth generation." (Klamm's Physical Problems, p. 82.)

"To recapitulate: In the foregoing paper I have endeavored to show that inebriety in parents is a frequent cause of the insanity of their children, because drunkenness produces a transient insanity even in a healthy brain, chronic drunkenness produces organic brain diseases, bringing in their train impairment of the memory, inactivity of the reason, a weakening of the will and a loss of the natural affections, also moral perversions and vicious propensities, and, finally, unmistakable diseases of the mind and nervous system—all of which are capable of transmission to children; that the children of inebriate parents inherit diseases such as epilepsy, hysteria and idiocy, or, if not actual diseases, nervous systems which are abnormally responsive to every form of disturbing influence and are easily disordered; that between the ages of twenty and forty-five insanity is liable to be developed in the children of inebriates, and that insanity of this type is recovered from imperfectly or not at all; and, finally, that, however much people may differ as to the expediency of 'prohibition,' so called, in the present state of public sentiment, there should be no difference of opinion among thinking men as to the right and duty of the State to take strenuous measures to prevent the transmission of an inebriate heredity to children." (Hy. M. Hurd, sup't Mich. Asylum for Insane, pub. in Union Signal, for August 6, 1885.)

We may be permitted to suggest to all temperance workers—and may their number be greatly increased!—the propriety of saving this compilation of authorities for future use.

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 21, 1885.

Breakers.

There is no object in the world that will awaken in the soul emotions of grandeur, and arouse the sense of the beautiful therein, more effectively than a view of the ocean. The rolling surf, light, quivering spray and vast expanse of water all tend to enliven the finer feelings of our nature. But the breakers! I always thought them attractive and interesting. Did you ever stand on the beach and watch them as they came landward crowned with foam and spray? Rushing madly after each other, like so many unbridled steeds, they toss, tumble, gambol "and fill the air with roar of mingled noises." Urged rapidly and heedlessly onward, as though animated by some restless spirit from the caves of ocean, they break in dashing reverberations on the shore of shell and sand, and here end their wild career. Should the day be fair, and the sun's rays fall upon the waste of waters, turning foam and spray into liquid diamond and pearl, and softening the rough outline of the shore by its magical touch, the scene is indeed beautiful. If clouds hang in a somber drapery above, then there is a strange, wild, almost savage aspect about the view, and the sound of wind and wave becomes monotonous and dreary. These waves from the grand old ocean, majestic and towering, now transformed into noisy, garrulous breakers, perhaps, may contain a lesson. Let us see. "Consider the lilies." "Lift up your eyes and look upon the fields" ripe for the harvest. "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your heavenly Father," etc. These were the Master's modes of teaching. Earth, air and ocean are filled with lessons; but in our blindness we heed them not, in our deafness nature's voices are dumb. But he spent his life mainly after his chief work began by the seaside among "fisher folk," and Galilee's waters and shores illustrated many weighty truths.

"Breakers ahead!" the mast-man's warning cry, has often been used as an admonition to "point a moral" or adorn something, perchance, not so entertaining as a tale. Surely there are shoals and shallows enough in the sea of life on which many a goodly ship has stranded to frequently raise this warning. But I can not stop here. Look ahead, brother man, sister woman, you can easily distinguish the foaming, dangerous breaker from the deep sea wave, where there is safe sailing. So, by the grace of Christ and the Spirit's light, a vision is given to see and love the good, to hate and shun the evil. Some church members are like breakers on a cloudy day. No light of a present, loving, abiding experience falls athwart their pathway, and by its effulgent glory turns dispensations of God and afflictions sore into spray of diamond and pearl. The clouds above are never lifted, the shadows never flee away, hollow murmuring, discontented, living on the dry husks of last year's experience, seldom or never using the means of grace, and wondering why there is so little depth among the shoals where they are floundering. If a real ocean billow, and only checked in its course by some reef afar from land, the wave may rush over the obstacle and still roll onward. But if the shore line is just beyond, it can only break on that and perish. So surmount the barrier if possible. If not, you, too, shall perish.

How these "land breakers" roar and sputter when the man of God, called and commissioned to spread the gospel, endeavors to impress upon their shallow nature the great duty incumbent upon them of doing likewise by giving to missions! Ah! what a touch-tone is this! How it reveals character! It will show the difference between a hilly and a breaker. It is "what I have known and felt" in the mighty depths of God's fathomless, boundless love—"what I have done" for preacher and church and missions in days gone by. As if any of these could live and thrive by benevolence a decade old! Neither shall the souls of these misguided ones live and flourish upon experiences long since passed away. Sometimes the earnest, direct words of the preacher arouse their indignation, and they become "raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame." Again, his words have as little effect as the has upon the adamantine crags. Better an indignant, angry man than one asleep, for the former may listen to reason when passion subsides. The latter is too often a hopeless case. It requires a steady hand and clear head at the helm to steer amid these breakers. Patience, courage, with faith undimmed, with a vision that can soar above the dash and turmoil and see beyond the calm, crystal waters of the sea by the throne of God—these are the requisites to carry one through safe and sure. No breakers dash at the foot of the throne or die along the shores of the sea of life.

"Break, break, break! On thy cold gray stones, O sea!"

S. J. DAVIES.

"Mine Opinion" of the Change of Name.

Presumably, every brother who writes thinks that he has touched the key note to the question under consideration, and writes to set the vexed question at rest. This case, however, is exceptional. This question will not rest. It is worse than "Banche's Ghost."

The proposed change of name will be "left," but other propositions will take its place. "Methodist Church," "Methodist Episcopal Church, South," "Methodist Episcopal Church," "American Wesleyan Methodist Church," "Wesleyan Methodist Episcopal Church" and "Episcopal Methodist Church" might either suit the case of some, but neither is likely to suit all. The step "in the beginning" was on the word Episcopal, and our brethren in the North has kept it there. Their views of the office of a Bishop are very different from ours, and are rapidly leading them in the direction of that form of our heresim, known as diocesan episcopacy. "The Bishop of Atlanta," "The Bishop of New Orleans," etc., are beginning to be common forms of expression. And why not, since the Conference of 1781 exulted over the organization of a church having an episcopal form of government? Episcopacy was merely differential. The "Protestant Episcopal Church" was in existence, and since it was differentiated from another church having an episcopal form of government by the prefix "Protestant," so this new organization must be differentiated from it by the prefix "Methodist." (Refer to "Bangs, Ashbury's Notes and Stevens.")

If the church is distinctively Episcopal, then "Methodist Episcopal Church" should be the name, for it is an Episcopal Church—in every sense, and of the fullest proportions—organized by the Methodists. But if the church be distinctively Methodist, let it be so expressed in the arrangement of the adjectives. If it is a "Methodist Church" differentiated from another "Methodist Church" in its government, but identical in its doctrines, then it must be an "Episcopal Methodist Church" because the episcopacy is the chief difference. Take the other forms of episcopal government, and on comparison it will be seen that we have, as Mr. Wesley intended, rather "an itinerant general superintendence" than an episcopacy. Our Bishops are such ex-officio and not ordinaries. They are Bishops for life or good behavior, not "lord's over God's heritage." While they are supreme in the matter of appointing preachers and "planning circuits," they are, in almost all else, utterly powerless. Why have a name so arranged as to show something on paper—episcopal dignity and power—which never existed in fact and which our church abhors as cordially as the Lord abhors sins? "Methodist Episcopal Church." What sort of a church is that? A "Methodist Church." What sort of a "Methodist Church?" A "Methodist Episcopal Church." Ob, I understand. It is an Episcopal Church, similar to the Protestant Episcopal Church, only it was organized by the Methodists. No, no. We attach no importance to the episcopal features of our church, only in so far as we think that form of government most scriptural, and it furnishes us an admirable itinerant general superintendency. "Then you belong to the Methodist Church?" Yes. "There are several Methodist Churches, e. g., the Wesleyan Methodist, the Protestant Methodist, the Canadian Methodist, the Congregational Methodist, etc. Do you belong to one having the form of government which these have?" No. I belong to one having an episcopal form of government. "Then you belong to the Episcopal Methodist Church." I move a change of phraseology to suit the facts in the case.

Baton Rouge, Louisiana. J. A. PARKER.

"Rights and Privileges of Laymen."

MR. EDITOR: The only subject for discussion between Bro. Sullivan and myself is as to whether laymen could be of any service to the church by being admitted into the Bishop's cabinet. I think they could. He thinks they could not. I believe the Bishop frequently needs information relative to preachers and charges which he can not obtain from presiding elders. I. Sometimes they do not know themselves, and it is exceedingly difficult to give information on any subject about which we know nothing. 2. I am not sure, but it is sometimes the case that presiding elders purposely withhold facts which the Bishop ought to know in order to make such appointments as will be most conducive to the glory of God, to the good of the preacher and people. Presiding elders are like other men. They have their likes and dislikes. Their sympathies for and prejudices against. These personal feelings I imagine are not always communicated to the Bishop. The appointments are made by the Bishop, he looking through the beloved spectacles of the presiding elder. Now I maintain that with a layman in the cabinet who is acquainted with all the facts, this state of affairs would be greatly remedied, and the appointments be much more satisfactory. Bro. Sullivan says, "Ours is a connectional itinerant system in which every part is to be served in reference to the best interests of the whole, and a layman is incompetent under such a system; he simply can not have the information and that freedom from local bias which will enable him to set for the whole." If the good of the whole body is to be subserved, why exclude much the larger part from participation? Is it possible that an intelligent layman in direct intercourse with the masses is incompetent to obtain as much needed information as a presiding elder who associates mainly with the preachers? If the layman possesses the fidelity admitted by Bro. Sullivan, would he not avail himself of the facilities for obtaining this information? I think he would. Bro. Sullivan seems to think he would not. The question can easily be settled by trying him out. If he should fail, invite him out. If he prove unworthy, he need trouble the church but four years. But Bro. Sullivan himself would desire his continuance, I think, just as all desire him to continue in the Annual and General Conferences.

Bro. Sullivan introduces the action of the General Conference on the subject of electing presiding elders to prove that the introduction of laymen into the Bishop's cabinet would require "a radical change in the fundamental law of our church." This, however, I think, is not apropos. But if it were, I submit that it has never been decided thus by our ecclesiastical courts, and those courts might decide against the views of Bro. Sullivan. And, indeed, I do not remember that the question of "lay representation" in the Bishop's cabinet was ever presented to the General Conference. If not, the vote on the election of presiding elders would hardly be regarded as an expression of the views of that body relative to "lay representation" in the cabinet. If Bro. Sullivan will produce one instance in which the General Conference voted directly against the representation for which I contend, I will acknowledge the fact; though that will by no means settle the question of the propriety or advantage to be gained by such representation. I still believe that laymen ought to be represented in the cabinet and am well satisfied that in ten years from to-day that "right" will be accorded them. And, further, that the change in our polity will be regarded favorably and highly appreciated both by the industry and laity, and will mark an epoch of great prosperity in our branch of Methodism.

If, however, it should not, I expect to hold on to the old church which I joined more than thirty-seven years ago. For what little I am, or even may be religiously, I am indebted under God to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and in that church I expect to remain. I love Methodism intensely, and am, therefore, anxious to have all the brakes removed in order that it may be more prosperous than ever, and I will patiently await the grand result. As the matter now stands, neither the preacher nor the layman has any representation in the Bishop's cabinet. I believe both should have representation there, and will ultimately have it accorded them.

THOS. J. UPTON, NATCHITOCHEE, LA., Oct. 9, 1885.

From the Work.

FOREST AND MORTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have had glorious revivals at four churches on this island—thirty-eight accessions and thirty children baptized. In two instances whole "households" were taken into the fold. Many lukewarm ones were warmed into new religious life. I have yet to hold a meeting at Forest and Morton, and I am hoping and praying for glorious results. O Lord, wonderfully revive thy work at those places. We have succeeded in closing the saloons at the places mentioned.

GEO. MANHOFF, P. C.

COLUMBUS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We closed our last Friday a good meeting at Andrew Chapel, which resulted in a glorious revival of religion in the church, the reclamation of backsliders and the conversion of three souls. Several young converts who had been received into the church previous to the meeting worked faithfully and often led the public prayer, doing a great deal of good. The revival spirit has been abroad throughout the circuit, and as a result we have six regular prayer meetings and several Sabbath-schools, which will be kept up throughout the winter. We have reasons to believe that the circuit is on a better basis spiritually. The collections ordered by the Annual Conference will be met in full. The Columbus circuit has the resources to make one of the very best circuits in the North Mississippi Conference.

HERSLEY R. TUCKER.

BRANDYWINE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." We closed our fifth and last protracted meeting for this year on Brandywine circuit last Tuesday. The visible results to date are: Seventy conversions, fifty accessions, thirty family altars erected, one lively class meeting and three additional prayer meetings. During the year we have licensed five men to preach the gospel. Three of them are from one church, viz., Rehobeth, in which community there has been a prayer meeting kept up regularly for about fifteen months. We were assisted in our meetings by Bros. Powell, Skipper, O'Quinn, C. W. Campbell, Jr., and C. W. Campbell, L. E. We expect to bring up all our assessments in full by Conference with several new subscribers for our beloved NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I have more hope of a young convert when I can get him to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

IRA H. ROBERTSON, P. C.

NEWTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We think we can truthfully say that there has been some improvement in the spiritual state of this circuit this year. We are truly sorry that the improvement has not been sufficient to revivify the meetings. Several of the brethren have taken up family prayer. Those of the brethren at whose houses the are used to sound on the Sabbath prepare their wood now on Saturday for the Sabbath. We have prevailed upon a number of families to quit cooking on the Sabbath, and I assure you that it does my soul good to eat cold victuals on the Lord's Day that was cooked on the Saturday before. There is no cooking at the parsonage on the Sabbath. We have had several accessions to the church; twenty at Newton. Not many copies of the ADVOCATE are taken, but we hope this will not be the case long. Our protracted meeting at Hickory will come off the fourth Sabbath in this month, and we would be glad to have you with us then.

I. L. FRUEHLER.

MARVIN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We let our charges, Marvin circuit, on Monday evening after rather a fatiguing day's labor, having preached twice. Arrived at Byron on Monday evening at four o'clock, where we met Bro. Caldwell and other friends with whom we spent a delightful evening. Left on the o'clock train for New Orleans. I had the good fortune of finding the train on his way to Johnson station, make a couple happy by making the one. Seven o'clock brought us to the city. I found my family at No. 10 Carondelet street, in good health and spirits. We have had so far a good work on our circuit, a fine revival, three appointments on one hundred and seventy-five and one hundred and fifty-five, and a good number of additions. Everything is well except the finances. We have

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.
—The Short Line—
FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS
—To All Points—
North and East and in the Northwest
Low Rates and Quick Time on
Freight Traffic.
THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE.
Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains with Pullman Palace Cars.
—FROM—
NEW ORLEANS
—TO—

Meridian,
Birmingham,
Chattanooga
and Cincinnati.

---

Leaves N.O. 12.30 P.M. Arrives N.O. 11 P.
N.O. 12.30 P.M. Leaves N.O. 10 A.

---

Freight and Passenger Depots, Press street and (Levee
Freight and Ticket Offices,
24 and 36 St. Charles street, N.

H. COLLEMAN,
General Freight and Pass's Agent,
Queen and Crescent Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Oh.

BARNARD BROWN,
Commercial Agent,
New Orleans.

THE GREAT
Kennesaw and Shenandoa
Valley Route.
(East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R.)

Double Daily Trains.

No Change of Cars to the Springs at Summer Resorts of Tennessee and Virginia.

NEW ORLEANS TO WASHINGTON WITHOUT CHANGE—EQUIVALENT TO NO
CHANGE TO NEW YORK.

Fifteen Hours Quickest Route to Warm Springs,
N. C., at Staunton, Va.

Baggage Checked to Destination.
Trains leave New Orleans 7:45 A. M. and 7:00 P. M.

For Schedules, Circulars, Spring's' Guide and general information call on or address,
J. G. ANDREWS, Gen'l Supt'n Agent,
135 Common St., New Orleans
CHAS. N. KIGHT, Trav. Pass. Agent,
Houston, Tex.
H. W. WRIGHT, Gen'l Pass. Agent,
Knoxville, Tenn.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOVT.
TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route

C. B. & Q. R. R.

The Only Through Line, with its own track, betw
Chicago, Peoria and DENVER
Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junction, Atchafalaya
Kansas City. It traverses all of the six Great States
ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO
With branch lines to their important cities and towns. It runs every day in the year with one of three elegantly equipped through trains over its tracks between
Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchafalaya,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and St. Louis,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,

St. Louis and St. Paul
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha
Direct connections made at each of these points with through trains to and from points on its irroaches.
At each of its several Eastern and Western terminal points, it has Grand Union Depot through trains to and from all points in the States and Canada. It is the principal line to San Francisco, Portland & City of M.
For tickets, fares, baggage, etc., apply to representatives of the Burlington Route, call on any Agent in the United States or Canada, or add
J. F. POTTER, 1st V. P. & Gen. Mgr. Chicago
H. J. STORR, Asst. V. P. & Gen. Mgr. St. Louis.
PERCEVAL LEWIS, Gen. Pass. Agent.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HENNING.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1885.

Sunday last was the bi-centenary anniversary of the signing, by Louis XIV., of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

This from the mission field ought to arouse every sleeper in Zion and encourage every faint-hearted Christian who lacks faith in our foreign work: "The Rev. D. W. Carter, presiding elder of the Puebla district, in Central Mexico, baptized sixty persons during the last quarter."

In forwarding an obituary for our columns, Rev. D. C. Laugford writes a personal note to the editor, and makes reference to his work as follows: "We are getting on well on the Lauderdale circuit. Have had three good revivals. This is my fourth year on the work, so a move this winter is inevitable for at least two preachers."

Even the great publishers get occasionally a little unweakened dynamite. A wrathful correspondent of Harper & Brothers, who had an unaccepted manuscript returned to him, thus replied: "You are a mean set. I did think of naming my baby 'Harper,' and should have done so if my story had been accepted, but now no baby of mine will ever bear the name of Harper. You are all a mean set." Alas! editors have a poor chance for namesakes. One unpublished article will set a father against the proposed name of his child.

The Methodist Times, of London, vigorously defends Mr. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, against the slurs of a hostile press and against the frivolous prosecution in the courts. Already considerable sums are pouring in as a "Defense Fund" to assist the editor in conducting his case through the courts. One man has proposed to give £5,000 himself, and the contributions are from the best classes, and express, as the Times vigorously says, "the moral indignation of good men at the spectacle of a government, which pretends to be Christian, using the public money and the authority of the State to crush a devoted philanthropist, while it does absolutely nothing to put down the vile traffic in little girls."

Some of our exchanges have indulged in elaborate editorial opinion and condemnation of "wire pulling" and other arts of the demagogue in Conferences. We have some knowledge of Methodist preachers and Conference elections, both in the Annual and General Conference, and have never seen this great evil. The offenses against perfect propriety in these matters have been so few and insignificant, we dare say, as to be unworthy of such sweeping unadvisedness. Readers are tempted to suppose the practice is common, whereas it scarcely has a name to live. We are not ready by unprovoked homilies to condone reflections upon preachers. The suspicions of some diseased imagination or sour stomach do not warrant an assault upon the ministry at large. There may be interchange of opinion as to the history and character of men in connection with official position, but only to assist the mind in forming a godly judgment. This is the rule and ruling spirit among Methodist preachers. The exceptions are few and insignificant.

The Playune prefaces a quotation from our article, last week, entitled "An Incentive to Hypocrisy," with these words:

"The fiery Boanerges of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Rev. Dr. Galloway, attacks Judge Hoadly for his assaults on prohibition during the recent Ohio campaign. Dr. Galloway is never afraid to speak his mind on politics, and he always says something worth reading."

We are obliged to our confrere for the intended compliment; but these columns never discuss "politics" in the ordinary acceptance of that term. Our purpose has been, and is, to keep the great question of the legal suppression of the liquor traffic aloof from party politics. Around it we want to rally the moral sentiment of the country without regard to race, color, creed or political affiliations. Our "attack" on Judge Hoadly was not as a Democrat, but a demagogue, inveighing against a moral issue in order to capture the saloon and hoodlum element of the large cities.

Civil Service in the Church.

Nothing is just now more discussed in political circles than the new and popular party shibboleth, "civil service reform." The President is conducting his administration on that line much to the discomfiture of impatient partisans. Each party claims to favor and to be its special champion. The idea is that only men of eminent fitness should be appointed to office. And to secure them an examination is conducted, and certificates of proficiency given to the successful applicants, commending them to the departments for appointment. From this list selection is made to fill vacancies. Then others who have held subordinate positions and evidenced conspicuous expertness are to be advanced to higher places and larger salaries. As much as the doctrine may be ridiculed by strong party men, it is the correct principle according to which governmental affairs ought to be administered. The fact that every clerkship is to be a reward for party service is the bane of popular government. The departments should be conducted in all their inflexible details with the same business methods and conscientious care that men carry into their private affairs. Fitness and proficiency should be the necessary qualifications for appointment. Unfitness and inefficiency should be promptly removed.

Somewhat of the same methods should be transferred into ecclesiastical administration. The church has fiscal and temporal affairs to be conserved, on which her very existence depends. If they are administered carelessly or inefficiently, the kingdom of God has to suffer. Preaching, however scriptural and able, pastoral service, though it be ever so faithful and unflinching, can not atone for lack of fidelity on the part of those appointed "to serve tables." And just there Zion suffers greatest lack. If prompt and approved business methods were introduced into the stewardship of the church, we might hail the millennial morning in the next fifty years. Pastors are embarrassed and fail on this account. Any congregation can soon be trained into liberality and to have a financial conscience void of offense, if in the hands of enterprising, broad-minded and large-hearted stewards. But the church can no more run by its own momentum than a banking house or a mercantile establishment.

It is all important, therefore, to secure the best men for this office. The disciplinary requirements of these brethren are great, and their duties are not easy to discharge. And now that the presiding elders are on the "fourth round," and the stewards for another year are to be elected, this question has an immediate, practical significance and suggestiveness. If any pastor has a steward who complains of the burdens upon the church and apologizes for the penuriousness of the people, he is a good man to leave out. Past position does not of itself entitle one to reappointment. If men are not in sympathy with our work and are lacking in zeal and efficiency, they are unfit for the preacher's cabinet. He wants constitutional advisers who love the church, understand her doctrines and are zealous to support her institutions.

These reflections have been suggested by reading the very interesting letter of "John Merides" in the Baltimore Methodist, of the seventh instant, and extract from which we reproduce:

Reference to the Discipline will aid preacher in charge in determining what men are suitable for the stewardship.

They should be men of sense—"of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the church."

They should be good men—"of solid piety."

Men who are informed respecting Methodist teaching and polity and approve them—"who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline."

They should be men of divine sympathy, for they must "seek the needy and distressed in order to relieve and comfort them."

Men who are jealous for Christ's honor, for they must "inform the preachers of any disorderly persons."

Men who will fear no faces, for they must "tell the preachers what they think wrong in them."

They must make conscience of every duty, one duty being this—"to attend the official meetings and the quarterly meetings."

This is an incomplete catalogue of the qualifications for this office; but the incomplete list is sufficient to prove that not every member of the church is fitted for the office—sufficient to show that a man may well pause before he "entersprises" the work lest he should do so unwisely, indiscreetly, and, therefore, to the hurt of the church if not also to his own hurt.

The meeting at Craps Street German Church continues this week. There were three conversions last week, and the interest increases.

The Law of the Sabbath.

A clergyman in an adjoining State recently preached a sermon on "The Proper Observance of Sunday," which was pronounced by some "very excellent," a synopsis of which was published in a city paper. We have read and reread the carefully prepared synopsis only to regret that such teachings should emanate from a Christian pulpit in these United States. Already our civilization, the glory of which has been a Christian Sabbath, is being menaced and undermined by the loose and false theories of Sunday observance that prevail in Europe. And every voice ought to be raised to resist these secret, subtle encroachments upon the very bulwark of good government and social order. It is true the reverend gentlemen said he would not like to see "the Sunday of Paris or Berlin," but, on the other hand, he did not desire "the Massachusetts Sunday of fifty years ago." Just what this latter was is not stated. We want, therefore, to say that many of the oft-quoted rigors of the New England Sabbath have existed only in imagination. References are frequently made to a certain Massachusetts law which was never a law. It was suggested by Cotton Mather, but never became a statute. And so with much of this idle declaiming against a Puritan Sabbath. Many persons believe that a satire inscribed on a house in Coventry, England, is real history, which said:

"This is the house where the Puritan did dwell,
Who killed his cat on Sunday
For killing a mouse on Sunday."

The clergyman suggests this as a proper observance of the Lord's day:

To me there is a way of keeping Sunday which fulfills the church's precepts, which is reasonable, which is refreshing to the body and soul. First of all, give the first and best part of the day to the worshiping of Almighty God. Then comes the family dinner, which, if I had a home of my own, should be the best of all the week. I would invite the young men to dine with me on that day, and strive in every way to bring out its festive character. After dinner good music should be furnished, and by so doing commemorate from week to week the great doctrine of the Christian Church, the resurrection of our divine Lord. We would advise that friends visit each other, let the hospitable homes rather a little company for their evening meals. Let the young men and women, who, on account of business, are shut out in offices, stores or shops all the week, take a walk, a drive or a sail—all, however, to be done quietly and respectfully, which in the end only help to make them better men and women, and enable them to perform their duties both to God and man in a more acceptable manner.

We are not surprised that a religious teacher who suggests the above as a model of spiritual Sabbath keeping would say that Christians in the time of James I., of England, who "played ball and cricket, danced on the green and, in fact, indulged in all the amusements we generally have confined to week days, on Sunday," were "undoubtedly as good as we." Against just such things and the spirit that prompted them the church of Christ has to contend. Sabbath observance is one of the tests of a true Christian life. We, therefore, repudiate the idea that such desecration as above described entitles the offenders to rank with others who have a higher appreciation of the day who are exhorted to remember and keep holy.

But not with the manner of observance, but with the law of the Sabbath are we most concerned. Whence comes the obligation? By whom is it imposed? And for what purpose? Everything depends upon a satisfactory answer to these inquiries. If the Sabbath was enacted in heaven and its obligations imposed by Divine authority, its proper observance is easily ascertained. But if it is a human arrangement and not a Divine statute—if it is imposed by mere considerations of physical, moral and social good—then my individual preferences or the law of the State can alone bind my conscience and conduct. The minister above quoted takes the latter view, as witness the following:

There is very little said in Holy Scriptures about keeping Sunday. It amounts to about this: That the apostles marked the first day of the week as a day for meeting together to "break bread," for communicating and receiving instructions, for laying up offerings in store for charitable purposes, for occupation in holy thought and prayer. There is not one word said in holy writ about not working on Sunday. The very first notice of anything of the kind is an edict of the Emperor Constantine, in the year 321 A. D., forbidding any other labor than that which was necessary on the Lord's day. We find in the writings of the early fathers a good deal of evidence that it was a day of very considerable feasting, relaxation and amusement. But methinks I hear some one of you say: "There is the fourth commandment—'Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.' In it thou shalt do no manner of work." Yes, I reply; but that is not Sunday, and is no more applicable to our case than if it spoke of Monday or Wednesday. "Why, then," come will say, "do you read the commandment on each Lord's day?" Certainly, beloved—not for the letter of it, but for the spirit; not that you are bound to keep the seventh day of the week any more sacred than the sixth, but because one-seventh of your time is absolutely needed for the rest of your body and the repose of your soul. Our Lord Jesus said, "The Sabbath was made for man," and that is the key to the whole question. I moment that the reason why there was a Sabbath was because the nature of man needed it—because we can not long go on without a period of repose and rest and change. It has been scientifically demonstrated that there must be a regular recurring cessation from labor if physical and mental health are to be preserved. Go into the streets of this city and ask the merchants, choosing, if you like, those who care nothing for religion, and they will tell you if it were not for Sunday they could not carry on their business for ten years; they would break down. The rest of one day is absolutely necessary.

1. The precept, then, to keep one-seventh part of the time as a time of spiritual rest and refreshment is a precept of nature enforced by God's word.

2. The precept to keep the first day of the week holy, and not the seventh, is a precept of the Christian Church, and not of the Bible.

That is what is known as the ecclesiastical theory of the Sabbath—enjoined by authority of the church, but not by Divine law. Of necessity it lowers the sanction of the Sabbath and cheapens its reverence. It is impossible on this theory to have any sacred basis for a holy day for all mankind. One church may bind the consciences of its own members, but not those of another communion.

The true doctrine of the Sabbath is that the Lord's day is founded upon the Sabbath established in Eden, enforced in the ten commandments and reaffirmed by Christ. Any other theory emasculates its authority and degrades it to the level of a human tradition. Our Lord reaffirmed the Sabbath law in language clear and emphatic. It was not a temporary institution provided for the Jewish people, but a Divine statute co-existent with the human family, incorporated into the Decalogue and declared to be authoritative for all time and among all people.

The statement above that the Sabbath law "is no more applicable to our case than if it spoke of Mouday or Wednesday" is dangerously misleading. It provincializes the command of God and destroys its essential significance and sacredness. If the Sabbath law depended upon an exact enumeration of days from the creation, no people or age could be satisfied that they observed the correct day. The calendars of nations differ beside the difference of time in the various degrees of longitude. But that does not affect the integrity and authority of the Sunday law. It was made for man everywhere and for all time.

Other questions suggested by the sermon can not now be considered. This much, however, assures us that every evangelical preacher must begin to thoroughly and practically indoctrinate the people on this subject. Such teachings must be neutralized, or the European Sabbath will be the humiliation of our country.

Three Reasons.

Not in a great while have we found anything more clearly, concisely and convincingly stated than the following from the Christian Intelligencer. It is the whole argument in a nutshell, and is entirely satisfying. The writer was asked why he was not a Baptist. He said he had good reasons for not being one, but did not care to discuss the matter. But, being urged, he expressed his great respect for the Baptist Church, for their zeal in good works, their purity in practices and general enterprise; but he had a threefold objection to their peculiarities. These three reasons we reproduce, and urge their careful study. They are the key to the whole controversy that has too long and unnecessarily vexed evangelical Christians:

1. They give an unreasonable and unsupportable prominence to what is at best only subordinate, since it is a part of the mere ritual of Christianity. Hence we find that the Savior never performed the rite (John iv, 1); that the chiefest of the apostles said that he was sent not to baptize, but to preach the gospel (I Corinthians i, 17); and that when Peter opened the kingdom of Heaven to the Gentile world, and converts received the visible gifts of the Holy Spirit, he did not administer the ordinance himself, but "commanded them to be baptized" (Acts x, 48). If our Lord and his two great apostles came back to earth, they would hardly be Baptists.

2. Our brethren deny the continuity of the church, which yet is as certainly one as the Old Testament and the New constitute one book. By making the membership of the Christian communion radically different from that of the Jewish, they split the body of Christ into two parts, or rather deny that the ancient fellowship which produced Abraham, David and Daniel has any substantial unity with that which produced Peter and John and Paul. Hence they have been heard to say of a very good man after his death, "He was an eminent New Testament believer," as if the faith of Abraham, which Paul praises so highly, were something specifically different from that of modern disciples, and radically inferior.

3. The practice of baptism by immersion overlooks the essential nature of symbols—that is, their representative character. In view of this a few drops of water signify as much as a hoghead, just as anointing oil means no more when it runs down to the skirts of Aaron's robe than when it merely moistens the forehead, and just as the holy communion is the Lord's Supper as really when each partaker takes only a morsel of bread and a sip of wine as it is when all make a full meal. Quantity adds nothing to representative or symbolical character. A single pluck of salt binds a Bedawi oblige to hospitality as much as if he had eaten a bushel of the article. When this principle is disregarded there is no small danger of displacing the symbolical character of the ordinance by a realistic view which assigns to it intrinsic efficacy."

Letter from Bishop Keener.

THE ILLINOIS AND WESTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE—MONTICELLO—UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA.

Our hold upon lower Illinois is far from illusory. From Ashley southward the Southern Methodists are stronger than any other church. We have suffered greatly from one or two bad men who found their way into the ministry several years ago; but from this misfortune our people and the Conference have fully recovered, excepting the loss of a school building of considerable value. Our church and preachers must satisfy a felt want in this region, for we move steadily forward, with an increase this year of 500 members, besides several churches and parsonages. No missionary money has been spent by us on Illinois. Let our Northern brethren mark that.

Young men of much available worth are coming into the Conference on trial each year. The town of Pana entertained us most hospitably. My home was with a generous-spirited Northern Methodist. Many blessings on the kind family! The town is a beautiful village embowered with oaks and maples in the midst of a fertile prairie. On Sabbath morning a collection was raised in the church—$325—which secured a gift of $1,800 from one of our own members, making in all $2,125, which pays up an old debt upon the house of some years' standing. The church is a fine brick edifice, with steeples, very slightly, and had been furnished up for the reception of the Conference.

The outlook of the future is full of promise for this body of devoted Southern Methodists. Some of the old heroes have passed away; but Bro. Hester remains full of hope and fire, though at present only able to rally the faces by his call. The vote on change of name was promptly decided—37 against any change, and 3 for.

The time between the adjournment of this and the meeting of the Western Virginia was thirty-six hours; so by a rapid run through Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky I found myself at four A. M. in the depot of Ashland, Ky., on Wednesday, in company with Bro. L. D. Palmer, of Southern Publishing House. At Pana, Dr. McFerrin was with us long enough to stir the blood of the veterans and the admiration of the recruits. His talking and preaching equally throw an indescribable charm over his audiences difficult to analyze, but universally enjoyed.

The railway always seems direct to the inside traveler; but it was a roundabout trip which started in New Orleans for Illinois, then passed by Cincinnati, via Lexington, to Ashland, and thence to this place—all on one ticket. Eastern Kentucky and Western Virginia form the territory of this border work. It is a region of oil wells and iron ores, of furnaces and nail factories, of wheat and corn and apples. Here is variety of industries enough to secure its population against floods and droughts. But the Conference reports made frequent mention of failure in crops for the past two years. The educational collections were sadly behind. Yet the number of preachers and the general increase in material strength of churches and an increase of 1,200 in membership indicated a considerable advance since '82 and '83. I was able to fill all the work with men who had been raised up in the Conference, and fill it satisfactorily. Some four transfers and as many deaths, I feared would make it necessary to draw help from without; but such was not the case. I was surprised to learn that some of the circuits were composed of a wealthy membership and worth over a million of dollars, even some that sent up a mere trifle for foreign missions. O Lord, how long! What a world of writing, preaching and praying is needed in that direction before our people will be half ready to die! The vote for changing the name stood 47 against, and 10 for; all else tabbed.

I enjoyed the singing, preaching and fellowship of the brethren in both these Conferences despite the care of the cabinet work.

The town of Charlottesville is the site of the University of Virginia. My rest here of two days scarcely afforded me a chance to accept the invitation to preach from the chapel of the university, the Rev. Mr. Taylor. Travel and the work before me, as well as that of the last two weeks, precluded anything by the way additional.

The preacher in charge of our work, Bro. Starr, drove me off to Monticello, the mansion of Mr. Jefferson. We walked around the summit of the hill on which stands overlooking the university and the town, and enjoyed one of the finest prospects I ever saw either in this country or Mexico. The house is a French chateau, and gives one an idea of Mr. Jefferson's career as well as taste. The front entrance is Corinthian in its expression, with columns, pediment, and around the top a balustrade—all in due keeping with the design of a residence. One or two of the trees I could imagine as those planted by him. I did not go in the mansion, though invited, having a horror of all travelling expenses and their obtrusive ways. Besides, I am no special admirer of the author of "that immortal instrument," etc., though I accept him as among the distinguished spirits raised up, it may be, for a great crisis in human affairs.

The University of Virginia is a present a very different institution from its founder's ideal of a university. It is a noble school, with many Christian men occupying its chairs, who honor both the State and their professorships. I had an opportunity to visit the observatory and saw the 26-inch telescope, the largest but one in the world, and its more wonderful mounting. The instrument came from Europe and was turned entirely round by one person in a minute and a half, sweeping the entire horizon. Mr. Stoue, the professor, was very courteous and patient in showing the instrument. I looked at the moon, all aglow in the clear sky, and thought of Calvary College. O, for such a telescope there! But no; never in my day. That honest, God-fearing college in sixty years' hard work has never called up such a response from one of its alumni and, I fear, never will. But we have opened up heaven as well as earth to many a poor student there, as in a reflective lens, and may well in that respect congratulate ourselves even in the presence of the superior advantages for studying astronomy which are here offered.

North Louisiana Notes.

As at other points, so at the Promised Camp Ground our people rallied and gave in cash and subscriptions considered good more than the assessment for Sparta and Saline circuit for the six collections ordered by Conference. This amount to be realized Bro. Johnston feels confident will be something above $150 by the time he goes to Baton Rouge. The camp meeting opened on Friday night with a very practical sermon by Rev. Gilbert McCoy, two preachers; was a season all through of solid comfort and great joy to God's people. There were no itineraries present except the preacher in charge and presiding elder. Leaving the encampment yesterday after dinner we can not report the results of the meeting. The prohibition question comes to a vote in Blueville parish on October 26. Pray for us on the issue.

OCTOBER 7, 1885.

At Mt. Moriah, on the Aracoon circuit, as at other points, a good election was taken, and we have strong hopes that Bro. Cornett will bring up his collections in full. Our next Quarterly Conference, to be held at Oak Ridge Camp Ground, will begin our fourth round; and looking back, we remember the many souls converted and the many sinners quickened by the Spirit, the increased collections subscribed—every dollar of which, we are told, is good—the apt-to-be-forgotten material blessings God has bestowed abundantly upon this Hower district Methodists—as we remember the things we are constrained to "take and take courage." Still we are ourselves the question, How will this pan out on the fourth round? Will the new converts and the increased membership be found at work in the prayer and class meetings?

131 Canal street, New, Orle

Obituaries.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending October 24, 1885.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	63 1/2
Ordinary	64 1/2
Good ordinary	65 1/2
Medium	66 1/2
Good middling	67 1/2
Middling	68 1/2
Fair	69 1/2
Galveston middling	69 1/2
Mobile middling	69 1/2
St. Louis middling	69 1/2

SUGAR.
Superior	11 1/2
Common	11 1/2
Good common	11 1/2
Fair	11 1/2
Good fair	11 1/2
Fully fair	11 1/2
Prime	11 1/2
Strictly Prime	11 1/2
Choice	11 1/2
Seconds	11 1/2
Yellow clarified	6 1/2
Gray clarified	6 1/2
Choice whites	6 1/2
Granulated	6 1/2

MOLASSES.
Syrup	31
Strictly Prime	57
Choice	57
Fancy	57

RICE.
Fancy	54
Choice	54
Prime	54
Good	54
Fair	54
Ordinary	54
Common	54
No. 2	54
Rough	54

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 00
Minnesota patents	5 00
Extra fancy	5 00
Winter wheat patents	5 00
Choice	5 12 1/2
Fancy	5 35
Extra fancy	5 50

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 10
Corn meal	2 40
Grits	3 10
Hominy	3 25

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn:
White	56
Yellow	56
Mixed	56
Oats:
Western	37
Texas rust-proof	37
Barley:
Western	90
Hay:
Choice	20 00
Prime	13 00

PROVISIONS.
Pork:
Mess	9 23 1/2
Prime mess	9 10
Kumps	8 75
Bacon:
Pancake breakfast	9
Shoulders	63
Sides, clear	62
Sides, clear rib	62
Hams:
Sugar-cured	102
Dry salt meat:
Shoulders	41
Sides, clear	6
Sides, clear rib	6

FISH.
Maokeral:
Extra No. 1, in bbls.	15 00
Half bbls.	8 00
No. 1, in bbls.	9 00
Half bbls.	4 50
No. 2, in bbls.	7 50
Half bbls.	4 10

GROCERIES.
Coffee:
Rio, choice	94
Cardova, choice	12
Java, choice	22
Butter:
Western dairy	16
Country	17
Lard:
Choice	63
Trass:
Choice	51
Fair	25
Oil:
Coal, cases	17
Coal, bbls	12
Cotton seed	38
Lard	51

VEGETABLES.
Cabbages:
Western, per crate	10 00
Chicago, per 100	10 00
Potatoes:
Louisiana	1 90
Western	2 30
Kent:
Choice	5 50
Oysters:
Louisiana	2 25
Western	2 40

BALING STUFFS.
Baling:
No. 1	104
No. 2	111
Baling twine:
No. 1	15
No. 2	1 25

SUNDRIES.
Poutry:
Chickens, Western	4 50
Young	2 00
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
Eggs:
Western	17
Southern	18
Wool:
Lake	21
Louisiana	18
Burly	10
Hides:
Green salted	8
Dry salted	11
Staves:
Oak, keels	75 00
Oak, barrels	100 00
Oak, clare	130 00
Oak, hoghead	130 00
Hoop poles:
Hoghead	50 00
Barrels	24 00
Half barrels	10 00
Fertilizers:
Cotton seed	12 00
Neel	23 00
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	2
Sulphuric acid	4
Bone black	34

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 13.—The storm in this city and vicinity has been unusually severe. The tide rose very high. Many cellars on the east side were flooded and rats were driven into the streets by thousands. The wind blew a gale and telegraph wires were prostrated in every direction. Seafaring men anticipate many wrecks along the coast.

BRIDGEPORT, Ill., Oct. 13.—Eight adults and four children left here yesterday for Payson, Utah, to become active members of the Mormon Church. Two of the party were young women and the children were about fifteen years of age. A great deal of feeling has developed against them and the missionaries. The converts have been egged and otherwise maltreated since their baptism into the Mormon faith. The heat men in the country are saying that it is time to stop the proselyting work and if the missionaries return they may be mobbed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—An important measure was adopted at the New York meeting of the Peabody trustees. It will be remembered that fully one half of Peabody bequests consisted of Mississippi and Florida State bonds, amounting to $1,500,000 and the Florida bonds to $300,000. For years past the States of Mississippi and Florida have been receiving their quota of the Peabody fund and applying it to educational purposes. Neither State has paid any interest on its bonds. At this last meeting, therefore, the trustees took the subject under consideration and decided to make no more apportionment for Florida or Mississippi. The Southern States now excluded from participation in the benefits of the fund are Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri, Mississippi and Florida.

Boston, Oct. 13.—The seventy-fifth anniversary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions was observed this afternoon. More than 3000 strangers are in the city to attend the meetings. The total receipts during the year were $51,750, and increase of $120 compared with last year. The annual survey of the work of the American Board shows in fact that there were $200,000 employed in mission work at 931 points, and that at educational institutions under the management of the board 305,112 pupils were being instructed.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 14.—The totals are, Feraker, 32,487; Hoadly, 80,654; Leonard, 886.

MINDEN, La., Oct. 14.—At the Prohibition election held here yesterday 533 votes were polled. The result is 130 majority for license. The election one year ago gave only twenty-four majority for license.

KITTANNING, Pa., Oct. 15.—Diphtheria and typhoid fever are raging with great severity 100 persons are down with these diseases, and fifteen deaths within the last ten days. In several cases whole families have been stricken down. Every precaution is being taken to prevent a spread of the diseases.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 16.—The dengue fever has seriously interfered with the public schools and printing offices of the city by prostrating teachers, editors and printers. It has been somewhat epidemic.

FARMERVILLE, La., Oct. 16.—The election for and against the sale of whisky in the corporation of Farmerville yesterday resulted in a majority by one vote for whisky.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 18.—The Chicago fast freight left here with a double header, and when it reached West Andover, where it was to be sidetracked for the down passenger train, it was discovered that the train had broken in two. The express stopped at Andover Centre to leave some baggage and pulled out again. About a half mile further on the collision between the passenger train and the section of the freight train occurred. Both were going at a high rate of speed. As soon as possible train men were sent to the scene. The engineer and the brakeman were found dead in the debris. The express messenger and baggage master were imprisoned in the wreck, and it was necessary to cut them out.

JENNEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 18.—On the meadows, four miles west of this city, a collision occurred this evening, which resulted in the death of five persons and the injury of several others. The Pacific express train ran into a western-bound emigrant train, which had stopped at the coal chute on the east side of the track bridge, knocking a portion of the latter across the track of the Lehigh Valley road. Shortly afterward a Lehigh Valley train, eastward bound, came thundering along and crashed into the wreck. The dead were all on the emigrant train, as were also the injured. The brakeman of the cattle train was among the victims. The wreck is the most frightful one on the road in years.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 19.—Rev. Dixon Williams closed his revival services in this city last night. The largest audience ever gathered in Little Rock assembled at the Presbyterian Church to hear his closing sermon. He spoke pointedly against prevailing errors and closed by praying for the mayor and city councilmen and others, whom he individually named. There were 225 conversions during the revival.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 19.—Millions of squirrels are emigrating from the Mississippi side over to the Arkansas shore at a point commencing five miles below Memphis and extending down for twenty miles. They are swimming the Mississippi river and evidently making for more elevated ground in Arkansas. Thousands are being killed by farmers, who by reason of their great numbers, use sticks instead of guns. A similar emigration of squirrels occurred in 1872.

Bismarck, Oct. 19.—Joseph Riggs, who, with a party of friends, was hunting in the rocks, was killed in an encounter with a grizzly bear on Friday last. He shot the bear before he was killed himself. After Riggs had discharged his last cartridge the wounded bear rushed at him, and a death struggle ensued. Drawing his long knife, Riggs stabbed the animal in the heart, but not until he himself had been disemboweled. His body was found by his companions several hours after the fatal struggle and was taken through here last night en route to his former home in Canada.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Lord Salisbury officially announces that Parliament will be dissolved Nov. 17.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 14.—A telegram was received this morning from Lieut. Gordon, commander of the Hudson Bay expedition steamer Alert, which was sent out last spring by the Marine Department to bring back parties of observers, left there last year and to put fresh observers there. Jules, of Hairy face, one of the station hands, died of yellow fever last June, but all the others are well.

ROME, Oct. 15.—The Italian government has received advice confirming the report of the death of Osman Digna. The battle lasted twelve hours. After the death of Osman Digna, the rebels scattered, but continued to fight bravely. Several Abyssinian generals were slain.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The fall of exchange and the low price of silver are stimulating the exportation of wheat from India. Enormous shipments are pending. Vessels have already been chartered for the shipment of 100,000 tons.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Chamber approves free trade, and urges foreign countries to abandon the protective system, adding, "If they refuse the British government must impose duties on goods from such countries."

SOFIA, Oct. 17.—In regard to the collective note of the Ambassadors, urging Bulgaria to refrain from hostilities, the government, after mature reflection, has decided to reply that it will accept the advice of the powers in view of the decision of the government will recall a majority of the Bulgarian troops, leaving a small garrison on the frontier pending the decision of the powers in regard to the fate of Roumelia.

DUBLIN, Oct. 18.—At a meeting of tenant farmers at Westport, to-day, a resolution was adopted demanding that the government introduce in Parliament a bill similar to the American homestead law.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 18.—During the races here fifteen horses fell in one race, out of forty-one starters. One jockey was killed and seven were badly injured.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 18.—This afternoon while the wife of Jean Baptiste Rouilly, residing ten miles from here, accompanied by her two-year-old child, was feeding her fowls, a large hawk, the little one off in its talons. The neighbors turned out with shotguns, but the only effect of their firing was to accelerate the eagle's flight. The bird alighted on a barn a mile away and was seen to make several strokes at the child with its beak. The neighbors had got pretty close and succeeded in frightening the eagle away. The child's body was recovered, but life was extinct, a hole having been made in its skull and a portion of the brain devoured by the bird.

President Cleveland and His Cabinet.

I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass., will send to any address in the United States or Territories, for fifty cents in stamps, with the order, a beautiful, life-size stone engraving (size 24 x 30) of President Cleveland and his cabinet, and two boxes of the famous Parsons' Pills, both by mail post-paid. This engraving is handsome enough to hang in the most elegant parlor in the land. It has no advertisement or anything upon it to mar its beauty, and is practically given away, as every druggist, physician and general trader knows that the uniform price of Parsons' Pills is 25 cents per box.

This engraving is copyrighted and no one on the plate. No one in this or any other country can get the engraving except through us. The price of the engraving alone, if on sale at any art store, would be $1.00 or more. Our object in making this great offer is to acquaint people with the use of these marvelous Pills. All who should mention this paper, with their own name and post office address plainly written. Address: I. S. Johnson & Co.

AN ORNAMENT FOR COLD WEATHER.—Take a large turnip and scrape out the inside, leaving a thick wall around. Fill the cavity with earth, and plant in it some long vine or morning glory. Suspend the turnip with cords, and a little time the vines will wind around the strings, and the turnip, sprouting from below, will put forth leaves and stems that will turn upwards and gracefully curl around the base.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

JAMES DUNNO,

DEALER IN

TEA

—AND—

COFFEE,

111 Poydras street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Family supplies delivered free. Send for samples and price list.

100 ENVELOPES, 8 inches long, with Name, Business and Address, on upper and lower corners, and a note blank, at ADVOCATE'S CAMP ST. N.O.

"My boy got his arm badly mashed. I objected to having it amputated, and commenced bandaging it with Darby's Compound. It flew. The arm commenced to heal rapidly, the fluid keeping it clean and inoffensive and in a short time was entirely well. I have used it in cases of burns and sores and found it to act instantly and unfailingly.—Alma Hollifield, Auburn, Ala."

CAMP MEETINGS.

The camp meeting at New Prospect, Vaccaville circuit, Seaboard district, Mississippi Conference, will commence on Friday for the fourth Sunday in October, 1885. There will be convocations at Bellefontaine Station, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, for ministers, on the arrival of each train, Friday the twenty-third. There will be a public tea on the grounds, where all who desire to defray their own expenses can be amply accommodated at reasonable rates.

The camp meeting at Union Camp Ground, twelve miles east of DeSoto, commenced on Friday night before the third Sunday in October. Ministers are invited, and will be conveyed out from DeSoto if they let me know they are coming. My address is Shubuta, Miss.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

EUFAULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Euclid circuit, at Euclid, Oct. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 44.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1526.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

WAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
HARVEY & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELSH,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

RE TRIUMPH.

Thou must be true thyself.
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
The soul must overflow if thou
Another's soul wouldst reach;
It needs the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.
Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble deed.

—Bonar.

The Literary, Scientific and Theological Institute of the North Mississippi Conference.

On the day after the adjournment of the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, a meeting was held, composed of members of the conference, to consider a proposition to establish within the bounds of the conference an educational institute, modeled somewhat after the order of the Chautauque Schools. A committee of five was appointed at this meeting to mature and formulate a scheme and to select a course of study for said institute. This committee met in the lecture-room of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, on September 8 and 9. Members present, Dr. T. C. Wier, Dr. W. T. Sullivan, Rev. T. J. Newell, Rev. M. Thanes and Rev. John McChesney, the two last named brethren supplying the places of two absent members. The committee was assisted in its work also by Rev. Y. Ramsey, Jr., pastor of Grenada.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Rev. Dr. T. C. Wier, Rev. T. J. Newell, secretary. The following points were considered and adopted by the committee as setting forth the general plan and design of the institute:
1. It shall be styled, The Literary, Scientific and Theological Institute of the North Mississippi Conference.
2. The aim shall be the establishment within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference a school without the expense of buildings or large for tuition which shall procure habits of reading and study, thereby securing a store of useful knowledge to all who may avail themselves of the prescribed curriculum. While the prime object of the institute looks to the intellectual improvement of the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, it invites all persons who may desire to avail themselves of its benefits to become members.
3. The curriculum shall comprise a course of reading and study, entertaining, useful and profitable, to be divided into four schools, as follows:
The school of language, embracing English and a limited course in Latin and Greek;
The school of science, embracing moral and mental philosophy, natural science and a limited course in mathematics;
The school of literature, embracing general literature and history;
The school of theology, embracing general theology and ecclesiastical history. The course of study shall extend over a period of four years and shall be so arranged as to enable the student to complete the studies for each year by one hour's reading every week-day for ten months. The reading may be done at the homes of the members and with but few interruptions to the routine duties of every-day life. Members will be required to fill out a furnished memoranda or examination papers from year to year, indicating that the course for the year has been studied.

4. Membership in the institute may be obtained without preliminary examination on the promise to complete at least one year's course and on the payment of the annual fee of fifty cents, which is the sole expense to a member, except, of course, the cost of books. On the completion of the course of study prescribed for any one school, a student shall be awarded a certificate of proficiency in said school. On the completion of the entire four years' course, a student shall be awarded a diploma and shall be accredited as a graduate of the institute.

5. The faculty of instruction shall consist of two teachers for each of the four schools. It shall be the duty of this faculty to select the text books and arrange the course of study; to give such assistance by correspondence and otherwise as may be practicable to the member of the institute, and to receive and pass upon the memoranda of examination of each student.

6. The institute shall be under the direction of a Board of Trustees composed of the faculty of instruction and three additional members of the North Mississippi Conference. The Board shall have power to elect its own officers to fill such vacancies as may occur and to enact laws for its government and for the management of the institute.

After providing for the selection of text books the arrangement of the course of study for each year and the transaction of further important business, the committee adjourned to meet at Kosciusko, at nine o'clock A. M., December 1, 1885.

Persons desiring further information will please write to the secretary at Grenada, or to the chairman at Sardis.

T. C. WIER, Chairman.

T. J. NEWELL, Secretary.

OCTOBER 15, 1885.

Thoughts on Giving.

BY REV. R. H. MAHON, D. D.

It is as much a duty to give as it is to pray or to sing. "Give," says the Savior, "and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together and running over shall men give into your bosom: for with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again." Getting along well does not depend altogether upon praying. As we ourselves are dependent, much depends upon giving. It ought to be a pleasure to one to give. With many, however, it is actual distress. No part of religious service is so difficult to them. To sing, pray, shout; in fact most anything is easier than giving. Such ought to study that side of their Christian character and seek to develop a spirit of liberality. It can be done by honest effort and by prayer. In this way one who is exceedingly stingy may come to abound in liberality. Few people know how to give, because a call on their generosity is always unwelcome and a surprise. To give without distress, make up your mind to it. This is half the battle. When the determination to give is once formed, ways and means are easily devised. Church dues are like security debts; the obligation to pay them is acknowledged only at the last extremity. If people would study how to give to the Lord half as hard as they study how to keep from it, nothing would be easier or more delightful than giving.

What is determined to be done should be done at once or as soon as possible. The temptation to reconsider may come, yea will come, and the mind will soon begin to cast around for release from the obligation. A determination to do a good thing once formed and then recanted is a positive evil. It is a species of backsliding and leads to final apostasy. A very little thing sometimes makes men repent of their purpose to give. A little parley with the flesh always does it. Therefore do what you purpose to do while the thing is uppermost in your heart. This, besides strengthening your conviction of right, will enable you to do twice as much as could otherwise be done. Who does not know that the man who paid his assessment in the early part of the year found pleasure in it and was able to do as much more at the close? Do not be afraid of giving. There are few men, if any, who ever got broke or came to want in that way. You may be sure people are cautious about what they give and how it goes. The object must be a very worthy one to enlist any charity; but in ordinary life investments are made with half the discretion. If a man spends five hundred dollars for a pair of horses to drive about and take pleasure with, no one thinks anything; but if he gives five hundred dollars to missions or to some benevolent work, his friends feel uneasy and fear that he is going to break. He himself thinks that one such gift is enough for a life-time. Few do so even once. High life, speculation, futures and so forth break people. Giving does not.

"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." In giving we should never be determined by the ability of others, but by our own. If others neglect their duty in this respect, it is no more than may be expected of them, but it really becomes the more important that we should do our part promptly. Do not wait to see how much some one else will give. You know your own ability, therefore act, and act at once. Be liberal. Take the lead. Your generosity and promptness are needed to stimulate others. One stingy rich man in a church can spread the evil through the entire membership, while one plain poor man who gives liberally, though it be not much, will often awaken the charities of a multitude. Others will see that it does not kill one to give, but after all his gifts come back to him as the Scripture says according to the measure that he measured his gifts by. If we have to practice some self-denial in order to give, no matter. Even that is healthful. There are so few that do it that it is hardly esteemed a duty. Still if a man would be Christ's disciple he must deny himself, and I suppose self-denial would come in right here. It is marvelous to see how much a man can spare in the way of charity who practices economy and does his best, and it is equally marvelous to know the depth of joy that springs from the constant denying of one's self in order to give. A poor man spends two dollars to take his family to the show to enjoy a little recreation and nobody cared. When they assessed that same man two dollars for missions, or even to sustain his own pastor, he and his neighbors thought it oppressive. The opinion is now prevalent that none ought to give but such as have plenty, and by that is meant that nothing ought to be given to the Lord until every want of our own is met. The man who gives out of his abundance and never misses it does not know the joy that arises from a little self-denial in order to give. Until we learn to practice economy and to deny ourselves in order to give we can never be said to have come unto the likeness of him "who was rich, yet for our sakes became poor that we, through his poverty, might be made rich."

Infidelity.

BY REV. ANGELO DOWLING.

By degrees and through centuries the Roman Catholic Church approached the doctrine or dogma of infallibility. Although asserted from time to time, yet it was reserved to the nineteenth century to witness its formal and official declaration. When the six hundred and more Bishops assembled in St. Peter's, Rome, gave their votes for the infallibility of the Pope, the God of heaven and earth decreed his overthrow. From that time forth the power of the church began to give way. All civil powers upheld by the Roman Catholic Church were overcome. Nothing in the history of the centuries is more striking than the rapid fall and overthrow of France. Prussian arms were victorious on almost every battle-field. Soon the victorious forces envied the proud and beautiful city of Paris, whose fall was amid the crash of shot and shell. Even in Italy Roman Catholic power went under and the Pope himself was imprisoned at home. On this side the Atlantic the church power of Mexico was overthrown when the noble Maximilian was captured and shot.

The power of infallibility was exercised in the Roman Catholic Church long before it was officially declared. Consequently when the church taught that the bread and wine in the Lord's Supper underwent a real and substantial change by the ceremony and intention of the priest, and thereby become the actual, living body and divinity of Jesus Christ, it was a sin of high degree for any person to refuse to believe it. Many who could not believe this absurdity were excommunicated and cursed. Racks, chains, fagots and fires maintained the dogma. At last, however, groans, sighs, tears, blood and prayers prevailed in the court of high heaven, and the dogma and devil were overthrown together. It is a strange fact that just as the dogma gained ground sin and corruption gained ground. It is really shocking to read the character and conduct of the general council of Nicaea, by whose decrees Huss and Jerome were burned. This council was composed of "one thousand learned divines." Also "fifteen hundred common women were in attendance." "The reverend debauches enriched the prostitutes and burned the reformers." Wickedness gained ground in strongholds and the devil reigned in high places. All ripe for destruction.

While it is true that no other church has formally laid claim to infallibility, yet it is amusing and sometimes distressing to see the outcropping and growth of the sentiment, at least. Here is a church, for instance, that heartily and severely condemns the assumptions of the Roman Catholics as wholly unscriptural and then turn right round and preach that they are "the church of Jesus Christ," and all out of their belief and practice are of the world that they only have the sacraments. They hold and enjoy this high privilege because they are of the "apostolic succession." On what a slender thread hang such weighty things! Up rises another church, less hoary with the frost of ages, and declares its own sentiment of infallibility upon the most important feature in the whole circle of Bible doctrine. With them everything partakes of value, as it approximates the paramount doctrine of baptism—baptism, as they infallibly understand and teach that doctrine. At this point all other churches are fallible but themselves. At this doctrine of immersion, or dip, they demand more and yield less than at any other doctrine found in the entire word of God. Although members of other churches are counted by millions on millions, and themselves not more than four millions the world over, yet this comparative handful claim that they only are right, infallibly right, and the hundreds of millions of other churches totally wrong. Here they hold simply by the grip of grip. Yet another church declares and preaches ably and effectively against all and singular assumptions as belonging to the region of human ignorance, and therefore unworthy of respect and confidence. Still this other church intimates its sentiment of infallibility when the Bishop says: "Brethren, your appointments have been made after carefully and prayerfully considering every man's case. Brethren, we have done the very best for you and the several pastoral charges that it was possible to do. Go in the obedience of sons in the gospel; for the older I become the more I believe that God makes every appointment. Under this belief every worker must go; and go without a complaint escaping his lips." One feature proves all this to be right, and that feature is the success that crowns the labors of the itinerant ministry. But is the success the result of the belief or of the law which holds every true itinerant firmly bound to his vows of the ministry? Faithful work is the law of success. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

OAKES, ALA., OCT. 14, 1885.

Tennessee Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

NASHVILLE DISTRICT.—Robert K. Brown, P. E. McKendree station, James D. Barbee, Elm Street station, John P. McFerrin, Tullip Street station, Joseph B. West—John B. Hamilton, superannuated; West End Church and chapel in Vanderbilt University, Wm. M. Leftwich; Carroll Street station, Robert R. Jones; North High Street and city mission, Geo. W. Whinn; Foster Street station, James D. Scott; Hobson Chapel, Wm. Burr—Wm. B. Warren, superannuated; Alex. Green station, Edward K. Denton; Woodbine circuit, L. C. Bryan, Wm. H. Cotton; Arlington circuit, Wickliffe Weakley; Hermitage circuit, Wm. T. Dye; Centenary circuit, Sterling M. Cherry; Edney's and Bellevue, James H. Early; Park Avenue station, Hugh C. Packer; Richland mission, to be supplied by J. C. Stevens; Book Agent, J. B. McFerrin; Secretary Board of Missions, R. A. Young; Treasurer Board of Missions, D. C. Kelley; missionary to Brazil, J. J. Hanson; missionary to China, W. R. Lambuth.

MURFREESBORO DISTRICT.—P. A. Howell, P. E. Murfreesboro station, Jas. A. Orman—Greenville T. Henderson, superannuated; Stone's River circuit, G. W. Anderson; Concord circuit, Joseph J. Pitts—Chas. B. Faris, superannuated; Lebanon station, Joseph B. Erwin; Lebanon circuit, Jno. J. Pittman—Jesse J. Ellis, superannuated; Holmdale circuit, Thos. H. Woodward; Calmesville circuit, John R. Reagin—Starford Lassiter, superannuated; Gallatin station, James M. Wright; Bethphage and Castalian Springs, John G. Ray; Cairo Bend circuit, Jos. C. Roberts; Saundersville and Midway, W. G. Dorris; Summer circuit, Burkhart Ferril; Pleasant Grove circuit, Geo. M. Sanders; Goodlettsville circuit, Wm. W. Graves; El Dorado circuit, Wm. R. Keabley; Fountain Head and Richland, Jasper Nichols; Coatsworth circuit, John M. Alexander; Santa Female College, J. R. Thompson.

CARTHAGE DISTRICT.—T. H. Hinson, P. E. Carthage circuit, Matthew N. Ford; Alexandria circuit, B. G. Ferrell; Livingston circuit, Henry J. Kyle; Goose Creek circuit, John L. Bellum; New Middleton circuit, Joseph Webster; Cookeville circuit, to be supplied—Wm. N. Moore, superannuated; Wartrace circuit, Isaiah S. Napier; La Fayette circuit, Martin R. Tucker; Gainesboro mission, Henry S. Kennedy; Celina mission, to be supplied by Jesse S. Moore; Birdstown mission, to be supplied; Liberty circuit, Nicholas A. Anthony; Woodbury circuit, Zachary W. Moores; Cumberland circuit, John G. Malloy.

MCMINNVILLE DISTRICT.—T. L. Moody, P. E. McMinnville station, Azariah T. Crawford; McMinnville circuit, to be supplied by A. L. Cramer; Sparta station, Green P. Jackson; Sparta circuit, Thos. S. Culbun; Manchester and Tallahoma, John C. Putnam; Smithville station, James T. Blackwood; Hickory Valley circuit, to be supplied; Hillsboro circuit, John N. Handlie; Beech Grove circuit, David L. Thompson; Short Mountain circuit, Jno. C. Myers—Abraham H. Reams, superannuated; Hickory Creek circuit, Gervase B. McPeak; Manchester circuit, John G. Blanton; Spencer mission, Jas. G. Blackwood; Tracy City station, Robert A. Reagan; Monticello mission, Geo. D. Gannin; Colosse mission, to be supplied (by John W. Gilbert).

SHELBYVILLE DISTRICT.—J. E. Hughes, P. E. Shelbyville station, A. G. Dinwiddie; Winchester station, Wm. T. Haggard; Salem circuit, Wm. T. S. Cook; Elk River circuit, John F. Beasley; Fayetteville station, Anderson P. McFerrin; Fayetteville circuit, to be supplied; Bellbuckle station, Wellborn Mooney; Petersburg circuit, Robert M. Haggard; Lynchburg circuit, Sam'l J. Shateen; Rossville circuit, Geo. W. Cooke; Macedonia circuit, to be supplied (by J. C. Miles); Medlin and Moore's, John P. Funk; Elch Valley circuit, Wm. A. Turner; Dryden mission, Wm. P. Owen; Lynchburg and Mulberry, Thomas L. Darnell; Marble Plains and Bethel, John W. Massey; Graham Springs mission, to be supplied; Wartrace and Mt. Moriah circuit, Samuel M. Parks.

COLUMBIA DISTRICT.—T. J. Duncan, P. E. Columbia station, Wm. M. Green; South Columbia, Wm. H. Wilkes; Mt. Pleasant station, James F. Tunon; Calico station, Wm. J. Collier; Bigbyville circuit, Jeremiah W. Cullom—Joseph H. Strayhorn, superannuated; Lynnhaven circuit, John G. Gibson; Forest Grove circuit, Wm. A. Lusby; Diana Valley circuit, Geo. W. Blanton; Pleasant Valley circuit, Nathan B. L. Owing; Olive and Pleasant Hill, Geo. D. Byrne; Pleasant station, Ben. F. Haynes—Jerome B. Anderson, superannuated; Mt. Pisgah circuit, Rufus W. Seay—Adolphus M. Ezell, superannuated; Trinity circuit, Lewis R. Andra—Henry L. Booth, superannuated; Prospect circuit, John H. Nichols; Richland circuit, Thophilus Lee; Elkton and Smyrna mission, Samuel W. Bransford—Wm. H. Idgin, superannuated; Bee Springs and Shiloh, Geo. S. Byrom; Blanche circuit, Wm. A. Leath; Cornersville and Lewisburg, Jno. M. Jordan.

FRANKLIN DISTRICT.—T. E. Kelley, P. E. Franklin station, John E. Harrison; Douglas circuit, Wm. B. Lowry; Spring Hill station, Lewis Powell; College Grove circuit, John A. McFerrin; Chapel Hill circuit, T. B. Fisher; Brentwood and Johnson, Wm. H. Doss; Bethesda circuit, Henry O. Moore; Harpeth, Richard P. Ransom; Pope and Mt. Zion, Geo. W. Barnett; Berlin circuit, Edward C. Marks; Kedron circuit, Robert P. Gray; Nolensville circuit, Wallace T. Rowland; Spring Hill circuit, Albert T. Goodlow; Bethlehem and White's, Rufus E. Travis; Unionville circuit, J. J. Comer, Thos. B. Marks—Wm. M. Shaw, superannuated; Fernvale circuit, John W. Hatcher.

SAVANNAH DISTRICT.—S. L. Peden, P. E. Savannah station, Jas. T. Curry; Savannah and Cerro Gordo mission, Wm. H. Gilbert; Belhel and Fyburn mission, to be supplied (by L. E. Covey); Waynesboro circuit, Wm. M. Queen; Flatwoods mission, John S. Curtis; Linden circuit, John W. Hooker; Lowryville circuit, Berry S. Haggard; Waverland Springs circuit, Jas. W. Fairies; Lawrenceburg and Belhel, to be supplied by W. R. McKenney; Oakland mission, to be supplied (by J. L. Chennault); Laurel Hill station, Robert M. Chennault; Summertown and Swan mission, Jas. R. Harris—W. P. Warren, superannuated; Hampside and Pisgah, Moses J. Mahory; Williamsport circuit, John G. Bolton.

CENTREVILLE DISTRICT.—Herschel B. Reams, P. E. Centerville station, Chas. S. Gahard; Centerville circuit, Isaac W. Keathley; Piney circuit, John W. Register; Santa Fe circuit, Benjamin H. Johnson; Liberty circuit, Wm. T. Harl; Waverly circuit, John W. Hensley; Standing Rock circuit, Ulysses N. M. Berry; Dover circuit, Henry S. Ledbetter; Erin and Cumberland City, John K. Lee; Dayton circuit, Jas. M. Oakley; Yellow Creek circuit, Jas. G. Hinson; Dickson circuit, Ephraim W. White; White Bluff and Paint Rock, Wm. D. Cherry; McEwen and Sugar Creek mission, Wm. P. Hickman; Warner mission, Joseph E. Cole.

CLARKSVILLE DISTRICT.—J. W. Hill, P. E. Clarksville station, Wm. R. Peebles; New Providence and Bethel, E. M. Morrill; Montgomery circuit, James E. Allison; Robert P. Gannaway—Richard W. Bellamy, superannuated; Palmira circuit, to be supplied (by Jas. M. Stamper); Ashtand City circuit, Thos. B. Reams; Red River circuit, Wm. G. Hensley; Springfield station, Robert J. Craig; Cedar Hill circuit, Henry S. Melville; Port Royal, Geo. L. Hader; Ashby circuit, Orville G. Chaffin; Salem circuit, Jas. L. Smith; Antioch circuit, Jesse G. Rice; Saline circuit, Chas. E. Heriges.

TRANSMISSION.—W. W. Pinson, to Texas Conference; Henry M. Stephens, to Northwest Texas Conference; Henry B. Blue, to West Texas Conference; Gross Alexander, to Louisville Conference, and appointed professor at Vanderbilt; J. W. Bell, to North Mississippi Conference; A. R. Farris, to Southwest Missouri Conference, and stationed at Independence.

To the Members of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

I proposed at our last session to publish and distribute the minutes promptly after each future session. This is the plan: The preachers will get subscribers at fifteen cents per copy, put the money and a list of the names and postoffices in an envelope, write on back of envelope "Subscription for Minutes" and his own name, and hand it to me at Conference, or send it by mail in registered letter. I suggest that if it be a country postoffice, the name of the county or parish be given.

The minutes of the next session will contain more matter than usual. I want to get the copy out promptly and in good style, and I may add some interesting statistics; hence I put the price at fifteen cents.

H. F. JOHNSON.

BOOK-BUYER, N. O., OCT. 15, 1885.

Mississippi Conference Notice.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference will please send me at an early day the names of the lay delegates to the Annual Conference, and of local preachers and applicants for admission who will attend our next session.

W. C. BLACK.

To thee, my God, to thee, alone I'll live,
After thy grace and thy exampleative,
That nurtured in my life, a glimpse of thine
To all may shine.

I've brought it here myself, ah! I'd trust no other hands—
But those that held him dying, to fulfill his last commands.
'Tis worth pain, he told me, where I'll lose this weary pain,
To live and battle for some helpless one again.
I feel pasture fair and quiet, are rising to my view
Maybe there's work up yonder that the Lord will let me do.
Good-by, good-by, remember! O God, my dear ones bless—Deal gently with the widow, and guide the fatherless!
Yea, wife, the hand that brought me from out the maddest flame
Omnipotent sudden—through every change the same,
Though I struck down in vigor, at prime of manhood laid,
There's One still left to comfort—the strongest One of all!
And when his voice has called me to service laid afar,
Then take my broken helmet crushed in with many a scar,
For down at our Bre-station they hold such trophies dear
In memory of the firmest whose work is over here,
You're seen the room, my lads, wherein the helmet hide,
Unpolished, scorched and dented and unuse, side by side—
There's Jim's who rushed so bravely through four defiance, fierce and wild,
And lost his life in saving a little crying child;
There's Jack's, who saved a mother, amid the crowd's despair,
And brought her back, unhurt, unto her child;
And your old Tom—he saved a household one by one but a falling turret killed him when his work was done
My dear old mates! our captain will grant me, too, a space
To lay my worn-out helmet within that quiet place.
Don't fear, my dear heart, come closer; let's thank the Lord awhile
For those young lives he gave me from out the blazing tile!"

So I've brought his battered helmet—un, sir! I could weep
Had you but seen my husband as he gently dropped asleep,
Had you but watched my hero as he neared his heavenly crown,
You would understand how grandly he laid his armor down!

Sometimes I hear his whistle and his sleep across the door,
Sometimes I, shuddering hunger for his hand upon the door;
But I think of those fair infants that he snatched from out the fire
How can I grudge my darling to the Coquette deathless choir?

Only—our boys are lonely, and the tears are in the eyes
She, may the gods come somewhere where the father's helmet lies,

And read the blows and bruises and the fury flames
As shall his little children grow worthy of his name—
The Quiver

The Question.

The penalty of sin is death. Of the forbidden fruit it was said, "Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die." The soul that sinneth shall die, for "the wages of sin is death." Why this severe penalty? Because sin is high treason. It acts at naught the supreme authority; it is a transgression of the law of God. Law and the constituted authority to maintain and execute it is the security and the protection of every man's life, property and character. A stab at the supreme law is a stab at the well-being of all, and, therefore, must be prohibited by the strongest and severest penalty. Any less sanction would be disloyalty to the State, the guardian of all. So the Divine authority is the security of all the subjects of the Divine government, and must be maintained inviolate.

The Holy Scriptures declare that all have sinned. All history confirms this statement. The chronicles of nations and the biographies of individuals are to a large extent filled with the narrations of public and private wrongs inflicted and endured. So our observation has taught us. See the millions invested in locks and keys; see the courts and legal apparatus for the arrest, the trial and punishment of crime. So, alas! our experience gives its humiliating testimony. Who can say on an honest survey of his heart and life that there was never pride, envy, covetousness or malice in his breast; that his feet never made a crooked step, or his hands were never lifted in violence or anger; that his eyes never gave a wanton look, or his lips never uttered an untrue, uncharitable or violent word? Alas! none of us can say, touching these things, "I am blameless." As the penalty is death if some provision for pardon had not been made, the question, "Why wilt thou die?" would have been but a cruel mockery. But, God be praised; a great and gracious provision has been made whereby God can be just—just in the sight of all created intelligences—and yet offer a free and full pardon to all penitent, believing sinners.

The question, then, is most pertinent to be asked, and asked with surprise: "Why wilt thou die?"

1. It is not the fault of the Triune God. 'The Eternal Father has sworn by himself, because in all the universe there is no higher appeal -- "As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth." And in proof of this he has so loved us that he has given his only and well-beloved Son to die that we might not perish. God, the Eternal Son and Savior, so loved us that he became poor that we might be rich, made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant that we might become sons of God and joint heirs with himself to the fruition of immortality. He says to every sad, laboring heart, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." He arose for our justification, and ever lives above for us to intercede.

God, the Eternal and Blessed Spirit, so loves us that he helps our infirmities, teaches us how to pray, makes intercessions for us with groanings which can not be uttered. He quickens us, enlightens and helps us to repent and believe. We do not die because God does not exhort us to turn and live, and calls us by a thousand voices to seek his face and be saved. He makes to us exceeding great and precious promises: "Ask, and ye shall receive," "Let the wicked forsake his way, the unrighteous his thoughts, and let them come unto me, and I will abundantly pardon," "Look unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved," God gives us abundant opportunities all along our march. A thousand Sabbath anna have smiled, a thousand Sabbath bells have called us to the house of prayer, a thousand sermons have instructed, warned and invited us to be saved. God has invited and appealed to us by motives high as heaven, deep as the grave and vast as eternity, and dear to us as our own eternal welfare—motives of which no numbers can tell the value and no language overstate the greatness. The question recurs to us with increased emphasis and wonder, "Why will ye die?"

2. Why will he die? Morally and spiritually, we have been so circumstanced that we can not die unless we will to die. As we have seen, God does not will our death. We dare—but with reverence—go further, and say, under the gospel constitution, God can not will us to die. It is morally impossible he should if we will to avail ourselves of the freely offered salvation. It may not have occurred to you that if we die, and die forever, it must be an act of our own will. The man on the stream with his boat, with oars and ample strength to pull up the stream, and fully informed as to his situation, and yet refuses to row up, does will to go down and accept all the perils of being swept over and down the fatal cataract. The man that refuses to take the remedy, the only remedy that can cure him, wills to remain sick and to die. The man condemned to die, refusing to accept a pardon, does will to die. Just so it is with men who will not consent to use the only means of salvation. They do will to die. How this will intensify and embitter our doom!—the crushing and remorseful thought, "I am lost because I would not will to be saved." Heaven's gates are shut against me, and I turned the key and shot the bolts. I am in hell because I would not go to heaven. I am dead to God because I refused to be made alive in Christ. How sad and how destructive of all rest of soul are these remorseful memories! How dread is our power and how awful our responsibility and how appalling the dire results.

3. Why will you die? It is to be feared millions have lived in sin, heaping up wrath against the day of wrath, have died impenitent and unpardoned, unsaved, and are now in outer darkness forever banished from God. And it is to be feared millions now living in sin and impenitence will die as they are living, and in hell will live as they eyes, being in torment. But it is written, "Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil." It will be no mitigation of your endless woes to be surrounded by countless thousands suffering the same hopeless doom. The rich man who had spent his life in mere sensuality and luxurious forgetfulness of God, lifting up his eyes in hell, begged that Lazarus be sent to warn his five brethren, lest they come to that place of torment. He knew the life he had lived and the example he had set, and he dreaded the effect on his brethren. He feared to meet them in that dread place of torment. Their coming would multiply his hopeless sorrows. Remember you have but one probationary life to live—but one soul. Will you be lost? Why will you die?

4. Why will you die? There have been thousands willing to endure sufferings and toils for others: as parents for their children, as soldiers for their country, and as thousands of ministers and missionaries have done and are doing now. There are men who have sacrificed their earthly and temporal life for patriotism, for philanthropy and for friendship. But to die forever—to be separated from goodness and God—to dwell in the dark regions of hopeless despair. Oh, what moral insanity, what dead suicide, to die, and to die by one's own obstinate and perverted will, to die in a bad cause, to die without benefit to others and without benefit to oneself, and to die forever!

5. This need not be life. Eternal life is set before us, is offered to us, is put within our reach and grasp. We, like the prodigal, may be in "a far country," but we have but to say, "I will arise and go to my Father." He is waiting to receive and ready even now to forgive and we may live forever blessed.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMAN'S BONDS.—It is worthy of note that the Woman's Board, at the time of the closing of the year, had contributed the sum of $224,598.55, as noted below. Since that time the Woman's Board of New York has added $138.25, and the Woman's Board of the North-east, $52.58, for the convenience of $21,815.59. For the receipts of last year and gives a total of $225,599.69. Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Philadelphia, $119,287.84; Woman's North-west Missions of the same Society, $14,809.55; Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, New York, $7,438.31; Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Northern New York, Albany Branch, $5,554.32; Northern Board of Foreign Missions, Northern New York, New York Branch, $3,892.43; Woman's Board of Missions of the South-west, $3,014.55. Total, $224,598.55.

MR. EDITOR: Having been very busy, spending protracted meetings and otherwise performing the duties incumbent upon an itinerant preacher, has prevented my sooner noticing the recent developments upon this subject.

First comes Bro. Hearn, in monologuing of the "twiddle-doe and twiddle-dum" style, with his redutio ad absurdum. Inasmuch as the plan advocated by myself "will cut both ways," and while it legally introduces a few laymen into the Bishop's cabinet, will by implication, at least, shut off the many, or "the godly number" spoken of by his brother, "whose business it is to advise the Bishop," I think this secondary result will more than offset his implied intimation that some laymen have "axed to grind." So much for Bro. Hearn's article.

Bro. West has next an endorsement of the general idea, subject, however, to the Bishop's desire for such aid; hence "no need of troubling the General Conference with the matter." The General Conference must not take action unless in the matter if said laymen are to have any legal or official rights or privileges even in the matter of advice (it seems to me), and it certainly would become necessary to secure uniformity in action that the Bishops agree among themselves as to the number of laymen desired and the manner of selecting them. For a Bishop (a comparatively stranger) to select the most suitable laymen among all the membership of a large Conference, without consulting freely with the whole Conference, would be difficult. Again, the laymen as yet should know for a year in advance that they were expected to be posted, as far as possible, upon the needs and demands of both pastors and works. This much being granted, an election a year in advance by the Conference would seem to be the most practical and satisfactory way to secure such light aid as might be needed or considered advisable in this quarter.

Now for Bro. Sullivan's "fugal word." First let me say, the spirit of Bro. Sullivan's article has endeared him to me. "Whom having not seen we love." And I wish here to disclaim any intimation as to wrong motives or methods in using the term, "axa to grind." I simply used that expression as descriptive of those who have personal interests involved. Bro. Sullivan's historical resumé is to this point so far as the election of presiding elders is concerned, and I suppose the church is thoroughly at rest upon that point. I, for one, can freely say that I have no wish to deprive the Bishops of any power conferred upon them now by law. Bro. Sullivan's conclusion that—(I give his own words) "If the simple election of presiding elders by the Annual Conference would be violence to the episcopal function, much more would such violence be done if the law made the appointments dependent on the will of presiding elders. To divide this power still further by adding laymen to the appointing college would certainly be a radical change in the episcopal function in our church and a destruction of the plan of our itinerant general superintendency"—might be freely granted. But how this history or this conclusion militates against his proposed plan, as suggested in my article, I fail to perceive. Had not my name been coupled with Bro. Upton's in his opening sentence, I should certainly have concluded that my article had no place in his mind when his reply was written.

A few words now as to the plan proposed so far as endorsed by myself. Says Bro. Sullivan: "The Bishop seeks information from his cabinet." Say I: Let the law recognize and ratify the usage of our Bishops, and state that the presiding elders are such cabinet, leaving them with neither more nor less power than by usage they now possess. Says Bro. Sullivan: "The lay delegates to the Annual Conferences have a kind of official access to the Bishop and to the presiding elders during the sessions of the Conference." Say I: Let certain chosen laymen have a real official access to the Bishops, etc., during the sessions of Conference, with no more authority or power over the appointments than the other advisers by usage of the Bishop possess or exercise now.

This plan proposes to give the historian much light and help from the lay members as may justify him in rejecting gratuitous advice, and still enable him to feel satisfied that the pastors and people, being both interested in the result of the investigations, have both an equal opportunity for a hearing and equal privileges in the way of advising him as to how he can best arrange the works and station the preachers for the largest measure of success. The glory of God and the salvation of the world are certainly the ends aimed for by Methodism. "The wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove are both needed for the accomplishment of this result, and nowhere are these peculiar gifts and graces needed more than at the centre, from which these influences should radiate to the extremities.

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH
KRECHIN, LA., Oct. 16, 1885.

There is no honest work that a man does for another, which he will not do as unto the Lord and not unto men.

Mr. Editor: The general tone of all that I have ever read or heard on the subject of pastoral visiting seems to imply a prevalent delinquency on the part of pastors in this part of the work. That it is the duty of pastors to visit "from house to house" is generally admitted. It has been said that a house-going presbyter makes a church-going people; but Mr. Moody, I think, has said that the laity ought to visit more, and the church ought not to expect the preachers to spend too much of the time in visiting from house to house. This sentiment cordials with the prevailing opinion on this subject, and it is mentioned in this connection simply to call to mind this fact that there are two sides to this question; and while this writer would not, in any respect, depreciate the work of pastoral visiting, something in the line of experience suggests that a recognition of duty on the other side is necessary to success in this work. In the midst of the silence that has so long prevailed concerning a matter in which the church is so closely connected, it may be a surprise to many to hear it stated that the members of the church have their duties to perform in the work of pastoral visiting.

pastoral visiting.

Methodist preachers are disposed to do their duty in this respect, and, with a few exceptions, they are noted for their diligence in hunting up the wandering members of their flocks and feeding all over whom they have the care in the household as well as in the congregation at the church. "Oh, how the members of the church could help the pastor in this work! He goes among them a stranger. They see him and hear him preach. He introduces himself to them. He is desirous to know all the members of the church and learn all about their needs. He is among them to do them good and to seek the lost and bring them to Christ. He is there to save souls as a minister of God." The pastor is the servant of all, though in authority in the church. How easy it would be for Bro. A. to tell the preacher where he resides, invite him home with him, or insist on a visit as often as practicable! And so with Bro. B. and Sisters C. and D., and all. How it would encourage the pastor for all his members to be in their places in the church to receive their portion in the ministry of the word and do their part in the work of the Lord. Some of the members wonder why it is the preachers visit some families more than others. The reason is there is an open door to some places and not so to others, and some members never prepare the way for the pastor's visits.

One of the most important duties of a pastor is to have to go and "hunt up" absent members who never go to church and invite them to church, their church, to hear him, their servant, preach. Something seems to say to the hunter of church members, They do not wish to have the services of a minister of the gospel. In this work the preacher feels like a father whose son without cause has left home and wandered away in dangerous places and cares not for the solicitude of loving ones at home. There is a possibility of expecting too much of pastors at this point. When persons who are able to attend public worship habitually absent themselves from the house of God, expecting to have their ministerial needs all supplied by pastoral visits, it has a tendency to weaken rather than strengthen the church for aggressive work. That there are such cases there ought to be no reasonable doubt. There are many persons who make but little preparation to attend church. If the pastor will visit them occasionally, they can get all they desire in that way. As a denomination, the Methodists have been, and are still, very accommodating in the work of supplying the people with the gospel, and the consequence is our people demand more of their preachers than almost any other people. There is a growing tendency in the church to develop a religion without the principle of self denial.

It is evident to all who have honestly studied the question that God intended the church, as a body, to be the powerful organization in the world for the promotion of his glory. To accomplish the work of the church the cooperation of the members is necessary. To have this there must be a union of the members in the body; they must be one in Christ. This implies a relation of members of the church to each other, and the existence of obligations that they are under to each other, distinct from anything implied in the idea of pastoral visiting. We may not be able to comprehend all that is implied in the union of the members of the body of Christ; but we can understand that it is necessary that each member should perform its office in the body. There is need of every member. The members must be in sympathy with the body and with the different members of the body. Taking the view of the matter, it appears that there is an undeveloped power in the church which can not be brought into exercise by pastoral visiting, but requires an assembly of the saints and communion with the people for its fruitful employment. If, instead of one in five, the members were regular attendants at the public and social meetings, their visiting had more religion in it, though pastoral visiting would be more profitable.

Clinton, La., Oct. 1, 1893.

A straight line is the shortest moral, as in mathematics.

MOUSTER CITY, MISS. ✓

Mr. Editor: We have just closed an eight days' meeting at this place, which resulted in the accession of twelve new members, in addition to a good number of members who have moved in from other parts of the country; in all, twenty-one. I can say that Gloucester City is the only religious road town I have run across yet. We moved our church, which stood out from the road about a mile, into town and had it ready for use at our fourth Quarterly Conference. We had a pleasant session; four good, strong men made application for recommendation to the Annual Conference for admission into the travelling ministry. After a close examination they were all recommended. We protracted the meeting until we captured some of the most substantial men in the place. Bro. Little, our presiding elder, preached for us until Tuesday. On that day he rounded up with a farewell sermon that was answered by showers of tears and many a "God bless you." We did not have time to pass a resolution of thanks or anything of that sort in the Conference, but our love and sympathy will be none the less deep and lasting for so noble a man and so good a presiding elder as the Methodist Church has got within her borders. Bro. Skipper, of Meadville, came down just in time to take the place of Bro. Little. He, with the help of Bros. M. Whitehead, George Anders and Nathan Roberts, held the fort until Sunday night. The church is greatly revived. This makes the third meeting held on Antie circuit since my last report. Total number of necessities since my last letter, thirty-eight.

to H. DRADFORD.

MORTON, MISS. V

Mr. Editor: The Shiloh Camp Meeting began on Thursday night, the eighth instant, and closed on Monday night. The weather was delightful and the attendance large. We had full corps of preachers, viz: Festus Stunt, Sibley, Kendall, Nicholas Miller, Long, Clark, Robinson, L. and our presiding elder was at his post although still in feeble health. There were only a few accessions, yet the meeting was spiritual, resulting some twenty-five conversions. It was a rejoicing time to Christians. The best order prevailed that I ever saw at a camp ground. Gov. Lowry was present one day mingling with many friends in this, his home county. A marriage under the tabernacle Sabbath evening was a novel scene at a camp ground. We think Shiloh destined to be a noted camp. This the fourth meeting since it was revived. This first camp meeting ever held in the county was over fifty years ago. This is a hallowed battle-ground, and visitors are still follows the Lord's banner.

C. M'DONALD

do

NATCHEZ, MISS.
MR. EDITOR: Sunday night, Oct. 4, I closed a most excellent mass here at Wesley Chapel. I was assisted by Rev. W. W. Hopper, whose pungent, practical sermons and the careless sinners, startled the bold sinners, fired the lukewarm quickened sinners. The good was done principally among the membership, but we had twenty-eight conversions and sixteen accessions to church. Bro. Hopper is now assisting Bro. Mounger at Jefferson Street, a favorable prospect of a revival.

there J. V. RE

BIG ROCK, MISS. V
 Mr. Editor: I am requested by preacher in charge, Rev. L. J. J. to report the financial and spiritual condition of the Winchester circuit follows: The assessments to date been very nearly paid, and the prospects flatter us that payment will be made in full before the close of Conference year. The Board of Stewards are active, energetic and zealous in the work assigned.
 The spiritual interest of the work is good. Of the seven meetings already held all gave evidence of renewed spiritual strength.
 A quickened zeal was manifested in many instances. Although the seasons of the present year have been comparatively few, we account it a fact that nearly all are in the work. The last Quarterly Conference work was held at Big Rock, on the first Sabbath in October; the singing was continued several days presence and labors of the presbyter during the meeting was appreciated in the church and homes of the people, and as this his fourth year in the bounds of Meridian district, we may expect him again in these bounds, and memory will over-remain a blessed boon to us in the future.

sympathy NED, M.

different thing that there is a church exercise requires the communion employ-five, all attendants, sings, and in to it, could be

ALEXANDRIA, LA.

Mr. EDITOR: I have been rejoiced to state that the Spring Creek Meeting was a success, and in fact I can bear personal testimony. The exercises beginning on a night lasted three days, during this time there was a steady shower of the harvest all culminated Monday night in a cloud burst of the most powerful meetings writer ever witnessed. The many radiant conversions, and respect at least, like Pentecost church revived. The president of this district, Bro. Cooper, control by virtue of long and acquaintance and many neighboring ministers were present and laboring in the spirit of the Master. Bro. Wilson Moore, in the bounds of whose work the meeting was, and who is in his first year, is much beloved.

J. M. UARD,

BERWICK, LA.

Mr. ENRIST: "The Lord hath done great things for us" at Berwick - one of my side appointments on the Morgan City and Pattersonville work. Last night brought to a close the very best meeting of ten days' continuance I ever enjoyed. We have no church at this point. We held the services in a school-house. Results: The whole town blessed, twenty-five members joined the church, about the same number or more soundly converted, six infants and five adults baptized - all of us filled with the Holy Ghost. About forty or fifty witnessed for Jesus last night. One good brother says we shall have a church, and I am just in receipt of a letter from another brother offering us a lot on which to build the same. "We" are "as them that dream" Glory be to God! The Lord Omnipotent reigneth! To-morrow we begin in Morgan City. We shall gain the victory.

A. E. C.

p

The Christian has a hope, but this can not be end of the wicked, as the objective point of their hope is "the empty vanishing things, glided over with the thin appearance of good," and because the basis of their hope is impotent and perishable. The Christian's hope is distinguished from this worldly and vain hope because of the excellency of its object and the stability of its foundation. Is it true that the Christian has a hope? If so, what is the nature of it, and what are its characteristics? Hope is both mental and moral. The first is not so much an implantation—an impartation and inspiration as the second, but is a result merely of man's own securing—a consequence of having obeyed the commandments of God and is based upon external evidences which reside in mental consciousness. This is very beautiful and good as far as it goes, but it is all the man side of religion and is not connected with the God side and just here many souls are hindered because they have not united the two—the man side and the God side. Those who rejoice in this hope claim that it is properly founded, and point you to the foundation offered to mankind in the Scriptures, but fail to appropriate it to its proper and virtuous application. The true and only foundation of hope fails to become hope without the proper application of its virtue and power. Unfortunately, this application is not made by many who look at the whole matter of salvation as a mental process. Man may of times very easily proceed thus far without the agency of the Holy Ghost; but, indeed, there can be no real or genuine hope without the agency of the Holy Ghost, making personal application of the blood of Christ, in the work of regeneration. The hope of the Christian is, therefore, a moral hope, or a hope in the moral nature or soul. It is hope within. But what is this hope? It is desire and expectation mixed and faith and properly founded, for with the proper foundation desire and expectation may exist without hope, the desire being fixed in the heart, the seeks until expectation is planted in the heart through the agency of the Holy Spirit. The Apostle Paul testifies upon this point, "Now the God of all joy will you with all joy and peace in believing that you may abound in it through the power of the Holy Ghost." Hope we here find is an impartation of the Holy Ghost, and here is a eternal or soul consciousness, "the hope we have as an anchor in the both sure and steadfast." We find that the apostle clearly demonstrates the fact that the Christian's hope is moral—a hope within as an implantation of the Holy Spirit. This hope is several beautiful characteristics, a "good hope," a "lively hope," both "sure and steadfast," it is "not ashamed," it is encouraging in triumphs over difficulties. It is "called to this hope" and "abound in" it, "not be ashamed of it," and "not be moved from it," should "hold fast to" it, "continue in" it, and "rejoice in" it; but hope of earth's pleasures. This leads to patience and purity of happiness, and here is the why we should seek the fruit of the Holy Ghost to the end.

But what is the ground or the Christian's hope? It is Jesus Christ. "Other foundation no man may than that is laid, which is Christ." We claim that the hope of the Christian's hope is in Christ, once crucified, dead and dwelling in the heart, which he purified by his blood. "The reason, therefore, of man's moral improvement, by an application of the vicarious power of the blood of Christ, is through the agency of the Holy Spirit, who is the 'reason' and proof of it," St. John says; "Which were of blood, nor of the will of man, nor of the will of man, but of God." The Apostle Paul says, "Be ye again, not of corruptible seed, nor of corruptible, by the word of God." "By no human generation, or means; but of incorruptible, and heavenly principle, which is liable to decay nor to be effected by change and chances to which many things are exposed."

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

Rev. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D., Rev. J. T. SAWYER, Rev. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1885.

Our church schools are well attended this year. We have no fears of their success if true to the spirit of their origination. Secular education, however cheap, will not purchase or pervert the conscience of Christian parenthood.

The war cloud in Europe thickens. It is difficult to understand the political horoscope and forecast this event of a day. One thing seems evident and imminent—the decadence of Turkish power on the map of Europe. Which consummation is devoutly to be wished by every intelligent Christian.

A pastor said to us a few days ago: "The Advocate readers on my work are my most reliable and almost only contributors to the pastor's salary and other church enterprises." Just so. And every observant preacher will give like testimony. If so, is it not self-interest—to plead no higher motive—to circulate the church paper. Brethren, help us to help you.

Attention is called to the excellent article of Dr. M. on our first page. His points are well taken and presented with the clearness characteristic of the man. These words of his ought to be read and reread and written upon the doorposts of the heart: "A determination to do a good thing once formed, and then recanted, is a positive evil. It is a species of backsliding and leads to apostasy." But few look at the matter that way; yet it is sound philosophy and correct theology. On that subject the church needs line upon line.

This from the Central Christian Advocate is "mighty interesting reading," and is respectfully commended to brethren in a lower latitude: "Bishop Foss said at the recent session of the Des Moines Conference that in a Norwegian Conference which he once held, although there were only 2,200 members under its pastoral care, the pastors reported 2,400 church papers taken. We know that the German Methodist pastors report nearly the same results. In many charges they obtain a subscriber from each family of the congregation. There is but one way to produce such results—personal solicitation from house to house. The aim of the publishers is not simply to secure so many subscribers, but to furnish the intelligence that helps to produce a faithful, energetic and intelligent membership that will work hand in hand with the pastor.

"Since writing the above a letter from the pastor of a small charge in one of our patronizing Conferences brings us twelve new subscribers, and he says the canvass is not yet complete. He says: 'I take a paper into the pulpit on Sunday, and present the matter to the congregation when I make my announcements. Then I say that I will call upon them in their homes during the week. On Monday morning I take a paper and go from house to house. And I always meet with success.'"

The intolerance and aggressiveness of the Romish Church is asserting itself more and more with the increase of numbers. Whereunto this thing will grow unless arrested by an aroused public sentiment is readily seen by a glance at Roman Catholic countries or a slight examination of history. The latest is from the Western Watchman, the official organ of the Romish Church in St. Louis. A correspondent inquired if it was proper for a Catholic to listen to the prayers of a Protestant on any public civic occasion. The Watchman makes reply in a spirit at once silly and malicious. We quote some sentences as follows:

"The Catholic position can be summed up in a nutshell: Catholics can not take part in heretical services. The reason is given in answer to the question in the catechism: 'How can we become partakers in another's sin?' Every heretical service performed in this world is a sin—a formal sin if done in defiance to the church's authority, a material sin if done in ignorance and without malice. * * * Preachers are bad company. If you have no business with them, stay away from them. But if they obtrude themselves and you can not escape, listen to their preaching and their prayer as you would to the utterances of a hypocrite or a drunken man under like circumstances—respectfully, because of the Being addressed."

A Church Dedication.

We had the pleasure of spending Sunday last at West Station, a flourishing village on the Illinois Central railroad, about seventy-five miles north of Jackson, and in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. The excellent pastor, Rev. G. W. Brown, had our promise for six weeks or more to be present on the interesting occasion of his church dedication, otherwise we could not have been absent from the great revival yet in progress in our pastoral charge. Reaching West about half-past eight o'clock on Saturday night, we found Bro. Brown in waiting to extend a cordial welcome and conduct us to his parsonage-home. Often have we traveled up that superb road, but never did fields and woods look so glorious. There was not a fleck of cloud in the sky, and the full moon waved her silvery banners with unchallenged splendor. The snowy cotton fields glistened with moonbeams, while every autumn leaf and blade of grass wore a robe of burnished silver. The evening air was crisp and exhilarating, at once a fit preparative for nature's "sweet restorer" and a prophecy for a bright, beautiful Sabbath day.

Sunday morning dawned cloudless and glorious, and from far and near the people called Methodists and their friends, early began to prepare for a day in the courts of our God. Before eleven o'clock the beautiful little temple was filled to its utmost capacity, and some were compelled to remain outside or go away. The building is quite a gem of a village church, and is a worthy memorial of the liberality of the community and the indefatigable zeal of the painstaking pastor. The roof is half Gothic; the windows, high and narrow; the ceiling of proper height for acoustic effect; the pews, comfortable and admirably arranged, and all the appointments about the pulpit and chancel according to approved Methodist purposes. We want specially to commend all building committees who have an eye to comfortable pews. What martyrdom has been suffered on account of narrow, straight-backed seats in a church! Bishop Kavanaugh said on one occasion that he had no doubt souls had been lost because of miserable, heathenish church pews. They were kept away from preaching on that account, or, if present, were too uncomfortable to listen to profit.

At the conclusion of the sermon a collection had to be lifted to pay off a balance of indebtedness against the Building Committee. Three hundred dollars was called for, and about three hundred and thirty subscribed to a little while. It was cheerful giving, and all seemed delighted at the result, and none so much as those who gave most. This concluded, the house was formally set apart from all unhallowed or common uses. It has cost about twelve hundred dollars, and was dedicated free of debt. An address to the Sunday-schools in the afternoon and another sermon at night filled up the measure of a day's blessed labor. What preacher, called of God to stand between the living and the dead, can enjoy a Sabbath without the privilege of preaching at least once! We do not, however, recommend three as a necessary preventive of backsliding.

The occasion was the more enjoyed by the writer in meeting friends and parishioners of his early ministry. Thought traveled back over those fifteen intervening years and the clear manifestations of Providence noted here and there. Bright and happy years have they been, albeit full of labor, not unmixed with trial. We never met the loyal, loving Methodists of old Black Hawk circuit, who sustained and cheered their boy pastor, without displaying somewhat of the apostle's feeling in his interview with the Ephesian elders. If they received little of edification and instruction from him, he caught much of the spirit and power of a true Methodism from them.

Bro. Brown reported well of his charge. The collections will all be full, with a substantial advance along the whole line of church administration. He is a man of books, great and small. We mean collecting books, with the names of subscribers to the various connectional claims, and the debits and credits carefully balanced. He keeps an exact account with each fund, and knows to a nickel its present condition and future prospects. We made this observation without his knowledge.

Our home was at the parsonage, where the honor of the Lord dwelleth, and whose abelter we hope again to enjoy.

We take pleasure in inviting North Mississippians to consider the movement in their bounds in the interest of home education, an account of which is given on the first page of this issue. It is localizing the Chattanooga idea, with some important modifications.

"Race Prejudice."

This is the subject of a very readable article in the North American Review, for November, by Gail Hamilton. She is one of the sprightliest of American writers, and in this paper discusses a subject of never-failing interest to Americans—particularly to Americans in the Southern States. We have not found ourselves able to agree with her on prohibition altogether, nor with some of her theological knight-errantry; but we are very nearly of one mind on this living question. She very properly argues that the social mixing of the races is a matter of no concern to the churches. And the more it is tampered with and dogmatized about, the worse for both races and the peace of the country. It is true that the Negro hugs his race instinct as closely as does the Caucasian, and to legislate against it is as futile as unphilosophical. We reproduce the following from the article in the North American:

"If the races are providential, the race line is providential. If it is God who made the white man white and the black man black, it is God who made each choose to consort with his own. To say that Providence intended the race line to be perpetuated is not to lay to Providence the bondage, injustice and anguish which have attended its perpetuation. It is abundantly worth while to throw life and treasure and national existence into the resolution that no human being shall be enslaved. It is better to die a thousand deaths than to do this great wrong against man and sin against God. But it is not worth while to put even the contents of one contribution box into an attempt to secure by external pressure what is much better left to the working of natural cause, the adjustment of social relations. It is kicking against the pricks when there is no occasion to kick at all."

"Nor will it be had discipline for the Congregationalists to tarry in Jericho until their beards be grown, and they have learned that while we have the right and are under obligation to demand in the South absolute political equality and civil rights for all, we have no right whatever to meddle with the social relations or the ecclesiastical affinities in the South; that we might just as reasonably refuse to help to educate their ignorant masses unless the white will wear a three-cornered hat instead of a derby, as refuse it unless the white and black will go to the same church; that, in short, the pigments of Providence are not obliterated because we stubbornly prove ourselves to be color-blind."

Liberal Demands.

A convention of infidels, composed of representatives from the United States and Canada, has been in session at Cleveland, Ohio. They indulged in the usual tirades against the Christian religion, and resolved upon the overthrow of her peculiar institutions. The following from a press telegram indicates the spirit and aims of the reformers:

The Liberal League, composed of infidels from all the States and Canada, held a session yesterday, having changed its name to the Secular Union, and elected Robert G. Ingersoll president. Mr. Ingersoll, in thanking the union for electing him, said that the union demanded the repeal of the Sabbath, the taxation of church property, and the abolition of chaplains in the army and navy, and in Congress.

Mr. Ingersoll's infirmity is omniscience. He has long since overshadowed the Almighty—in his own estimation—and has been paid for it by gaping, curious Christians at the rate of $20,000 a year. But he has ceased to be a sensation, and lecture receipts will begin to decline. How the unseemly vagaries and blasphemies of that man, whose mind, logically, "is a vast howling wilderness," and whose writings are singularly destitute of one plausible argument, should ever affect a person of the least discernment, we can not imagine. The number of infidels in this country to-day in proportion to population is doubtless less than in the time of Tom Paine. These heretics corrode for awhile and then go out in darkness. They can never harm the church of the living God. Its foundations are deep-laid, and the assurance is infallible and eternal that the gates of hell shall never prevail against it. The lesson of such conventions, however, is an appeal to Christians to exhibit greater courage and an unbroken spiritual unity.

Sam Jones has begun his labors in Birmingham, Ala., assisted by Sam Small. The usual crowds attend the three daily services. The great tent, which was used at Nashville, capable of seating 4,000 people, has been secured for the occasion. One telegram stated that a thousand or more persons were unable to find standing room in the tent on Sunday.

Little Things.

BY REV. J. H. A. AHRNS, D. D.

A few years ago I heard a friend philosophize and say that a man could not for any length of time be occupied with little things without becoming little. That friend has since that time attempted many great things without becoming great. A truly great man is great because he appreciates the importance and utilizes the many little things pertaining to his situation and circumstances. On the other hand, the man of great pretensions, but of little practical worth and value, is he who always designs to accomplish something great, contemplates great enterprises, expects to put great agencies in operation, looks for great results and talks "big." The great has its constituency in many little things. The hour contains sixty minutes; the dollar, one hundred cents; the edifice, many little stones, planks and nails.

The Christian character—the highest good beneath the sun—is not acquired solely by attending great revivals, hearing great discourses of great preachers, but rather, after having been converted, by the renewing influence of the Holy Spirit, by conscientiously heeding and scrupulously obeying all the commandments of God. The least sin is a sin unto death, and the apparently unimportant Divine injunction is of great moment. We can not be too scrupulous; it is impossible to be too exact. A small leak will sink a great ship, a small break will bring about a disastrous inundation, a little poison will result in death and destruction. When the apostle asserts that whosoever offends not in word is a perfect man he designs to teach that perfection requires rigorous abstinence from all sin, however insignificant and harmless it may be deemed by the world. Many never attain to Christian perfection because they do not exclude the "little foxes" which devastate the vineyard of the converted heart. These foxes are envy, hatred, covetousness, sensuality, worldliness, pride, pugnaciousness, vanity, misanthropy. These sins are not avoided because they are scarcely deeded sins. They are foibles, weaknesses, about which God would not deign to be concerned.

In the business man it is also the close attention paid to little things which ensures success. Should he not close that small leak in the roof, the whole house will go to decay. If the rotten sill is not repaired, the whole house will settle and fall. If he be reckless in making useless little outlays, he will certainly fail in business as if overtaken by a severe loss. Refusing to pay little debts, we are dishonest—the same as if the debts were large. Giving, in selling, fifteen ounces for a pound is roguery—the same as if the loss incurred was great. Telling a little lie makes us a liar. Appropriating to ourselves what belongs to others, if it were but to the value of a copper cent, makes us a thief. Jesus assures that whosoever hates his brother is a murderer. Small moths create and have in the valuable carpet; a small mouse-hole in a grocery will entail great loss; those little, but terrible little "velocipedes" will keep even a great man awake all night. A good business man who handles daily thousands of dollars will not refuse to pay a just bill to the amount of five cents, but he will also, if need be, enforce the payment of ten cents due him. This exactness—penny-pinching they call it—astonishes many mortals of great designs. They do not perceive that it is this very trait of character which made that business man what he is—a tower of strength. Besides, if the payment of small debts is not insisted on, large debts can not be paid, nor would the ability ever exist to make large donations to the cause of God.

Sometimes I have thought that preachers often fail to ensure success in their important avocation because they appreciate not the value of little things. Fathers and mothers have been won for the church by the loving attention paid by the preacher to their little ones. Many dream dreams of greatness. They want to be great men and preach great sermons, but seem not to know that such sermons are not the product of great effort, but developed little by little. They are the outcome of close observation, diligent and constant study, habitual and prayerful meditation. They require incessant work—reading, thinking, writing, rewriting, expunging superfluities and insipidities, correcting, and finally, a delivery with fear and trembling. They want a great revival, but seem not to think that those who come to the mourner's bench at night are those who during the day had been visited by the faithful pastor, beseeching them to be reconciled with God; that those who present themselves for membership had previously consented to become members upon treaty by the man of God. The preacher who is diligent as a pastor, making the acquaintances of young and old in the families to which he has access, interesting himself in each, even the poorest member, arranging for good ventilation of the auditorium in the summer, for good stoves and fires in the winter, who has a good word for each and all—who is often found at the bedside of the sick, not disdaining to nurse the sick all night, weeping with them that weep—who looks after the little ones in the Sunday-school, providing them with a healthy literature—who will not rest until every family of his charge has been supplied with a copy of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and every child with a Sunday-School Visitor—the preacher who attends to these and other little matters will meet with great success, though he be not a great preacher.

The Lord's Money—How Spent.

It is absolutely remarkable how much of the Lord's money is spent for other than the Lord's business. I find many men, members of the Methodist Church, who can not pay their quarterly tithes this year because they spent the Lord's money in going to the Exposition at New Orleans, and two or three of them have said: "Well, I would give twenty dollars to missions this year, as I have been doing for years past, if I had back the money I spent at the Exposition." "But, my brother," I said, "was it your money or the Lord's money you spent at the Exposition. If it was yours, why, then, it is all right; but if you drew on the Lord for twenty dollars, you ought to pay it back. It is not right, not fair, not honest to take the Lord's money without asking for it, and then refuse to return it. Doubtless you promised yourself at the time to return the money with interest. You have held back the Lord's money all the year, and God has been forced to borrow money and pay interest on it. Suppose some man—one of your neighbors—were to treat you in a business transaction as you have treated God, what would you think of him? Would you think him a trustworthy, honorable man?"

One man said: "Oh, yes; but God is not pressing me as my other creditors are doing." "Is that any reason why you should take advantage of him? (God has put you on your honor in all these matters as no other creditor has done. He takes no deed of trust on your property, asks for no security, demands no collateral, draws up no papers, does not ask you to sign a note, but takes you on your honor, and now you are about to forfeit that. What would you think of a similar transaction between man and man? Really, my brother, is there any difference between the principle of common honesty that underlies transactions between men and that which underlies transactions between a man and his God—between a son and his father. If your son were to tinker and trifle with you and your money as you propose to do with your heavenly Father and his money, what would you think of him? Would not such a son be a grief and disgrace to you?"

Another brother said: "But my land, my money and my property are my own, and I will do with them just as I please."

"Oh, no, my brother; you, yourself, are not your own. God bought you with a price, even the blood of his Son. This is God's world—God's land on which you are surviving. He has loaned it to you. This house was made out of lumber sawed from God's trees. The clothes you wear were made out of God's wool and cotton. The bread and meat you eat are God's bread and meat. You drink God's water, you ride and plough God's horses, breathe God's air and live on God's bounty every day. What you give you ought to give most cheerfully, as an act of gratitude for God's great mercy and goodness to you. If you show yourself trustworthy with what God has loaned you, he will give you more. If you are unfaithful in the little you have, you would also be unfaithful in much if you had it. God knows you. He knows the secrets of your soul. He has tried you and proved you. He knows how unfaithful, how unreliable you are.

GILDEROY.

VERONA, MISSISSIPPI.

A Conference Book Agent.

BY REV. T. C. WIER, M. D.

Some time ago there appeared in the ADVOCATE, over the signature of Rev. G. W. Bachman, of the North Mississippi Conference, a suggestion in accordance with the above caption. Formulated into a proposition it might read thus: "Let the Bishop appoint some one member of each Annual Conference to act as book agent, whose duty it shall be to travel throughout the Conference and sell and distribute the books and periodicals of the Publishing House." For several reasons the proposition seems wise and good.

1. Bro. Bachman is one of the most successful book sellers of his Conference. For some months past he has been engaged specially in this work. He has a practical knowledge of the work—its difficulties and its methods of success. His opinion, therefore, carries weight with it, and is entitled to favorable consideration.

2. Not many preachers have a talent for selling books, and few acquire a tact for this kind of work. The writer puts himself down as a sorry book seller, and in doing so puts himself into line with not less than three-fourths of the preachers of his Conference. Perhaps I would be safe in saying that nine-tenths of the itinerant preachers of Southern Methodism are sorry book sellers!

But it is made the duty of every preacher to "see that all the people are supplied with our books and periodicals." True. If all our four thousand itinerant preachers were good drummers and assurers for the Publishing House, hundreds of thousands of books could be sold annually. The conception is a grand one; but so far it is comparatively a practical failure. Our authorities and book agents have exercised a marvelous patience in the process of incubation upon the idea that our preachers should and would sell our books. But as yet little result appears commensurate with the time and patience bestowed. Let us, then, try some other plan. The appointment of a book agent, or colporteur, for the Publishing House in every Annual Conference.

3. The appointment of such an agent would concentrate and individualize responsibility and secure better skill and greater success. A responsibility like this distributed among the preachers of a Conference bears with little weight upon any one man. But let one man, judiciously selected, be appointed to this work, and the result would be greatly increased efficiency and success.

4. A book agent for the Annual Conference would be in harmony with the principle of division of labor, as taught by political economists. "Jack at all trades and good at none," "too many irons in the fire," and some of them will burn, are rough old "saws," but they do execution along the line of our argument. A preacher in the pastorate has many and diverse duties to perform. Let these diverse duties be wisely distributed, and we shall reap whatever benefit comes from a judicious division of labor.

5. Finally, the appointment of a member of Conference to this special work need not do away with the responsibility of the several pastors to distribute our books and periodicals; but, on the contrary, it might aid the pastor at this point and render the old plan more effective. Moreover, the preacher so appointed, and traveling at large throughout the Conference, would be of great assistance to the preachers in their protracted meetings and revival efforts, contributing thereby to the success of the regular pastoral work. The services of Bro. Bachman in this particular, as rendered at various points, have been greatly appreciated by the brethren.

Louisiana Educational Society.

MR. EDITOR: This society in the promotion of the purpose of its creation has been endeavoring to organize auxiliary societies, reading clubs, literary and library associations in order to create and foster a sentiment in favor of public education throughout the State.

It also at the last session of the Legislature presented several laws providing for the better education of the school-aged children of the State, and for obtaining means for increasing the educational resources of each parish.

These measures were only partially successful. It has, therefore, been deemed wise to push the work with increased zeal next winter and spring. Indulging the hope that complete success will crown the combined efforts of all good citizens interested in this laudable cause, this society has engaged the Rev. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, Mass., to lecture throughout the State during the months of February and March next on the subject of "Public Education." This distinguished educator, so well known throughout the land, having for years taken the deepest interest in our Southern education, is fully worthy of your confidence and support. He is personally and favorably known to most of the members of this society, as well as to many in this city. In this effort we naturally seek the co-operation of the press, and trust you will aid in this good work by publishing editorially on this subject and doing all you can to arouse a deep interest in this matter.

Requesting your earnest attention to this subject, and soliciting an early reply, I am, Very respectfully,

I. L. LEVINT, Sec.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19, 1885.

Pulpit Habits.

MR. EDITOR: I have just scanned "Astar's" article on "Shocking Pulpit Habits," and am glad there is one who has the courage to frown down this modern clerical profanity. It has always reminded me of the swelling importance felt by the small boy when he first learns to swear big words. How humiliating and disgusting it is to all Christian people to hear, from the pulpit all sorts of irreverent and coarse appeals to the deity—sometimes coupled with jests to excite the mirth of the young!

Bishop Andrew in his last hours warned the young preachers against this thing; but time has only added to the growth of this sinful habit, and I sometimes think we excel the Northern pulpit in irreverent and hilarious worship. I believe a great deal of infidelity and callousness of feeling in the young has been the result of these thoughtless, wicked manners in our generation.

LEA WILLIAMSON.

"KNEELING STOOL"—"ASTAR"

MR. EDITOR: The most excellent and timely article on "Shocking Pulpit Habits," by "Astar," has my hearty approval, and many more bad habits might be mentioned; but, perhaps, enough for the present, except one. A presiding elder, at eleven o'clock, on Sunday, at quarterly meeting, in one of our handsomest churches, and before one of our most refined congregations, took up the glass pitcher from the board, turned it up and drank, leaving the drops of water dripping from his tobacco-stained moustache, although a silver goblet was at hand. How are we to excuse such as that?

But I took my pen to write about that "kneeling-stool." That would do damage, I dare say, in some of our best churches unless all the pews were provided with them. Strange as it may sound, I knew a most popular minister to be criticized for kneeling on his handkerchief while there was a nice, clean carpet on the floor. Once more: While in camp in Virginia a very distinguished minister came to our regiment to preach for us. We had a flour barrel for a pulpit and a camp-stool for him to sit upon, while "we soldiers" sat on the ground. When we were called to prayer a soldier, who was watching more than praying, perhaps, observed that the preacher used the camp-stool as a "kneeling-stool." The effect was not good. Said he: "If we can sleep on the ground, and sit on it while he preaches, he might afford to kneel down on that pine straw when he prays. It wasn't much kneeling down, no bow." Better not have the "kneeling-stool," but rugs and carpets, nice and clean, and then there will be no trouble.

SOLDIER.

The Missionary Student in College.

MR. EDITOR: It will be recollected by many of your readers that about this time last year I made an appeal for means to educate a young lady for the foreign mission field, to which a most generous response was given, by which the young lady in question was enabled to pursue her studies through the whole of last session. She proved to be an apt scholar and achieved high distinction in her classes. Her noble Christian character, her devotion and faithfulness in the discharge of her duties, won for her the admiration and confidence of all who had watched her course.

Her noble spirit of devotion to the great object of her life is not only unabated, but deepened. She desires to continue more ardently her preparations, while she appreciates to the highest degree what has so far been done for her. It is still more and more evident that the hand of Providence is in everything connected with her not only in impressing her mind as to her duty, but in calling so many generous spirits to her aid.

The success that has so far attended my humble efforts to assist her has given me so much pleasure and satisfaction that I have received her back into the college, assuming cheerfully the responsibility of securing, as before, the additional means necessary to carry her through another year, which will finish her course; and I do so as confidently as if the money was already in the bank, subject to call. Those who contributed last year felt it such a privilege, and the money has done so much good, that they will gladly renew their contributions. Others who did not respond will welcome another opportunity. Contributions were received last year from one dollar to ten dollars. Some even contributed to her personal expenses. A little more will be required this year, fully $200, to cover all her expenses. One lady from Louisiana has already contributed five dollars on this year's expenses. A gentleman in Vicksburg promises to provide liberally for her clothing. I do not feel that any urging is necessary. All I have to do is to make this statement and the money will come. Please send as last year to my address—Meridian, Miss.

A. D. M'VOY.
EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE, OCT. 26, 1885.

Pacific Conference.

The thirty-fifth session of the Pacific Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Sacramento, Cal., October 7, 1885, with Bishop Hargrove in the chair. L. C. Renfro was elected secretary, with Revs. A. R. Reams and M. C. Field as assistants. We notice that Rev. Richard Boyns was received on trial. He is a superb preacher all the way from Cornwall, England. Two years ago we met him and welcomed him to his first American pulpit. Dr. David Morison was present and represented the cause of church extension. T. J. Alexander and W. H. Townsend were discontinued at their own request. Rev. George B. Winton was received by transfer. The vote on the change of name is quite significant. It stood as follows: Ayes, 4; nays, 70.

The following were elected delegates to the General Conference: Clerical—T. H. B. Anderson, C. B. Riddeck. Alternates—O. P. Fitzgerald, George Sim. Lay—T. H. Bell, C. C. Clay. Alternates—W. B. Brown, G. W. Fentress. The finances showed an advance in everything except the preachers' salaries. The membership was increased about ten per cent. The following are the

APPOINTMENTS.

SAN FRANCISCO DISTRICT.—W. F. Compton, P. E. San Francisco station, C. B. Riddeck; Sacramento station, H. C. Christian; Oakland station, Samuel Brown; Stockton station, R. Boyns; Galt circuit, T. D. Bauer; Elliot circuit, M. J. Gough; Gilroy circuit, J. C. Pendergast; Mountain View circuit, M. B. Sharbrogh; Santa Clara circuit, to be supplied; San Jose station, R. F. Allen; Holister station, W. M. Winter; Salinas station, J. C. Hyden; Tres Pinos circuit, supplied (by A. Martin); New Hope and Isleton, J. S. Hutton; Peach Tree mission, D. M. Rice; Nashville advocate, O. P. Fitzgerald.

SANTA ROSA DISTRICT.—E. T. Rankin, P. E. Santa Rosa station, T. Atkinson; W. H. Howard, supernumerary; Santa Rosa circuit, S. M. Godbey; Cloverdale circuit, J. M. Folsom; Petaluma station, J. W. Atkinson; Potter Valley circuit, J. T. Roberts; Lakeport circuit, H. Neate; Ukiah circuit, G. M. Winton; Healdsburg circuit, J. B. Winton; Rockville, P. E. Page; Elmhurst station, F. M. Staton; Winters circuit, W. P. Andrews; Anderson Valley mission, J. M. Ward; Pacific Methodist College, S. M. Godbey and G. M. Winton.

COLUSA DISTRICT.—George Sim, P. E. Colusa station, T. H. B. Anderson; Guba City circuit, W. J. Mahon; Wheatland circuit, Joseph Kelsey; Diggs mission, E. H. Robertson; Chico station, J. C. Simmons; Princeton circuit, C. O. Steele; Penn Valley circuit, W. A. Booher; Lincoln mission, W. A. Booher; Arbuckle circuit, A. L. Paul; Maxwell circuit, L. C. Renfro; Knight's Landing circuit, R. H. Russell; Woodland, H. M. McKnight.

SHASTA DISTRICT.—J. G. Shelton, P. E. Red Bluff station, J. G. Shelton; Orland mission, J. M. Brown; Williams circuit, B. F. Burris; Millville mission, supplied (by D. Parrisham); Anderson circuit, M. V. Howard; Cottonwood circuit, G. W. Cannon; Adiu circuit, E. Palmer.

MERCED DISTRICT.—J. K. P. Price, P. E. Merced station, T. L. Duke; Plainsburg circuit, R. A. Sawle; Modesto station, J. M. Alanson; London circuit, T. C. Bartow; Sonora circuit, M. C. Fields; Mariposa circuit, Joel Hodgketh; Los Banos circuit, G. H. Newton; Madera circuit, J. H. Neal; Fresno station, A. L. Hunsaker; Fresno circuit, A. Odum; Kingsburg circuit, D. T. Belvol; Lemoore and Hanford, P. N. Blankenship; Visalia circuit, A. L. Reams; Woodville circuit, W. H. Cooper; Merced and Turlock mission, J. M. Overton; Traver mission, J. M. Overton; Lakeside mission, W. F. Meeler, T. D. Bauer.

A Preacher Pounded.

It took place at Lake Charles, La., a few days ago, in the lessening sunshine of the closing day. Neither the preacher nor his family anticipated any such assault, and, of course, were not prepared for it. It commenced very unobtrusively, and before we had the scales of ignorance knocked off our eyes the enemy (?) in force was inside the outer and inner walls, and there was no other course but to surrender unconditionally, and then the decision was that we should be well pounded, and so it was. And, sir, the different sorts of pounds we got would surprise you. The whole thing was handsomely done, and we bow thanks and blessings to all who served so well in this pounding brigade.

JAS. F. BRADLEY.

LAKE CHARLES, LA., Oct. 19, 1885.

Public opinion is a weak tyrant compared with our own private opinion; what a man thinks of himself, that it is which determines, or rather indicates, his fate.—Thoreau.

—We are sorry to see that Rev. Dr. M. S. Andrews, of Mobile, has been quite sick.

—The fourth Presbyterian Church in New York City, in East Thirty-Fourth Street, celebrated its centennial anniversary on Sunday last.

—The nine Methodist Episcopal Churches of Denver, Colorado, have agreed not to publish in Sunday papers the notices of their Sunday services.

—Dr. Pope, the great Methodist theologian and educator, is in very feeble health. The indications are that he will have to relinquish active work, perhaps, forever.

—A note from Rev. H. D. Kimball, pastor of Moreau Street Church in this city, but at present visiting relatives in North Louisiana, says, he expects to fill his pulpit on the second Sunday in November.

—Mrs. Johnson, the beloved wife of Col. Wm. Preston Johnson, president of Tulane University, died last week after a brief illness. The sympathy of this entire community is extended to the bereaved husband.

—We learn with pleasure of an interesting revival meeting in progress at Jackson, La., conducted by Dr. T. A. S. Adams, president of Centenary College. Several conversions have been reported, and some accessions to the church.

—The semi-centennial of the introduction of the tariff into New York has been observed. It would be interesting to calmly calculate what real moral and spiritual good has resulted from its introduction. The denial of the divine Sonship of Jesus emasculates Christianity and leaves it a lifeless theory and meaningless history.

—Rev. H. R. Singleton, our pastor at Canton, Miss., has been on two weeks visit to St. Louis and New York City. Glad our young friend has enjoyed a respite from labor and had generous brethren to furnish the "slices of war" for such a helpful trip. He has returned to engage in a meeting, assisted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Koscusko.

—In another column will be seen the advertisement of Mrs. C. F. Thompson, who has opened a boarding house at 159 Carondelet Street. She is the wife of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, of the Mississippi Conference, and has large experience in this line. Her success last winter will insure liberal patronage. Persons coming from the country will find there a real home and board at moderate rates.

—The 119th anniversary of the old John Street Methodist Church in New York City was celebrated on Sabbath last. Bishops Harris and Fowler were present and took part in the ceremonies. What sacred associations linger around that venerable structure! It was a cradle of American Methodism, and has witnessed the heroic march of more than a century. Each recurring anniversary ought to be appropriately recognized.

—We have received the following request for prayer, and cheerfully give it space: "The Christian people of Cincinnati, represented by the members of the Noon-day Prayer Meeting Committee of that city, send forth to the Christian world, a request for their prayers for Cincinnati, its ministers and people. Several evangelists will occupy the field and evangelize the work of the pastors during the coming fall and winter. Let every child of God breathe a prayer to heaven, for Divine favor upon this city and its special work."

—The revival at Brookhaven continues with unabated interest. Immense congregations crowd the church at each evening service, and give earnest heed to the gospel message. As many as seventy-five penitents have come to the altar at one time, a number of whom have been happily converted. Up to Saturday night thirty-two had been added to the membership of the church, with the prospect of a much larger gathering. Almost the entire community is interested, and other churches will probably reap substantial fruits.

Rev. J. T. Nicolson, of McComb City, has rendered the pastor faithful, efficient service during the past week, and will remain to the close of the meeting. He has preached in the spirit of the Master, and his works will follow him. Dr. Johnson rejoices in the fact that a large number of his pupils have been the subjects of saving grace. It was, indeed, refreshing to hear so many bright, gifted young women give a clear ringing testimony of the power of redeeming love. That is as it should be. Church schools must be religious schools. We know not as yet whereunto the Holy Spirit will lead in this great Pentecost.

—Were you building a monument to remain for the ages, how majestic and substantial would be its construction! How much more august and solemn is life!—Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs.

Bishop Keener spent last Sunday week at Knoxville, Tenn., preaching in the morning at Church Street and at night at Broad Street. Of the Bishop, as a preacher, and his sermons on that day, the Holston Methodist speaks as follows:

Bishop Keener is a poet by nature—a poet of the order of Coleridge—and could have made a reputation as a novelist, and possibly as a poet. Indeed, Post Oak circuit, of which he is the author, is a fiction of high rank.

He is not an impassioned orator. He is clear, strong, and lofty; but lacks the passion that makes preaching take with the lower classes. His exegesis on this occasion was ingenious and interesting; although we did not fully endorse it.

We speak the more freely, because the Bishop is of an order of preachers that are not much flattered by the public prints. Reporters go wild over fast talk. The sermon reminded us of one of Bishop Palmer's, when he swung loose after a half dozen failures. It was an avalanche of intellect, a cyclone of thought, a tempest of spiritual power. The grandeur of thought, the dignity of language, and the burning earnestness produced by faith in the word and love for the hearer, bore everything before it. There was little weeping, no shouting, but profound thinking and deep conviction in the mass of hearers.

The Democrat-Tribune, published at Minden, La., where the great revival was held, has this to say of that town. It is a generous tribute to the genuineness of the work done in the meeting:

Dancing parties and balls are a thing of the past in Minden; nearly all of the young ladies and gentlemen have joined the church. Still society in Minden is livelier than ever and on a higher standard. Monday night the Young Men's Christian Association meets; Tuesday night we have prayer meeting at the Baptist Church; Thursday night at the Methodist Church, and the Social Reading Club meets Friday night. All of these gatherings are enjoyed by our people and they improve the head and the heart and keep alive and active the higher sentiments of the human mind.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

BARVER & JAMISON,
Publishers.

One of the best evidences of the hard work is the fact that a footpad tried to rob an editor, the other day.

In another column will be found the advertisement of Harper & Bros., "Young People," a delightful little magazine that brings joy and gladness to the little men and women of the household, fifty-two issues a year.

Professor looking at his watch: "As we have a few more minutes, I shall be glad to answer any question that you may wish to ask." Student: "What time is it, please?"

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Test them.

Guest at the Interval House to waiters: "Nut-crackers, please." Waitress (returning with a plate of soda-crackers): "This is the only kind we have, um'am."

P. WERLEIN.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of pianos, organs, and musical instruments, increases at the Werlein Music Palace, 135 Canal Street. The wonder is where will the custom come from to absorb the line of stock. The terms offered with satisfactory prices and safe guarantee offered by Mr. Werlein, gives the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is constantly spreading out in every section, and receding rapidly. A large and well selected stock of musical and musical instruments of every description. Call and see. Courteous treatment is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished on application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails, has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. It offers the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

Send fifteen cents in stamps for a copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, they should payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colic, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most solid, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and which has been recommended to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUAX, New York.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS. Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOUTHWEST SYRUP should always be used for children's teething. It soothes the inflamed gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. 25c a bottle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SOUR BREAD.

Sour bread is caused by poor yeast, or an excessive fermentation in the dough. Sour biscuits are caused by the use of an adulterated, impure, or improperly compounded baking powder. Both are unwholesome, producing intestinal derangements, indigestion, etc.

The sour or alkaline taste attending the use of cheap, low-grade baking powders is due to the fact that such powders are not properly combined, and that the ingredients used in them are impure. The cream of tartar of the market used by their manufacturers is adulterated from five to twenty per cent. They do not know how much lime it contains, and hence are unable to mix it with the alkali or soda in proper proportions. As high as 11.85 per cent of lime has been found by the chemists in some of these powders, due to these causes. The result is an imperfect action which renders the bread, biscuit, or pastry heavy, sour, and disagreeable, or a residuum of lime and dirt, imparting a bitter taste to the food. Any baking powder that does this is unfit for use.

There can be no heavy or sour bread, biscuit, or cake where a perfectly made pure baking powder, like the "Royal," is used. In the use of the Royal no residuum is left, and the loaf raised by it is always sweet, light, and wholesome, and noticeably free from the peculiar tastes complained of. This is because it is composed of nothing but absolutely pure materials, scientifically combined in exactly the proper proportions of acid and alkali to act upon and destroy each other, while producing the largest amount of raising power. We are justified in this assertion by the unqualified statements of the Government Chemists, who, after thorough and exhaustive tests, recommended the "Royal" for Government use because of its superiority over all others in purity, strength, and wholesomeness. There is no danger of sour or bitter bread or biscuit where the Royal Baking Powder alone is used.

WALKER--THE BEST WASHER

Warranted 5 years, satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. The Best, most Efficient, and Durable Washer in the world. Has no rival, the only machine that will wash perfectly clean without rubbing. Can be used in any sized tub, or shifted from one tub to another in a moment. So simple and easy to operate the most delicate lady or child can do the work. Made of Galvanized Iron, and the only Washer in the world that has the Hubber Bands on the Rollers, which prevent the breaking of buttons and injury to clothes. No Excessive Jarring. Total price, $8.00. Agents' sample, $3.50. Also the celebrated KEYSTONE WRINGERS at Manufacturers' lowest prices. Circulars free. We refer to editor of this paper. Address: ERLE WALKER CO., Erie, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED STOCK-DOCTOR

FOR THE PICTORIAL COMPLETE STOCK-DOCTOR. Including Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Dogs and Bees. By Dr. J. P. BAKER, V. M. D., D. V. M., D. C. V. M., D. E. V. M., D. F. V. M., D. G. V. M., D. H. V. M., D. I. V. M., D. J. V. M., D. K. V. M., D. L. V. M., D. M. V. M., D. N. V. M., D. O. V. M., D. P. V. M., D. Q. V. M., D. R. V. M., D. S. V. M., D. T. V. M., D. U. V. M., D. V. V. M., D. W. V. M., D. X. V. M., D. Y. V. M., D. Z. V. M. Book, absolutely without competitor. For circulars and terms, address N. D. THOMPSON PUB. CO., St. Louis, Mo., or New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PRIZE.—Send six cents for postage, and receive free a copy of the book "The Art of the Artist," by J. P. BAKER, V. M. D., D. V. M., D. C. V. M., D. E. V. M., D. F. V. M., D. G. V. M., D. H. V. M., D. I. V. M., D. J. V. M., D. K. V. M., D. L. V. M., D. M. V. M., D. N. V. M., D. O. V. M., D. P. V. M., D. Q. V. M., D. R. V. M., D. S. V. M., D. T. V. M., D. U. V. M., D. V. V. M., D. W. V. M., D. X. V. M., D. Y. V. M., D. Z. V. M.

ROOMS AND BOARD, AND ALSO MEALS FURNISHED.

Mrs. J. D. KILLIAN AND Mrs. N. H. HAWTHORN, No. 175 St. Louis Street, New Orleans, La. Cuts and churches very convenient.

100 ENVELOPES, 4 inches long, with Name, and Station Address, PRINTED on each corner, cost 30c. ADVOCATE'S COMP. N. O.

FOR SALE.

Registered Devons.

Ball, Taney, 2 years old, price $100. Ball, Lady May's, 18 months old, price $125. They are of the best stock in the country, and fully equipped. THOMAS MOUNT, Vicksburg, Miss.

FOR SALE.

Juvenile Herd of Jerseys; Registered, A. J. C. Thoroughly acclimated. Home raised. 3 Heifers, 1 Bull, at Farmers' prices. Cheap. W. K. STUART, OCEAN SPRING, MISS.

MAT. MAHORNER, JACON, MISS.

Breeder of Jersey Cattle.

SERVICE BULLS.

FORBENTON 2nd, 2125, Grandson of Reddy, F. 185, H. C. (Sire of Prince 2nd-402, 12, 67; Dan 2nd, 125, 17, 5; 1500 (dam of Varietta 35, 70 in one day) and full sister of Duchess of Bloomsbury 2nd, 9, 22, and Justice 12, 5, 66.

KIFFER 185, 6, Grandson of Coonassie through her father, King Koller. Born a daughter of the 1230, tracing to Lady (Grandson Stevens) and King 2nd of Mauden—92 5, 6, 22, better in 12 months and 15 days.

PHILIP HALLARAN, MANUFACTURER OF Plain Tin and Japan Ware, ALSO DEALER IN COOKING AND HEATING STOVES AND RANGES, Sole Agent for New Goodwyn Range and Cottage Stove, 31 CAMP ST., BELOW PUDRAS, NEW ORLEANS.

WOMAN OR MAN 125 Per Cent

PROFIT.—Taking orders for our celebrated oil portraits. From knowledge of the business necessary. $2.25 (incl. Free). Two hundred copies $2.00 per week on our orders per day. Reply Bros. & Co., 110 Broome St., N. Y.

$5.45 FOR $27c.

Any one sending to us, and the address of 10 of their friends, will receive, by mail, Sample Quizzes, 1000, each costing 25c, for only $5.45. This is a genuine offer and a fortune to you. Certain Sample Quizzes, Niagara Supply Co., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

MONEY.—Send 5 cents to Specimen, 100, 1000, 10000, 100000, 1000000, 10000000, 100000000, 1000000000, 10000000000, 100000000000, 1000000000000, 10000000000000, 100000000000000, 1000000000000000, 10000000000000000, 100000000000000000, 1000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000000000000000, 10000000000000000000000000000000000000, 100000000000000000000000000000000000000, 1000000000000000000000000000000000000000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 1000, 100, 100, 100, 1000, 1000, 100, 10

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending October 27, 1885.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	6 9 16 @
Ordinary	7 9 16
Good ordinary	8 11 16
Low middling	8 11 16
Middling	9 11 16
Good middling	9 11 16
Fair	10
Middling fair	10
Galveston middling	10 1/2
Mobile middling	10 1/2
St. Louis middling	10 1/2

SUGAR.

Interior	—
Common	—
Good common	—
Fair	—
Good fair	—
Fully fair	—
Prime	—
Strictly Prime	—
Choice	—
Seconds	—
Yellow clarified	6 1/2 16
Gray clarified	—
Choice whites	—
Granulated	—

MOLASSES.

Syrup	31
Fair	—
Strictly Prime	—
Choice	—
Fancy	—

RICE.

Fancy	—
Choice	—
Prime	—
Good	—
Fair	—
Ordinary	—
Common	—
No. 2	—
Rough	—

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 00
Minnesota wheat	5 00
Extra fancy	5 37 1/2
Water wheat patents	6 00
Choice	5 12 1/2
Fancy	5 37 1/2
Extra fancy	5 10

COIN PRODUCTS.

Cream meal	3 10
Corn meal	2 35
Grits	3 00
Hominy	3 25

GRAIN, ETC.

CORN:
White	—
Yellow	—
Mixed	—
OATS:
Western	36
BRAN:
W. cwt.	90
HAY:
Choice	20 00
Prime	18 00

PROVISIONS.

PORK:
Mess.	9 02 1/2
Prime mess.	9 00
Rumps	8 75
BACON:
Fancy breakfast	9
Shoulders	—
Sides, clear	—
Sides, clear rib	—
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	10 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	—
Sides, clear	—
Sides, clear rib	—

FISH.

MACKEREL:
Extra No. 1, in bbls.	15 00
Half bbl.	8 00
No. 1, in bbls.	9 00
Half bbl.	4 50
No. 2, in bbls.	7 50
Half bbl.	4 10

GROCERIES.

COFFEE:
Rio, choice	9 1/2
Cordova, choice	12
Java, choice	22
BITTER:
Western dairy	16
New York dairy	16
Country	—

LARD.

Choice	6 1/2
--------	-------

TAS.

Choice	57
--------	----

OILS.

Fair	25
------	----

COAL, CASES.

Coal, cases	17
-------------	----

COAL, BBS.

Coal, bbs.	12
------------	----

COTTON SEED.

Cotton seed	35
-------------	----

LARD.

Lard	61
------	----

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:
Western, per crate	10 00
Chicago, per 100	10 00

POTATOES.

Louisiana	1 75
-----------	------

KROUT.

W. bbl.	5 00
---------	------

ONIONS.

Louisiana	—
-----------	---

WATER.

Western	2 75
---------	------

BALING STUFFS.

BALING:
10 b.	10 1/2
20 b.	11 1/2

BALING TWINE.

10 b.	15
-------	----

TIES.

10 b.	1 25
-------	------

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	40 0
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00

EGGS.

Western	17
---------	----

WOOL.

Lake	21
------	----

LARD.

Louisiana	18
-----------	----

BURY.

Bury	10
------	----

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 26.—Ex-First Assistant Postmaster General Lay died at 6:30 o'clock this morning of consumption.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 21.—A terrible explosion of gas took place in No. 2 slope of the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company at Plymouth this morning. The explosion was caused by a miner who entered an abandoned portion of the slope which was marked "dangerous" with a naked lamp upon his head, thereby firing the gases and causing a terrible explosion. When the gas was ignited all the men in the slope were violently thrown to the ground, or against cars, or against ribs of the gangway. The lights on the heads were extinguished by the shock of the second explosion, and all were in confusion making their way through the flames, and mangling with great difficulty, the rescuers a place of safety.

The following is a list of the dead thus far: Anthony Spinetti, John Levitsky and Dennis Titus, laborers. The wounded are thirteen. They are horribly burned, and breathe flames to such an extent that their injuries are considered fatal. The slant at which the explosion took place is one of the largest operated by the Delaware and Hudson Company. The average daily hoist of coal is from 350 to 400 carloads. Over 400 men and boys are employed in preparing this coal for market.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 23.—A meeting of 300 citizens last night, presided over by Supervisor Ingalls, adopted resolutions for the removal of Chinatown from the city limits, and containing a pledge to vote against all nominees at the city election, on Nov. 3, who are not pledged for the removal of Chinatown.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 24.—It is stated that steps have been taken by the Catholics to bring to the attention of the Spanish government the offensive denunciation of Catholics indulged in by Rev. Dr. J. L. M. Curry, the new minister to that country. The language at which Catholics here have taken exception has not been denied by Dr. Curry, nor, so far as known, has he attempted to explain it.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 25.—The semi-centennial anniversary of the introduction of Unitarianism into Newport was celebrated in the Channing Memorial Church here to-day.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 25.—The order of the Chief of Police, closing all saloons on Sunday, was generally observed to-day, and no arrests have yet been reported. One man closed his doors and tapped a keg of beer on the sidewalk and dispensed refreshments to all who passed, free of charge. A policeman knocked the faucet out of the keg and dispersed the crowd. This is the only disturbance reported.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 25.—For the first time in twenty years there is a famine in us, the result of the long strike of the miners. Prices have advanced to $3 10 on assorted qualities, and even at these figures it is impossible to get them. The few small lots that are being handled are shipped here from Williamsburg and Newcastle, Pa. Within the past week it has been impossible to get more than from twenty-five to fifty keg lots from the Wheeling district.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 25.—The great tent was crowded to hear the Rev. Sam Jones and Sam Small, of Georgia, at the morning, afternoon and evening meetings. The evening service had the greatest crowd of people ever gathered in Birmingham. Mr. Jones preached in the morning and evening and Mr. Small in the afternoon. There will be three services a day hereafter.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Canon Farrar preached in Trinity Church to-day a large and fashionable congregation. Hundreds were unable to gain admission. The distinguished clergyman preached from the text: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

The Fourth Presbyterian Church, in East Thirty-fourth street, to-day celebrated its centennial anniversary by appropriate religious services.

The 119th anniversary of the old John Street Church was celebrated to-day in the old church, at Nos. 44 and 46 John street, three services being held. Rev. Bishop W. L. Harris, of this city; Bishop G. H. Fowler, of San Francisco, and others officiated.

Evangelist Moody has suffered his first defeat since he became famous in revivalism. On the East Side is an area of a square mile, that is said to be the most populous in the world. The blocks are solid with six-story tenement houses, in which large families commonly dwell in three or four rooms. Protestant churches became scarcer and scarcer in this part of town, until at length not one was left in what one city missionary termed the Godless mile. There were many Jewish synagogues and two Roman Catholic churches, but the majority of the people did not worship at all. This state of things became somewhat of a scandal to the Protestant Christians of New York, and a fund was raised to build and keep open the Broome Street Tabernacle. The intention was to inaugurate the house with a revival so remarkable as to rouse the quarter and arouse a permanent congregation. To that end Moody was enlisted, with Sankey once more associated with him as vocalist; and by them the tabernacle was opened last Sunday, with a programme providing for meetings three times a day for a month. The undertaking has already been abandoned so far as the revival is concerned, and the Moody and Sankey meetings are suspended. No appreciable impression was made; the audiences were not large, and not a single conversion was effected, though the two revivalists labored at their best.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 26.—A reign of terror is now in progress among street car passengers. The chief of police to-night offered a reward of $500 for information that would lead to the arrest of the men who placed the explosives on the Jefferson avenue car track last night. Twenty-two passengers were in the car when the explosion occurred, but luckily no one was seriously injured. The car was shattered. The explosions are almost exclusively confined to the lines which refuse to take any strikers back. At 11 o'clock to-night a car on the Mound City line was shattered by an explosion near Lindell Park. Only two passengers were on board when the shock occurred. One was badly burned and thrown violently down an embankment. The car wheels were broken and the car thrown from the track and badly demolished. As soon as the news of the outrage reached the mayor he increased the reward to $800 for the arrest of the dynamiters.

MERIDIAN, Miss., Oct. 26.—The Meridian fair opened to-day. By to-morrow the exhibits will be in place. There is every indication that the fair will be a success.

FOREIGN.

GENOVA, Oct. 22.—A train on the railway while ascending the Righi Mountain from Lake Lucerne, fell into a ravine yesterday. One person was killed and twenty-five were dreadfully injured.

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—A great fire broke out here to-day and caused enormous losses. Seven persons were killed and four injured.

SOFIA, Oct. 24.—The Servians are invading Bulgaria, advancing by way of Kilsaura. They crossed the frontier at 10 o'clock to-night. A force of Bulgarians is advancing to meet them.

ROME, Oct. 25.—A furious water spout burst to-day in the vicinity of Carrara, and was followed by heavy floods. The roads and railways were torn up, and much property was destroyed.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Dispatches from Portugal, capital of the Department of Dordogne, state that a frightful accident has occurred at the Charade quarry, in that town. While a quarry of workers were engaged in taking out stone the quarries suddenly fell in, destroying a village situated on the ground above the pits, and killing a number of persons. Many are buried in the ruins, and it is doubtful if any of them can be rescued in time to save their lives.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Dr. Moore, of Dorchester, who recently ran off to East Saginaw, Mich., with a domestic, creating the impression that he had been murdered, has again made himself notorious. After coming back and being received by his family he induced his wife to sell her Dorchester property, on the plea that he intended to buy a farm in Delaware. As soon as he had received the money he again departed for Michigan, leaving his wife and family destitute.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Now is the Time to Subscribe.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

An Illustrated Weekly for Boys and Girls

16 pp., large 8vo. Price Five Cents a Number, $2 00 a year. Postage free to all subscribers in the United States and Canada.

The Standard Volume will begin with the Number issued November 3, 1885.

The position of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE as the best juvenile paper is firmly established.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

It is a weekly miscellany of the choicest reading for boys and girls, and contains the best literary and artistic work anywhere to be purchased.

Every line is subjected to rigid editorial scrutiny, in order that it shall contain nothing harmful, and that it shall be an effective agency for moral, mental, and physical education.

Its stories have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, without anything pernicious. Its articles on scientific subjects, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names assure accuracy and value. Its historical stories, biographies, and essays, present attractively the most inspiring incidents in history, and in the lives of notable men and women. Papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes have their place, while fine pictures by the foremost artists and engravers lavishly illustrate its pages.

That HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE fulfills the requirements of young readers is proved by its large circulation in this country and in Great Britain, and by the approval and co-operation of fathers and mothers and pastors and teachers everywhere.

There is always a presumption that a pure-hearted will be a right-minded man; and it is delightful to see such a man stand up before the tribulations of life, and, in the face of his own physical frailty, and of the opposition of a clear ray of conscience that scatters them like mist. The divine light of a good mind is too much for the myriads of gulls. —Martineau.

Dr. Davis's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is strongly recommended for the speedy cure of Throat and Lung complaints, as there always exists a great necessity in every family for such an invaluable remedy. For Constipation use Dr. Davis's Liver Pills.

COMFORTS, THEN LUXURIES.—In making plans for the fall and winter expenditures, consider first the comforts of life, and then the luxuries. Those of fashion and taste—warm under clothing, comfortable wraps all around, conveniences for the bedrooms, including some method of heating. Attend to these, even if the old-fashioned furniture in the parlor must do awhile longer, and the new dress he wool instead of silk.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

RUFALA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Skipperville circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Ozark circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Skipperville circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Ozark circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Skipperville circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Ozark circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10
Beulah circuit, at Spring Hill	Oct. 10

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10
Greensboro station	Oct. 10

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10
Pensacola station	Oct. 10

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 10

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 45.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1527.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Singles and wires of deceased Preachers sent free.
All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WERLEIN.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. G. HONNIGGUT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

MANUSCRIPTS.

BY ADLAI E. FROST.

I hold him great who, for love's sake,
Can give with generous, earnest will,
To him who takes for love's sweet sake,
I think I hold more generous still.

How before the noble mind
That freely some great wrong forgives:
Yet nobler is the one forgiven
Who bears that burden well and lives.

It may be hard to gain, and still
To keep a lowly, steadfast heart;
Yet he who loves has to fill
A harder and a truer part.

Glorious it is to wear the crown
Of a deserved and pure success;
He who knows how to fall has won
A crown whose lustre is not less.

Great may be he who can command
And rule with just and tender sway;
Yet is diviner wisdom taught
Better by him that can obey.

Blessed are those who die for God,
And earn the martyr's crown of light;
Yet he who lives for God may be
A greater conqueror in his fight.

The Two American Centennials.

BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON.

At once we recall the centennial of American independence and the centennial of American Methodism. Each of these celebrated its hundred years at its birth-place, the dear old homestead. American liberty went back to Philadelphia to hold its grand patriotic thanksgiving; American Methodism carried her songs of gladness and thank-offerings to God to old Baltimore, where constitutional, Episcopal Methodism was created and baptized. Around each of these two most important events of the past century the patriot and Christian each gathers delightful memories, learns valuable lessons and new and grateful reasons for trust in the providence and mercy of our heavenly Father. We devote this paper to the consideration of the centennial of American Methodism.

Methodism has been well named "the child of providence." It seems readily to adapt itself to all soils and ends with equal facility. It has a hardihood of resistance to African heat or Polar cold. It flourished amid the different governments readily, and has the largest facility for adopting customs and for acquiring language in which to preach Jesus, translate her hymns and teach her precious experience of the grace of Christ. American Methodism is the Episcopal form of the same doctrines and usages which mark the whole family all round the world. While Wesleyan Methodism, the mother of us all, has been a most wonderful success on continent and island, almost world wide, and has been most wonderfully impressed with the power and approbation of the great head of the church, the Episcopal form has demonstrated its wisdom and excellence, in a pre-eminent degree, to diffuse the gospel, to convert sinners and to train, utilize and employ the church of Christ.

When the centennial met at Baltimore, in 1884, it was the first distinct reunion of the representatives of entire American Methodism. The white, the red and the black races met as Christian brethren engaged in the same holy work, cherishing the same honored parentage and prize the same blessed truths and united by the same holy ties to the grace and cross and family of our blessed Lord. The meeting was a spiritual "world's fair." Commodities were exchanged, valuable information interchanged, new and more complete estimates of value formed or increased and new ties of fraternal affection were formed or enlarged. A common Christian sympathy was strengthened, and each, in his distinct social sphere, cherished a deeper interest in the success of his brethren in the Lord. After the tests and demonstrations of a hundred years, doctrines, principles of action, agencies and appliances could be impartially examined by the eye of correct criticism, their excellencies appreciated and direct attention given to amend whatever appeared defective or imperfect.

The session, though short, developed a large amount of religious truth, of intellectual and spiritual forces. The extent of the culture and talent and learning exhibited in conducting the history of our beloved Methodism, as well as the zeal and Christian heroism and entire consecration to God, manifested in her efforts and success, gladdened the hearts of the entire family and excited wonder in the beholders. The growth of the church startled even the most careful and earnest student of church statistics. Her success under God was properly attributed to her doctrine so beautifully accordant with Scripture and to her self-sacrificing itinerant system, prudently and properly modified as to terms of ministerial relations, to suit the wants and claims of a church called, in its infancy, "the child of providence." More than ever was the profound impression present that the presence and grace of God seen in the pious zeal and holy living of the past century, were the great main spring of church efficiency and her triumph over many, great and accumulated difficulties. While education and learning in the ministry and the membership were accepted in all their high value, and joy filled every heart at the extent and growing facilities for diffusing and securing correct religious education, the call of God to the ministry and the abiding necessity for the union from on high, the power of the Holy Spirit shone in parallel lines of holy light with the enjoyment of the witness of the Spirit and the power of faith of a consecrated church walking in the light of the Lord.

The wisdom and plety of our fathers were distinctly seen in the use of the class meetings and love-feasts, where babes in Christ were steadily and carefully trained and developed into Christian manhood and womanhood. No more valuable co-workers than the earnest, pious, faithful class leaders of the earlier medieval history of our Methodism. The proper training and early conversion of the children and the best means of attaching them to the church of their fathers had prominent place. The hymnology of the church received careful attention.

It is no idle boast to say, that our church hymn book embodies more lofty poetry, with purer theology adapted to every phase of religious life and character, than any other hymnal since David ceased to be a composer of sacred music. It has not only sublime thought, the Bible teachings and the sweetest music of the Wesleys, but has played the part of the industrious, skillful honey bee and gathered the best honey in the best hymns of our English-speaking poets. These have been suitably collected and appropriately arranged. Every plaintive note of penitence for sin, precious repose of the soul on Christ, joyful gratitude for revelations of grace and blessed hopes of heaven, each finds in our excellent hymn book words ready coined for lip and heart. Departure for any other form of spiritual songs is an injury to correct, religious impressions, convictions, sentiment and conduct. Of course that was not a law-making body, they had neither power nor authority, but their wise advice and Christian council, in many regards, came with more religious force than a church canon issued under most authoritative surroundings. The occasion was rich with blessed memories and vocal with deep-toned praise to our heavenly Father. A hundred years had given their approval to truths taught, Christian requirements, general religious plans and agencies. Our grand success in gathering numbers and in the conversion of souls should silently, but mightily, excite deepest humility and sublimest trust as kindred graces of gratitude and joy. What an impressive lesson is taught us to walk in the same old paths, around which for a hundred years God has written such marked approval! Attachment to our church should direct consistent Christian action and inspire proper church patriotism, yet this should never degenerate into blind prejudice or selfish bigotry. Love should always be ready to recognize defect when discovered and to correct it; to admit deficiency and to supply it. The truth fears no honest, rigid scrutiny, but great care should be exercised to guard the ark from the unholy touch of restless desire "for something new," a disposition to forsake the old and tested and proven for new experiments either in change of doctrine, polity or usage.

The centennial will awake earnest, attentive study of the biographies of the fathers, founders and propagators of American Methodism. Here are full galleries of the grandest heroes ever consecrated to truth and honored of God in their efforts for his glory. The nature, design, spirit, purpose, effort and success of Methodism will be studied and understood. New and deeper interest and pleasure will be given to the fireside and family circle, new topics of thought and framers of character will influence the young in the facts, figures, names and deeds in the history of our church. The beauty of principle, the power of faith, the excellence of holiness will strongly impress us as we read the trials and toils, the sufferings and the successes of those who have secured forces and bequeathed to us so rich a heritage. Our children will learn to love Methodism through the names, virtues and labors of those who lived and died in her service.

Our excellent Discipline will be more carefully read and understood, appreciated and enforced. Church literature will shed its pure and elevating influence more fully around the home circle. Individual sense of responsibility and of pleasure to work for God will be more general and impressive. While the soul shall record all over the past hundred years "what hath God wrought," the eye and the heart will more tenderly look on the pillar and the cloud still guiding to future and sublimer triumphs in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There are no novelties in our holy Christianity. The proper union of the divine and the human agencies must be present in every effort for individual or associated good. The Holy Spirit must guide into all truth and regenerate and sanctify the soul. Regeneration by the Holy Ghost is indispensable as a preparation for earth's duties, trials and triumphs, as well as for the hymns and homes of heaven. God's glory must be above all mere denominational aims; the salvation of souls higher than any estimate of church propagandism. Goodness is the loveliest and most comprehensive of Christian virtues and associates around it the approbation of man and the blessing of God.

CARLETON, Kentucky.

"Shocking Pulpit Habits."

MR. EDITOR: I arise to move a vote of thanks to "Astar" for his suggestive article in your issue, of October 15, under the above caption. I do not know who he is, whether a conscientious steward who, according to the Discipline, wants "to tell the preachers what they think wrong in them," or a private member who has had his sensitive nature outraged by the "shocking" violations of good taste pointed out. But no matter who he is, the kindly offices he performs for the brethren deserve acknowledgement, and will, doubtless, result in good. Preachers of all men in the world ought to have all the asperities toned down and to be as nearly faultless as possible in manner and matter. The trouble is that the brethren are sometimes so sensitive that they will not take personal appeals in a kindly spirit; hence the only way to reach them is through the paper. It would be well, therefore, for "Astar" to continue his good-begun work and in a kind and loving manner to point out not only all the "shocking pulpits habits" which he sees, but also the offences against good taste which the clergy commit out of the pulpit. Indeed, if more of us were to follow "Astar's" example and tell our neighbor of his faults, we would be doing only our scriptural duty. Mr. Wesley has a searching sermon upon the text, "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor and not suffer sin upon him," in which he makes good the point that anyone, who sees in his neighbor an error which might be corrected and fails to tell him of it, is guilty of a sinful neglect. Those of us who fail to follow "Astar's" example may well say, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother."

In order to clear my skirts in part and to prevent a recurrence of pain to many good people as well as scandal to the church, I want to tell of some things I have seen done by the clergy. There is a certain distinguished minister, a constant reader of your paper, who has the most shocking habits when he happens to be in the pew. If the sermon does not suit him, he has a way of manifesting the most excruciating agony; he will twist and screw in his seat, distort his features, frantically thrust both hands through his hair and finally, as if it was absolutely unbearable, he will bury his face in his hands and sink his head so low behind the pew as only to leave visible a little bald spot on the crown. Think of it! This habit of his has caused many a timid preacher to stumble and falter and well nigh fall altogether. Oh! Mr. Editor, please mark this place in your paper so that the worthy brother may see it and in future give mercy on his less-gilted brethren.

Another thing which happened in a station in one of your patronizing Conferences I want to relate, so that every preacher, traveling or local, may avoid a similar error. A most gracious revival meeting was in progress. A talented and sweet-spirited Presbyterian minister had preached a melting and persuasive sermon, the congregation were moved to tears and it only remained to make a few words of invitation to crowd the altar with penitents when the local preacher, who was to conclude the services, spring to his feet and, with a stage-struck air, exclaimed, "Who was Cyrus W. Field?" and continued as a Bombastes Furiosus to glorify the Atlantic Cable, which had just been completed. Think of it! A local preacher having so little sense of the proprieties of an occasion on which the salvation of souls was depending. Oh, it was pitiful! Mr. Editor, can you not do something to prevent our local preachers from such gross offences?

Another thing I want to refer to, and it is more in sorrow than in anger. Two eminent divines were once engaged in a newspaper controversy which waved quite warm, and one repented to the effusion of the other about on this wise, wrote he: "The weather is hot and bad smells are disagreeable, dust is a capital deodorizer. Moses recommended it under certain circumstances; so, therefore, let me make a little paddle of my pen and cover up with dust the offensive emanation." Alas! alas! and this, too, was written by one who could not in the least degree tolerate any indecency in others. "Oh! wad some power the gifle gie us to see ourselves as others see us. It wad from many a blunder free us."

Another thing very much to be deplored is the efforts of some ministers to discount the sermons of others. The following circumstance absolutely happened once at a District Conference, viz: A comparatively young, but rising, minister had preached a very elaborate sermon, full of figures and fancies, of rhetoric and pathos, and a venerable and honored member of the District Conference scarcely waited for the sermon to be cleverly ended before he seized his hat, stalked out of the church and stood at the door violently gesticulating for another to follow him. Mr. Editor, do please use the columns of your valuable paper to warn your brethren not to be jealous of each other's gifts and not to disparage each other's efforts.

Let "Astar" continue to point out the errors of his brethren; it may be that some one may be able to return the kindly office to him some day; that is, provided, of course, that he ever needs it.

By the way, there is only one part of "Astar's" advice that I might venture timidly to modify a little; that is, when he writes, "If a preacher asks a Bishop or a stranger to preach for him, and he has no kneeling-stool, it is a downright act of discourtesy." I know a preacher who is six feet, three inches long, and it might be that a kneeling-stool would hold him up uncomfortably high—Besides, I know of another preacher who actually slipped off of a kneeling-stool. Therefore, I desire to suggest through you to "Astar" not to require every preacher to provide a kneeling-stool until he finds out how long the Bishop is or whether the stranger preacher is accustomed to the pesky thing.

CHINA ASTAR.

A Review of Drummond's "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

BY REV. W. SPILLMAN.

I have just finished a careful reading of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," and have come to the conclusion that multum in parvo and truth free from error might, with great propriety, be placed in letters of gold at the head of its title page. I esteem this book as far as it goes next to the Bible, for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. The author, by his close observation of natural laws and his knowledge of the organic kingdom from the lowest order of animal life and through all grades of life up to man, has been able to trace the unity of natural law with that of the spiritual. He brings natural law face to face with the Scriptures, and finds no controversy or disagreement, but each throwing light on the other. As an unalloyed reasoner he has struck out a new line of thought, and although clear and conclusive in his reasoning, the reader finds much for the exercise of his mind. It is a work that should be closely studied by every minister of the gospel, as it will give new and broad ideas of sermonizing. The author, without intending it, fully confirms what St. Paul wrote to the Romans that, "The invisible things of him (God) from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made."

The author, in his preface, says: "The real problem I have set myself may be stated in a sentence. Is there any reason to believe that many of the laws of the spiritual world hitherto regarded as occupying an entirely separate province are simply the laws of the natural world? Can we identify the natural laws, or anyone of them, in the spiritual sphere? The vague lines every where run through the spiritual world is already beginning to be recognized. Is it possible to link them with these great lines running through the visible universe, which we call the natural laws, or are they fundamentally distinct. In a word, is the supernatural natural or unnatural?" * * * "Nature, it is true, is a part of revelation—a much greater part, doubtless, than is yet believed, and one could have anticipated nothing but harmony here." In reasoning on these propositions or queries he says, "It is quite erroneous to suppose that science ever overthrows faith, if by faith that is implied that any natural truth can oppose successfully any single spiritual truth."

In his chapter on Biogenesis he shows by the laws of nature, "That life can only come from pre-existing life"—and as to spiritual life he holds no organic change; no modification of environments; no mental energy; no moral effort; no evolution of character; no progress of citizenship can endow any single human soul with the attributes of spiritual life. The spiritual world is guarded from the next in order beneath it (the carnally minded,) by a law of Biogenesis. Except a man be born again * * * except a man be born of water and the Spirit he can not enter the kingdom of God." "Where," he asks, "is the capacity for heaven to come from if it be not developed on earth?"

In his second chapter on degeneration he clearly shows, from physical science and natural laws, that those who have been raised from a state of nature to a higher kingdom—the kingdom of God—by being "born again," may and will degenerate by neglecting to nourish and cultivate a growth in all the graces of the Spirit. To show what is essential for a man who has been "born again," raised from a lower to a higher kingdom, the spiritual kingdom, to avoid degeneration, must continue to exercise all the powers guaranteed to him by regeneration, otherwise he will sink into a state of inanition.

The author devotes his next chapter to growth, then death, death in sin and death to sin; then mortification; then eternal life and which he defines "as perfect correspondence with perfect environments." This highly instructive chapter is followed by one on environments; then comes conformity to types, to be like Christ; then follows two chapters, one on semi-parasitism, and in which is clearly shown the awful condition of the man who does not make any effort for his physical, mental, moral or religious condition—a perfect parasite in the world. The book, then, closes with a chapter on classification of the different characters of men.

COLUMBUS, Mississippi.

The Work of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The week commencing Sunday, November 8, will be observed throughout the civilized world as a season of prayer for young men and Young Men's Christian Associations. This season had its origin in a resolution adopted by the International Convention of the American Associations held in Albany, N. Y., in 1866, and has been observed every year since at the recommendation of the subsequent conventions.

There are now 2,500 of these associations in the world, distributed as follows: North America, 934; Great Britain, 503; France, 72; Germany, 549; Holland, 396; Switzerland, 263; Denmark, 43; Belgium, 24, and a dozen, more or less, in each of the following countries: Spain, Italy, Turkey, Russia, Austria, Japan, Syria, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Madagascar and India. The American Associations are the strongest and best organized. They number 623 general associations, 100 college, 69 railroad, 31 colored and 12 German. The yearly current expenses of the associations in America amount to $750,000. They own eighty-two buildings valued at $3,532,000, and have a total net property of $4,353,000. Four hundred and fifteen men are devoting their whole time to the work as secretaries, librarians, and gymnasium instructors.

The expense of the railroad associations is $75,000 per year, two-thirds of which sum is contributed by the railroad companies, who testify to the great benefit resulting to their employees through this special department of Young Men's Christian Association work. Last year 1,700 young men professed conversion in the college associations. There are thirty-one State and Provincial organizations, each with its executive committee and annual convention. These committees expended last year, in their work, $32,031. The international committee located in New York City in 1866, and continued there ever since, is the executive committee of the International Conventions, which meet biennially. It consists of thirty-three members, nine advisory members, and fifteen trustees, representing all parts of the United States and Dominion of Canada. It employs ten secretaries whose business it is to visit all parts of the two countries, advising with and counseling associations, both State and local. The expenses of the committee for last year were $30,496, which amount was contributed by friends of the cause.

—All human discoveries seem to be made only for the purpose of confirming more and more strongly the truths contained in the sacred Scriptures.—Sir John Herschell.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1885.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

TAMPER TUNED.

BY INVAILER.

O land below, so full of weal
O heart, so ready to break
Oh for that rest on nature's breast—
That sleep which knows no waking!

Like Galilee, I'm troubled sea
In troubled waters tossed;
With sinking feet the Christ I meet
While the dark waves I'm crossing.

O clouded skies! With weary eyes
Grown dim with "watch and weeping,"
I look on high to God I cry,
"Thy waves are over me weeping."

O land afar, with pale stars,
I see thy radiance gleaming;
The light shines down from Jesus' crown—
In countless stars are gleaming.

Oh temple lowed and early lost!
By faith my harp I'm stirring
O'er waters wide, o'er starry side:
The other shore I'm nearing.

I see the star that shines afar
To guide me o'er life's ocean;
Each dazzling ray makes light the way
And calms the wild commotion.

O'er my frail bark the billows dark—
Aye, "all thy waves" sweep o'er me!
"Breakers ahead!" With fear and dread
I "breathe the waves" before me.

"Fishers the beams with radiant gleams
From your bright star of glory,
I hear again the sweet refrain—
The alleluia's song and story.

O pilot! guide me o'er the tide,
Lead my frail bark to be stranded,
Till safely moored, my harp is secured,
On Canaan's shore I'm landed.

Homer District Conference.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CHURCH EXTENSION.

Notwithstanding this Board has been in existence but a little over three years, and at first was considered by many in our church as a doubtful experiment, it has become an important factor in the church, while its success is beyond question. Its success, with the amount of means placed in its hands, in advancing and establishing Christianity in the Western States and Territories, as well as in the bounds of our older Conferences, commends it to the support of all who love our Lord Jesus Christ. It supplies a deficiency long felt in our church in aiding communities, towns and cities in the erection and completing comfortable houses of worship. We feel that all that is needed to commend the sympathy, confidence and support of our people is that they be instructed as to the purposes and workings of the Board of Church Extension. To turn a deaf ear to a call for help from this Board is to acknowledge either our ignorance as to its purposes or a want of Christian benevolence or an absolute want of financial ability. It comes to us with the claims that stopped the Samaritan in the gorges of the mountains between Jerusalem and Jericho, and commanded his Christian charity in relief of the helpless. It is the cry of infant Methodism in the far-off West, or that of weak and struggling Methodism in our older Conference, saying, "Come and help us." It is a co-ordinate part of our missionary work, and should be as dear to the heart of the true Christian. This call has been answered by all of the thirty-eight Annual Conferences; yet not to the extent of their ability. Doubtless the cause of this arises from a want of proper information on the subject in many sections of our Conference.

Dr. Morton, our efficient corresponding secretary, in his last annual report says: "Twenty-two Conferences out of thirty-eight show an increase in the regular collections over the previous year, while fifteen show a decrease, and one stood still." On examination of his report we find that our own (Louisiana Conference) is one that fell behind, and the decrease was more than one-half. While he reported $511.45 in 1883, he only reports $235.10 in 1884. On examining the report of the treasurer of our Conference Board we find that the large and wealthy Homer district, with sixteen circuits and 3,794 members, only paid to this worthy cause last year, $17.40, while the Conference Board appropriated to the Shiloh Church, in this district, $100. Surely our people this year will remove this reduction upon their liberality.

We will now give you some interesting facts and figures from our corresponding secretary's report for the fiscal year on March 31, 1885:

1. Of monies collected—

The General Board paid on gen'l account... $18,776.97
The Gen'l Board (from Gen'l Fund acct)... 18,144.11
The conf. boards related from regular collections... 17,659.98

Matine cash collection by the church... $1,944.14
Add to the amount...
Amount other than cash belonging to Gen'l Fund... 10,316.75

And we have paid and pledged by the church... $63,360.48

2. What has been done with it—

The General Board helped last year thirty-four churches. It donated to them $3,611.51, besides loaning to them $17,551. The Annual Conference Boards helped 176 churches, to which they have made a donation of $18,776.62. The whole number of churches helped by both the General and Conference Boards is 210. This shows an increase over last year's work of seventy-five churches, and lacks but three of being four churches aided for every year in this year. These churches have received, from the General Board and Conference Boards by donations and loans, $19,960.17. If the Board of Church Extension had accomplished this in one year, while in the infancy of its existence, what may we not expect of it when developed into the proportions of manhood, with the whole church of 900,000 laymen converted to its policy and support?

We would call attention to the fact that this Board has two distinct funds. The first is the general fund, raised by regular collections and private donations, to be donated to churches, to assist in the erection or completion of church-houses, where parties are not able to do it themselves. The second is designated a "loan fund," to be raised by setting apart a per cent. of the regular collections to that fund, and private donations. This fund can not be used except as a loan for the erection or completion of church-houses, or the securing of eligible lots to build upon. We quote from a leaflet published by the Board in reference to this fund: "It is not, as some have supposed, a fund held in shares, and as an investment belonging to a building and loan association, * * * but is to be the property of the church, and used and held for its extension in the earth. Nor is it an endowment—the principle being invested, and the interest only being used to build churches. But it is intended that the entire fund shall be a free cash capital, every dollar of which shall be kept loaned out to churches for a long or short time, and with or without interest as occasion may require. Ample and legal security for these loans will in every case be taken, and their return will be enforced, as in no other way can we keep faith with the donors and carry out our purposes."

To show what may be done by this loan fund we refer you to the work done through the "Tasker Fund, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Though only $18,000, it has been turned over and over till it has done the work of $19,915, and helped 109 churches, and its usefulness is but begun." We regret to learn from the secretary's report that but little over one-half of the assessment for last year was collected; yet he says "every dollar of it, and more, was needed."

We are gratified to learn that many of our preachers have already taken up their church extension collection, and that some have gone over their assessment. This speaks well for the increased interest that our people feel in this God-honoring cause.

We would recommend the following preamble and resolution:

Whereas, The apportionment made by the parent Board to our Conference does not make the pro rata to our district more than $30; and, whereas, we feel the importance of meeting this collection in full; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will make a faithful effort to bring up the whole amount of this assessment to the Annual Conference.

JNO. A. MILLER,
R. A. SMITH,
W. A. J. LEWIS,
W. J. KRAMS,
Committee.

Conversion of an Infidel.

I write of a man almost forgotten, because his contemporaries have nearly all passed away. He died more than thirty years ago, fifty-four years of age. His birth, in the year 1830, in a New England family, named Benton, caused the usual gladness at such an event. Baptized "William Henry," he grew up as other boys, but confessedly above the average of his associates, both as to body and mind.

An under-graduate, he left Yale College upon the death of his father, and when of age, his mother having married a second time, he went forth to engage in the active duties of life. The occupation chosen was that of a play actor. Doubtless he had been fascinated with the sibilant and sounds of theatres, and at the applause which popular performers received. Believing he could achieve the success of the best, he made the attempt by seeking employment at a theatre in Richmond, Va. He soon became a star actor at Nashville, New Orleans and other cities. During this time he wrote for newspapers in prose and poetry. A small volume of each was printed for his friends only. That of poetry the writer has possessed, and that of prose he has seen. He was a member of the historic Infidel club of Rochester, N. Y., and the writer of one of their annual essays which attracted considerable attention when published. He withdrew from the stage and became interested in the publication of a newspaper in Natchez, Miss.

While still a young man he moved to Vicksburg, where he established the first newspaper. His paper pleased his patrons, and its politics suited the national authorities, by which he was appointed postmaster in that town. Successful in business, he bought land near town, sold out his paper, resigned as postmaster and engaged as an amateur farmer, whose specialty was grapes and wine, grain, gress and stock—theorizing and experimenting in a way regarded by many as visionary and extravagant. He was healthy, industrious, studious, and seemed to enjoy life, but with no one to enjoy it with him. He visited no one, nor did any neighbor visit him. When he was postmaster a young man, clerk of one of the courts, became intimate with him, though there were several years between their ages. They were often together, and seemed attached to each other. They would meet in the post-office at night, play chess or on the flute, without much proficiency at either, or they would converse upon the general topics of thought and inquiry. This intimacy was continued at the vineyard, where the ex clerk was the only visitor, except on Christmas Day, when an invitation would bring from town a select company to drink home-made wine and enjoy the company and conversation of their host and each other.

In the year 1812 there was an unusual revival of religion in Warren county and around. Revs. C. K. Marshall, B. M. Drake, Preston Cooper, and others, were instrumental in bringing it about and carrying it forward. Prominent persons were reported as converted—some of them acquaintances of the two men who often met at the vineyard. This caused them to think upon the subject of Christianity, and to talk about it. They had been intimate for many years, and had conversed freely upon every subject except Christianity. The religious of all nations and ages probably were discussed objectively; but the revelation of the Bible in its entirety had not been considered—certainly in no sense subjectively received. The ex-postmaster had read the Bible much as a part of the necessary culture of all who would keep abreast with the most advanced minds of the day. He was familiar with its history and biography. He even saw wisdom in the plan of salvation, and admired the system of revealed jurisprudence. He held in highest estimation the Volunteer Surety for men, and his meeting the penalty when required to satisfy the failure of those whose obedience he guaranteed, as related in the New Testament. But, admitting the facts and the theory as superior to all mythology, he rejected the whole as having any claim upon his credence or acceptance. He was generally known as "the Infidel." His visitor, on the contrary, admitted all as true and authoritative, but did not know anything about it. He had been raised strictly a Methodist, had been favored with the teaching of preachers by private instruction and public preaching. Add to all this, he had a sensitive mother whose peculiarity was at times to express her religious gladness by shouting. He may be called an agnostic.

The Infidel and agnostic, if properly so called, conversed freely and even earnestly about the revival and what it meant. The Infidel would ask questions, suggest doubts and difficulties, and expect answers from the agnostic, who would bring into exercise the faith of his education and express decidedly what he had been taught, giving as authority the preachers, whom he believed, and his mother, upon whose testimony he would risk his destiny.

On one occasion the Infidel asked very earnestly, "Do you really believe that anyone can know, so as to be satisfied upon the subject, by a simple assent of the mind as to revelation, so called, and a purpose to obey implicitly the God of the Bible?" The answer of the agnostic was that such had been the teachings of his early years, and he believed it to be true. The Infidel replied: "I must consider any person a fool who can thus believe, who does not seek to know at once. I would not wait a moment without testing the possibility of obtaining such an amazing result." This was the substance of a conversation which was followed soon by the conversion of an Infidel and an agnostic. The latter had no faith in what he believed, he was troubled; conviction was wrought upon conscience, and he decided to seek religion as he had seen others seek who professed to have obtained. It must suffice here to state that he became a convert at a camp meeting, in Warren county, in 1842. His first delightful thought was that of kindness that he now knew what he had believed. The next thought was, how happy his friend at the vineyard would be if he could have the same experience. His strong mind would take in so much of the true and grand, and his poetic temperament would cause him to feel "there is a bliss beyond what the minstrel has told."

The new convert again visited his friend with strange feelings as to what might be his reception. His friend met him with outstretched hand, but with a look of suppressed laughter. His first words were: "I suppose you are not afraid to die now. I have heard of N. and R. and you getting religion lately." The question was unexpected and embarrassing; but a prompter seemed to supply this answer—"If faithful to the small beginning in religion, I believe I shall not be afraid to die when the time comes." This relieved both, and then a long conversation followed about the revival, its incidents and results.

The new convert attended church in Vicksburg the Sabbath following, and to his surprise, as well as that of all the congregation, the well-known Infidel was present where he had never been seen before. Dr. B. M. Drake preached upon the general failure of men to attain and obtain what they sought, and the few who were successful were as much disappointed as those who failed. The preacher in charge, the Rev. P. Cooper, then opened the door of the church, remarking, "Perhaps some of the congregation were convinced of the truth of the sermon; they may have failed to obtain or were not satisfied with the possession. Our church," said he, "is open to all such. They may try us for six months, and we will do the same by them. Perhaps they may realize something worthy of an All-wise Creator. At any rate, the church will sympathize with them, tract them and pray for them." The Infidel, with stately walk, advanced to the altar, gave the preacher his hand with these words: "Mr. Cooper, I think you open the door of your church very wide. I have tried the world, as you call it, and have been generally successful, but by no means satisfied. If it is to be found in churches, I am not ashamed to ask and seek it. I shall be thankful for your prayers, and when I think there is any use I will pray for myself. You know, I suppose, I do not believe as I understand you all do." His friends came to him, pressing their hands together without a word. There was a strange reciprocity of pleasure; only a tear on the cheek of each.

It was not altogether joining the church; but the Rev. P. Cooper visited the vineyard, talked to and prayed with the new penitent and gave him books to read, which were read with an avidity rarely excelled. There could be but one result in such a case. He was converted in the classroom, bright and clear as to himself, professed with emphasis to others and accepted by the public—all having confidence in the man, and could not doubt his testimony.

He was one of the few who take no step backward. He would talk, pray in public, and soon was licensed a local preacher. It was expected that he would make some show as such, having been a play actor; but, on the contrary, he was plain, scriptural, and spoke much of his own experience. He was popular with the irregulars and with those seeking an advanced state of religious life; but the intermediate classes did not approve his preaching. These did not desire full maturity of Christian progress and, of course, denied its possibility or that it was of Divine appointment.

He lived about ten years constantly preaching—often to negroes. The incidents of his success would be interesting; but, like that of thousands, though strange in its individuality, it was not unlike the work of the Divine Spirit through other instrumentalities in time past. He died in the full possession of his mental powers. His expressions of trust at his death were as full as the deepest altitude of his friends could wish. Rev. L. Campbell and his long-time friend were with him. The former preached a funeral sermon; the latter gave a verbal biography, such as is herein written.

H. G. COOK.

From the Work.

DOWNSVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our church here in DownsVille was crowded to its utmost on Wednesday night, October 14, to listen to Sister Goodale lecture on the thrilling topic—Intemperance and its evils. The entire audience gave undivided attention, while she reasoned of "righteousness, temperance and judgment." Many went out to hear her prompted by curiosity and some with all the prejudice usually entertained for female lecturers; but as they listened to her thrilling words this gradually melted away and we felt that she was an earnest, true woman. Her manner was composed and dignified, her style chaste and beautiful. Her mind is richly stored with poetic sentiment, and her words fell like music on the ear; but she does not alone in sentiment, for she brought argument and statistics to prove that alcohol is the social, moral and spiritual curse of this country.

After the address, fifty-two names were secured as signers of the pledge, and the organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was completed by the election of the following officers: President, Mrs. G. E. Hammond, Methodist; vice-president, Mrs. S. J. Roberts, Baptist; vice-president, Mrs. M. C. Edwards, Presbyterian; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. C. Bulla, Baptist; recording secretary, Mrs. Ella Ford, Methodist; treasurer, Miss Jessie Roberts, Baptist.

The occasion was one of pleasure, and will, no doubt, be of profit to this section. However, we are a free people from the cradle already, as this parish is under the local option law. Sister Goodale addressed the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and I think it was inspiring to our earnest missionary workers and will long be treasured in memory's store-house. Sister Goodale won all our hearts to her cause, and may she win her prize!

R. A. COLLIER.

UNION CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The meeting opened on Friday night, October 10, and closed the following Tuesday night. The weather was fine, congregations good, and besides the great strengthening of the people of the Lord we counted sixteen conversions and there were fourteen accessions. On Monday we organized an auxiliary society of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society with twenty-one members, and we got twelve subscribers to the Woman's Advocate of Missions. The society elected the following officers: Miss Ella G. Smith, president; Mrs. Sarah McClendon, first vice-president; Mrs. W. H. Jackson, second vice president; Miss R. C. Bush, recording secretary; Mrs. H. Norrisworthy, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Susan Bush, treasurer. Sister Bragan is doing a fine work in this department of the church, and is rapidly gathering round her intelligent workers who will greatly aid in instructing the people and bringing up the church to its duty in paying to the support of mission work.

J. M. WEEMS.

How Did Christ Ordain His Apostles?

MR. EDITOR: In an article, some time ago, in the ADVOCATE I wrote that all the visible evidence of Christ's having either baptized or ordained the apostles was to be found in the symbolical washing performed in the washing of their feet, and I challenge any man to show, without assumption or presumption, or without a reference to unreliable profane history, any other circumstance as a visible ordination, save that of the Holy Ghost. The one who was chosen to fill the place of Judas was designated by lot without any further ceremony. And all we see done by any of the apostles afterward in the ordination of ministers was to lay their hands upon them, which was taught of God in the days of Moses in the consecration of ministers to the holy office of the priesthood or ministry, which was their God-given ordinance after having received the sacred symbolical washing. If any one can trace the origin of the imposition of hands to any other authority than that of the Old Testament, taking nothing but the Bible as his evidence, he is at liberty to do so.

Take up the various church histories whose authors were sectarian, and sectarianism existed and multiplied right in the presence of Christ and the apostles, and you are informed that Christ did this or that, that this formula or ceremony was used, etc. The Baptists will tell you that no one but regenerated people were baptized and that no one but immersed ministers were commissioned and sent forth, and, of course, they would have you believe their manner of doing this is apostolic and the only valid way, etc., but fail to give us the circumstance when Christ ordained his apostles. Of course they assume that or that as they do nearly everything they hold to and preach, and loudly boast of their purity, fidelity and consistency. The reading of profane history even makes an honest inquirer after truth blush for shame that even an unregenerated man would put forth such a claim and appeal to the word of God as his only guide. No wonder that fair-minded inquirers after truth have styled them bigots, unreasonably wedded to a creed.

Our Lord's professed creed was, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill," etc., and his grave charge to all in his presence should be heeded to this day, "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments and teach men so, shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven," etc. With this charge he and his apostles took this holy book and went forth to preach and the New Testament gives this account of it and of the many types and symbols used as a shadow of good things to come, the childhood state of Christianity, mere believers and their families going unto a degree of faith actually to receive Christ fully as to be regenerated and made perfect, and purification, or a symbolical washing otherwise called baptism, the passover and the imposition of hands, all of which were institutions of God under the law and the prophets, not my saying only, every Bible reader can see for himself, which Christ came to confirm and maintain to the end of the world, affirming that it was more possible for heaven and earth to pass away than for that word to fail. I know it may be said that we are not under the law, but under grace; but that avails nothing. That is all true, yet our nursery feature of the church and ordinance originated from the authority of the Old Testament Scriptures, the New Testament being inspired authority for the statement. Let a man lay aside all profane history and the traditions of the elders, as he should do when they flatly contradict one another, and take the Bible alone and then see what he would come to. I am heartily disgusted with what I read and see in this age of contention. If what Jeremiah prophesied (xli, 10, 11,) has not come to pass, then we fail to understand. As I have before shown that what Christ did was by the authority of the law and the prophets, and as that required a symbolical washing with water as a consecration or an ordination. I now show you that Christ himself refers to his own remarks or teaching on the occasion of the ordination of his apostles as having been made when that ordination took place, and then the churches may believe and teach what they see proper as a tradition, but I ask them not to condemn me.

St. John seems to give a more detailed account of Christ's doings and sayings than any of the other sacred writers. He tells of the symbolical washing in the washing of the apostles' feet in the thirteenth chapter and then in the fifteenth chapter, 10-20 verses, he reports another interview with the apostles concerning what he had done, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit," etc. As will be seen from the verse above that what Christ said after a certain period "thou shalt know hereafter," (xlv, 7.) After being baptized with the Holy Ghost or regenerated they were to take a nearer relation to him after they had fully believed and who could teach that regeneration can be had with less faith, that taken in all the evidence necessary thereto to actually receive him and all that is promised in him. (St. John 1, 12) When this was reached he would no longer call them servants as he did when he ordained them in the symbolical washing preparatory to sending them forth. Also, again, he refers to the new commandment given on that occasion, (St. John xlii, 34,) which is the first time this new commandment was given, which so few have ever made any use of, not considering upon what it was based, namely, a new or Christ-like nature which was to be given by the baptism of the Holy Ghost. (xv, 17.) And then says in the twentieth verse, "Remember the word that I said unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord." This undoubtedly shows that he reminds them of their ordination and what commandment he gave on that occasion and what he said to them with a view of their going forth. Nothing is so clearly shown from profane history as the traditions of the elders, as in this fact. And, yet, who believes it? Who is impressed with this truth?

We hear it heralded with much boldness and pomp that ministers not immersed, "nothing but immersion is valid baptism," "and no one but immersed ministers have the right to ordain or baptize," that the immersion idea comes right down from the apostles who were themselves immersed and ordained after the Baptist "get up." Oh, you immersionists, not Baptists, for baptism is not an immersion, but a symbolical washing by sprinkling instituted of God in the law as a shadow of good things to come, and foretold by the prophets to be done with clean water and as performed by our Lord as our Prophet, Priest and King, and in this manner washed or baptized his ministers and sent them forth to do likewise, symbolically wash or baptize all nations as foretold by the prophet Isaiah, "So shall he sprinkle," or symbolically wash "many nations," (lii, 15.) This was to be done by his apostles as a fulfillment of God's word, Assumptions made and attached to God's word, making it contradict itself, amount to nothing when the Scriptures furnish any apposed chance. Tell us what you will about John's dipping people in the water of Jordan, and while the word means to cleanse or wash the very idea that had always been attached to water, washing or baptism, and it amounts to nothing, for still we can see how they were baptized in the river Jordan at the water's edge, "with the water" as reported by the sacred historian. Immersion traces and immersionists have tried to blot out God's will as foretold by the prophets as to the mode of this symbolical washing, but some things of which they were ignorant have been left as evidence of a treacherous heart and hand laid upon the sacred word; and to-day some of them say they would give up their right arm before they would give up immersion, and would rejoice in the destruction of the "Scriptures," which St. Paul says "is profitable for doctrine, for correction, for reproof, (and they know it,) for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God, 'a minister,' may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." (I Timothy iii, 16) You immersionists, not Baptists, prove the immersion of the apostles without so assumption or vague inference if you can. Prove their ordination after your style as plainly as I prove their ordination and baptism, and then you can, with some consistency, claim the immersion succession. We can trace our sprinkling from Moses to Christ our Prophet, and from them to this day.

On the day of Pentecost the people, with the apostles waiting, as directed by Christ, to get what was symbolized, the washing of regeneration, right there in the temple, (Acts ii, 42,) where that brass laver was that had been used to contain water with which to symbolize this phenomena. They baptized, as was foretold by Ezekiel, both water and Holy Ghost baptism are mentioned. (Ezekiel xxxvi, 25, 26) Both to occur, so there is no account of their repairing to a river or pool. Surely no one would presume that such a thing was about the temple. These apostles appeal to prophecies as evidence of the occasion. How will you immersionists trace your immersion line here without unreasonable assumption? How will you make out your immersion in the house of Cornelius without unwarranted presumption? How in the full? How about Paul in the house of Judas? Here you are compelled to more than presumption, even to fanaticism. Paul had been without eating anything for three days, unable to go anywhere. With the sprinkling line there is not a single obstacle. There is no account of their going out to a creek or river, because to sprinkle none was needed. Let people become Bible students and their difficulties will vanish. Seek to be regenerated and then the Spirit can lead you unto all truth.

J. W. ELLISON.

The Substantial Philosophy.

MR. EDITOR: I have watched the pages of our current religious publications for some recognition of the claims of the new philosophy. But up to this time I am not aware that a single line has been written for or against substantialism in any of our church papers, magazines or quarterlies. I believe, however, I may expect a discussion of "the wave theory of sound" by Prof. Humphries of the Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Willard Hall, editor of the Microcosm, and author of the "Problem of human life, here and hereafter." Dr. Hall is the founder of this new school of philosophy, which is destined at no distant day to overturn and completely annihilate many

HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D., REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HUNRICOTT.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1885.

The Baptist Record quotes this from a factious writer: "We who have had experience in raising gourd know that if we pull them too early, they shrink; we pull some of our young preachers too soon."

President Cleveland has appointed Thursday, the twenty-sixth instant, as a day of national thanksgiving. His proclamation, which will be found in another column, is a most reverent acknowledgement of the Divine blessing upon our great country. And let all the people say, Amen!

A Baptist minister for more than thirty years in Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri testifies that "those church members who read their denominational papers and books most are the most devout readers of the Bible and the most efficient workers in the churches." Hear that, ye pastors; and see that an ADVOCATE is placed in every family.

The eye of the world is always on the main chance. It will trade in religion to get gain, or sell it if sheikels are to be obtained. Ingersoll caricatures Christianity for coveted cash, and now some shrewd Stylock is trying to get Sam Jones to go North and lecture on morality for $100 a night. The brave evangelist very emphatically declines such a proposition. The love of money is not one of his sins, and he disdains to make merchandise of the gospel.

The "Stead Defense Fund" opened by the Methodist Times, of London, to assist Mr. W. T. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, in his defenses before the courts, has become popular. Some are coming in from the best classes in amounts ranging from a shilling to £200. This prosecution has grown out of his investigations into, and publications of, the shameful traffic in young girls, so common in Christian England. This prosecution is intense; but the good people are rising up in indignant wrath all over the United Kingdom, and are marshaling money and influence for his defense. That the right may triumph let every Christian pray.

Romanism has little to boast of in morals, public or private. Where her influence is dominant and her sway unchallenged there we find her saddest record. She claims a superior appreciation of the marital relation and prides herself on her absolute prohibition of divorce. But, alas! for the social impurities that disgrace Roman Catholic countries. The following facts found in the English Churchman are significant: "The proportion of legitimate to illegitimate births is in London 24 to 1, and in the city of Rome, 1 to 2; while the proportion of murders to the population is in England 1 to 178,000, and in Roman States 1 to 750."

The Missionary Magazine gives an account of a little church in Missouri that ought to stir the slumbering energies of everyone at ease in Zion. It is a noble example worthy of all emulation. The little church has only eighteen resident members, and their entire property is not worth more than $14,000; yet they have undertaken the support of a native preacher among the Talugas. They have preaching once a month; but they take up a collection at each service—one for the support of their pastor, the other for missions. That is a capital idea, and is born of the constraining love of Christ—the two collections at each service—one for the home pastor and the other for the absent preacher among the heathen. Every church or circuit ought at least to support two preachers—one at home and another abroad.

A Victory for Prohibition.

The following note from Rev. Thos. Cameron, of the North Mississippi Conference, brings cheerful tidings. The enemy must go. Intelligent conviction has been aroused, and a mighty public sentiment has thundered its fiat:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name! Goodness goes for prohibition. The contest was a hard and bitter one, but the saloon must go. At Pickens the same is true. So certain were the whisky men there that they could not succeed, that they made no effort. So for twelve months these two towns are free. No whisky is sold at Ebenezer or Richland. Indeed, there will be none within the bounds of the Richland circuit after Christmas."

Earnest workers at all points, both in and out of the church, secured this result.

An Imperative Public Duty.

Much has been written in reviews and magazines of late on the administration of justice in our criminal courts. The difficulties have been analyzed and the duties of judges and commonwealth attorneys discussed with refreshing plainness of speech. To the law's vexatious delays—their tardy visitation of needed punishment upon the grossest criminals—must be attributed the too frequent reign of the mob. The people rise in their indignation and resort to violent retribution because crime goes unpunished and criminals parade the country unwhipped of justice. And while every such act of violence is a calamity and the sure producer of a general spirit of outlawry, we must admit that the provocation is sometimes very great. The people will not always chide. There will come a time when exhausted patience is converted into remorseless vengeance—when disappointed expectation becomes hot with rage.

But, while the evil is admitted and deplored, it is not so easy to locate responsibility. Who is most chargeable with the mere travesties of justice often witnessed in our criminal courts? Not the judge, albeit his rulings may be sentimental, and his charge to the jury rather apologetic of criminals than an assertion of the majesty of violated law. The prosecuting attorney may lack diligence and ability; but at his door was can not lay the chief complaint. After all the sacred responsibility must rest upon the more intelligent citizenship of the community. It is that class—the educated free-holders of the country—that inveigh most loudly against the lax administration of justice and hemoan most bitterly the shocking outlawry of the land. And yet they little regard the sin at their own door or consider the measure of their responsibility for this lamentable state of things. They can not sustain the courts of the country and create a healthy public sentiment by mere indignant talk. Their only remedy and highest duty is to bear every weight of public responsibility. And this most important of these is serving on a jury.

The jury system, which vitally inheres in the very constitution of popular government, must be preserved in its purity and power. It is a grand conception, and is the crowning glory of the entire history of governmental jurisprudence. But it is also the weakness of judicial administration. It is a sublime idea that no man shall be condemned without a trial before a council of his peers; but that council may be so constituted as to pervert justice and condone crime. A distinguished advocate in defending a cause before a superior court facetiously characterized the competency of the men that tried the case as "about the average intelligence of a jury of lying squires." And the extravagance of expression is very slight as descriptive of some juries we have seen.

The duty, therefore, is imperative for intelligent citizens to render jury service. This will assure the triumph of right and the impartial administration of justice. Such men can weigh testimony, correctly understand the instructions of the court and render a verdict in accordance with the law and the facts. But these gentlemen, who ought to be most zealous for the enthronement of law, are least inclined to serve. They plead business emergencies and professional exigencies—anything, even to exaggerating a little physical indisposition—as a reason for exemption from jury service. A merchant calculates that three days in the trial of a case will entail so much loss to his business, and he can not afford it. But he fails to consider that those three days' service may be worth thousands to the community and indirectly bring him the amplest return. There are some persons in this city and elsewhere who refuse to register and fail to vote in order to escape jury service. Be assured here is vital neglect. There is no duty more important and far reaching in its influence upon the moral and material well-being of a community than conscientious, intelligent service on a jury. If the ignorant and unemployed loafers around court-rooms are to compose our juries, we may expect hoodlums to multiply and the forms of law to fall into contempt. Their sympathies are all with crime, and they are as purchasable as sheep in the shambles. When counsel for the defense have a bad case, they want an ignorant jury and of the hoodlum class. Intelligent, conscientious, high-toned citizens, capable of clear discriminations and zealous for the peace and dignity of the State, in the jury-box are a terror to evil-doers. In the interest, therefore, of public morals, human life and the perpetuity of good government we appeal to leading citizens not to shirk this most important and imperative public duty. And judges should be very careful to excuse such from this patriotic and necessary service.

Holston Conference.

The sixty-second session of this Conference met in Cleveland, Tenn., October 21, with Bishop Keener in the chair. W. C. Carden was elected secretary, with B. W. Fielder and James I. Cosh as assistants. The following were admitted into full connection: S. K. Citron, H. C. Clemens, J. H. Brindley, J. H. Moore, R. R. McDowell, T. G. Shuler and J. A. Sronce. Dr. Young delivered an effective missionary address, and the Conference resolved to collect one-fourth of this foreign mission assessment and forward it to the treasury by February 1, 1886. The subject of the Holston Methodist was presented, and $2,500 to its capital stock was subscribed. When the brethren rally in that way around their paper its success is assured.

This proposition to change the name to the "Methodist Episcopal Church in America" was voted on. Ayes, 1; noes, 119. A motion to memorialize the General Conference to change this name to "Episcopal Methodist Church" was tabled.

The following delegates to the General Conference were elected: Frank Richardson, E. E. Wiley, R. N. Price, W. G. E. Cunningham, E. E. Hoss and C. T. Carroll; alternates—W. G. Bays, J. Atkins, Jr. Lay delegates elected—Joseph Straas, J. E. Reeves, C. L. Hardwick, J. W. Pautel, W. W. Stringfield, J. A. Darr; alternates—J. E. Chapman, T. W. Jordan.

The following are the statistics: Local preachers, 308; members, 46,529; Sunday-schools, 587; Sunday-school scholars, 35,116.

Good Signs.

He has certainly read history to little profit who has failed to discover the substantial and sublime progress of our Christianity. In all the elements of Christ's power the church has grown with the years. To mark these movements every heart feels a thrill of hope and intelligent faith receives a divine impulse. The following from the Witness, of New York, is well stated, and has the clear ring of glorious victory:

There is special praise given to man of Israel who discerned the signs of the times, and the Savior speaks very unfavorably of those who understood the signs of the weather, but who did not see the signs of the times. But what are those signs at present? The question will be best answered by contrasting the present with the past. A hundred years ago there were no Christian missionary societies except among the Moravians. Now there are missionary societies in every Christian country and in almost every church or denomination. Then there were no countries open to the gospel or to circulation of the Bible except Britain, America and some parts of Germany and Scandinavia. France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Austria, Russia, Africa, Asia, Mexico and South America were almost entirely closed against missions and the Bible. Not only were China and Japan shut out; but India, though under the control of Britain, was equally besotted. These three countries, containing more than half of the human race, and all Europe, except Russia and Austria, are open to missions and the Bible. A hundred years ago human freedom or the rights of citizenship were practically unknown except in Britain, America, Switzerland, Holland and Scandinavia, and in all these, except America and Switzerland, they were only partially known or regarded, whereas now government by representatives is greatly extended, and the people have a substantial voice in their own government in many countries. A hundred years ago the Bible was only translated into the modern languages for some six or seven nations; now it is scattered far and wide in almost every language and dialect in the world.

Who, in view of these wondrous changes in less than one century, can refrain from crying in ecstasy, What hath God wrought? and who can avoid hoping and expecting that in the course of a hundred years more a like proportionate advance will be made by the conversion of every kindred people and tongue in the world to Christ? All that is necessary is work and pray, pray and work. Let us all give not only our means, but ourselves, to Christ's grand army for the evangelization of the world. His gracious command is, Go into all the world and preach the glad tidings, and preach by example as well as word. The preparation made by discoveries of the mechanical forces, such as steam, electricity, etc., will greatly aid in effecting vast changes. Half a hundred years ago there was scarcely a medical missionary in the field; women as missionaries were few, and in a very subordinate position, and there was no woman's missionary society. Now they are probably nearly as many missionaries of the one sex as the other, and all valuable and successful; and there are female medical colleges, with a view to prepare many more for the work. Sixty years ago there were no total abstinence societies. Now they are numerous in the most powerful nations of the globe, and powerful enough to affect the governments thereof. Surely all these are signs of yet greater wonders to be wrought by the Lord.

Divine Sine Qua Non.

BY REV. J. M. A. ABBEY, D. D.

This exercise of mercy precludes manifest misery. We can not be merciful volens. It is an impossibility to be merciful to a well-fed, well-clothed, well-housed fellow-mortal who in his self-complacency boasts of his enviable circumstances. Equally impossible it is for our heavenly Father to be merciful to a self-righteous, self-sufficient Pharisee who vauntingly parades his many virtues, imagining himself too good for this wicked world.

Trus, every sinner is in a pitiable plight. Sin, unforgiven sin, is the giant evil among the innumerable evils under the sun. May not angels institute a world's exposition of human ills? View them advantageously exposed, classified and wisely labeled. Numerous and long are the corridors affording convenient exhibit of all life's woes. Angels move to and fro, but seem unmoved by the sad spectacles. Here the endless variety of diseases, sick-beds, death-beds, funerals, weeping willows and broken hearts; there is poverty of every shade and hue. See the widow at her sewing machine in the cold, desolate garret, sewing until after midnight to support her children. In vile revelry her husband, who now fills a drunkard's grave, had squandered her dowry. An old man, a cripple, begging for a crust of bread. Next, an exhibit of family affliction. Husband and wife not at peace. An irreligious and silly mother-in-law fomenting trouble. The daughter, wayward; the son of hoodlum proclivities. Time fails us to view the exhibit of ills resulting from disastrous complications in business, or those from feuds between individuals, families, churches, nations, or those from slander, persecution, lying and rascality. Wending our way homeward we see an angel in tears. "Why weepest thou, heavenly messenger?" He replies: "I've seen the ill of all ills, the source of all sorrows, the mother of all misery; I've seen sin, hideous, disastrous, calamitous, damnable sin; I've seen the sinner in his sin—his sin unforgiven. That spectacle has broken my heart and caused my eyes to weep. Yes, sin caused angels to weep, filled heaven with grief and prevailed upon God to give his only begotten son in order to effect sin's extermination."

But, though the monster evil, which we denominate sin, elicited pity in God so as to provide a scheme of salvation, individually, we can not be the recipients of our heavenly Father's mercy unless we individually feel the burden, disgrace, baseness, villainy, viciousness, wickedness of sin. We must be oppressively conscious of our misery, ruin and impending fearful doom. If, then, in this emergency fervent prayer ascends from the perturbed, distressed, weeping penitent, mercy divine is not invoked in vain.

Yearning for mercy, another important sine qua non must be taken into account. Our adorable Master assures us: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Taking this for a text, St. James delivers an eloquent sermon pregnant with ominous truth. It is brief. Hear it: "He shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shown no mercy." You require mercy in life, death and judgment; but you will tearfully ask for it in vain if you are not merciful. Sine qua non: You must be merciful if you would obtain mercy.

1. Be merciful in your opinions of your fellow-men. You are filled with aversion and disgust. Far too depreciating are your opinions of your acquaintances. In fact, none are really good unless it be ourselves. Of every associate we have a biography, and that is an alphabetically arranged narrative of crimes, sins, follies, weaknesses, errors. Even their motives we take it upon ourselves to divine. Of course, they have been invariably base. Reader, review, revise your opinions. Why should the imhired "pope" be allowed to dominate in your heart? You will find that your opinions are largely erroneous. Be merciful and think well of men. Had you been tempted as they were tempted, had you been where they were, you, too, perhaps, would not have withstood.

2. Be merciful in your utterances about your fellow-men. Strange that even dull men become eloquent and men of few words display an exhaustless vocabulary when the shortcomings of their associates is the theme. So much denunciation, excommunication and damnation. There is a rabid haugman rampant in almost every human heart. The heart sickens when listening to the current conversation of men and women. Jesus assures: "With whatsoever measure you mete it shall be measured unto you." The progeny of the servant whose large debt had been remitted, and who subsequently maltreated a fellow-servant who owed him but a paltry sum, is wofully large. The doom of that unmerciful servant will be the doom of all who are not merciful.

3. Be merciful by abounding in deeds of kindness. Much want and suffering. Give, assist, relieve, support, help, encourage, raise the fallen, cheer the faint, nurse the sick and lead the blind. Say not that the indignities of the suffering ones was caused by their own prodigality and want of wise forethought. That may be true; but it does not relieve the present suffering. Reproaches do not feed the hungry nor clothe the naked. Scatter seeds of kindness. Dry the tears of the weeping. Be not a stranger at the bedside of the sick. Give largely to the widow and orphan.

Blessed are the merciful! Being merciful fills us now with heavenly joy and causes the unhappy to be happy. And wibthal—the merciful shall obtain mercy.

Variety of Gifts.

The wisdom of Providence in securing the success of the church is beautifully displayed in the variety of talents bestowed upon the ministers of the gospel. This Spirit divideth to every man severally as He will. To one is given one power; to another, another, by the same Spirit who worketh all and in all. Among the gifts of the ministry three special varieties strike us at a glance.

First, we see those who have remarkable power in winning souls to Christ. They seem especially qualified for evangelistic work. The list of church members always grows rapidly under their administration. They spread a great net and gather many fishes, both bad and good. They are sure to report an increase at the annual reckoning.

Another is zealous and skillful in the edification of believers. He is mighty in doctrine, a defender of the faith, confounding gainsayers, sowing good seed, strengthening the church and conserving all the interests of the body of Christ. Yet this man is not remarkable for rapidly lengthening his church roll. He holds a fort or defends a city well, but makes no sweeping advances upon the enemy's territory.

A third shows no great aptness for either of these styles of work, but is sure to leave more churches or a better parsonage on a pastoral charge than he found when he entered it. He is a house builder in this literal sense. For him the spiritual body of the Lord would be in many places without a local habitation, if not without a name. As Moses saw a vision of the Tabernacle and rested not till it was realized upon the earth for the occupancy of this people, so this man sees the necessity for a church and rises up to build. He finds the command applicable now, as of old: "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring me an offering: * * * and let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them." The building of a house and making it a sanctuary are the conditions upon which God's abiding presence may be expected.

The pastor who knows just when and where a nail may be driven, and can drive it himself in an emergency, will often find such knowledge and skill among the chief elements of his success. A homeless church can never be permanently prosperous. Literal house-building furnishes opportunity for the exercise of benevolent liberality on this part of the people, and is in many places a condition precedent to the existence, as well as growth, of the spiritual church. What are called union churches are in every case found to be, in the end, undesirable arrangements.

The inspiration of Bezaleel and Aholiab was as genuine as that of Moses, and was indispensable to the realization of the purpose of God. This architectural inspiration is the more to be appreciated under an economy, like that of Methodism, that spreads abroad the march of population, and must build churches in every style, from that of the rude cabin, to that of the stately edifice with dome and spire pointing heavenward.

It is well if a pastor possesses either of these gifts in a good degree. If he possesses two of them, it is better. If he has all three of them, he may be regarded as thoroughly furnished for the highest of callings. As however very few ministers possess all these powers in a high degree, something like the Methodist itinerant system becomes necessary for this spreading and maintenance of the church. Under that system every man's special powers may be employed where they are most needed. Every useful capacity is, in part, the result of natural endowment and, perhaps, yet more largely of personal cultivation. Let each man, then, stir up this gift that is in him and apply himself to the work that needs to be done in his charge. W. L. C. H.

Alcoholism, and a Splendid Edition of the Advocate.

BY REV. C. K. MARSHALL, D. D.

Your edition of October 22 was to me a rare feast. My duties from and at home had not allowed me to read my church papers regularly. So when I took up that number I was more than usually instructed, charmed and encouraged. I like the pronounced and sharp-sounding utterances of great convictions, and every article had that tone and ring.

I want to refer to each of them and run through each of them to call the attention of any who have not read that number not to fall to do so. I could not help saying to a friend that it was a Krupp gun with a half-ton shot. But space—newspaper space—is not infinite, nor time unlimited, so I must be resigned and refer specially to but one communication, viz: that by the Hon. W. H. Goodale on the all-absorbing theme of "Alcoholism and Heredity." It is a most alarming presentment of the curse under which we groan, and posterity will suffer tenfold more than this generation. The transmissibility of the vices, so to say—the graving as in a rock and handing down for ages our own follies; our crimes against the unborn—are truths so startling and fearful that no one not thoroughly animalized can for a moment feel of them without a feeling of fear and alarm. What a lesson to young people and to parents is that judicious array of great and unquestioned authorities! Strong drink, opium, absinthe, morphine, tobacco—all mixed into human blood, with a thousand insane asylums waiting with open doors and enlarging accommodations to receive the procession they necessitate. Damned into life and doomed by vicious parents to misery, disease, shame and insanity.

Tell us, archangels, is it not time that this tragedy of guilt and crime should close?

Resemblances go down the line of ages—the color of the eyes, the hair, the form, the gait. I know a son who, even sober, staggers just as his drunken father has done for thirty years. The fathers are the responsible persons.

Women have more right, reason and justification for smoking, drinking and using the ever-shifting forms of narcotics than have men. I know the other side. But, after all, the specialties of evil in fathers is as marked as certain, and used in due time will be as manifest in posterity as those of the mothers. The article shows the opinions of Aristotle, Plutarch, Moses and modern scientists, and all agree in these truths.

And yet pre-natal inebriation is a common evil. Nor can it be otherwise while mothers indulge in such potatoes of beer, brandy, Bourbon and kludged beverages of the saloon. Many a poor babe has been made drunk many times before it was born and came staggering into the world to take its first punishment in a milk punch at the maternal saloon, which nature designed to be the purest fountain of life, but was perverted to add this heedless age in multiplying drunkards, imbeciles, lunatics and idiots.

Read the article. Preserve it. It should be printed in tract form for universal circulation. And it is to be hoped that the next General Conference will inaugurate some plan for the preservation and wide diffusion of documents and papers of such inestimable value and probable usefulness. Let us have more of the same sort.

W. C. H. MARSHALL.

In pronouncing sentence upon T. J. Bonasso, convicted of forging a marriage certificate and betraying a young woman in this city, Judge Roman used commendable plainness of speech. The culprit was sentenced to fourteen years of hard labor in the penitentiary. This judge said:

Public opinion spoke loud in its denunciation of the crime for which you are here to-day. It spoke as loud as it had spoken—and speaks yet—in the Fort and Murphy tragedy, upon the illal scene of which the curtain of justice will soon drop. It is well that the voice of public opinion resounding through the press, should be heard on such occasions. It stimulates the servants of the law to the performance of their duties; it gives hope and confidence to the good element of society; it warns the assassin; it warns the robbers of woman's honor and all classes of evil-doers of what fate awaits them when they fall, as all eventually must, into the meshes of the law. As for me, I shall not spare them, so long as the law and the oath of office points out the line incumbent on me, as they do in this instance.

Writing from Lafayette, La., the Rev. J. D. Jackson says:

The Lord is with us. Last week we had nine conversions and eight accessions in this "Iron-clad" town. Hops it is only the beginning of a great work here for the Lord.

15

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1885.

SHE DID IT MORTGAGE.

We worked through spring and winter, through summer and through fall. But the mortgage worked the hardest and the steadiest of them all. It worked on nights and Sabbath. It worked each holiday. It settled down among us, and it never went away. Whatever we kept from it seemed almost as bad as the debt. It watched us every minute, and it ruled us right and left. The rust and bright were with us sometimes, and sometimes not. The dark-brown, scowling mortgage was forever on the spot. The well and the cut-worm, they went as well as came. The mortgage stayed forever, eating heartily all the same. It waited up every window, stood guard at every door. And happiness and sunshine made their home, with us no more. Till with falling crops and sickness we got stalled upon the grade. And there came a dark day on us when the interest wasn't paid. And there came a sharp foreclosure, and I kind of lost my hold. And grew weary and discouraged, and the farm was cheaply sold. The children left and scattered when they hardly yet were grown. My wife she pined and perished, and I found myself alone. What she died of was a "mystery," and the doctors never knew. But I knew she died of mortgage—just as well as I wanted to. To trace a hidden sorrow were within the doctor's art. They'd find a mortgage lying on that woman's broken heart. Warm or cold, drought or tempest, on a farmer's land may fall. But for first-class real estate, trust a mortgage 'gainst them all.

Temperance and the Pulpit.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK.

Just at this crisis it is all-important that the prerogatives of the pulpit should be clearly defined. Is it a prostitution of the pulpit to make war on the liquor traffic? Has the pulpit the right or has it not to utilize the consciences of men for the overthrow of this traffic? In order to determine this question we must first decide another question, viz: Is the liquor traffic right or is it wrong? Is it productive of good or of evil? To this question only one answer can be given. The liquor traffic is confessedly the greatest evil of the age. It is productive of more sin and shame and degradation and suffering than any other agency known to nineteenth century civilization—yes, than almost other agencies combined. Let us take an inventory of its dreadful array of evil results. We will not, however, take a world-wide view, but restrict ourselves to our own country. What are its fruits here?

In the first place the liquor traffic is a frightful, criminal waste of resources. We, the people of the United States, spend annually more money for intoxicating liquors than we do for meat and bread, and the statistics show. We pay more than ten times as much for liquor as for education. For every dollar we pay to home and foreign missions we pay over $170 for rum. After making a calculation based on reliable statistics, Miss Frances Willard says: "The money paid for liquor during the past one hundred years of our history would build and equip six lines of railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific, endow a university at $10,000,000 in every State, erect a $5,000 school-house for every two hundred inhabitants, build a $25,000 meeting-house for every two thousand inhabitants, pay the national debt, and with the rest of the money at interest, support a teacher for every one hundred inhabitants of the country." And this is the direct cost. The indirect cost is estimated by careful statisticians to be as great as the direct cost. Now, even on the supposition that the use of intoxicating liquors is not hurtful, but only useless, is there not here a moral obliquity? Would not he who commanded his disciples to "gather up the fragments that nothing be lost" condemn such a waste? If "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," and if we are his stewards and accountable to him for the use we make of his resources, can we justify in his sight our annual liquor bill as compared with our other expenditures? If he who hid his Lord's money received condemnation, what of him who wastes his Lord's money?

But this supposition of mere wastefulness is, of course, incorrect. The financial waste of the liquor traffic is a mere bagatelle in comparison with its other direful consequences. The liquor traffic sends into a drunkard's grave every year no less than sixty thousand of our citizens. And this includes only drunkards. I published some time since an article on the physiology of alcohol, in which I showed both from the records of insurance companies and from the testimony of the world's leading physicians that moderate drinking induces diseases of various kinds, and is thus the cause of the deaths of many thousands of persons every year who were never drunk in their lives. In supposing the indirect deaths to be half as great as direct, we then have ninety thousand per annum—one every six minutes. Just think of it! A funeral every six minutes, day and night, the whole year through! And, then, go in imagination beyond the graves into the darkened homes. Each of these victims was somebody's darling. Each was once a sweet, innocent babe whose childish prattle was the joy of a mother's heart. Each once gathered around him the tenderest affections of the family circle—father, mother, brothers, sisters. Many of them have formed other ties—have become husbands and fathers. Who can measure the anguish of all these hearts? What pen can picture the appalling aggregate of wretchedness that clusters round these ninety thousand graves. What brush can throw upon the canvass these scenes of woe—fathers' sons, mothers' walls, brothers' and sisters' cries, widows' shrieks and orphans' tears? And this is only for one year. But the dreadful evil stops not with the rolling year. It goes on unceasingly.

But even now we have only begun the enumeration of the evils of the liquor traffic. To contemplate the picture we must take a peep into the ranks of lunacy and idioy. Nine thousand lunatics and, perhaps, more than that number of idiots are produced every year by the traffic in alcoholic liquors. Imagine all these lunatics and idiots gathered into one great army. Look upon those countenances in which no light of reason shines; picture to yourself, if you can, the indescribable sadness of the widely scattered homes to which they belong! Are you not heart-sick? But we can not yet call a halt. We must also take a jaunt through the realms of pauperism. With imagination's magic wand call together in one vast procession the paupers who were made such by the rum traffic. Tremp, tramp, they come—a mighty army, 200,000 strong. There are gray-haired men and women, arrayed in the habiliments of beggary and wearing upon the forehead of their countenances the unmistakable tracery of the fingers of vicious indulgence. But for ruin most of these would have been, spending the evening of life in cheerful, happy homes. As it is, they are dragging out the remnant of a misspent life amid all the squalid wretchedness of pauperism. And the middle-aged and the young are there. There are children of tender years, clothed in rags, shivering with cold and pallid and weak from hunger. Reader, look upon the woe-begone faces of this mighty host, and, remembering that a tree is known by its fruits, tell me what you think of the character of the tree called the liquor traffic.

But not yet can our journey cease. Through the haunts of crime our pathway lies. It is a fact established by the testimony of judicial officers of high standing and by the records of courts that a very large percentage of the crime that blackens the fair page of our country's history and impedes the nation's progress to a loftier plane of civilization is the direct result of the liquor traffic. More than fifty per cent. of crime has its origin in drink. Imagine, then, all the criminals of the land massed together. From every jail and penitentiary and work-house and convict farm they come until they are an army 100,000 strong. Their hands are stained with every crime known to the long black catalogue of earth and hell. And, as they pass in horrid review before you, let imagination wing its flight into all the homes darkened and blighted and blasted by all this dreadful array of crimes. Each of these criminals has loved ones—father, mother, brother, sister, wife, child—whose hearts are crushed and bleeding beneath the sorrow and disgrace which crime has caused. Reader, look upon that scene and give me your estimate of the tree that produces such fruit.

These are only a few of the evils of the liquor traffic. Whole legions of other evils must be left unnoticed. And the deepest woes of these—the scorpion's stings of conscience—no human pen—no, not even an angel's tongue can describe. Imagination, with all her God-like powers, is utterly unable to grasp the mighty magnitude of the remorse that flowers upon the stalk of rum-made crime. And to catalogue the results of the liquor traffic we must go on revelation's wing into the beyond. The book of books declares that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." Hence to measure the results of the liquor traffic we must enter the domain of the lost; we must know what is meant by the wrath of God; we must know the full significance of that most awful word in the universe—a word at which fools laugh and devils tremble—the word "hell." Yes, we must measure that word as to its soul-torturing power and its unending duration. This is as much as to say that only from the great white throne, and by the eye of him who sits thereon, can the full fruitage of this hell-born traffic be seen.

Now, with all these facts concerning the fruits of the traffic fresh in our minds, let us return to the question, Has the pulpit the right to make war upon this traffic? Is it possible that a conscientious minister of the gospel can hesitate as to how this question must be answered? What is the pulpit for? Is it not bound to "cry aloud" against iniquity? Is it not required to "spare not the evil-doer"? Are Sinai's thunders hushed? Did Jesus abrogate the Decalogue? Where in all literature can you find severer denunciations than he used against the contumacious evil-doers of his day? Did Paul preach an emasculated gospel? Did he lose sight of "the terrors of the law"? To all such questions only one answer can be given. The Christian minister is required to "declare the whole counsel of God." He is to "reprove and rebuke" as well as to "exhort," to "warn" as well as to "teach." Sinai as well as Calvary is to have a place in his ministrations. The Decalogue, expounded by the teachings of Christ and the apostles and illuminated by the side-lights of history and science, is to be the basis of his utterances. If this be true, why should not the liquor traffic be denounced as well as other sins.

If A. kills B. with knife or pistol, no one questions A's culpability, and no one questions the right of the pulpit to condemn such killing. But if A. kills B. with alcohol, and also pauperizes C., and makes a criminal of D., and a lunatic of E., this we are to suppose is allowable. The pulpit must be silent about it lest somebody's feelings should be hurt. "But," says one, "the liquor traffic is 'legalized.' Well, what of that? Can vice be transformed into virtue by human legislation? If so, then, if our Legislatures should legalize theft, murder or arson, those would be virtuous acts. A way with such folly! Sin is sin whether it is legalized or not. Iniquity should be denounced none the less severely because it has the sanction of human law makers. He would be a queer minister of the gospel who would refuse to denounce gambling because some Legislature has sanctioned it. None the less queer is he who feels that he must say nothing about the liquor traffic for the reason that it has been legalized. 'Woe unto him who giveth his neighbor drink.' This is God's estimate of the liquor traffic. Can that estimate be obfuscated by human law makers? Can any gospel minister think so? Is there anywhere a Christian pulpit that does not know that the principles of morality are universal and immutable—that they are unaffected by lapse of time or change of place? These everlasting principles of a heaven-revealed morality condemn in thunder tones this traffic in 'liquid damnation.' And we who bear a commission from above to expound the Holy Scriptures are not guiltless before God if we fear to denounce it as a sin of crying magnitude."

But has the pulpit the right to try to secure legislation against the liquor traffic? Unquestionably. Suppose we had our statute books legalized theft, gambling or falsehood, would any pulpit hesitate to try to create a public sentiment that would abolish such infamous laws? And have we not the same right to use the pulpit for the creation of a sentiment that will use the strong arm of the law for the suppression of the liquor traffic? Since the liquor traffic is the source of the greatest evils that to-day afflict our race, why should it be made an exception to the rule that "law is a terror to evil-doers"? Is there any valid reason why the liquor traffic should receive the protection of law while other crimes are suppressed? Our laws punish drunkenness, but protect him whose business it is to make drunkards. They punish murder and arson, and all such crimes, yet protect the traffic which is the parent of more than half of those crimes. Is this legislation either wise or just? Why not uproot the tree instead of lopping off a few of its branches?

Legislation directed to the utter extermination of the liquor traffic is the great need of the day, and the pulpit ought to be earnest, active and persistent in its effort to secure such legislation. "But," says one, "if we do, we will lay ourselves liable to the charge of preaching politics." Well, suppose we do; what of it? If denouncing the liquor traffic and trying to secure its suppression by the strong arm of the law is preaching politics, then we ought to preach politics. We ought not to be frightened from the post of duty by this scarecrow. To tune up public sentiment, so that it shall demand the enactment and enforcement of righteous laws, is not an improper exercise of pulpit prerogatives. And what is the source of this cry? "We want no political preaching. Preach the gospel and let politics alone." Whence comes this plea for the pure gospel? Mainly from the saloons and from politicians who hope to ride into office on the backs of the saloon keepers and their allies. True, such sentiments are occasionally expressed by good Christian men who have imbibed erroneous views concerning the prerogatives of the pulpit; but the demand draws its chief inspiration from the grog shop. Rather queer, is it not, that the chief schools of vice should clamor for the gospel in its purity? But this is only history repeating itself. The ostensible reason for the attack of Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen upon Paul was a religious one. They claimed to be exceedingly jealous for the religion of their forefathers. The real reason was a purely selfish one. "Our craft is in danger." Equally hypocritical are these saloon cries for "a pure, unadulterated gospel." The dram seller's "craft is in danger;" but, as the open avowal of this fact would avail him but little, he raises a hue and cry about politics in the pulpit. He becomes very jealous for the purity of the church. He is greatly alarmed lest ministerial robes should be soiled in the dirty pool of politics, and the church of God (oh, how he loves it!) should thereby suffer damage. And he and his press and platform minions are making such a noise that timid souls are in danger of being frightened from the post of duty. Moreover, this plea for a pure gospel is sometimes so plausibly put by crafty, honey-lipped politicians that the very elect are in danger of being deceived.

Brethren of the ministry, this is a trick of the devil. If he can scare us off the field by the cry of "Politics in the pulpit," victory will perch upon his banners and the reign of the saloon will be perpetuated. Brethren, let us not be deceived; neither let us be frightened. No great reform was ever accomplished without just such opposition as now confronts every worker in the temperance army. While we do not love strife we must be willing to endure it for the Master's sake. Paul, Luther, Wesley; what opposition they encountered! And our Lord himself—think of what he endured and be not weary or faint in your minds.

The Ordination of the Twelve Reviewed.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE, of October 15, Bro. Pugh gives an article on the ordination of the twelve, in which he takes issue with me as to the design of Christ in the baptism of the apostles' feet. In my early ministry I obtained the idea "that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private interpretation," and since I have labored to preach and write to let one part of God's word interpret the other, that is the Old and New Testament, and to let every figure carry its own truth, "Private interpretation" I understand to be anything that seems to be the meaning of a figure or circumstance or a secondary idea. We must always labor to get the original thought or meaning first, and then we can make as many applications or deductions as may be proper; but by all means let Scripture interpret Scripture, else we would have as many meanings as we have thinkers. God has but one mind in giving his word. Bro. Pugh thinks I have made a forced construction of the baptism of the apostles' feet. Taking Christ's own words as my guide, that he "came not to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfill," and that the Scriptures were to be studied as testimony of him, I think my view and interpretation of the circumstance will stand before any jury of Bible students as the only true and legitimate interpretation that has ever been given. Anyone who will study "The Lost Key Found," not merely read it, will agree with me. I do not try to account for anything in the life of Christ or his ministerial acts as growing out of himself or authority as independent of the law and the prophets, but with perfect correspondence with him. He acted under that authority with the fullest obedience, and, therefore, I turn my eye to that portion of God's word for a reason why he did this or that thing, knowing that he intended the most minute fulfillment even to a jot or tittle; therefore assumptions and presumptions and fair inferences or private interpretations are wholly out of order.

From the teaching of Christ and his apostles the Old Testament contained both law and gospel. "Paul declared 'that Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers,' and, therefore, we have but to consult the Scriptures which he recognized as the authority that dictated his public or ministerial course. Every Bible student knows that all priests or ministers had to undergo baptism in their consecration or ordination to their ministry. This is no inference or private interpretation. By referring to Leviticus viii, 6; Exodus xix and Numbers vii, 7, this fact will be seen. This was the gospel feature of the law, while all sacrificial features ceased with John, was observed and perpetuated by Christ as a gospel ordinance. Hence, to account for the conduct of Christ in this circumstance of baptizing his apostles is perfectly legitimate, and the only legitimate construction to be placed upon it. Here Scripture itself interprets the conduct of Christ. As for the reasons to be given for this I can not in this limited article proceed to give them. They are set forth in "The Lost Key Found." When you lay aside the fancy idea the gospel was just now introduced by Christ without any respect to what had been set in order in the Scriptures and study the words of Christ in St. Matthew v, 17, and Romans xv, 8, and you will decide with me.

I have never contended for the continuation of this form of baptism, namely, the washing or baptism of the feet. I do not have to introduce a fancy idea or private interpretation out of the social customs of the ancients as a reason why Christ took the attitude of a servant on this occasion, but I let both the law and prophets be the interpreter of the conduct of Christ. The washing of a priest or minister's feet was no new or strange thing; for it was required. (See Exodus xxx, 19.) Thus we see that three parts of a minister could be baptized or washed—the head, hands and feet. This transaction was legal, hence Peter, not knowing as yet the spiritual significance when he saw in his guessing at its meaning, refused to allow his Master to do this, said, "Not my feet only, but my hands and head." The prophecy of Isaiah liii, 13-15, must interpret the servant attitude of Christ. Any other consideration leaves the prophecy without a fulfillment and the attitude of Christ without any authority in the Scriptures as a legal testimony of Christ and his life in accordance with his own declaration in St. Matthew v, 17-19, and St. Luke xxiv, 41. The baptism, the form of a servant and the washing of the feet are figures, each of which must be allowed to carry its own truth, all of which is explained in "The Lost Key Found." A reference to the social custom of the ancients in presenting water to a stranger with which to wash his feet is quite a fancy idea which may do for those that can see nothing better, but can never satisfy those who seek for testimony. Besides, there is nothing in the custom, if you will read and see, that leads one to believe that a servant or one of the family washed his feet. He was requested to wash his own feet. Besides, this was no custom of God's institution; and, therefore, was no religious ceremony or service designed to typify anything. There was no law or prophecy in it, and Christ had no reference to it. His life must be a fulfillment of law and prophecy to a jot or tittle. Hence the attitude of a servant in the baptism of the apostles' feet preparatory to sending them forth as witnesses of Christ to preach this gospel which had been so long set forth in promises as at last fulfilled, confirmed and maintained. This servant of love was to sprinkle many or all nations and not immerse them. All doubt as to the meaning of the word sprinkle, whatever it be, blood or water, is removed when we see Christ use water as its fulfillment or interpretation. Here I offer no private interpretation or fair inference. There is no need of a dozen prophecies on any one thing nor of a dozen fulfillments. As to the mode of applying the water to make it sure, Ezekiel helps out in this matter. "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you," etc. (xxxvi, 25.)

Bro. Pugh refers to what St. Mark says concerning the ordination of the apostles, and infers that Christ ordained his apostles upon the mountain-side by the imposition of hands. I have no objection to this idea of their ordination thus far; but this would not be complete, as the baptism or washing was indispensable and neither of the evangelists mention this except St. John. But I am much surprised at Bro. Pugh's question, "Where did this form (imposition of hands), originate, if not with the Master?" He is an old minister, and we would naturally think he was a Bible student, but here he fails to show it. If he will turn to Numbers vii, 10, where the form of ministerial consecration or ordination is laid down, he will find that the divine Christ introduced this form of the gospel. Paul, in his epistle to the Hebrew Jewish believers, who were familiar with these customs and doctrines as prearranged gospel principles of Christ, mentions the imposition of hands as one of his gospel customs. No man of Bible infidelity can have the conscience to deny that the gospel was preached back there; for Paul says that it was preached even to Abraham. (Galatians iii, 8; see also 1 Peter iv, 6.) As to the imposition of hands see Hebrews vi, 1, 2. One thing I think can never be shown, that the evangelists narrated the acts and sayings of Christ in the conservative order of time in which they occurred. Prominence seems to be given only to the first and last years of his life. Though there were three years, yet their eating the Passover is mentioned but once, at least it so appears to me. What Christ did to the apostles when first chosen is a matter entirely of inference, and also St. Mark's relation of the matter as occurring in the first part of his ministry is a matter of inference too vague to settle down upon.

Let Bible students study Christ's declaration, "I am not come to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfill," then study "The Lost Key Found," and then read what Christ says to his apostles in St. John xv, 12-20, in a subsequent interview when he tells them that he had chosen them and ordained them, and in this connection mentions what he said on that occasion. There he called them servants, there he gave the new commandment and said finally, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord, neither he that is sent is greater than he that sent him." (St. John xiii, 16.) You will see that in this subsequent interview (verse 20,) he reminds them of these things as occurring together in the same transaction. This, it will be seen, takes place as the last ministerial act of his life, at least, so judged. It is immaterial with me whether it is placed in the first or last of his life, the verdict will be rendered in my favor by all Bible students. Nay, we dare not depart from this interpretation, lest infidels get the advantage of us. The success of Christianity demands a harmonious interpretation of the Scriptures. The assumption that Christ just at this time began to introduce gospel ordinances, yet the gospel itself, is contrary to the idea of fulfillment and confirmation as expressed by Christ and leaves the New Testament without any confirmation, evidence or foundation as is implied in the fact that it is the history of Christ and his apostles acting under the authority of the Scriptures.

I have no choice as to ordain or appoint one thing I deny and challenge any to prove that the apostles were ever immersed. The baptism of their feet is all that can be proven from the word of God. Immersionists claim that pedo-baptists are not in the church because they have not been immersed and that, too, by some other person that was immersed and so on back to the apostles, but I think their chain will fall to hook on the apostles if they could go back through profane history, which is a thing impossible. The immersionists of this country would run back to Roger Williams and Ezekiel Holloman, who in turn immersed each other as a starting point in America. John and Christ knew what was gospel in the Old Testament, and what was sacrificial so as to leave the one and perpetuate the other.

Bro. Pugh gives us nothing new, nor does he interpret the figures in the baptism of the feet.

J. W. ELLISON.

From the Work.

BERWICK, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I closed the meeting at Morgan City last night after continuing eight days. Great crowds attended the preaching nightly. Never since the day of dedication have such audiences assembled. The members I had taken into church in Berwick came over to help us. Many bright conversions. Twenty-one accessions. The entire town feels the effect. The new church at Pattersonville is going up—a thing of beauty. Berwick will soon be able to report a new church and a parsonage. I commence to-morrow a tour in the interest of prohibition.

A. E. C.

LA COMPTRE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I have been wanting to tell what the Lord has been doing on my work, a part of Rapides circuit. Last Conference I was put on the supernumerary list. Last April the presiding elder gave us a church to be supplied this year. The church is about twenty miles from home. I have formed a small circuit of four appointments, where I have preached regularly once a month. I have at nearly all the appointments, every time I preached, received and baptized. So up to last Sunday we numbered thirty-nine. Last Sunday, morning, before preaching, I baptized seven and wound up an interesting meeting on Tuesday night, assisted by Bro. Smith, local preacher. The church spiritually blessed. We had some good old about in the camp. They have commenced a weekly prayer meeting to the neighborhood, coming from house to house like the converts in apostolic times. About four weeks ago I received two men and their wives and two young ladies. We are building a church at a place called Oak Grove, 30x40, to be ready for dedication the third Sunday in this month. Would be glad to have you, Bro. Galloway, with us to preach the dedication sermon, and when ready for dedication it will be paid for. The lumber and boards and everything is paid for.

GEORGE JACKSON.

MANFIELD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As I see cheering news from other churches, you will no doubt be pleased to hear of the progress of Zion in this part of Louisiana. We have had a series of services beginning in September and continued through a portion of this month which has resulted in the addition of some twenty-five or thirty members to the church in Mansfield. Some of these are young men, but the most are boys and girls from the Sunday-school. The scene was a very solemn one when twenty of these were received on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Several were baptized and the general rules were read and explained to all. After this the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to about one hundred communicants and there was a general rejoicing. The heart of our pastor, Bro. Harp, has been greatly enlarged and the joy of our Sunday-school superintendent, Bro. Seale, was unbounded. The Lord's name be praised! I may add that many of the pupils of the college are members of the church, and while the work did not appear to hold upon them as a body, yet there are hopeful signs of piety in most of the pupils, both boarders and day pupils. We are trying to do our duty by way of giving them religious instructions, both in the school and at the church, and have no doubt that a majority of them will profit by it.

We hear of other places in our district being under strong spiritual influence. This is particularly the case with Bro. Wimberly's work, Mooringsport circuit, Bro. Davis' work on Coushatta circuit and Bro. Randle's work on Missant Hill circuit. Bro. Cassidy has preached very successfully at several places outside his own work, and did very efficient labors in the revival at Mansfield.

Bro. Pipes is in feeble health, but seems to be improving.

P. M. GRACE.

SHUBUTA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I closed a meeting at Quitman, on this charge, last Friday night, which had continued with increasing interest and power for six days. Results: Twenty-five additions to the church, many conversions and the church baptized afresh by the Holy Spirit. The entire community was deeply awakened and greatly blessed. Such convicting power as was manifested during the entire meeting was never seen by this writer. I had no ministerial aid. To the Lord be all the praise! This closes my protracted meeting. There have been sixty-seven added to the church during the year up to this writing. Finances will be in full.

E. F. EDGAR.

TRENTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I asked last spring, through the ADVOCATE, for help to build a church at Home Wood, in the bounds of the Trenton circuit, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference. But received no assistance then; got promises of some help this fall. I wish now to acknowledge receipt of $3 from Judge A. G. Mayers, of Brandon, Miss., for which I return many thanks. I wish now to state again that the church-house is very much needed, and will be highly appreciated by the people. We have only a small membership, owing, probably, to not having a suitable house of worship, and most of them not able to help much. Though we have laid a good foundation, but up a good frame, and have about all of the weather-boarding planned and up, the rafters up and some of the boards on the ground for the roof, but our means have all been used and we are stalled for a little while. Will resume work again soon. Any help in this worthy enterprise will be thankfully received by the pastor.

A. D. MILLER.

TOCCOPOLA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Will you permit me to say a few words through the Advocate about the work of the Lord in the Toccopola circuit? Our meetings have all been held, with the following results: One hundred and eleven conversions and one hundred and eighteen additions to the membership of the church. Prayer meetings are being held. Family altars, not a few, have been erected. Young men converted during our meetings are praying in public and conducting prayer meetings. A woman's work meeting has been organized, which is doing great good. Our church at this place has been removed to town, and is being repaired at a cost of from $250 to $300. The money is about or entirely ready for ceiling nicely another church in the bounds of the work. And still another church, to be entirely new, is being discussed and will become a living fact in the near future. The collections, ordered by the Conference are in sight, and "clear decks" will be, we think, the order at Kosciusko in December. I hail my successor a happy name. "Bless the Lord, O my soul."

H. C. MOREHEAD.

Kind Words.

At a call meeting of the official Board of the church at Jackson, La., Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, T. A. S. Adams, P. C., took the chair. The object of the meeting being stated, the chair presiding Prof. G. H. Wiley, Prof. W. F. Norworthy and Dr. A. R. Holcomb a committee to draft resolutions appropriate to the object for which the meeting was called.

The following is the report of said committee:

Whereas, The law regulating the appointment of itinerant preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, limits the time to four years; and, whereas, our presiding elder, the Rev. J. A. Little, has acceptably served in the office of presiding elder upon the Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, and now is by limitation not eligible to further reappointment; therefore, be it Resolved, That in the Rev. Dr. A. Little we recognize a faithful, efficient and discreet presiding elder, attentive to the interests of the church at large and to the wants and comforts of his preachers.

Resolved, That we are devoutly thankful to God for the benefit of his plan, practical and forcible presentation of gospel truth and his quiet, unassuming and modest exhortation of this truth in his daily walk and conversation.

Resolved, That we part with regret from him in obedience to the law, yet hoping that in the future we shall again be permitted to enjoy his kindly ministrations and genial associations, at the same time heartily commending him to the love and confidence of all whom he may be called to minister to in the things of God.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be handed him and another copy forwarded for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

T. A. S. ADAMS, Chairman.

Why Not?

MR. EDITOR: I have just read J. T. Cunningham's article in the Advocate of October 15. I heartily approve and endorse his idea of establishing a preachers' home at Centenary College, Jackson, La. The college being the joint property of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, the home should likewise belong to these two Conferences. In 1882 I wrote to Dr. Andrews, then president of Centenary, giving him my views on the subject. He approved the plan, and gave me an invitation to attend the commencement in June and set forth my views to the Board. I fully intended to do so, but was providentially hindered. That fall my health failed, and I said no more about it. My plan then and now is the same, subject to improvement as circumstances may require. If I am properly informed, with some repairs we have ample buildings already on the college grounds for such a home. Now, let Bishop Keener and the Board establish this home; then appoint an efficient agent whose duty it shall be to take charge of said home and superintend and look after the interest of the young ministers; also to travel through the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences and solicit money, provisions, clothing, etc., and, in addition to this, to take into this home the sons of itinerant ministers and board them at absolute cost? Can not 45,000 Methodists support such a home?

O. M. LIVERMAN.

Substitute for Colic and Quinine.
Simmons' Liver Regulator, purely vegetable, is equal in power to blue pills or colic pills, but without any of their injurious properties. I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator, and find it a most excellent medicine, acting like a charm on the liver. It is a most excellent substitute for colic pills, and I have tried it in several cases of bilious disorders, chills and fever, and it effects a cure in a most satisfactory manner.

Dr. J. H. BOWEN, Clinton, Ga.

Perils of Half-Truths.

BY ASA MAHAN, D. D., LL. D.

In this world "we see through a glass darkly." No one truth is or can be known to us in all its fullness and endlessly diversified applications. In other words, "we walk by faith, not by sight." Under such circumstances many perils beset us, perils against which every prudent believer will be on his guard. On account of the comparative obscurity of our vision, we may neglect what is revealed, and what is our privilege and duty to know; or we may give a form and coloring to God's truth, in accordance with the desires and imaginations of our own hearts. We act with prudence and safety to our own immortal interests when, and only when, we accept what is revealed, and as revealed, and wait God's time for the revelation and clearing up of "the secret things."

The peril against which I would now put the reader on his guard is of a somewhat different kind from the above. It is against every particular truth of God's word, and of kindred importance, and each must command a common regard, or neither will exert its proper influence upon the mind; while the one which we do regard may take on the form of perilous error. The great central principle of the Gospel, for example, is embodied in this one passage, "The just shall live by faith." But this principle involves two kindred truths, to-wit, justification by faith, and sanctification by faith. No one can tell us which of these is the most important in itself, or which stands out with the greatest prominence upon the sacred page. Each of these, by itself and separated from the other, is a truth, but only a half-truth; and when acting upon the mind by itself, separated from the other, will, in many essential respects, do the work of fatal error. At the reformation the doctrine of justification by faith, and that by itself, became the great question of the age. The result was a great advance in the direction of truth, and away from prevailing error. The Gospel of Christ, however, apprehended through this one great truth, appeared in a "distorted twilight," and Antinomianism, Legalism, Formalism, and kindred errors, blighted the fruits of the reformation. It was not until the other and kindred doctrine, sanctification by faith, was rendered equally distinct and prominent, that "the Sun of Righteousness," in cloudless light, rose upon Zion, "with healing in his wings."

"Christ," in God "is, of God made into us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." This term, "of God," fixes thought upon another truth kindred to each of the others, a truth without which they, both together, or each by itself, will act upon the mind but as a half-truth. It is not Christ in himself, but as apprehended through the Spirit, that becomes, in experience, our justification, on the one hand, or our sanctification, on the other. It is by the Spirit that Christ "dwells in our hearts," "lives in us," and that "with open face we behold his glory," and "have fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." When Christ, as our justification, and sanctification is fully preached, and the mission of the Spirit is not rendered equally prominent, nor presented as revealed in the sacred word, the Christian life and experience will, of necessity, take an abnormal form of development. Unless we honor the Holy Ghost as we honor the Father, on the one hand, and the Son on the other, "the Lord," as he desires to be, and may be, will not become "our everlasting light, and our God our glory."

"God is love," and, when we think of Christ, the idea is "love which passeth knowledge." Yet this love, as revealed, takes on two forms, and each will act upon the mind as a half-truth without the other. These two forms are thus expressed: "Thou lovest, righteousness, and hastest in love; and love out of these forms is just as intense as it is in the other. At the present time Christ reigns as a Prince and a Savior, and with absolute power and in ineffable love, 'gives power to all who receive him to become the sons of God.' At a solemn hour in the great hereafter, he will sit on thrones as 'Judge of the quick and dead,' with the same absolute fidelity to justice, and his office as Judge, 'will then reward every man according to his works,' as he now discharges his mission as a Prince and Savior. We must apprehend and respect both in all these revealed characteristics and relations, or he will not permanently win our esteem, veneration and love. In dwelling upon the love of Christ there is a peril of coming to regard him as possessed of a kind of good nature which is indifferent to moral character, and desert, or too tender in respect to sinfulness, to discharge the stern duties of a 'Judge,' and thus open the mind to error in its most fatal forms."

Faith in Christ as our "wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption," implies self-trust and self-reliance in their most absolute forms. Our trust must be "not in ourselves, but in God." We should bear in mind, however, that self-trust and self-reliance are by any possibility, but too perfect. Self-trust implies self-knowledge. We cease to trust ourselves, because we know ourselves to be absolutely unworthy; we trust in God, because we know him as absolutely trustworthy. Some speak of faith in Christ as implying, not merely self-trust, but self-reliance; this is a most perilous error. Inquirers are told to look to Jesus, and not at all at themselves; to think of him and not of their feelings, mental states, and, as we have sometimes heard, not even of their sins. Unless we know our necessities, we do not know what to look to Christ for. We are required to "come boldly to a throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." We must know our needs, or we cannot rationally ask for "mercy or grace to help."—Divine Life.

A Judicial Opinion on the Liquor Traffic.

For more than twenty years I have had ample opportunities for observing the working and effect of the business of selling intoxicating liquors, and I have not been able to discover a single feature, circumstance, or result, that can commend it to the favorable consideration of any decent, respectable, or thoughtful man. It cannot even challenge the admiration or approval of any business or occupational more thoroughly demoralizing in its tendencies and effects, or more destructive of public morals, public order, and public peace. The business of selling intoxicating liquors, I cannot permit myself to derive from it by a single human being. I cannot imagine a blessing, or benefit of any kind that it brings or contributes to the welfare of a community. It brings moral and social death to those who engage in it, as well as those who patronize and sustain it. It seems to me that to engage in such a business is to deliberately crush and banish from the heart forever every sentiment, every hope, every ambition, and every element of character that men generally value, as being useful and beneficial to the world. It blights and destroys men's intellectual powers, and thus it makes them insane, idiots, and imbeciles. It destroys every sentiment of morality, decency, and honor, and thus men become debauched, corrupt, vicious, and dishonest, and destitute of all sense of shame, and of every obligation of family relationship, friendship, and citizenship. It sows carelessness, carelessness, and an utter indifference to and disregard of the rights, the interests, and the happiness of others. It invites, encourages, and necessarily develops all that is base, degrading, and dangerous in men, and destructive of good government, good order, and common decency. It is a nursery for the development and growth of those wicked practices which lead to the crimes of gambling (which, after all, is but another name for different forms of stealing), theft, robbery, arson, perjury, murder, and every sort of public crime, social wrong, and private iniquity. In other words, it is a school-house for the development and cultivation of every species of crime, and an institution for the preparation of men, women, and children for the gutter, the poor-house, and the insane asylum, the reform school, the penitentiary, the military, and the gallows.—Judge John Martin, of Kansas, denouncing a liquor-seller.

Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are perfect preventives of constipation. Inclosed in glass bottles, always fresh. By all druggists.

Cardinal Manning on Local Option.

His Eminence Cardinal Manning delivered an address in the evening, September 11, in the promotion of the cause of temperance, the chair being taken by His Worship the Mayor (Allerman Harrison). There was a very large attendance, and the proceedings throughout were of a very interesting character. Cardinal Manning's remarks were found applicable in the course of his speech he said:

"If you ask me what my politics are I will tell you in a word—the welfare of the people, the greatest happiness of the greatest number. The question of how we are to obtain this, is the good houses for the people and fit for human habitation; secondly, Christian and religious education; and lastly, local option, or the popular vote upon the multiplication of public-houses. I am not going into the question of housing the people or the question of Christian education, but I will, with your leave, enter into the question of local option, or the popular vote."

"It seems there is a great action, not at law, nor before any of the courts of law, but before the most supreme tribunal in this country—I mean the public opinion of the people, as well as the moral sense of the people, and the great cause is between the great drink-traffic on the one side and the people of England on the other. I believe we are at a great crisis at this moment. The first crisis is that which has come upon us by the increasing multiplication of the power of that drink-traffic itself. This enormous traffic has acquired in the land a vast and a dominant power. What can check it? The people of England spend in intoxicating drink twice as much as they spend in bread. They spend in intoxicating drink as much as they spend in milk and bread, which are the primitive food of man, and also a sum equal to all the rent of farms and houses in England; and they have spent or employed in the sale of intoxicating drink a capital equal to all that their plowed in the ground, and their power in England is that trade. I said to myself that if all intoxicating drinks were out of Warrington, and if the capital employed in its production was employed in the purchase of a large pig and food, I should see a large pig and food, the greatest political power in England is that trade. We are told of the great power in the land and the landlords, but the enormous capital I have mentioned governs the elections down to six years ago, governs the elections, governs the elections, and paralyzes the Government, and therefore I believe we are at a crisis in which there can be found no power greater and more widespread than that of the drink-traffic. I see nothing before us but the continual increase of every form of peril, danger, and devastation which results from that traffic. We are at another crisis, and though I promised not to politics, I will say in a sentence what I think, and then pass on. Before many months are over our head two million more Englishmen, Irishmen, and Scotchmen, who have homes and hearths, will be able to say openly what they think upon this subject, and that brings us to the local option or popular vote question."

"An Englishman's house is his castle. A cluster of houses is his most sacred thing on earth. A man and his family make up a household, and there ought to be no power to put down a public-house in the midst of these homes contrary to the will of those who live in them. It is mere self-defense, which springs from the liberties of Englishmen. Why? Because the Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wrecked, whose sons and daughters are demoralized? Whose homes are made uninhabitable? Who are they who are sometimes spell-bound, fascinated, and drawn into the same bottomless pit that the people of England? The Englishman is the owner of his own home, and those liberties give the head of every family the right to defend his home from the invasion of any moral pestilence as well as any physical force. Oh what does the whole of our commonwealth and constitutional life rest but upon the rights of the individual, and was the result of their free will and perfect liberty? Who gains by the multiplication of public-houses? The landlords at the bar, the drink traffic, who suffers? The thinking man, the people of England. Whose homes are wreck

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

OTAS B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HUNTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1885.

In passing to and fro among his Conferences, Bishop Keener narrowly escaped a terrible railroad accident. A train on the same road following ten minutes behind the one that bore him along, was wrecked on the bridge across a river and resulted in much loss of life. We are profoundly grateful that our honored friend and chief pastor, as is his wont, was ahead of danger.

In an able address before the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in New York, on "Missionary Work," Bishop Foster made some suggestive statements regarding work in Roman Catholic countries. Among other things he said the Roman Church was a great Christian Camp that needed reconstruction, and that was the reason the Conferences were sending missionaries to Roman Catholic countries.

Dr. Noah Porter, president of Yale College, has tendered his resignation, to take effect at the close of the present term. He succeeded Dr.
Theodore Dwight Woolsey in the presidency in 1871, and has administered the affairs of that institution with marked dignity and success.
Some important changes have been made during his term of service, notably a modification of the curriculum and the introduction of graduate fellowships. It is stated that he will remain in the faculty of instruction as Clark Professor of Ethics and Metaphysics.

In another column will be found the programme for "Thanksgiving and Arbor Day" at Centenary College, announced by President Adams.
We are glad to see this new departure in the South. "Arbor Day" has been fixed by statute in some of the States, and is being properly observed. Dr. Adams has appointed the editor to service without consultation, and writes privately that it is "mandatory." We have grave doubts of being able to attend, but will do so if at all practicable. In any event let the day be celebrated, and his suggestion to friends abroad be heeded.

In her admirable and eloquent opening address at the National Woman's Christian Temperance
Union, in Philadelphia, Miss Frances E. Willard called for a new and significant pledge—"I promise, by God's grace, to say nothing discouraging about the work and nothing disparaging about the workers." If that pledge could be carried into the church and practiced by each member, we might halt the millennium in fifty years. And yet it is but the spirit of the gospel. We are so prone to discourage every good work and disparage the workers in every good cause. That is one of the wisest of our General Rules that inveighs against "speaking evil of magistrates and ministers."

The decrees of the Plenary Council, held in Baltimore last year, have been returned from Rome with the Pope's approval, after some slight modifications. They will be promulgated by Archbishop Gibbons at an early date. If the decree on the subject of the liquor traffic remain as adopted, we may expect a stir in the Romanish camp. No wonder there is serious concern among the "faithful." What would Romanism do without the saloon keeper? We doubt not that fully nine-tenths of the grogery-men of this country are members of that communion, and in good standing. Let the decree ring forth. For the honor of the Christian religion Rome ought to cleanse herself of this curse and crime.

Rev. Dr. Long, of Constantinople, and a missionary of long experience, is now in this country. While addressing the Boston Methodist preachers' meeting, a few weeks since, he was asked the meaning of the disturbances in Serbia and Greece arising out of the union of Bulgaria and Roumelia. His answer was, that it was "in obedience to a familiar Greek proverb—that a child which does not cry fails to be nursed, Serbia and Greece lift up their voices when there is any threatening movement against the government of the Sultan, so that when the western powers come in to settle the trouble and to pacify the uneasy states they may not be overlooked.
They are simply crying for a piece of Turkey."

"Direful Influence of Methodism."

This is the rather ominous title of a two-column distributive in the Catholic, of Pittsburg, for a copy of which we are indebted to our friend, Dr.
Smith, of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate. The spirit of the article is characteristic of Roman writers on religion outside of their church—narrow, prejudiced and intolerant.
Some of the sentences are worthy of a fish market. The recklessness of assertion and stark ignorance of facts, about which the writer attempts to dogmatize, would shame the hard face of a swift witness in a police court. Methodists are first car-icatured as "expert manipulators of figures," insinuating that we count more members than we have; that we maintain public favor by false counting—a reckless display of figures. But the writer contradicts himself by acknowledging Method-ism's "control of public opinion in educational and material interests and in warping the intellectual development of the people at large."

The basis of this tirade is a recent letter in the New York Evening Post by "A Southerner." His exact geographical location we do not know; but his ecclesiastical habitation is very easy to discover. He inveighs against "emotional religion" with all the venom of an anolent Pharisee, and charges it with the evils and ignorance of the negro population. This is a fair specimen of the Catholic's utterances:

It was in the South especially, and among the negroes, that Methodism added to its numbers. The excitement of the camp meeting and revival had a wonderful attraction for the negro, and, once brought within the range of a "mighty exhorter," the negroes were "converted" by the thousands. Emotional religion just caught the colored people like an epidemic. In times past, and probably up to date, it is said,
the negroes flock to a camp meeting as they would to a circus. It was at these camp meetings a "rich harvest of souls were saved." The negro exhorted, sang hymns and told his "experience." This was enough to make him "converted," and he was accordingly reckoned among the powerful and numerous hosts of Methodism that were going "to possess the land!"

Those at all informed on the subject know that the negroes did not flock to the camp meetings. True, large numbers became Christians and members of the Methodist Church; but very few were converted at camp meetings. They were served by white pastors, and enjoyed ample spiritual privileges. The writer quoted above makes himself merry over a faucy picture of his own creation. It has not, and never had, any existence in fact.

That the negro has been benefited and elevated by being taught the Christian religion no sane or unprejudiced man will deny. We know a few negroes who belong to the Romanish Church, and have failed to discover any superior moral or mental development among them.
So if "the extension of Catholicity" is "the one hope for the population, white and black, of the South," it will have to be of a higher type than any yet known to history.

He further says: "Methodism has deprived the South of a native literature worthy of the name." Alas! if that be so, but it is an admission that the church has some influence beyond mere figures. Surely a great responsibility rests upon those justly chargeable with depriving a people of a native literature. And after making the startling statement the sage philosopher discovers the reason for
it. Here is the discovery:

A system that is constantly appealing to the emotional side of a man's character must, necessarily, fail in developing that strength and grasp of intellect requisite in him who undertakes a work destined to take a place in national literature.
Methodism is powerful in encouraging cant, mediocrity and sentimentalism. But it deadens the thinking faculty.

Of course, if that theory be true—that our emotional religion deadens the thinking faculty—it will be euetated by the facts. And the converse must be apparent: that an unemotional religion—a religion of ritual, without feeling—quickens mental activity and develops great thinkers. But what are the facts? A little investigation would show that a large proportion of the leaders of thought in the nation are and have been Methodists. Among the jurists, statesmen, educators, orators and authors, Methodism has been conspicuously represented.

The editor quotes, with commendation,
"A Southerner's" slander that our Publishing House, at Nashville,
"has never published a single work that has received a place in our national literature." Just what is meant by "our national literature" has not transpired. What must a book do, or where must it go, to get into "our national literature?" Who is the custodian or librarian of that museum, and determines the admission or admissibility of the book? If the writer means to assert that no volume from our press has found a sale outside of the South, he is too innocent of the truth to be believed under the solemn sanctions of an oath. Some of these books have gone into every section of the United States and found eager readers. But, on the other hand, what has Romanism done in developing great thinkers and authors of "our national literature?" Let the saloon keeper, in his white apron, and Paddy, with spade and grog, make answer.

Parsonages.

AN APPEAL TO THE WOMEN OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

MY SISTERS: I should like to call your attention to the appeal Bishop Hargrove makes to the women of our church for parsonage building.
The fact that our itinerant ministers are often homeless has for some years been a source of great concern to the Bishop. But he has lately been heart-burdened and sorely troubled in witnessing the suffering that the lack of parsonages—an inconvenience and hinderance to the efficiency of our preachers in all the Conferences—has caused and is causing on the Western frontier, where houses are necessarily scarce. Often it is impossible to secure them. The hardships they have to endure in consequence of this defect in the church's care for them is exhausting the strength of the brave men willing to go to that most arduous and trying field—exhausting, in suffering, physical labor and domestic care—that strength needed for spiritual work among a people who put to the utmost strain their powers of mind and heart. How to remedy this defect, how to provide homes for these missionaries not sent to foreign lands, has given our good Bishop much anxious thought. But he has at last resolved upon a plan that he asks us to help him put into execution.

In giving an account of the effort lately made by the ladies of Montana Conference in this line, the Bishop says: "To the future historian of Methodism it will appear unaccountable that our itinerant system could exist a hundred years and no organized plan be adopted for supplying itinerants with homes. True, we have parsonages; but they have been built by charges which had the means to do so, and found it the cheapest way to take care of their pastor. All missionaries to foreign fields have among the first provisions a home to live in; but the missionaries to any charge in the United States and Territories and the preachers on feeble circuits have no such thoughtful consideration. When the real heroes of Methodism shall be marshalled these men shall be no longer overlooked. Thanks to the good women of Montana for a key-note that ought to thrill all Methodism and be suggestive to the coming General Conference. The potency of woman's work has been demonstrated in the success achieved by the Woman's Board of Missions.
There is a noble work, but expends itself wholly in benefits to foreign lands. This looks to another neglected field, and strictly within woman's sphere. Home is her realm.
To provide for the domestic comfort of the wives and children of itin-erants, unprovided for by others, is the work they have undertaken. Who so peculiarly fitted for this peculiar work? Providence, it may be, has left this for woman's special enterprise, the crowning touch of itin-erancy, the electet appliance of Methodism."

That the itinerancy renders "a parsonage in every charge a necessity to the perfect, the most efficient working of our church organization; that these parsonages ought in some way to be built has been long an acknowledged fact, and one frequently urged upon the church; that they would increase the power of our church, none can deny. That they would be a relief to the ministry our preachers will everywhere testify; that a parsonage renders caring for her pastor easier every Methodist woman knows, and the stewards appreciate the economy of it."

Parsonage building is undoubtedly a work that should be done. And if on me, my sisters, devolves the duty of doing it, let us arise in our full strength and go forward to accomplish it with zeal and trust. It is a noble work—a work worthy of our best endeavors—and one that appeals strongly to the sympathy of woman's heart. If the trials, the care, the suffering of our preachers and their families, and the hinderance to God's work resulting from this one thing—the lack of homes for itin-erants—were recorded, they would make huge volumes to be read with tears and astonishment by every true Methodist.

The plan is not to form another independent woman's society, but a Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Church Extension, to work with and through the Board for parsonage building. The Board of Church Extension receives, with applications for help to build churches, so many calls for plans and money for parsonage building—the first it has furnished, but the last it is not authorized to give—that the thought is naturally suggested that in connection with church building must the effort be made to build the long-needed and greatly demanded homes for our itinerant preachers. A Woman's Auxiliary to the Church Extension Board, for parsonage building, completes the thought, and becomes a plain and easy solution to the question that has for years been propounded to the church—"How shall we secure a parsonage in every charge?"

There is reason to hope and believe, if the church is ready for it, that the next General Conference will organize this Woman's Auxiliary to the Church Extension Board, for parsonage building, and it is my most earnest desire and my prayer that the women of our church shall prove themselves ready for it. Let every woman whose heart is moved toward this work speak to another and do all that lies in her power to awaken an interest in the subject. Let the preachers be prompt to urge it upon their congregations, that this movement for their relief may not be lost by inactivity on their part at this most important crisis. Let us demonstrate our readiness in this regular work in the practical way Bishop Hargrove suggests in his call for help in a special work of parsonage building in our missionary field in the Western Territories. The Bishop says: "Before closing this communication allow me to ask the good women of Southern Methodism to aid two or three points in the hardest part of our Western field. At Vinita,
I. T., $600 will secure a district and also a circuit parsonage, both sadly needed there for years. At Las Vegas, N. M., $1,000 would procure a home for the pastor, and $800 one in Phoenix, Arizona, for the presiding elder. I can think of individual women in different charges throughout Southern Methodism who can raise by a small effort $10, $50, $100, $200 each for these objects. Twenty-five such women in the church can in one month do this greatly needed and long-neglected work. Who will undertake it for Christ's sake as a free-will offering. Let a hundred raise what they can, and send the same to Rev. David Morton, secretary of the Board of Church Extension, 526 West Chestnut street, Louisville, Ky., and he will see that the money reaches its destination."
"Let these homes," he entreats,
"shield against the blasts of coming winter."

Have we hearts and can we refuse this call? Care we for the extension of Christ's kingdom, for the salvation of souls, and will we not aid those who are sacrificing everything to carry the gospel into a field where heathenism in many forms, savage barbarity and wickedness, throwing off the guise of civilization, form a motley crew from Satan for the destruction of men? Oh, my sister, let it not be said that the women of Southern Methodism—that Christian women—could receive such an appeal with indifference. Act promptly.
Send your contributions in quickly that these homes may be built before the coming of winter, that the blessing of God and of our suffering missionaries in the "hardest part of our Western work" may rest upon you.
Yours in Christian fellowship,

LUONDA B. HELM.

"HELM PLACE," ELIZABETHTOWN, KY.

A Kingly Sentiment.

The venerable and venerated
Emperor of Germany recently visited the Dom Chapel and inspected the new altar-piece which represents the kings of earth as laying their crowns at the feet of the Redeemer.
An address was presented to him by Dr. Koegel, the court chaplain, to which the aged Emperor made fitting response. His remarks, as republished in the New York Independent, were as follows:

"As for what you have said about me personally, I accept it with all modesty as a man whose days are now numbered. In my lifetime Heaven has covered me with blessings and mercies, especially in my old age; but the homage paid me I lay at the throne of the Highest, from whom we derive strength to execute all the best things that can be done on earth. Within the last few years, before the eyes of all of you, things have happened by which Prussia has been raised higher than even we expected. You have all been witnesses of the great work accomplished, which will continue to endure, if its foundations remain, in purity of religion and progress in every good deed. In my old days I can call Heaven to witness that I have ever looked upon religion as the sole foundation on which everything reposes, and as the highest good of my people."

Those are noble words, and worthy to be embalmed in every memory.
What kingly modesty! Though carrying a crowned head, he uncovers in the presence of the Holy One—the King of Kings. His high position and great power have not exalted him beyond measure. No subject in his vast empire is more loyal to the crown than he is himself to the sovereignty of the Nazarene.

But most of all we are impressed with his perfect recognition of God as the source of national blessing and prosperity. Would that his utterances might be considered by certain political doctrinaires of our land and time! Their effort is to eliminate God from national affairs and resent the idea of a Providence in worldly concerns. Happy is that people whose God is the Lord!

Godless Thanksgiving.

The thanksgiving proclamation issued by Gov. Hoadly, of Ohio, last year was conspicuous in its failure to mention the name of God at all, or in any wise recognize Divine Providence. It was the subject of general comment and regret, and the occasion of the rumor that His Excellency was a pronounced atheist. We were pleased, therefore, to read the following in last week's issue of the Western Christian Advocate:

The story comes to us from a reliable source that Gov. Hoadly is not an atheist, nor even a skeptic, but is a Unitarian and a sincere believer in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and daily reads them in the original tongues as an act of devotion.
His noted thanksgiving proclamation of 1884 was hastily written, just after he had been reading the sermon on the mount, and the fact that the name of Deity was not used never occurred to him until his attention was called to the fact after publication.

But the Times-Democrat, of Tuesday morning, says the Governor has issued a second proclamation with a similar omission, and that the fact "is creating much comment." The proclamation says:

By virtue of the authority conferred on me by section 3177 of the Revised Statutes, and in accordance with the annual and honored custom, I hereby appoint Thursday, November 28, 1885, as a day of thanksgiving. That the day may be thankfully kept by all, we should observe it in the spirit of him who said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," remembering that we have the poor always with us.

It is hardly possible that the ignoring of God this year was occasioned by the proclamation being "hastily written." As his attention was called to the matter, he could not have easily forgotten it. Indeed, it is difficult to conceive how a call for thanksgiving could be written without thinking of the One unto whom we are to give thanks. It required no little ingenuity of expression to avoid the name of God and ebow cause for such an observance at all. If the above be true as published abroad, we see another reason why the Governor should have been retired from office at the recent Ohio election.

The Campaign in England.

The political contest now raging in England is unusually exciting.
Both parties are straining every nerve to achieve success, and in many cases by very questionable methods. We sometimes imagine that our political struggles are without a parallel in violence, intolerance and chicanery. But it is doubted if our platform speakers deal more in inveective than English lords and commoners, or resort to more unfair means to vanquish an antagonist.
The most prominent issue just now is the disestablishment of the Church of England. The Liberals generally favor, and the Tories solidly oppose, the measure. Mr. Gladstone, the great Liberal leader, thinks it inevitable, but will not be a matter of legislation in the next Parliament.
But, without blauging or approving,
it has become the most exciting issue in the campaign. And this has thrust the clergy into the contest.
On one side the "Bishops and other clergy" are contending for their "livings," while on the other the vast army of Dissenters are thundering philippics against a state religion.
Rev. William Arthur and Charles
Garrett, leading and influential Methodists, have each issued a political manifesto, and the church is urged to support only good men for Parliament. The venerable William Arthur writes with the fire of youth, as witness the following:
"Let your candidate know that no rake shall make laws for the households of England. Let them know that men of the Baker Pasha stamp are never to sit in the seat of the law giver. Let them know that we are not going to have our benches of justice one day boards for the raising of public houses, and another day boards for the sheltering of the pro-curees. Let them know that we are not going to have our police employed in protecting traders in crimes against society, and in crushing those who expose the crimes." In like ringing tones does Charles Garrett, the great temperance leader, call upon the electors to send men to Parliament who favor local option.

The Methodist Times, of London, shivers a lance in the fray also, and closes a vigorous leader with these words: "A little moral courage for the next three weeks on the part of those who believe in God, and therefore, in humanity, will make the next Parliament the best ever elected." And so the battle rages with all odds in favor of the Liberals.

Victor Hugo to the Atheists.

Although the great French poet did not have "the benefit of clergy" in his death, he was not an unbe-liever. Doubtless, if he had been surrounded by the blessings and example of a pure Protestantism, his church relations would have been very different. It was his opposition to the dominant ecclesiasticalism of France that affected his views concerning all church organization.
Among the many literary pearls left by that great genius is the following reply made to come after dinner atheistic remarks. It is full of good, hard, cold sense, and will be found helpful to minds of atheistic tendency.
He said:

There are no occult forces; there are only luminous forces. Occult force is chaos; the luminous force is God. Man is an infinitely little copy of God; this is glory enough for man. I am a man, an invisible atom, a drop in the ocean, a grain of sand on the shore. Little as I am, I feel the God in me, because I can also bring form out of my chaos. I make books which are creations. I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest which has been more than once cut down—the new shoots are stronger and livelier than ever.
I am rising. I know, toward the sky.
The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap; but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown worlds. You say the soul is nothing but the resultant of bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul the most luminous when my bodily powers began to fail? Winter is on my head, and eternal spring is in my heart. Then I breathe in the hour the fragrance of the lilies, the violets and the roses as at twenty years ago. The nearer I approach the end, the plainer I hear around me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me. It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale and it is history. For half a century
I have been writing my thoughts in prose and verse—history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song—I have tried all. But I feel I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I lie down to the grave I can say, like so many others, "I have finished my day's work;" but I can not say, "I have finished my life." My day's work will begin again the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight to open with the dawn.

Notice to North Mississippi Conference.

Preachers and delegates who desire to bring their wives to Conference will please inform me promptly.
The following railroads—F. C. M. and O. M. and C., and L. N. O. and T.—will give reduced rates by charging full fare going and one-third regular fare returning, or one cent per mile. Others to hear from in due time. Members will report to the Methodist Church when they arrive in Kosciusko. Brethren who come by private conveyance will please write me. Connections officers and visiting ministers from distance will also inform us. Thanks to presiding elders for sending names of delegates, candidates and others.
Trains arrive at the following hours:
Passenger west-bound, six P. M.; east-bound, four A. M. Accommodation, freight, east-bound and westbound meet at Kosciusko at half-past one P. M. A revival will begin at Kosciusko Wednesday night before Conference begins. Brethren, please leave your criticism at home, and bring all of your religion with you.
Help us pray and look for a baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Mr. Editor, we look for Sister G.
Loway and her husband at Conference.

J. A. HOWARD.

Kosciusko, Miss., Nov. 7, 1885.

Brethren wishing to come West Point on their way to the session of our Conference, at Kosciusko, will be entertained (for the night) in the homes of our people here. On their arrival let them report at the store of W. C.
White & Co., from whence they will be conducted to their homes.

H. G. KILGORE, P. C.

West Point, Miss., Nov. 9, 1885.

Candidates for admission on trial into the North Mississippi Conference will please meet the Committee of Examination promptly at three o'clock in the afternoon of Monday
November 30, in the Methodist Church at Kosciusko. The committee wish to urge upon these candidates the importance of having the work of examination completed before Conference assemblies on Wednesday morning, and also that they be prepared to show a respectable knowledge of spelling, reading, English grammar, geography and arithmetic. We think it worth while to emphasize these topics in the elementary branches of English.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN,
Chairman Committee.

Louisiana Conference.

The presiding elders of this Conference will please notify me by letter, giving the names and number of lay delegates that will attend the Conference; also the number of applicants for trial. Those preachers who expect to bring their wives will please notify me.

T. K. FAUNT LEROY, P. C.
Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 6, 1885.

The following from the South-Western Methodist will be read with interest by many friends of our good brother, Dr. Mathews, in this section:

Dr. John Mathews, of Kansas City, writes us that he is at length at work after an unusual experience of affliction. Three months ago his brother died—Robert Mathews, of Tennessee. Mrs. Keener, his daughter, wife of Rev. John C. Keener, presiding elder of Mobile district, Alabama, after many weeks of sickness at her father's, is slowly recovering. Mrs. Hawkins, wife of Rev. C. M. Hawkins, the doctor's youngest daughter, is at length measurably recovered from typhoid fever. Dr. Mathews himself was taken down with fever about the time of the meeting of his Conference, and was not able to attend. He says: "No period of my life has ever been so shadowed; but I am reminded of the comfort:

"Never a storm but the tainted air needs it.
Never a storm but the sunshine succeeds it."

Dr. Mathews was appointed at the last session of his Conference to Washington Street, a little church on the west side of Kansas City. He writes: "I found things in good order and the people well instructed. The congregations are large. The people last Sunday evening could not be seated for want of room. At Walnut Street, Bro. Morris is making a fine impression. A Holmes Chapel, Carpenter opened up with great satisfaction to his people. Bro. Lawrence, at Centenary, is laying plans and hoping for large success."

Holston Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

WYTHEVILLE DISTRICT.—W. W. Foyt, P. E. Wytheville station, J. H. Kennedy; Wytheville circuit, J. H. Kennedy; Newbern, J. L. M. Fiech—G. Stewart, superintendency; Auburn, to be supplied (by Houck); Central, —; Jacksonville, W. M. Dyer; Hillsville, R. F. Jackson; Oldtown, S. K. Bird; Nuckolls, superintendency; Elk Creek, John Boring; Iron Mountain mission, to be supplied (by J. P. Bird); Leadmines, W. W. Hicks; Seaside circuit, J. W. Bowman.

MARION DISTRICT.—W. H. Price, P. E. Marion station, W. H. Leith; Marion circuit, G. W. Summers; Saltville, B. W. S. Bishop; J. S. Bourne; Sharon Springs, J. N. Lutz; Emory, D. V. Price; Independence, J. Mahoney; Mt. Airy, C. K. Miller; Jefferson, J. T. Stover; Watauga, W. H. Horton; Taylorville, T. E. Wagg; Sparta, J. B. Taber.

JEFFERSONVILLE DISTRICT.—J. T. Frasier, P. E. Jeffersonville station, W. L. Richardson; Liberty Hill circuit, D. H. Carr; Cedar Bluff, J. W. Browning; Staffordville, R. A. Kelly; Pearlburg, T. F. Glenn; Princeton, E. F. Kahle; Concord, R. Wheeler; East Tazewell, W. D. Mitchell; Buchanan, to be supplied (by La. Few); McDowell, to be supplied; Blountsville, G. M. Johnson; Clear Fork, G. W. K. Green—W. H. Kelly, superintendency; Pocahontas, E. F. Tilley.

ABINGDON DISTRICT.—R. H. Parker, P. E. Abingdon station, J. S. Kennedy; Abingdon circuit, T. T. Salyer and Eugene Blake; Bristol circuit, J. H. Keith; Bristol circuit, R. E. Smith; Bristol mission, B. V. Miller; Mendota, J. E. Bruce; Lebanon, F. Alexander; Elk Garden, J. E. Naff; Dickinsonville, G. A. Maude; Gladysville, J. W. Bell; Edinville, J. R. Walker; Clintwood, W. B. Baldwin; Nickelsville, W. P. Donah; Emory and Henry College, J. A. Davis; Martha Washington College, E. E. Wiley, president; Sullivan College, D. S. Hearon; Sunday-school editor, W. G. E. Cunningham; missionary to Mexico, D. W. Carter.

JONESBORO DISTRICT.—G. D. French, P. E. Jonesboro station, W. R. Barnett; Jonesboro circuit, F. D. Crumley; Union, J. D. Hickman; Blountville, E. W. Moore—H. S. Watts, superintendency; Kingsport, H. P. Waugh; Rogersville, J. H. Moore; Greeneville, J. R. Hickson; Rheathorn, E. B. Robertson; Fall Branch, J. A. Scrone; Erwin, to be supplied (by J. W. Perry); Elizabethton and Cranberry, W. G. Mahoney; Hawkins circuit, M. L. Cartwright; Vanleighb University, E. H. Hoss.

MORRISTOWN DISTRICT.—K. C. Atkins, P. E. Morristown station, W. C. Carden—G. Taylor, superintendency; Morristown circuit, W. L. Jones; Mosky Creek, K. W. Kite; Lutledge, R. M. Hickey; Tazewell, J. E. Brooks; Powell's Valley, W. M. Bellamy; Sneedville, R. Cassidy; Jonesville, J. D. Cunningham; Rye Cove, R. P. McDowell; Newport, A. W. Curtis; St. Clair, J. K. Wolfe; Strawberry Plains, J. H. Parrott.

KNOXVILLE DISTRICT.—F. Richardson, P. E. Church Street, L. L. H. Carlock; Broad Street, H. W. Bays; City mission, R. G. Waterhouse; Knoxville circuit, H. C. Clemens; Sevierville, J. A. Billeback; Jacksboro, J. C. Runyan; Andersonville, D. H. Connam; Clinton, J. A. Cooke; Lenoir, B. T. Sharp; London and Philadelphia, H. S. Hamilton; Maryville, J. W. Carnes; Madisonville, Ayres Kincaid; Eleazer, J. W. Coffman; assistant Sunday-school secretary, J. A. Lyons.

CHATTANOOGA DISTRICT.—G. W. Miles, P. E. Centenary, G. C. Rankin; Whiteside Street, T. R. Handy; Cherry Street, J. A. Burrow; Rossville, T. C. Shuler; Ooltewah, W. R. Snyder; Trenton, J. L. Prater; Coal City and Etina, C. M. Campbell; Cleveland station, A. J. Frazier; Cleveland circuit, S. V. Bates; Charleston, S. S. Catron; Riceville, to be supplied (by E. G. McKenzie); Athens station, S. H. Hilliard; Athens circuit, H. Farley; Sweet Water, J. I. Cash; Decatur, J. M. Wolfe.

SEQUEACHE DISTRICT.—J. S. W. Neel, P. E. Jasper, J. W. Robertson; Dunlap, W. C. Farris; South Pittsburg, to be supplied (by J. A. Darr); Battle Creek, J. B. Simpson; Pikeville, S. T. McPherson; Grassy Cove, D. C. Horn; Jamestown, John Wolsey; Kingston, E. H. Bogie; Washington, H. C. Neal; Spring City, G. W. Simpson; Hamilton, J. O. Straley.

ASHEVILLE DISTRICT.—C. T. Carroll, P. E. Asheville station, W. W. Bays; Asheville circuit, —; City mission, to be supplied; Weaverville, L. K. Haynes; Swannanoa, J. T. Smith; Catawba, B. S. Weatherly; Hendersonville, J. L. Teague; Brevard, J. F. Waupler; Sulphur Springs, J. F. Austio; Leicester, W. B. Lyda; Spring Creek, to be supplied (by J. W. Battle); Burnsville, L. L. Richardson; Bakersville station, J. C. Lowe; Bakersville circuit, —; Tow River, —; Gibson, Rine Ridge, C. M. Green; Asheville Female College, Jas. Atkins, Jr.; missionary to Brazil, Jas. L. Kennedy.

FRANKLIN DISTRICT.—J. H. Weaver, P. E. Franklin station, W. A. Thomas; Franklin circuit, D. McCracken; Waynesville, D. H. Dicke; Pigeon River, R. W. Pickens; Haywood, W. M. Boring; Webster, C. M. James; Macon, J. O. Shelley; Murphy, R. A. Owen; Hayesville, P. L. Terrell; Charleston, J. P. Reynolds; Robbinsville, J. A. Watkins; Cashers Valley, —; Ducktown, to be supplied (by G. Bryant); Highland, J. H. Brendle.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Executive Department,
State of Louisiana.

Whereas, it is the never-ceasing duty of all mankind to render to the Creator true and heartfelt thanks for all his gifts and blessings; and, whereas, it has been the cherished and pious custom of the people of the several States of our republic from the earliest times to set apart certain days for the solemn and united utterance of thanks and praise to the Giver of all good and perfect gifts; now, therefore, in behalf of the good people of Louisiana, and in compliance with the desire of many among all classes of devout worshippers, it becomes my grateful duty to designate by this my proclamation Thursday, the twenty-sixth day of November, 1885, to be for the worthy and pious citizens of this our favored State a day of general thanksgiving and prayer, in order that religious services may be held and attended by all who may deem it their duty to join in concerted expression of praise and gratitude to Almighty God for his great and wondrous works and for the favors without number which he has showered upon our people.

For another year you have been blessed in your baskets and your stores. Peace still reigns throughout your borders. You have been visited by no pestilence walking in darkness, nor destruction wasting at noonday. No floods have desolated your homes. No fires have ravaged your forests. Public order and a wholesome obedience to the law have prevailed. Labor has had its just rewards. Opportunities of education have continued and increased. Famine is unknown and unfear within your borders. Your rights as citizens have been maintained. Your political liberties are more deeply rooted. No violence has threatened you from abroad, and the rights and honor of the commonwealth are safe in the hands of her people under favor of the Ruler of all nations.

For these and countless other blessings it is our bounden duty to give unceasing and most earnest thanks, joined with devout prayer, that they may be continued to us and to those who will follow us in other years and other centuries.

It is also fit and right on that day of thanksgiving that you have in special remembrance those near you who are unfortunate, afflicted, orphaned and desolate, giving them solace and relief in token of your gratitude for your deliverance from like evils.

Given under my signature and the seal of the State of Louisiana, at the city of Baton Rouge, this ninth day of November, A. D. 1885.

By the Governor: S. D. McENERY.

—The Bible is the best book in the world.—John Adams.

—The Southern Methodist Church has fifteen churches and preaching places in Atlanta, Ga.

—The different branches of Methodism in England report a gain of 5,041 members the present year.

—Dr. Howard Henderson, of Jersey City, late of Kentucky, has a very popular lecture on "The Sword of Grant and Lee."

—Dr. Felix R. Hill, of St. Louis, is recovering from a several weeks attack of neuralgia. He hopes to fill his pulpit next Sabbath.

—Central College, Missouri, of which Dr. Hendrix is president, has an endowment of $110,000, and efforts are being made to raise it to $250,000.

—The Western Christian Advocate has come out in new dress and looks as handsome as a maiden. That is one of our favorite and favored exchanges.

—Dr. Charles Cullis, of Boston, will hold a religious convention in Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, beginning November 12.

—A nephew of the King of Corea, a son of his Prime Minister, and the son of a military mandarin have entered the Southern Methodist College at Shanghai.

—Rev. J. W. Lowrance, of Kansas City, will please accept thanks for a pamphlet copy of the minutes of the South-West Missouri Conference. It is a well-edited annual.

—The editor acknowledges the pleasure of a call from Dr. B. M. Palmer, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city. He deservedly stands in the front rank of American divines. Wisdom dwells upon his lips.

—The Board of Pardon has refused to recommend the commutation of the death sentence on Pat Ford and John Murphy. It was sad to reach such a conclusion, but no other course was possible in view of the law and the facts.

—Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, of the Mississippi Conference, has been in the city some days visiting his family at 150 Carondelet street. He preached for Dr. Carter on Sunday night and, of course, has made frequent calls at the ADVOCATE office.

—Mrs. Mollie Thompson McGhoy, daughter of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, of the Mississippi Conference, was married at his residence, 159 Carondelet street, in this city, on the evening of the fifth instant, to Mr. Frank Hoy, of Madison, Miss. Dr. C. W. Carter officiated.

—Of Rev. J. W. Bell, who transfers from Tennessee to Mississippi, Dr. Fitzgerald says he "is one of those sound, clear-cut, transparent Methodist preachers who carry their credentials in their looks and hearing. A truer man is not to be found, nor a better worker." He will find a warm welcome.

—Bro. G. W. Bachman writes us a personal note, in which account is given of the meeting at Canton, Miss. He says: "I am now in Canton, adding Bro. Sligleton in a meeting. Several penitents at the altar and four joined the church last night. There is prospect of a good and extensive work here."

—In the school of theology of Boston University an advanced class of eight are reading in German, with Prof. M. J. Cramer, Luther's Christologische Betrachtungen, as edited by Dr. William Naest. This is the largest class the school has had in the reading of German theology since President Warren resigned the work twelve or thirteen years ago.

—Enclosing a communication for our columns, Rev. John A. Miller, writing from Haynesville, La., says: "I am winding up my fourth year on the Haynesville circuit. This has been a pleasant, and to some extent, a successful year with me, though I regret it has not been more so. It is a trial to leave old and tried friends, but the faithful itinerant always finds others, warm and true, in every field."

—Sunday was the last day of the Sam Jones series of meetings at Birmingham, Ala. The crowds were immense, estimated at one service as over eight thousand. His meeting there has been a grand success, resulting in hundreds of conversions and accessions to the several churches. Sam Jones has gone to Atlanta to engage in the great prohibition struggle which is now stirring that city from center to suburbs.

—Mrs. M. J. Whitworth, widow of the late Rev. Milton J. Whitworth, founder of Whitworth College at Brookhaven, Miss., died in that place on Saturday night, and was buried on Sunday afternoon. There was a vast outpouring of the people as a tribute of respect to eminent worth and a long, stainless life. The funeral address at the church was delivered by Dr. Johnson, president of Whitworth College, and the sainted matron was laid to rest by the side of her noble, large-hearted husband.

A large family circle mourn her loss and treasure with pride her precious memory.

—The Exposition was formally opened on Tuesday with imposing ceremonies. At an early hour military and civic organizations assembled for the grand parade through the streets, and at 11 A. M. embarked on a steamer for the Exposition grounds. Our people here have been aroused to renewed interest in the great enterprise, and will lend generous influence and assistance to assure its success. The Board of Management is composed of thorough business men, at the head of which is our special friend, the Hon. S. R. McConico. All available space in the several buildings has been taken by exhibitors, and the indications are that there will be an attractive display. A further report will be made next week.

—The editor spent Saturday last at Jackson, Miss., having been summoned there by telegram the day before to attend the funeral of Mrs. Susan Ledbetter, in the absence of the pastor, Dr. C. G. Andrews. He returned in time, however, and had charge of the funeral ceremonies. Addresses were made by the writer, Dr. Hunter and the pastor in the order named, and a large congregation gave solemn approval of the tributes paid to the radiant virtues of the deceased. She was the oldest member of the Methodist Church in that city, and was held in universal esteem. For nearly fifty years she had belonged to that little flock, was abundant in labors and maintained a saintliness of life that commanded the reverence of the community. She leaves an only son to wear her name, and a large circle of friends to cherish her memory.

A note from our old friend, Dr. W. H. Leith, of the Holston Conference, concludes as follows. Friends in Mississippi and Alabama will be glad to hear from him:

I am very much pleased with my present station. I was so much afflicted with asthma while at Athens, that it was thought best for me to return to Virginia, where I am not so much troubled with it. Come and see me in my mountain home.

Thanks from Mexico.

Mr. Editor: With great pleasure I acknowledge through the ADVOCATE the receipt of $25 from Bro. E. P. Mackie, superintendent of the Seashore Camp Ground Sunday-school. This is their annual contribution to the Central Mexican Mission, and came "just in time."

We had saved up a little money to get desks for the girls' school in this city; but our calculations were all spoiled a few days ago by an order from headquarters transferring this little amount to the payment of other expenses. Miss Halloran has informed me very pleasantly that unless we get desks very soon, or, at least, benches, so as to continue our educational work after the style of American civilization, we shall have to adopt the Turkish style of seating the girls on the floor. So we have determined to "sit down" on that $25. The boys in our Industrial College will have something to do in the making of the desks.

The Seashore Sunday-school, it seems, has seven classes—the "Christian Warriors" being the "honor class." The other classes are called "Lambs of the Fold," "Gleaners," "Flower Gatherers," "Soldiers of the Cross," "Pearl Seekers," "Standard Bearer." The banner scholars this year were H. Frack Foster, Philip Werlein, Jr., and Cora Lee Campman; and Bro. Mackie is certainly a banner superintendent. Many thanks to them all!

W. M. PATTERSON.
CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 26, 1885.

P. S.—We hear that a Christmas box is being prepared in New Orleans for the girls in our city school. Muy bien, we say.

W. M. P.

Centenary College, of Louisiana.

THANKSGIVING AND ARBOR DAY, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1885.

PROGRAMME.

10:30 A. M.—Sermon by Rev. C. B. Galloway, D. D., editor New Orleans Christian Advocate.

2:30 P. M.—Meeting of the Union and of the Franklin Literary Societies.

3 P. M.—Address on the grounds by Rev. A. G. Miller. Planting of trees by the senior class.

With a view to the further improvement of the campus it is proposed to everyone who contributes one dollar, or over, that his or her name shall be registered in the College Tree Book with the amount contributed, and also the number of the tree bearing the name of the donor. We hope to hear from many friends sending us one, five, ten, or even one hundred dollars. Write, giving your full name and address, to Rev. T. A. S. Adams, president, Jackson, La.

T. A. S. A.

Books and Periodicals.

—Babyhood, published by Babyhood Publishing Co., 18 Spruce street, New York, is a good periodical for mothers. We acknowledge the courtesy of a copy.

—The Quiver, for October, is an admirable issue. We find ourselves anticipating the hour of its arrival. It is a well-edited religious monthly, and is published at small cost. Cassell & Co., 139 and 141 Broadway, New York.

—Good Housekeeping is a valuable periodical and meets a felt want. Those in whose judgment we have confidence concerning that department speak of it in terms of high praise. Published at Holyoke, Mass., by Clark W. Bryan & Co.

—The Sideral Messenger, for November, is on our table, and is, perhaps, the best number of this periodical yet received. It is conducted by Wm. W. Payne, director of Carlton College Observatory, Northfield, Minn. Subscription price, $2.00 a year.

—The English Illustrated Magazine, for November, has come to hand. The frontispiece is a picture of Lady Sarah Bunbury, by Sir Joshua Reynolds, engraved by T. Agnew. The leading article is on "An Adventure in Afghanistan." "Newcastle-on-Tyne" is a graphically written and beautifully illustrated paper. Another attractive article is on the "London Commons." These, with several excellent serials, make up one of the finest issues we have ever received of this valuable monthly. New York: Macmillan & Co., 112 Fourth Avenue.

—The Pulpit Treasury, for November, is on our table, and is fully up to its well known high standard of excellence. The frontispiece is a portrait of Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, and the leading sermon is from his graphic pen. There is another admirable discourse on "Christ's Method of Teaching," by Prof. W. M. Barbour, D. D. "The Unrepentant Sacrifice" is a fresh, suggestive theme of Dr. J. W. McKay, president of the Methodist College at Belfast, Ireland. The leading thoughts of sermons, editorials, and other departments are capital. We read to profit every month this excellent periodical. New York: E. B. Treat, publisher, 771 Broadway. Subscription, $2.50. Clergymen, $2.00. Single copy, twenty-five cents.

—The Century Magazine, for November, has come to hand a few days late. We hail the coming of this quarterly monthly with eager delight. For years past we have not failed to receive it, and each issue has ever surpassed this one for November. The leading paper, elaborately illustrated, is entitled "A Photographer's Visit to Petra." "Living English Sculptors" is simply superb. "A Cloud on the Mountain" is illustrated by the pencil of Mary Hall-foote. There is a suggestive paper on "The United Churches of the United States" that will command the attention of ecclesiastical students. "Typical Dogs" will be acceptable to experts in that line. There is another war paper from the pen of Gen. Grant on "Chattanooga." The editorial department is fresh and good. The Century Co., 33 East 17th street (Union Square), New York.

So great is my veneration for the Bible, that the earlier my children begin to read it, the more confident will be my hopes that they will prove useful citizens to their country and respectable members of society.

—John Q. Adams.

There is a book worth all other books which were ever printed.—Patrick Henry.

The way to fame is like that way to heaven,—through much tribulation.—Stierne.

The injurious effect of coffee on the human system is said to be obviated by the use of sugar, which renders it not only harmless but beneficial.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Nov. 9.—The Canadian Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Algoma, which left here Thursday the 5th, went ashore on Isle Royale, Superior, at four o'clock Saturday morning during a blinding snow storm. About eight passengers and twenty-five of the crew are supposed to be lost.

Plan of Episcopal Visitation for 1885.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP HARRIS.
Denver.....	July 16.....	Trinidad, Col.
Montana.....	Sept. 4.....	Willow Creek
Idaho.....	Sept. 18.....	Albany, Oregon
Pacific.....	Sept. 26.....	Sacramento, Cal.
Los Angeles.....	Oct. 30.....	Los Angeles, Cal.
North Mississippi.....	Dec. 32.....	Kosciusko, Miss.
Memphis.....	Dec. 10.....	Paducah, Ky.
Florida.....	Jan. 6.....	Orlando, Fla.

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANT.
Western.....	Sept. 2.....	Wyandotte, Kan.
Missouri.....	Sept. 9.....	Columbia, Mo.
Indian Mission.....	Sept. 17.....	Oak Lodge, I. T.
St. Louis.....	Sept. 23.....	St. Louis, Mo.
Southwest Missouri.....	Sept. 30.....	Lexington, Mo.
Arkansas.....	Nov. 25.....	Morrilton, Ark.
White River.....	Dec. 2.....	Arkadelphia, Ark.
White River.....	Dec. 9.....	Holston, Ark.

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP McTIGHE.
Mexican B. M. M.....	Oct. 29.....	Sau Antonio.
West Texas.....	Nov. 4.....	Gonzales, Texas.
Northwest Texas.....	Nov. 11.....	Corpus Christi.
North Texas.....	Nov. 18.....	Falls, Texas.
Oregon Mission.....	Nov. 24.....	New Fountain.
Texas.....	Dec. 2.....	Austin, Texas.
East Texas.....	Dec. 9.....	Beaumont.
Mississippi.....	Dec. 16.....	Meridian, Miss.
Baltimore.....	March 19.....	Stamford, Va.

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEENER.
Illinois.....	Sept. 31.....	Pana, Ill.
West Virginia.....	Oct. 7.....	Chillicothe, Ky.
Holston.....	Oct. 21.....	Cleveland, Tenn.
Virginia.....	Nov. 11.....	Petersburg, Va.
North Carolina.....	Nov. 25.....	Charlotte, N. C.
South Carolina.....	Dec. 9.....	Columbia, S. C.
Louisiana.....	Jan. 6.....	Baton Rouge.
Central Mexican Mts.....	Feb. 24.....	City of Mexico.

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky.....	Sept. 9.....	Vincennes, Ky.
Louisiana.....	Sept. 16.....	Greenville, Ky.
Tennessee.....	Oct. 7.....	Columbia, Tenn.
North Alabama.....	Nov. 18.....	Huntsville, Ala.
North Georgia.....	Nov. 25.....	Newnan, Ga.
South Georgia.....	Dec. 2.....	Lawrenceville, Ga.
Alabama.....	Dec. 9.....	Fulton Springs.

Bishop McTighe has charge of the missions in China and Japan.

Bishop Keener has charge of the mission in Brazil.

Bishop Wilson has charge of the Central Mexican Mission.

Bishop Keener has charge of the Central Mexican Mission.

Bishop Keener has charge of the Central Mexican Mission.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

OARVER & JAMISON.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

OARVER & JAMISON,

Publishers.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of fine and leather. Try them.

A ship is called "she" because it always has the last word. The ship is bound to answer its helm every time.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esteybrook's Steel Pens.

"Walter, can you bring me a nice young chicken, smothered in onions?" "No, sah. We don't kill 'em dat way, sah. We cull 'em 'er heads."

Best omelet to use and cheapest. Pills for Catarrh, by Druggists, 50c.

A great deal has been written about learning to say no. If you would teach a man to say no, just ask him if he would like to pay that little bill to-day.

P. WELLEN.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of Pianos, Organs, and musical instruments, increases at the Werlein Music Palace, 135 Canal street. The reason is where with the custom come from to absorb this immense stock. The liberal terms combined with satisfactory prices and safe guarantee offered by Mr. Werlein, gives the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is continually spreading out in every direction, and necessitating the carrying of a large and well-selected stock of music and musical instruments of every description. Call and see, courteous treatment is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished on application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 10, 1885.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary.....	6 1/2 @
Ordinary.....	7 1/2 @
Good ordinary.....	8 1/2 @
Low middling.....	9 1/2 @
Middling.....	10 1/2 @
Good middling.....	11 1/2 @
Middling fair.....	12 1/2 @
Fair.....	13 1/2 @
Galveston middling.....	9 1/2 @
Mobile middling.....	10 1/2 @
St. Louis middling.....	11 1/2 @

SUGAR.
Inferior.....	4 1/2 @
Common.....	5 1/2 @
Good common.....	6 1/2 @
Fair.....	7 1/2 @
Good fair.....	8 1/2 @
Fully fair.....	9 1/2 @
Prime.....	10 1/2 @
Strictly Prime.....	11 1/2 @
Choice.....	12 1/2 @
Yellow clarified.....	13 1/2 @
Gray clarified.....	14 1/2 @
Choice whites.....	15 1/2 @
Granulated.....	16 1/2 @

MOLASSES.
Hydrip.....	26 @
Fair.....	27 @
Strictly Prime.....	28 @
Choice.....	29 @
Fancy.....	30 @

RICE.
Fancy.....	4 1/2 @
Choice.....	5 1/2 @
Prime.....	6 1/2 @
Good.....	7 1/2 @
Fair.....	8 1/2 @
Ordinary.....	9 1/2 @
Common.....	10 1/2 @
No. 2.....	11 1/2 @
Rough.....	12 1/2 @

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers.....	5 00 @
Minnesota patents.....	5 10 @
Extra fancy.....	5 20 @
Winter wheat patents.....	5 30 @
Choice.....	5 40 @
Fancy.....	5 50 @
Extra fancy.....	5 60 @

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal.....	3 10 @
Corn meal.....	2 10 @
Grits.....	2 10 @
Hominy.....	2 25 @

GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White.....	45 @
Yellow.....	46 @
Mixed.....	47 @
OATS:
Western.....	36 @
Texas rust-proof.....	37 @
BRAN:
Choice.....	19 00 @
Prime.....	17 00 @

PROVISIONS.
PORE:
Moss.....	9 50 @
Prime moss.....	9 00 @
Lumps.....	8 75 @
BACON:
Fancy breakfast.....	9 1/2 @
Shoulders.....	46 @
Sides, clear.....	61 @
Sides, clear rib.....	61 @
HAMS:
Sugar-cured.....	10 1/2 @
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders.....	51 @
Sides, clear.....	51 @
Sides, clear rib.....	51 @

FISH.
MACAREL:
Extra No. 1, in bbls.....	18 00 @
Half bbls.....	9 50 @
No. 1, in bbls.....	9 50 @
Half bbls.....	5 10 @
No. 2, in bbls, large.....	7 75 @
Half bbls.....	4 25 @

GROCERIES.
COFFEE:
Bio, choice.....	94 @
Cordova, choice.....	12 @
Java, choice.....	22 @
BUTTER:
Western dairy.....	18 @
New York dairy.....	16 @
COUNTRY:
Choice.....	64 @
TRANS:
Choice.....	60 @
Fair.....	25 @
OILS:
Coal, cases.....	17 @
Coal, bbls.....	12 @
Cotton seed.....	31 @
Lard.....	60 @

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western, per crate.....	7 00 @
Chicago, per 100.....	7 00 @
POTATOES:
Louisiana.....	1 35 @
Western.....	1 50 @
KIDNEY:
Choice.....	5 00 @
ONIONS:
Louisiana.....	2 50 @
Western.....	2 50 @

BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
1 lb. bbl.....	10 1/2 @
2 lb. bbl.....	11 1/2 @
BALING TWINE:
1 lb. bbl.....	15 @
TIES:
1 bundle.....	1 25 @

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western.....	40 00 @
Young.....	1 50 @
Chickens, South'n.....	3 01 @
Young.....	1 75 @
Turkeys, Southern.....	9 00 @
Eggs:
Western.....	20 @
Southern.....	21 @
Lake.....	21 @
Louisiana.....	21 @
Bury.....	10 @

HIDES.
Green salted.....	11 @
Dry salted.....	11 @
STRAYS:
Oak, kegs.....	75 00 @
Oak, barrels.....	100 00 @
Oak, hogshead.....	135 00 @
HORN POLES:
Hoghead.....	50 00 @
Barrel.....	24 00 @
Half barrel.....	24 00 @

FERTILIZERS.
Cotton seed.....	11 00 @
Meal.....	22 50 @
Pure ground bone.....	42 00 @
Muriatic acid.....	2 @
Sulphuric acid.....	2 @
Bone black.....	2 @

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

MINDEN, La., Nov. 3.—The last rail on the Minden branch Railroad was laid today. It is a first-class road, and what Minden has been long in need of. All are enthusiastic over the completion and flattering prospects.

TRAY, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Caroline Gilkey Rogers, the well-known advocate of female suffrage, offered a vote at a polling place at Lansingburg, which was refused by the inspectors. She threatened to apply to the courts for a mandamus.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Yesterday was the last day of the session of the convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. John Wallace, of Indiana, superintendent of the franchise department, reported that there are twelve States in which women are given the right of suffrage, and said that the woman suffrage stood upon no narrow platform, as God had given to all the right to rule themselves. The committee on plan of work recommended that Congress be memorialized in the interest of universal suffrage. The following, reported by the committee on resolutions, was adopted:

Resolved, That the use of alcoholic wine in the holy communion furnishes moral support to the liquor traffic, and is not, in our judgment, a proper type of the blood of Christ, and we would earnestly recommend the use of the pure, unfornmented juice of the grape at the Lord's table.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—The vote of Massachusetts, with five towns to hear from, is: For Governor—Robinson, Rep., 12,343; Prince, Dem., 90,136; Lathrop, Pro., 4,594; Sumner, Labor, 2,184. Robinson's plurality over Prince, 22,207.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 4.—The municipal election yesterday was a decisive victory for the Democrats.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 4.—Full returns show the election of the entire Democratic ticket by majorities averaging over 20,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The Sun makes Hill's majority for Governor 1,377. The Tribune gives Hill a plurality of 10,908 in the State.

TAPPAN, N. Y., Nov. 4.—The Andre monument was blown up by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge at 10:20 o'clock last night. Both basins were blown into atoms and the iron fencing that inclosed the monument was completely demolished. The shock was so great that it broke glass in houses a mile away.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Later returns received to-day and to-night from the election of yesterday bear out the indications of an overwhelming defeat of Mahone, Gen. Lee's majority will be near 20,000, and the Democrats have both branches of the Legislature by fully two-thirds majority.

GALESTON, Nov. 4.—The second day of the wholesale boycotting in Galveston has come and gone without bringing with it any material change in affairs. Work of all kinds is suspended, presses are idle, freight traffic over the railroads in and out of the city is dead. The screw of boycotters has been included in the army of boycotters, and the stirring of vessels has been abandoned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was in session to-day. Bishop Bowman presided. A resolution was passed in which it was voted to raise $1,000,000 for missionary purposes during the coming year.

The Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session in this city, approved the appeal of the Freedmen's Aid Society for a quarter of a million dollars a year for Christian education in the Southern States, among both white and colored people.

MEMPHIS, Kan., Nov. 6.—The jury in the great Walkup murder trial have rendered a verdict of acquittal.

TACOMA, W. T., Nov. 6.—The damage by the destruction of Chinatown was about $25,000. The buildings were mere shanties, but a great deal of merchandise was burned. The houses were fired by the anti-Chinese agitators, who expelled the Chinese. The incendiaries have been manufacturing evidence to show that the Chinese themselves fired the buildings.

DONALDSONVILLE, La., Nov. 8.—Last night on Mr. Vile's place in Assumption parish, a negro man was standing over the rollers directing the falling cane, lost his halcyon and fell between the rollers, passing through before the mill could be checked.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 8.—Charles M. Shays, business manager of the Age, was arrested to-day for selling papers contrary to the new Sunday law.

This was the last day of the Sam Jones series of meetings. There were four services to-day.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Tonight particulars reached the city of a cloud-burst in North Alabama, near Fort Payne, on Saturday morning. The rain came down in a solid sheet, and the whole country was washed out, fencing carried away, little branches became rivers and spread destruction before them.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The dispute which arose two years ago between the French and Portuguese governments as to jurisdiction in Guinea has been settled. Portugal ordered her officials in that corner of Africa to evacuate the stations recently occupied, as the delimitation commission which has been sitting at Paris has decided that they belong to France.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Archdeacon George A. Denison, M. A., of Taunton, in an election speech last evening said: "I have known Mr. Gladstone forty-five years, but I would not trust him with a brass farthing. The Whigs might be before sleeping express the hope that something will happen to Mr. Gladstone before morning."

SOMEbody in the crowd at this point cheered for Mr. Gladstone, and Archdeacon Denison retorted: "You might as well cheer for the devil."

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—The mortality from smallpox for the week ending Nov. 7, 1885, was 208 in this city, 44 in Cote St. Louis, 23 in Ste. Cunegonde, 13 in St. Jean Baptiste, 8 in St. Martin and 4 in St. Charles, making a total of 302. Compared with the previous week, these figures show a decrease in the city of 65, but an increase in the suburbs of 13.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Baron Campana, the rich man in Naples, was attacked while out driving to day by five masked men. The driver was shot and the horses bolted. The baron, however, escaped unhurt.

ROME, Nov. 8.—The Pope has written an encyclical letter in which he says that civil government is not an article of faith. He condemns the liberty of the press and universal suffrage, and urges the Catholic press to manfully combat the growth of error and impiety.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

EUFULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Enon and Midway, at Enon.....	Oct. 10, 11
Enon circuit, at Spring Ridge.....	11
Shipperville circuit, at Pleasant Ridge.....	24, 25
Oak circuit, at Pleasant Ridge.....	25
Enon circuit, at Pleasant Ridge.....	31, Nov. 1
Louisville circuit, at Tabernacle (Friday).....	7
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	14, 15
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	21, 22
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	28, 29
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	7, 8
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	14, 15
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	21, 22
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	28, 29
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	7, 8
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	14, 15
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	21, 22
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	28, 29
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	7, 8
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	14, 15
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	21, 22
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	28, 29
Enon circuit, at Tabernacle.....	31, Nov. 1

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

oro station.....
oro mission, at Bethel.....	Sept. 16, 17
result, at York.....	Oct. 3, 4
ircuit, at Saida.....	10, 11
ircuit, at Havana.....	17, 18
on and Rutaw, at Livingston.....	24, 25
ne circuit, at Mt. Carmel.....	31, Nov.
ircuit, at Wesley Chapel.....	7, 8
ille circuit, at Gainesville.....	14, 15
and Mt. Sterling, at Mt. Sterling.....	21, 22
ircuit and mission.....	28, 29
ircuit, at Sharon.....	Dec. 5, 6
ills and Joferon, at Demopolis.....	12, 13
ad circuit.....	19, 20
J. RASCHOFF, P. M.
SACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 47.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1529.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

PRINTED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
HARVEY & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.
All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WHELFLE.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. HILLMAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

WHEN JESUS COMES.

BY SAMUEL ADAMS WIGGIE.

When Jesus comes in glory,
This blessed gospel story,
Our dead in Christ shall rise,
And meet him in the skies.
When Jesus comes again,
No sorrow, toil or pain,
With ransomed souls in white,
Our bodies full of light.
When Jesus comes, what joy!
What bliss without alloy!
What songs of love divine!
How star-bright crowns will shine!
When Jesus comes, what peace!
From death's last release,
A life that knows no end,
In glory sweet to spend.
When Jesus comes, what rest!
What blessings on his breast!
No tears to wipe away—
To praise and never pray.
When Jesus comes, at last,
All earthly things are past,
We leave the uncloaked sky,
He's coming by and by.
He's coming soon or late;
We holy dead can wait;
The shadows of the just
Are full of perfect trust.
And we who still remain,
When Jesus comes again,
His face in peace will see,
From earthly garments free.
O yes, he'll come again!
How sweet the glad refrain—
To wipe all tears away,
And open the gates of day.
Yes, yes! he'll come again!
The shepherds of the plain,
Who haled his natal star,
Shall see the gates ajar.
And they who never have seen,
And yet have faithful been,
Shall shouting enter in,
And palms of victory win.
Dear Lord, in that great day,
May we with triumph say,
"The battle I have fought;
His blood my soul hath bought!"

Feed My Lambs.

MR. EDITOR: I know not that I ever felt more interested in the proper care and religious training of young members than at the present time. Most of them are not only young in grace, but they are young in years; many of them belong to their minority. We are having revivals all over our church; and young members, many of them, are promising girls and boys from our Sunday-schools, are joining the church, and they need the immediate care and counsel and special prayers of their pastors and the experienced members of the church to help them through the novitiate stage of their Christian experience and to give them stability and prepare them for usefulness in coming years. These babes must be fed with the sincere milk of the word if we would insure their safety and make them consistent Christians. Many of them are so modest and timid they do not approach their pastor or the other members of the church to tell them of their trials and temptations and seek from them the needed comfort and counsel. Many of us who are now old Christians embraced religion in our minority and yet recollect how much we needed the advice and encouragement of the fathers and mothers in Israel the first year of our pilgrimage. It is in the case that seekers of religion and young converts labor under real embarrassment and discouragement from mere misapprehension of a difficult item in their imperfect experience and knowledge. I once knew a lovely girl, the daughter of Methodist parents, who became an earnest seeker of the sensible forgiveness of her sins. But she became so desponding that her countenance was the picture of despair. The older members of the church wonder why one so young and apparently so innocent should despair of the mercy of God. At length a Christian sister determined to find out all about her case and inquired what was the cause of her despondency. With tearful eyes she replied, "That she feared she had committed the sin against the Holy Ghost which could never be forgiven." The sister immediately explained to her what the sin against the Holy Ghost is, and that she had not, and, in her present state of mind, could not commit this unpardonable sin. It was only a temptation of the devil as a dernier resort to keep her away from the Savior. Through the counsel and prayers of this good sister the horrid gloom that had so long hindered the exercise of saving faith in this dear girl was dissolved and passed off into thin air and she at once saw a present, willing and all-sufficient Savior waiting to receive her, and she believed and entered into the kingdom and made one of our happiest and best young members. There may not be many laboring under the temptation she had, but there are thousands of young members in our church to-day embarrassed with difficulties and temptations that hinder their progress in the divine life, and, perhaps, jeopardize their final salvation that could be easily overcome and removed by a little advice and encouragement from older Christians. We all, preachers and members, have a great work to do just now in looking after the interests of our young members. We must not overlook or pass by any of them. They belong to our church. They are a part of our family. We must recognize them as such wherever we meet them. We have said to them, through our pastors, "Come and go with us and we will do you good, for God hath spoken good concerning Israel," and we must be true to our public promise and do them all the good we can. It is very important to keep them in the church and in regular attendance on all the means of grace. If a person once joins the church and after awhile get out it is extremely difficult, and in many cases impossible, ever to get him back into the church again. I fear some of our preachers are blame-worthy in pruning their church registers as they call it. To get clear of any further trouble they will erase the names of delinquent and disorderly members without ever making a faithful and persistent effort to reclaim them from their dangerous wanderings from God. By voluntarily joining the church they place themselves under our pastoral oversight and give us a license to deal faithfully with them about their spiritual interests as long as they are under our pastoral care. I do not believe in letting people get out of the church as long as it can be avoided. In the course of a long ministry I have let but few get from under my pastoral care by dissolving their connection with the church. But I do not let them in the church and walk disorderly without dealing as faithfully with them as circumstances will permit. We have a large work to do this winter, if we do our whole duty, to the new comers now found in the church. Let us be diligent, for from these young members we expect to get our future supply of ministers and church workers, both male and female.

J. O. JONES.

HALLSBURY, Mississippi.

Church Dedication.

It is pleasant to know that the people have not grown weary in building temples of worship. One of the best evidences of the advancement of a community is the erection of tasteful, elegant public buildings and especially churches. The church recently dedicated at Franklinton, La., is well proportioned and well finished, being painted inside and outside, and comfortably seated. It speaks well for the community. It is an ornament to the village. Our Bro. Robert Babington deserves and receives praise for the noble part he has borne in carrying forward the enterprise. He has had to pay more than his part, but he has done so cheerfully. It is to be hoped that he will get some further assistance. The church cost about $1,650; all paid but $300. It will not be amiss to say that Col. E. A. Burke paid $50 on the building.

Bro. Simmons, the pastor, was joyful at the dedication. He has had success on his work. There have been many conversions and accessions to the church during the year. He will go up to Conference with a glad heart; so may we all, and may our going up be a blessing not only to ourselves, but to the people of Meridian.

NOVEMBER 9, 1885.

H. F. JOHNSON.

Morlmain.

One meaning of the word is holding property for religious uses free from taxation and civil control, acquired by gift, devise or otherwise, generally held by trustees among Protestants and by Bishops among Catholics. The amount thus invested for centuries past in Europe, England and America is almost incredible. Many a man would atone for ill-gotten wealth by giving to erect new churches or to enlarge and endow an old one. Often the condition of the tenure would be the payment, annually or more frequently, of compensation to priests to say prayers for the soul of the donor after death. In some Catholic Churches such prayers have been repeated promptly for 1855 and annually before for the repose of the soul of the benefactor, who has been dead for centuries.

To such an extent has this been carried that public sentiment often revolted against its continuance or repetition. Confiscation of church estates has been frequent, as those who read history will recollect. English kings would take from priests and give to political favorites. In France, Italy and Mexico these confiscations have been made from religious to educational uses. Confiscation has been the rule rather than the exception during the present century. Such changes of ownership have been carried, it may be, to an extreme.

In the United States, and most of the States, to make such gifts or bequests is illegal. In Mississippi it is unconstitutional. It seems, however, that in one State, at least, the high court has lately decided that priests may hold (to any extent, no doubt,) not only for the use and occupancy of the living, but that the dead may be the cestui que trust of any bequest. The purport of this decision is that the bequest to a priest of money for the benefit, in some way, of a dead man is legal and must be carried out. The judges little thought that their decision was conclusive of several doctrines of religion:

1. Of immortality. There must be continued existence of the dead man in order to his being the beneficiary hereafter of his own bequest.

2. Of purgatory. In which destiny may be changed by prayers whether paid for or prompted by parental or other love.

3. Against universalism. If the deceased would be served anyhow, why give money or prayers to bring it about?

4. Against Calvinism. Why give money or prayers to change a predestined destiny?

5. Payment of money and prayers of priests to continue indefinitely implies that the deed proposed may never be achieved by such prayers as may be offered; therefore,

6. Post mortem prayer by the living for the repose of the soul of the dead will continue as long as the purchase money is paid.

7. It is a reflection upon the memory of the great and good Archbishop, lately deceased, to suppose the repose of his soul depends upon the prayers of Catholics all over the world.

8. Is there no man or woman among all Catholics for whom the blood of Jesus Christ has not been efficacious to pardon and cleanse, by faith, during life, so as to make post mortem prayer unnecessary.

HALLSBURY, Mississippi.

E. G. C.

From the Land of Flowers.

MR. EDITOR: A few lines from the Land of Flowers might interest some of your numerous readers. In ante bellum times I sojourned at this and other places in Florida. An opportunity was offered me to return and take a look at the old place once more; so here I am at the pretty little town of Bluff Springs. This little town has had many ups and downs. At present it has a decided upward tendency. Several saw, grist and rice mills are singing their merry songs to the seemingly happy and contented people.

Bluff Springs takes its name from a red clay bluff in the vicinity from whence issues innumerable gurgling springs of delicious cold water, and some of them are impregnated with iron. The springs look just the same as they did twenty-three years ago, when I often drank from their pure crystal fountains. All these years they have not ceased to well up their health-giving waters with a song that might have sounded to the passer-by like the one the prophet sang so long ago, "Ho! everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."

Years ago there was a church at the springs, and at the basket meetings these springs refreshed the outer man while the inner man was fed by the word of God from the lips of his ministers. There is a Baptist Church not far away now and some dear loved ones lie at rest in God's acre around it. This Baptist Church has the largest membership in this immediate vicinity. They held a protracted meeting this month when several prominent Baptist ministers were present; among them Revs. Spence and Crompton from Greenville, Ala. I believe there were several converts. I was told that they collected nine dollars. Last year their settled pastor told his flock that all he had received for his year's work was two pairs of socks. My informant said that so far as he was able to judge the preaching was not worth much more.

They are close communionists, not allowing any other Baptists to commune with them. I remarked that they must be what they called the Hard-Shell Baptists. "No," he said very gravely, "they are the Clam-Shell." They will not let the Methodists hold services in their church. The Methodists have a church three miles from this place, and are served by Rev. Mr. Selman, of the Powelton circuit. I had the pleasure of meeting him at the home of Judge J. W. Cray, where he came to perform the marriage ceremony of one of his daughters. The bride was an Episcopalian and the groom a Free Will Baptist, yet they preferred a Methodist minister to solemnize the marriage. Bro. Selman is a very genial and popular preacher. He wanted to know if I was the lady that had the paper war with Bro. Dowling on the "Women Preachers" question. He said he thought I had made the strongest points. That question is like Bango's ghost; "It will not down." It looms up occasionally. En passant, just here I may be allowed to say that every Christian woman is a preacher and the fruits of her labors are seen on all sides among the noble men and women in the army now advancing on the hosts of Satan. She preaches to her sons and daughters from infancy, and many a Timothy comes to the front ready for the fray with no diploma but that he has "known the Scriptures from his youth up."

When mothers wake up to this grand idea and can, with the eye of faith, see the "coming events" that she has the power to shape by her magic wand, then will begin the dawn of a better day. Truly it may be said,

"The hand that rocks the cradle,
Is the hand that rocks the world."

While sojourning in this bright Land of Flowers and everlasting springs, I would have liked to have visited Pensacola; but "Home Again" is the song I sing just now. While meeting many old and beloved friends here, I had many more there and longed to see their faces once more. But time flies, and the tide waits for no one; so we must say good-bye to the old scenes and friends. We have held sweet communion, and may not meet again on this side of the river; but we will join hands again on the borders of the summer land.

"This the hope, the blessed hope,
That Jesus once hath given;
When days and months and years are past,
We all shall meet in heaven."

MRS. L. CHARY SADLER.

BLUFF SPRINGS, FLA., Oct. 29, 1885.

The Asters Badly Mixed.

MR. EDITOR: What is the matter with Astar? In his first effusion he came out in the role of a loving, faithful Achiates to point out to the young Aeneases in the ministry all that might hinder their smooth sailing over life's tempestuous voyage; and truly did he hold the mirror up to nature, affording to many the opportunity of seeing and avoiding whatever was wrong in them. But in the ADVOCATE, of November 12, he appears in a different spirit.

Mr. Editor, please tell friend Astar for your sake, as well as for the sake of the one who wears his worthy cognomen, that no editorial secret was given, and therefore could not be betrayed when the article which has been so ungratefully received was written by

CHINA ASTAR.

Herbert Spencer's God.

About a year and a half ago Mr. Frederic Harrison, the Positivist, assailed Agnosticism as a system and Mr. Herbert Spencer as an agnostic. Mr. Spencer's reply was valuable chiefly for the statement of his belief, which was scattered through the pages. What he wrote is still frequently alluded to and, therefore, for those who do not see the Nineteenth Century, in which his re-jender appeared, we quote the sentences in which he declares his belief in something like a God. Mr. Harrison objected to the phrase, "an Infinite and Eternal Energy from which all things proceed," used by Mr. Spencer to express his belief. To this Mr. Spencer replied:

"Perhaps Mr. Harrison will be surprised to learn that, as originally written, the expression ran—'an Infinite and Eternal Energy by which all things are created and sustained'; and that in the proof I struck out the last clause because, though the words did not express more than I meant, the ideas associated with them might mislead. The substituted expression, which embodies my thought in the most colorless way, I can not relinquish because he does not like it."

The capital letters in these quotations are Mr. Spencer's and not ours. Assailed as believing in a nonentity Mr. Spencer says, "So far from regarding that which transcends phenomena as the 'All-Nothingness,' I regard it as the All-Being. Everywhere I have spoken of the Unknown as the Ultimate Reality—the sole existence; all things present to consciousness being but shows of it."

Again he says, "I have contended that our consciousness of the Absolute is not negative but positive, and is the one indestructible element of consciousness which persists at all times, under all circumstances, and can not cease until consciousness ceases"—have argued that while the Power which transcends phenomena can not be brought within the forms of our finite thought, yet that, as being a necessary datum of every thought, belief in its existence has, among our beliefs, the highest validity of any: is not a belief with which we are superstitiously 'inspired'; but is a normal deliverance of consciousness."

Again he writes, "Everywhere throughout my books the implication is that our lives, alike physical and mental, in common with all the activities, organic and inorganic, amid which we live, are but the workings of this Power."

In regard to the personality of this Power he declares: "And I might show in detail that Mr. Harrison is wrong in implying that Agnosticism, as I hold it, is anything more than silent with respect to the question of personality; since, though the attributes of personality, as we know it, can not be conceived by us as attributes of the Unknown Cause of things, yet duty requires us neither to affirm nor deny personality," but "to submit ourselves with all humility to the established limits of our intelligence." In the conviction that the choice is not 'between personality and something lower than personality,' but 'between personality and something higher,' and that "the Ultimate Power is no more representable in terms of human consciousness than human consciousness is representable in terms of a plant's functions."

The so-called quotation marks, which are Mr. Spencer's, indicate quotations from his books, from which Mr. Harrison had made extracts to sustain his criticism of Agnosticism. The quotations we have made fairly and they correctly represent the position taken by Mr. Spencer in self-justification. No one of them is even modified by the context. Their importance will at once be recognized as presenting the present opinions of the foremost philosopher, as he may be called, of modern materialistic science; and especially important as being reaffirmed after the years of criticism and discussion which have followed their original publication.

These opinions will be gratifying to many persons who have feared that Mr. Spencer's philosophy tended to atheism, and they will also be a surprise to not a few. It is not possible for a humane spirit to engage in a controversy with a man making such avowals in such clear and delicate terms. Still the most kind and courteous disposition will insist on certain conclusions as inevitable.

1. There is just as much evidence that the Infinite and Eternal Energy is intelligent as that it is potential. The evidence that it is an Energy comes altogether from the "all things which proceed" from it, and those "all things" testify of knowledge and reason just as much as they do of energy. Mr. Spencer, therefore, is illogical in denying, or, as perhaps he would prefer it should be said, in excluding intelligence from his definition of the force "by which all things are created and sustained."

2. According to all the testimony of observation and experience, creative and sustaining intelligence and energy are the attributes only of persons. Darwinian evolution claims for plants and worms the beginnings of an intelligence which develops into the reason of man, but no science can claim the intelligence equal to the creation of an orderly and beneficent universe as the attribute of anything less than a person. The "something higher than personality" includes personality. Mr. Spencer, therefore, logically ought to affirm personality of the Infinite and Eternal Energy.

3. It is illogical to declare that the "All-Being" can not make and has not made a Revelation. The need of a Revelation is evident throughout human history. That such a Being as he who made the universe, culminating so far as we know in man, would make a revelation is probable in the highest degree, and it is certainly possible that he can do so.

4. It is evidently extremely illogical to deny the possibility of miracles. An Intelligent, Infinite and Eternal Energy, "by which all things are created and sustained," is clearly able to perform "mighty works," superhuman works. As men everywhere ask for "signs" (miracles) as the credentials of appointment by the Infinite and Eternal All-Being, it is in the highest degree probable and not at all improbable that a Revelation will be attended with miracles.—Christian Intelligencer.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held at the Bible House, New York, on Thursday, November 5, 1885, William H. Crosby, Esq., vice-president, in the chair.

The religious services were conducted by Secretary Melcan.

Various matters of special interest in connection with the foreign work of the American Bible Society were submitted to the managers; among which were a detailed report of a journey on horseback made by Rev. Edwin M. Biles, occupying about three months, and extending from Merion on the Mediterranean through Asia Minor and Kurdistan, to Trebizond on the Black Sea; and accounts of wrongs inflicted on the society's colporteurs, with either personal violence or the seizure of books, in Mexico, Cuba, Brazil and Turkey. Letters containing thanks for grants or requests for gifts were received from Rev. E. P. Hastings, of Jaffa, the Evangelical Waldensian Committee in Rome, the Rev. H. Nielsen, of Bremen, and Presbyterian missionaries in Bogota. Dr. Gulick reported a striking incident of Korean merchants, trading in the interior of China, who were greatly interested to find the Lord's Prayer in their own tongue in a copy of the Bible Society Record, of last May, which a colporteur of the society had received by mail a few weeks after it was printed.

Grants of books were made for benevolent distribution in the United States and in foreign lands, the aggregate value of which was about $4,300, and funds to the amount of $1,100.

Three auxiliary societies were recognized in Kansas, three in Arkansas, and one in each of the States of Nebraska, Texas and West Virginia.

The total receipts for October were $31,802 39. The total issues of the Scriptures from the Bible House were 65,407 volumes.

No wise man would seek to be exempted from the healthy discipline of trouble any more than an intelligent child would wish to be excused from school and to be allowed to play all day and every day in the meadows. No; we are not butterflies that lift from flower to flower; life is real, life is earnest and the tonic of sorrow braces and strengthens us to make it so.—Spurgeon.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1885.

THANK-GIVING.

BY PROF. CARY.

When grown sick with toil and care,
Leave for awhile the crowded mart;
O'ercome sinking with despair,
Weary of limb and faint of heart,
Forget your cares to-day, and come
As children back to childhood's home!

Follow again the winding rills:
Go to places where you want,
When climbing up the summer hills,
In their green lap you feel content;
And softly lean your head to rest
On nature's calm and peaceful breast.

Walk through the fern and falling wood,
So lightly tread by your feet,
When all you know of life was good,
And all you dreamed of life was sweet,
And let fond memory lead you back
O'er youthful love's enchanted track.

Taste the ripe fruit of orchard boughs,
Drink from the mossy well once more;
Breathe fragrance from the crowded mow,
With fresh, sweet clover running o'er;
And count the treasures at your feet,
Of silver rye and golden wheat.

Go all the while the heart again,
Whose circle once was glad and gay;
And if in the olden days you find
Some shining links have dropped away,
Then guard with tender heart and hand
The remnant of your household band.

Draw near the board with plenty spread,
And if in the accustomed place,
You see the father's reverent head,
Or mother's patient, loving face,
Waste not your life in vain, but say
Thank God that these are left, you still.

And though where home had been, you stand
To-day in alien loneliness;
Though you may clasp no brother's hand,
And claim no sister's tender knee;
Though with no friend or lover rich,
The past is all your company—

Thank God for friends your life has known
For every dear, departed day;
The blessed past is safe alone—
God gives, but does not take away;
He only keeps a record
For us the treasure that we love.

The Church—No. 6.

"Her hymns of prayer and praise."

When merry the world will sing, and so it should. This only thing, the desirable thing, is that it sings aright.
Soldiers sing their war songs; nations, their national airs; lovers, their human love songs, and the wicked often wicked, law and wicked songs.

James says: "Is any merry? Let him sing psalms." Paul, in his letter to the Colossians, says: "Let this word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." Christ himself seems to have engaged in this delightful exercise when he was on earth. After describing the institution of the Lord's Supper, Matthew says: "And when they (Christ and his disciples) had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives." David when sinning seems to have been always singing, and in one place he said: "Sing aloud unto God, our strength." But I need not quote further. The Bible is full of song; so is the church. In this respect the church has done nobly. She has put "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" into the hearts and mouths of millions. You will hear them in the country and in the "city full." You will hear them in the valleys and in the plain, in the palace and in the cottage;
you will hear them in the day-time and in the night, for God giveth his people
"songs in the night."

This music teaches a sound divinity.
It is pure, and hence refining and elevating in its tendency. It comes from glad hearts, and it gladdens the heart of the hearer. It teaches morality, piety and all of the Christian graces and rings through the lips, the ears, the hearts and the brains and runs along the nerves of the singers and of the listeners with an enlivening, elevating and a refining and ennobling influence known to no other form of speech.
Take, for instance, the hymn from which I have quoted so often in these church essays, commencing with this line—"I love thy kingdom, Lord." I might never compose anything better;
nor did anyone else. Take that old, familiar hymn sung everywhere, beginning with, "Alas! and did my Saviour bleed." What an understanding of salvation's plan! How well it told!
Did Watts ever write a better? No works, no penance.

"Here, Lord, I give myself away;
"It is all that I can do."

Take another:

"A charge to keep I have,
A goal to glory;
A never dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky."

"To serve the present age,
My calling to fulfill;
To say it all my powers engage
To do my Master's will."

"Arm me with jealous care,
As in the sight to live,
O thou my servant, Lord, prepare
A strict account to give."

"Help me to watch and pray,
And on myself rely;
Assured if I may trust thy aid,
I shall forever die."

Everybody knows this hymn, and yet I have quoted the whole of it.
What an idea of responsibility runs through the first verse, and what prayers in it and the last verse! Charles Wesley is the author of the above and of a hundred others that seem almost, or quite, to have been inspired. Let me give the first lines of a few more from the heart and pen of this wonderful singer. Take "Wrestling Jacob":

"Come, O thou traveler unknown,
Whom still I build, but can not see;
My company before is gone,
And I am left alone with thee;
With thee all night I mean to stay
And wrestle till the break of day."

Thou on there are twelve verses of this description of that wonderful night's struggle—the struggle of faith.
Take another:

"Let him to whom we now belong
His sovereign right assert,
And take up every loving song
And every loving heart."

And another:

"Lord, in the strength of grace,
With a glad heart and free,
Myself, my residue of days
I consecrate to thee."

Others might be adduced as good or better; but time and space would fail me to quote the thousandth part of the good, religious, spiritual poetry written by Charles Wesley. Then there are many valuable accessions to the poetry for devotion of a more modern date. Sing this: "Savior, more than life to me;" or,
"Nearer, my God, to thee;" or,
"What saith Jehovah?" or, "Swastly,
Lord, have we heard thee calling,
'Come follow me,' etc. And with the poetry of the past and present, with the poetry of God and grace, of Christ and salvation, of penitence and faith, of adoration and triumph, the church is teaching nobly and successfully. With her music she is charming, melting and drawing the world to God and herself. May she continue to "sing with this spirit and with the understanding," on, on, until she, with all of her ran-somd throng, sings her song anew in that better, better land!

LOCAL ITINERANT.

What Is Religion?

BY REV. JAMES J. BILLINGSLEY.

MR. EDITOR: In these days of silk-stocking romances, one-sided views and of silver-slipper religion it is a real task to get hold of something that is harmed, winged and projected by a fearless heart and a skillful hand; that diverges neither to the right nor left,
but, with direct and unerring precision, goes straight to the mark, and with a vim at that. We know that an archer, experienced and well skilled in the use of the bow, if at short range, aims directly at the mark, and that his chief pleasure is in hearing the bull ring after his arrow has hit the mark. From this he knows that his aim and effort have not been in vain. The same rule applies to pulpit archery. Whenever I hear a sermon whose general course in its aim partakes of the nature of the unsound or of the logarithmic curve, charity prompts me to believe that the preacher nevertheless is sincere, and that the reason why he is so far more direct is because he is so far from the mark and has to make allowances for distance. This path of his arrow, of course, in this case will describe a curve.

To me preaching the gospel is a solemn business, and to be effective one must be direct. So I think. Of course, this kind of preaching will hurt, and somebody somewhere, at some time or other, will be sure to cry out,
"Tone down"—especially if he sees blood, and, more especially, his own blood. A prominent member of one of my churches told me that he had two objections to my preaching: (1) I was too pointed, and (2) I did not make him feel good. The latter sentence I have often thought of, and also of the moral state which could give birth to it. I know now that the highest type of that man's religion at best was only selfishness, and that he desired religion only because of the good he believed there was in it. Anything, of course, which urges such men to active Christian work for the salvation of sinners will be distasteful. It was so with him. This idea never seemed to dawn upon his mind that religion meant work—active persistent work in the cause of Christ—and hence he was allied with spiritual inertia. I will state, however, that the good brother became awakened in religion and went to work.
But I had to use harsh means, to which he entered a persistent veto. It is said that if you wish to make a terrapin move, you must put fire on his back. I used similar methods with him. Of course, the heat was unpleasant. It certainly did not make him feel good.
Now, it occurs to me that there may be many more in our Zion with the same or similar views, both of religion and of what preaching ought to be, as were entertained by the "good-feeling" brother just referred to. If so, the following from the Vermont Chronicle might repay a careful perusal. It certainly contains food for reflection. Let the thoughtful pause, read and ponder.

A negro congregation has recently ejected from its pulpit the pastor because in his preaching he failed to produce in the souls of his hearers "a happy-fying effect." The colored church had a quaint way of stating their trouble, but that they fairly hit it there can be no doubt. This "happy-fying effect" is, after all, only a very vague and correct way of expressing the idea which grows in the minds of not a few white congregations in reference to the character and ability of their ministers. To such the preacher is incessant if by his sermons and his personal addresses he makes those who hear and meet him feel happy. Religion, according to this estimate, is a state of spiritual enjoyment—an easy, pleasant, self-satisfied feeling. A sermon is good that lifts the hearer into a glow of wonder or quietly lets him down into a blissful restfulness.
So the Rev. Croam Cheese is a preacher "because he excites the nerves of his congregation, and by his dainty ways at the 'church sociables' wins the hearts of the 'young people.'"
Religion, being in its utmost nature
"happy-fying," means in the pulpit immaculate-fitting coat, immaculate hair, combed with a golden comb, flow of beautiful words, and in the church orange suppers, necktie parties, chocolate ice cream soirees and sacred footlight performances, with side shows where gambling is called "gaming."

A modern church is fully equipped only as it has a silk-stockinged romancer in the pulpit, a full-dressed angel of a soprano in the choir, and a kitchen stove in the basement—all of which most appropriately go with this idea that religion is "happy-fying."
But somehow the reading of Scripture is like a thunder-roll amidst these "divine services." Law and prophecy, psalm and gospel, thrust hard against these "good-time" ideas of religion.
Brobdingnag and Immanuel, "burdens,"
"woes," "innumerable obligations, duty,"
"the cross," "self-denial," "service unwearied," "loss of right hand,"
"loss of right eye," "faithful unto death"—these strong, cutting words meet one everywhere in New and Old Testament until religion begins to be less and less a "happy-fying" thing, and more and more a serious, urgent, never-ending work. If religion is to be pleased, and to be interested, and to have a good time and to be happy, then let the high-priest choir sing on their operatic arias. Let the low-pitched preacher available for his "airy nothings." Let the kitchen stove glow, and the footlights flash, and pink tea-parties mean the "working out with fear and trembling of the soul's salvation," and the living and the dying with Christ for the world's redemption, then it is a time for a singing that shall be for God's praise, and a preaching that shall condemn and convict and save, and a church which shall be fulfilling the mission of its Founder in preaching the gospel to every creature.

From the Work.

NEWTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have gone through with all my protracted meetings for this year, and I assure you that we have had some refreshing times from the presence of God. Up to the present we have not met with much embarrassment in our collections, and, therefore, hope to bring them up in fall. Crops are good, especially the corn and cane crops. Prohibition is advancing rapidly. When was first came here it was but very little trouble for the whisky men to get a majority of the voters to sign their whisky petitions; but they have been several days recently trying to get a majority and have not succeeded yet. And should they succeed, we will prohibit our town Board from attending on the petition by a writ of prohibition, for we have a case in court that has not been settled yet. We had a pleasant visit last night from a number of our friends who brought us something to eat and something to wear.
We never were among a more social and liberal people than these. We have known them to feed whole families for several weeks in succession. The poor find friends here.
This preacher also.

I. L. FEEBLES.

NORTH WILKINSON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Since last writing you have had some gracious times—forty-five added to the church, a goodly number of conversions, many lukewarm ones warmed into new religious life and the spirituality of cold places very much revived. Thras prayer meetings and two class meetings doing well. About twenty-five family altars have been erected since August, and in several instances whole families have been converted to God and now shout his praises around their happy firesides. Not only the young men, but the young ladies also, are taking an active interest, and through the influence of these young people many are being brought to Christ. Often when a volunteer prayer is called for from the female side of the congregation, followed by many hallelujahs and shouts of glory to God.

Our meeting at Mrs. Hill is said to have been the best ever held at that place. We are under obligations to Bros. Petty and Cassels for efficient service. We give God the praise.

J. A. NEWSON, P. C.

SOUTH BOSTER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The last night of October, for the present year, is upon us, and it is raining. It is always more or less sad with a preacher to have it rain on his meeting. I am just now at Haughton with Dr. Lawrence and family. Prayers being over, and the family having retired, I enjoy an hour with the Advocate. I have read Dr.
Walker's sermon on "Why Will Ye Die?" Dr. Mahon's "Thoughts On Giving" and Gilderoy on "The Lord's Money—How Spent." All of which, with various other reading matter, go to make up the twenty-ninth of October a good issue.

Our fourth quarterly meeting came off last Saturday and Sunday at Pleasant Valley, and on Sunday we were just simply rained out. However, the preacher in charge had the pleasure of preaching to eleven persons who came out, notwithstanding the bad weather. Bro. Alexander, our faithful presiding elder, has many warm friends in our circuit. This has been a hard year with the people in this part of the Conference, yet we hope to be able to bring up a respectable report in finances. I want my people to turn back and read with care the above-mentioned articles on giving, etc., and look around and see how much they can afford to give to the three churches we are trying to build in this circuit, also to the cause of missions and other collections ordered by the Annual Conference. Our protracted meeting season is over and the Lord has greatly blessed us. We have had forty-two accessions to the church, and I am thankful to say that everyone of them professed conversion—regeneration. I am fully persuaded that we take too many unconverted souls into our big Methodist Church. We just spread wide the door and they step in,

"Gathering fishes of all kinds." Though we admit them to membership, they are altogether unfit for the work we give them to do and for the life we expect them to live.

Well, our Conference year of 1885 is nearing its close and we shall soon be off to Conference again. May the dear old Advocate live long and prosper!

R. M. BLACKER.

Church and State and Whisky.

Just now this question is in order.
Whisky brings it forward. Sobriety has challenged whisky to combat, and for the first time in the world's history the opposing forces are marshaled and in the field, and the battle wages.
Heretofore sobriety has stayed at home,
in snug quarters, being content with the issuance of complaint, protest, explanation, argument, diplomacy and other kinds of blank cartridges, hoping that a paper war might suffice. Paper warfare has failed, and aggressive hostilities are inaugurated, and that, too, under a black flag, and no quarter is the watchword. This is the state of the country.

But Prime Minister Saloon objects to our mode of warfare and appeals to the powers. And to that arbitrament we churlishly go, but with this understanding, that pending the question there shall be no cessation of hostilities.
Mr. Saloon says he is willing and in duty bound to fight the militia, and can hardly object to the Women's Christian Temperance Union hosts since they have actually gone into the field, though he considers that an infringement of the laws of nations and a savage and unusual mode of fighting;
but to bring out the veteran regulars from the pulpit is illegal, unusual, unchristian, unfair, unlooked for, un-ministerial, uncanonical, undignified, unwarlike, unequal, unconstitutional,
unrepublican, undemocratic, uncivil and unwise to say the very least.

Now, we of the pulpit deny all this.
We deny it in the detail and in the concrete. We declare that whisky, in all its forms and phases, from the still-house to the gutter and the grave, in the doggerly or in the pantheistic, drunk or sober, is, first and foremost,
whisky petitions and all, our proper,
legitimate and "regular" business.
We deny that we have any calling, vocation or business more "regular" than whisky. When we relegate whisky to the tender mercies of slipshod politicians and pigmy knights of the doggerly, we will send Sabbath keeping, the theater, the ball-room, the ill-famed house, the gambling "parlor"
and the rest of the crimes there too.

Why, the Jewish Messenger a few weeks ago, on the functions of the ministry, declares that, "The clergy of to-day stand in the forefront of civilization." Well said. If the pulpit does not stand in the forefront of civilization, will some scourging-back politician or corporal of the decanter please to tell us who does.

There is a morbid sentiment abroad on the relation of the church to the State, which greatly needs correction, and the sooner the better. Many suppose that the appropriate work of the civil magistrature and the Christian ministry are wholly different. A greater mistake could not be made. Most of the civil and religious functions are identical. The differences do not consist in the work itself, the reforms to be brought about, the moral and conservative ends to be reached, but in the instrumentality to be used in a work common to both. This instru-mentality is wholly different though the work is the same. The ministry of religion has some functions—very large and vastly important ones, that the civil government has not; but the civil government has no functions, end or object that do not also pertain to the Christian ministry.

What is civil government, and of what use is it? To strike straight at the center of a very voluminous argument, the end of civil government may be said to be to maintain order for the amelioration of the condition of mankind so far as that man may enjoy the blessings of Providence, which they certainly could not do in a state of license or anarchy. And this also is one of the large functions of the Christian ministry. The instruments used by the former are physical, coercive and pre-emptory. Deprivation of property and personal liberty, fine and imprisonment and sometimes deprivation of life are its instruments.
The latter has no constable, prison or halter, but uses persuasion exclusively.

There are two kinds of civil magistrates—a better and a worse. The latter seek to run the world by force exclusively, ignoring the ministry; the former recognizing the ministry as a powerful ally, seek a close co-operation. The best and most enlightened statesmen, jurists and legislators seek and expect to do, with their rough instruments, only those offices of conservatism that the minister can not perform with his smooth ones. With that class of men the civil magistrature is the helper of the ministry. The forefront of civilization is where the ministry belongs. If the smooth instruments could be made to suffice, there would be no need for the rough ones.

But we are told that our Savior said,
"My kingdom is not of this world." Yes he said so, and meant exactly what these words import, viz: that the rough, coercive instruments of government, such as used by Caesar and other civil magistrates, were not the kind of instruments he used. But we see very plainly that very much, if not most, of his personal ministry had reference primarily to the conservative comforts and happiness of this life and this world.

Many poorly informed and worse behaved statesmen and politicians seem to think that a Christian minister virtually forfeits his citizenship. Then, by purity of reason, he also lays aside his citizenship when he becomes a legislator, a judge or a sheriff.

Whisky is before the bar of public opinion and public conservation just now. Will the ministry do its duty?
They stand, naturally and legitimately, in the forefront. "Resolved," that we are as much as ever opposed," etc., is a very feeble utterance of a still feeblier sentiment. It never demolished a still-house nor dislocated a saloon. Brother, how many sermons directly on whisky have you preached in the year last past? We can not preach to whisky with any hope of success. In my own town a faithful ministry has scarcely witnessed a conversion in many years.
Causa—whisky. Then let us preach about whisky.

What was it we said at the late Jackson convention, "Every lawful man's"?
Well, preaching is lawful. Our smooth instruments, unaided, have failed. So we look to our strong ally with his grappling irons. We can not use them; but he can. This invocation ought to come strongly and loudly from the pulpit. Let the proper, legitimate power of the pulpit be felt in this warfare of love, peace, harmony and religion, and drunkenness will wait case, and whisky be put exclusively into the keeping of the pharmacist, and the Church and the State will harmoniously rejoice in their common work of humanity and conservation.
The women—God bless them!—are doing their duty grandly. Will we do ours?

H. ANDREY.

Yazoo City, Mississippi.

Our Young Ladies' Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: If you will kindly allow me a small space in your good paper, I shall be deeply grateful. I am anxious to tell you and all our loved Methodists how the young ladies of Minden love and serve God; how truly in earnest they are in promoting the cause of Christ, and in telling of our actions to try and induce the young ladies of our State to follow our examples. We do not, really, deserve all the credit of our undertaking, for much of our ardor was prompted and instilled into us by the kind advice and watchful care of our dear pastor, Bro.
Billingsley, and the success of our prayer meeting is mainly due to his words of encouragement and appropriate instruction.

A "young ladies' prayer meeting" is something entirely different from anything we have ever had in Minden, and the duties imposed on each girl altogether novel to every other vocation of her past life. But we need each other every Saturday evening at four o'clock, and with thoughts given wholly to God and Christ we congregate at our church wharves, in prayer and songs of love and praise, we devote one hour in his services. We have conducted our meetings on this plan:

Every Saturday one of our little band of girls reads a passage from Scripture any chapter she may select;
then maybe she will read extracts from some good sermon or lecture and notes with appropriate comments the most striking points in each, after which she will lead us in prayer. Next will be a song, followed by a prayer, from some young lady whom the leader may designate. In this way we alternate—first, prayer; then music; until two or three prayers have been offered. It is soul-stirring to listen to some of our earnest, heartfelt supplications; petitions that seem to bubble up from a well of love and devotion for a loved Jesus; words full of meaning to us, although to the cynical ear might sound
"flat, stale and unprofitable."

They are precious prayers to our hearts, for we all feel as one in a mighty cause, all children of one Father; with one common interest, the salvation of our souls and the consecration of our lives to God. He hath said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest," and surely his loving assurance is verified in our little prayer meeting; for no matter how tired our souls and bodies may feel, we are better after each meeting and feel that the burden has indeed been taken from us and a holy peace seems to fill our hearts. Another feature of our prayer meeting is that each girl shall supply herself with a blank book, read all good books and papers she can find,
then from each select the best ideas, clearest thoughts and sweetest sentiments and write them in her blank book.

In this way we may soon have a charming book; with priceless gems of thoughts from best writers; and the frequent perusal of them will necessarily lift them into our minds and tend to elevate our own ideas of goodness, piety and Christianity. We will carry our book with us to each regular meeting and read our selections as we are called upon by the leader. We shall begin next Saturday evening the young ladies alphabetically, giving all a fair opportunity for obtaining something new and entertaining at their next call. Do you not think our plan a good one? It will certainly be most instructive, and especially so to the young converts who have recently taken up their cross and who need all the aid they can obtain. We do not confine our little band to Methodist alone; oh, no! we want all Christians of every denomination to join us, and as a proof that they do cheerfully unite with us a good and true Episcopalian will be our leader on next Saturday.

Trusting you will publish this for the benefit of all our young friends,
I will close my lengthy article with the prayer that all may approve our course and many adopt our plan.

PEARL M. DONAHUE.

Minden, La., Oct. 31, 1885.

Reception of Ministers from Other Churches.

BY REV. W. SPILLMAN.

I see it stated in this ADVOCATE, of October 8, that three Baptist preachers presented themselves at the St. Louis Conference—two for admission and the other for the recognition of his orders as a local preacher. Seeing this notice reminded me of a promise I made some time ago to write an article on the admission of preachers from other churches, and especially in which a man can obtain ordination as an elder in a very short time after being immersed. I heard of one case in Alabama where a man, failing to get license to preach in the Methodist Church, joined the Baptist Church, and in one year after returned to the Methodist Church a full-fledged, ordained minister. A case occurred some years ago of an ordained minister of another church, who had but a limited education and did not sound in biblical knowledge, wanted to get into Conference as an itinerant. He was advised to join the Methodist Church and then get a recommendation from the Quarterly Conference to the Annual Conference for admission. To this proposition he objected, as it would require him to go through a four years'
course of study.

It is well known that all licensed or ordained ministers of our church, desiring to become members of an Annual Conference, however well qualified, must pass at least a credential examination before being received, and then take the prescribed course of study for four years. As to myself, I was an ordained elder when I joined the Alabama Conference in 1856, and with several young men who joined at the same time I went through the regular four years' course of study.

Section XI, as it now stands, offers premium or release of four years' study to designing men to join some one of the Congregational Churches, where ordination can be procured in short time and then knock at the door of an Annual Conference for admission.
It is not fair; it is not equal.

I, therefore, move, if I can get second, that the approaching General Conference be requested to so modify Section XI of our Discipline as to require all ministers of other denominations to take the regular four years' course of study. In that time they can be prepared to defend our doctrines usages, etc.

COLEMAN, Mississippi.

Address of the Prohibition Executive Committee of the State of Louisiana.

On the nineteenth day of August, 1885, there convened in the city of Shreveport the first Prohibition Convention of Louisiana. Its declarations of principles and the resolutions adopted may be summarized as follows:

Preamble.—In view of the evil incident to the liquor traffic, of the growing opposition of our people thereto, and of the necessity of more effective organization.

Resolved, That this movement shall be non-partisan and non-sectarian;
That it shall be the legal abolition of the liquor traffic in Louisiana;
That a state prohibition executive committee be appointed, composed of one member from each congressional district and three from the state at large, whose duty it shall be to organize local parish or ward committees, to neutralize the legislature to make certain changes in the laws relative to the sale of intoxicants, and generally to further the cause of prohibition by every lawful and available means; 4th, That a committee of three, on legislation, be appointed by the chairman of the executive committee, whose special duty shall be to prepare and present to the general assembly petitions for the prohibition of such acts as may be prepared by the committee on legislation to the legislature, in behalf of temperance education in the public schools, and also endorsing the of the W. C. T. U., and pledging to the fullest co-operation with the thorizing the state executive committee to secure the services of a public lecturer to visit the various parishes and address the people on prohibition.

The executive committee, as authorized by the convention, is as follows: State at large—Rev. John T. Sawyer, chairman; Rev. A. P. Allen, Hon. W. H. Goodale; second district, Dr. S. M. Angell; third district, J. T.
Gilmore; fourth district, L. E. Carter; fifth district, Prof. A. C. Callahan;
sixth district, L. S. Widney.

Having been thus and therefore constituted, this executive committee has deemed it best to address this open letter to the people of Louisiana, in which we purpose to set forth as briefly possible the motives that actuate us and the nature of the work in the execution of which we venture humbly to solicit the active sympathy and aid of the thoughtful of every party, race and creed.

To men the most careless observers of passing events, it is evident that there has been for several years past an extremely increasing change in public opinion upon the liquor question. In what way the people stand with liquor on this change, and how rapid is the change, the philanthropist, that he may himself of the growing sentiment in advance the welfare of humanity, and statesman, that he may on his swell

into the safe channels of the ship of state, and the political actuated by personal considerations—these all stand with finger upon the pulse of public sentiment, as the physician by his patient's side, have long since felt those quickened heart-beats that told more plainly than words that a new life blood was coursing in the public veins.

Whether we view the question as one of philanthropy, of statesmanship or of politics, the coming question of importance to all classes is the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Just now, in the agitated, unsettled state of public affairs, the most popular conclusion has perhaps gone no further than this: "Something must be done, and speedily to suppress the evils of the liquor traffic."

A year or two hence and out of this unrest will crystallize the conviction, "The 'something to be done' is the legal suppression of the liquor traffic."

Something must be done and speedily. See, look at the indictment. "It is the cause of four-fifths of all crimes committed, nine-tenths of all the paupers, and eleven-twentieths of all the idlers supported at public expense. It more than doubles the taxes alike of those who are and of those who are not engaged in it. It consumes the hard earnings of the poor and reduces the rich to poverty."

It is the foe of religion, of education, of the home, of society and of health. It entails directly and indirectly, each year, in the United States alone, a waste of nearly one billion of dollars withdrawn from the food supply and wealth-producing labor of the nation. It trends beneath its relentless heel the hearts of the mothers and the hopes of their little ones. Its allegiance is with vice and its attendant evils; its direct tendencies and effects are to suppress and destroy all the nobler impulses of humanity, and to stimulate into morbid activity the lower and baser passions. All this has it ever done and been with the full knowledge and consent of its blinded, helpless, besotted victims, a million and more of them a year, who rush into mad destruction, despite the knowledge, in its bloody path of death.

Such was its tendency and its effect as long ago as when the wisest of all men marked its course:

"Who hath we? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath wounds without number? Who hath battles of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine."

Such was its tendency and such its effect in 1500, when Sir Matthew Hale, then England's Chief Justice, said:

"The places of judgment have given me long in this kingdom have given me an opportunity to observe the original cause of most enormities that have been committed for the space of nearly twenty years, and by due observation I have found that if the murders and slaughters, the burglaries and robberies, the riots and tumults, the brawls, fornications, rapes and other enormities that have happened in that time, were divided into five parts, four of them have been the issue and product of excessive drinking, of tavern or dishouse drinking."

What is there, then, either in the evil itself or in the knowledge of it, that serves to account for the recent ever-increasing interest in its suppression?

We answer, as to the former, the alarming prevalence of social drinking, especially among young men and in our own country; and as to the latter, a false knowledge, through the times of heresy, of the tendency of the physical, intellectual and moral perversion of alcoholism to reproduction in intensified form a posterity.

The revolution of science in this direction have opened the eyes of the thoughtful and stimulated apprehension into alarm.

The very instinct of self-preservation impels a nation to suppress a traffic that, before its very eyes, not slowly even, but with alarming rapidity, is sapping the very foundations of that nation's life—the manhood of its citizens.

Can the thinking citizen be silent when science reveals to him the horrible fact that the nation of which he is a responsible part, is bantering the manhood of its unborn subjects for gold? Were he silent before such a spectacle, were he stony as our streets would cry out.

Why, then, and few will dispute it, something must be done, and that speedily.

But we say further what a smaller number will admit the "something to be done" is the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Obviously, within the reasonable limits of this paper, the argument upon a question so far-reaching can be but barely outlined.

The reasons are:

First, it is right. It is wrong for a nation to derive revenue from regulations which corrupt and degrade its own citizens. It is right to suppress an evil that strikes at the very sources of a nation's strength.

As well might a parent enrich himself from the gains of his children's weakness, as for a nation to subsidize upon the price of the horrors entailed by the liquor traffic. It is morally right to suppress it; it is also legally right.

In the celebrated "License Cases," reported in 5th Howard, 504, in answer to the argument of no less an advocate than Daniel Webster, Chief Justice Taney said:

"If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice or debauchery, I see nothing in the constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating or restraining the traffic, or from prohibiting it altogether if it thinks proper."

Said Justice McLean:

"The foreign interest be injurious to the health or morals of the community, a state may, in the exercise of that great and necessary police power that lies at the foundations of its prosperity, prohibit the sale of it."

Said Justice Catron:

"It is as inevitable that if the State has the power of restraint by license to any extent, she has the discretionary power to judge of its limits and may go to the length of prohibiting sales altogether."

Said Justice Woodbury:

"The power to forbid the sale of things is surely as extensive and rests on as broad principles of public security and sound morals, as that to exclude persons."

Said Justice Grier:

"It is not necessary to array the appalling statistics of misery, pauperism and crime which have their origin in the use and abuse of ardent spirits. The police power, which is exclusively that of the State, is competent to the regulation of restraint or prohibition necessary to effect that purpose are within the scope of that authority."

But, second, The suppression of the liquor traffic is not only right, it is also Convert four-fifths of the cost of the prosecution and support of criminals, nine-tenths of the cost of the support of paupers, and eleven-twentieths of the expense of maintaining idlers, into the school fund, and who can estimate the benefits that would accrue to the State through the enlightenment of its citizens?

Devise some means by which the earnings of the poor, now worse than wasted in the dram shops, shall find expression in the home and all the associations that word implies, and then seek to measure this increment to the nation's wealth.

Add to these the advantages to flow from the suppression of the evil from allowing the lives of our young men to unfold in natural directions, the advantages of steady nerves and clear brains, of a strong, vigorous, robust manhood, and what thinking person can doubt the policy of prohibition.

Or would you learn from experience? Ask those parasites that have tried it. You need not, for your question has been answered again and again through the public prints. There is but one voice, "It pays, it pays!" Pays in reduced taxation, pays in a higher tone, in a healthier public sentiment, in a purer, nobler manhood.

Third, There is no neutral ground. Rejecting the license system on principle, we are driven to prohibition as the only remaining resource.

This movement, as stated by the resolutions adopted by the convention, is non-partisan and non-sectarian. It appeals to the conscience of the masses, it seeks to create and foster a public sentiment favorable to its own existence. Its appeal is to the thoughtful of every race, party and creed.

The present local option laws of the State, amended perhaps in some matters of detail, will give to each community an opportunity to decide the question for itself, regardless of the claims of candidates for the entangling alliance of other questions.

We propose to give to each citizen of this State an opportunity, and, if possible, make it a necessity for him to define his position upon this question disconnected from all other questions. To this end local organizations will be effected, mass-meetings and barbecues will be held and every legitimate available means employed to secure the purpose for which, as a committee, we were constituted—the suppression of the liquor traffic.

We appeal to you who think. We invite your sympathy, your co-operation, your support.

And when we have succeeded as we must, for the work is of the Lord, we shall look upon our beloved State, not as now borne down by the burden of the liquor traffic, but erect, redeemed, and free in the proud consciousness of a nobler life, it will then seem strange that questions appearing in that purer light so plain, could once have been the matter of debate.

Analyzing the Baking Powders.

Under the direction of the New York State Board of Health, eight hundred different kinds of baking powders, embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the State, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C. F. Chandler, a Member of the State Board and President of the New York City Board of Health, assisted by Prof. Edward W. Love, the well-known late United States Government chemist.

The official report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum of lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar is also analyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities, in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent of their entire weight.

All the baking powders of the market, with the single exception of "Royal," (not including the alum and phosphate powders, which were long since discarded as unsafe or inefficient by prudent housekeepers) are made from the impure cream of tartar of commerce, and consequently contain lime to a corresponding extent.

The only baking powder yet found by chemical analysis to be entirely free from lime and other impurities is the "Royal." This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes of the N. Y. Tartar Co., which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and on account of this greater cost is used in no baking powder but the "Royal."

Prof. Love, who made the analysis of baking powders for the New York State Board of Health, as well as for the Government, says of the purity and wholesomeness of "Royal":

"I have tested a package of 'Royal Baking Powders' which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates of any injurious substances."

"E. G. Love, Ph. D."

Late Analyst New York State Board of Health, and United States Government Chemist.

ONE of the tendencies of our times is to reckon that service alone of much consequence which is inconspicuous. The result of this is a constant straining to do exceptional things, while slighting common and every-day duties.

Temperance's "May Queen."

Who knows but if the beautiful girl who died so young had been blessed with Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" she might have reigned on many another bright May-day. The "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure for all those disorders to which females are liable.

The lazy and the indolent can never live happily together; the lazy despise the industrious too much.

It Should be Generally Known that the multitude of diseases of a serofinous nature generally proceed from a torpid condition of the liver. The blood becomes impure because the liver does not act properly and work off the poison from the blood, the certain results are blotches, pimples, eruptions, swellings, tumors, ulcers, and kindred affections, or setting upon the lungs and poisoning their delicate tissues, until ulceration, breaking down, and consumption is established. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will, by acting upon the liver and purifying the blood, cure all these diseases.

LEAD ME TO THE ROCK THAT IS HIGHER THAN I.—Our helplessness, our blindness, and our fallen condition caused God to give his only Son to die for us. We can only pray for God when we will not permit the Savior to lead us. It is when we murmur against God and complain of our lot that we are withdrawing our hand from Christ. We are too complaining in our nature when shadows cross our pathway. If we are trusting our Leader we will follow through evil as well as good report, in shadowy hours we too often let go the hand of Love and reach after the hand of Reason. We can only walk with the Savior by faith. He will lead us to the Father. "Follow me," is the command. We need not select our own pathway in life. The Savior has removed every barrier. He has marked out a pathway for us. If we have the Holy Spirit within us, the pathway will be illuminated from earth to heaven. Faith is our hand. Love is the hand of the Leader. Whenever we pray in faith, nothing doubting, our hand goes up and our Leader reaches down his hand of Love; they clasp each other. Faith is the hand of the church lifted up towards heaven. Christ is leading his church, and will lead on and on until the church militant shall drop its earthly armor and the church triumphant be completed in righteousness through his Leader. Rev. H. C. Brashers, in Central Methodist.

Dr. Davis's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is strongly recommended for the speedy cure of Throat and Lung complaints, as there always exists a great necessity in every family for such an invaluable remedy. For Consumption use Dr. Davis's Liver Pills.

Address all mail matter to New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMONT ELIXIR.

Cures indigestion, headache, neuralgia, kidney disease, fever, chills, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and blood.

LEMONT ELIXIR is prepared from the fresh juice of Lemons combined with other vegetable liver tonics, containing no alcohol, and is sold in bottles of 50 cents for one-half bottle, $1 for full and half bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by all wholesale drug stores.

Lemon Hot Drops.

Cures all Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Pneumonia and all throat and lung diseases, croup, whooping cough, asthma, etc., and is a great relief to all who are afflicted with these troubles. Prepared by Dr. H. H. Harkness, Atlanta, Ga.

An Agreeable Aperient.

ROGERS' CITRATE OF MAGNESIA.

This Well-Known Preparation is HIGHLY RECOMMENDED FOR—

Dyspepsia, Headache, Stomach of the Stomach and all complaints arising from Acidity, Indigestion, Nervous and Neuralgic Fever.

It cures the blood and regulates the bowels. It is a favorite medicine for children. Prepared by A. ROGERS' SONS, Chemists, 281 Westchester St., New York.

Superior to all Mineral Waters, Sedition Powders, Etc.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

HOLMES' SURE CURE

MOUTH WASH AND DENTIFRICE

Cures Bleeding Gums, Ulcers, Sore Mouth, Sore Throat, Cleanses the Teeth and Purifies the Breath; used and recommended by leading dentists. Prepared by Dr. J. P. & W. H. Holmes, Boston, Mass. For sale by all druggists and dentists. At wholesale by J. C. LANE & CO., CHAS. AND ORANGE STS., NEW ORLEANS.

Cuticura

A Positive Cure for every form of SKIN & BLOOD DISEASE FROM PIMPLES TO SCROFULA

CUTICURA, or Sulfur Bismuth, with its agonizing itching and burning, instantly relieved by a warm bath with Cuticura Soap, and every under of Cuticura, the great Skin Cure.

This repeated cure with two or three doses of CUTICURA Soap, the Sulfur Bismuth, will keep the blood clean, the perspiration pure and unimpeded, the bowels open, the liver and kidneys active, will speedily cure—Eczema, Itch, Ringworm, Scalds, Lichen, Furuncles, Sore Throat, and every under of itching, scaly and flabby humors of the skin and scalp, with loss of hair, when the best physicians and all known remedies fail.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 60c; SOAP, 25c; BOTTLES, 10c. Prepared by PUTTER BROS. AND CUTICURA CO., NEW YORK.

Send for "How to Cure Skin Diseases."

KIDNEY PILLS, Strains and Weakness Instantly relieved by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PILLER. New, elegant, infallible.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

CURES WHILE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best of all Cures. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

TUTT'S PILLS

25 YEARS IN USE.

The Greatest Medical Triumph of the Age!

SYMPTOMS OF A TORPID LIVER.

Loss of appetite, bowels constipated, pain in the head, with a dull sensation to the back part, pain under the shoulder blade, fullness after eating, with a disposition to exertion of body or mind, Irritability of temper, low spirits, with a feeling of having aged, Flushing at the face, Drowsiness, Headache, or aching over the right eye, Restlessness, with a full, dry, and highly colored tongue, and a bitter taste.

CONSTIPATION.

TUTT'S PILLS are especially adapted to such cases, one dose effects such a change of feeling as to manifest the sufferer that he is cured. The pills cause the body to take out of itself, thus the system is purified, and by the time the action on the digestive organs, regular stools are produced. Price 25c. 48 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR or WHISKERS changed to Glossy Black by the application of this DYE. It imparts a natural color, acts instantaneously. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of order.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

A PRIZE

Send six cents for postage, and receive free a copy of our new and more money right away than any other in this world. For more details and testimonials, send for our new and more money right away than any other in this world. For more details and testimonials, send for our new and more money right away than any other in this world.

THREE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Now that winter is approaching we must be careful, for the sudden changes are likely to be productive of colds and coughs.

Keep a bottle of LEMONT'S COUGH ELIXIR in the house. It is guaranteed to cure all coughs and colds, etc. It is absolutely safe, and can be given to children without fear.

I. L. LYONS & CO., Proprietors.

For sale by all Druggists.

THE NEW HIGH ARM SINGER Sewing Machine IS SUPERIOR TO ALL! FOR—

Range of Work, Perfection of Stitch, Ease of Operation, Rapidity, and almost Noiseless.

Call, examine and be convinced. Singer Needles 15c per dozen, two dozen 25c; Shuttles 50c, all in per bottle. Send for Catalogue and Price List. McCall's Sewing Patterns, Catalogue free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

185 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS. S. E. RUNDLE, Agent.

CHINA MATTING

JUST RECEIVED DIRECT FROM CHINA.

RED CHECK, DAMASK and JOINTLESS. In all colors, offered at the very lowest prices.

A. Brousseau's Son

22 and 25 Chartres Street 22 and 25

Lace Curtains from $1.50 pair upwards. Window Shades from 75c upwards. OIL CLOTH, LINOLEUM, CARPETS.

In all grades and at prices to suit. Curtains and Furnishings Goods in great variety. Harbison Spring Rollers at Factory prices.

EDWARD HEATH, HEADQUARTERS FOR

Wall Paper in all Grades, From Low Priced to Fine Decorations. Picture Frames and Mouldings. WIRE SCREENS.

75 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold elsewhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12. Stem-winding Silver Watches at $15 to $25. Stem-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards. All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co., 115 Canal Street, New Orleans.

FOR SALE.

Registered Horse.

Bell, Texas, 3 years old, price $150. Bell, Lady Day's Duke and 7 years old, price $150. They are of the best stock in the country, and fully accredited.

THOMAS MOUNT, Vicksburg, Miss.

FOR SALE.

Juvenile Herd of Jerseys; Registered, A. J. C. O. Thoroughly accredited, home raised, 3 Jerseys, 1 Bull, at Farmers' prices—cheap.

W. R. STUART, Ocean Springs, Miss.

MAT. MAHORNER, MACON, MISS.

Breeder of Jersey Cattle.

SERVICE BULLS.

TORRENTON 2nd, 725, Oranston of Khedive, P. M. H. (Sole of Princess 2nd—46 B. 125 oz. Dams Law, 4700—17 B. 15 oz (dam of Vaseline—50, 7 oz in one day) and full sister of the above of Blood—20 P. 15 oz, and full sister—15 B. 6 oz.

KOFFER BULL, 1156, Grandson of Comanche through his father's son, King Koffer. Dam a daughter of Rex 1230, tracing to Daisy (Princess Stevens) and King, sire of Mammoth—600 B. 6 oz butter in 15 months and 15 days.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 40 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

HOME COMFORT

These Ranges have been awarded Four Medals at the World's Exposition.

J. H. AITKEN & CO., 110 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, AGENTS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE

The Great Invention, For EASY WASHING, IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates. No family, rich or poor should be without it. Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

INCUBATORS.—Send stamps for full directions how to make a 300 Egg Incubator for $6 to PEARLINE'S HATCHERY CO., Hoveville, O. 3,000 now in use.

RAILROADS.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points NORTH EAST and WEST.

THE ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS and CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS. ONLY ONE CHANCE TO NEW YORK and EASTERN CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO and ALL POINTS NORTH and WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GATGE, all STEEL RAILS, ELBOW COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, and QUICK TIME.

SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

After October 7, 1884—DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. ARRIVE. Exp. No. 2, 9:15 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:00 A. M. Exp. No. 4, 6:00 P. M. Exp. No. 3, 9:00 A. M. Ticket office, corner Canal and Carondelet.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent. W. M. MURRAY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt. A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago. J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans. O. M. SHREVE, Superintendent.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

TO THE NORTH and NORTHWEST, Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both trains. Close connections made at UNION DEPOT, ST. LOUIS, with all diverging lines.

Excursion Tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great Northwest.

Trains leave New Orleans at 8 A. M. and 7:25 P. M. The 7:25 P. M. train daily has sleepers brought to St. Louis without change.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Eating-Houses on this line are unequalled by any in the country. For Maps, Time Table, etc., call on or address H. W. GILLESPIE, General Agent M. & O. R. R., Gravier and St. Charles Streets.

G. JORDAN, Gen. Manager, Mobile, Ala. CHAS. J. WALLER, O. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

The Texas and Pacific Railway, THE SHORT SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Direct Line from New Orleans to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS, and All points in Old and New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Texas and Local leaves 7:10 A. M. Arrives 6:50 P. M. This train stops at all stations and has through sleepers to Fort Worth, Texas and California Express leaves 1:00 P. M. This train has through sleepers to Marshall, Dallas, Fort Worth, Colorado City and all points west via San Francisco.

Round trip tickets to San Francisco at $14.00. The shortest and quickest route to Hot Springs. For rates or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Terpsichore street.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent. B. W. MCULLOUGH, Gen. Passenger Agent. W. H. NEWMAN, Traffic Manager.

The Great New Southern Route

TO—SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Points.

Through Sleeping-Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco, VIA—Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Elysian Fields street Depot as follows:

Alexandria, 8:10 A. M. Houston, 7:30 P. M. Arrives from Alexandria, 6:20 P. M. Houston, 7:40 A. M. For further information apply to E. J. HUMPHREYS, J. G. SCHREYER, Ticket Agents, Traffic Manager, Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

Queen and Crescent Line. New Orleans and Northeastern Railroad.

—The Short Line—

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS

—To All Ports—

North and East and in the Northwest

Low Rates and Quick Time on Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE, Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains with Mann Handcar Sleeping and Buffet Cars.

—FROM—

NEW ORLEANS

—TO—

Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Cincinnati.

Leaves N. O. 12:30 P. M. Arrives N. O. 1:45 P. M. N. O. 8:15 P. M. N. O. 7:40 A. M.

Freight and Passenger Depots, Press street and Leves

Freight and Ticket Offices, 34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

JNO. C. GARRET, General Manager.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight and Pass. Agent, Queen and Crescent Line, Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNARD BROWN, Conmission Agent, New Orleans.

THE GREAT Kennesaw and Shenandoah Valley Route.

(East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R. R.)

Double Daily Trains.

No Change of Cars to the Springs and Summer Resorts of Tennessee and Virginia.

NEW ORLEANS TO WASHINGTON WITHOUT CHANGE—EQUIVALENT TO NO CHANGE TO NEW YORK.

Fifteen Hours Quickest Route to Warm Springs, N. C., or Staunton, Va.

Baggage Checked in Destination.

Trains leave New Orleans 7:40 A. M. and 7:00 P. M.

For Schedules, Circulars, Springs' Guide and general information call on or address, J. C. ANDREWS, Gen'l Pass. Agent, 135 Common St., New Orleans.

CHAS. N. EIGHT, Trav. Pass. Agent, Houston, Texas.

B. W. WRENN, Gen'l Pass. Agent, Knoxville, Tenn.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route

CORR

The Only Through Line, with its own track, between Chicago and Denver, Chicago and Omaha, Chicago and Council Bluffs, Chicago and St. Joseph, Chicago and Atchison, Chicago and Kansas City, Chicago and Topeka, Chicago and St. Louis, Chicago and Sioux City, Peoria and Council Bluffs, Peoria and Kansas City, St. Louis and Omaha, St. Louis and St. Paul, Kansas City and Denver, Kansas City and St. Paul, Kansas City and Omaha.

Direct Connection made of each of its junction points with through trains to and from points located on its branches.

At each of its several Eastern and Western termini it connects its Grand Union Depots with through trains to and from all points in the United States and Canada. It is the Principal Line to SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address T. J. POTTER, 1st V. P. & Gen. Mgr., Chicago. HENRY B. STONE, Asst. Gen. Mgr., Chicago. PERCEVAL LOWELL, Gen. Pass. Agt., Chicago.

1985

In an article crowded over next week our Atlanta correspondent gives graphic account of the great struggle in that city between the friends of reform and the companions of the saloon. The issue is sharply defined, and each side is working with an energy little short of the tremendous. All city pastors are at the front, watching and praying, like the leaders of Israel in the olden time. Sam Jones and Sam Small, in their great gospel tent, address every day the immense crowds that gather beneath its shelter. But the courageous Christians of the "Gate City" want help. They appeal to friends everywhere to join with them in prayer and to render special services for supplicants in their behalf. They ask that Sunday, November 22, be an occasion of earnest prayer for their triumph over the matchless evil of the age in election to be held on Wednesday, November 25. We hope that all pastors of our patrolling Churches will heed this request and add up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. While they battle we pray. While Joshua leads his heroic legions in the plains let Moses and Aaron and Hor, on the mountain side, lift up holy hands to Heaven.

characterize two types of pastoral service in the church. Religious people are staked or fed, and they show it. Grass-fed stock always will eat certain seasons of the year. During the spring and early summer when the pastures are green and succulent grass is young, they thrive and get fat. But when winter comes and the fields are brown, they shrink and shrivel. Just so are those congregations who are compelled to stay a whole year on one or two protected meetings. A congregation that is not fed without pastoral supervision. There must be diligent labor, reaching in a harvest of spiritual and intellectual knowledge, or the flock will suffer from "cleansees of the tongue." Things, new and old, must be brought forth from the spacious storehouse of God's word for the edification of the people, or spiritual famine will be apparent. We are not called on God to stake the souls of men on the public pasture, but to feed the flock of Christ.

This also may illustrate the administration. Our Lord's command to Peter is yet the duty of church—"Feed my lambs." This obligation can not be met unless they are provided with sheltered pasture. It is not a matter of

of the And unless er and small The education of our daughter tending even more decidedly in directions undeniably wrong. In the house, kitchen and garden, she was unbecoming a lady. Such

How to get them out of the cle or to purify the water while the
In it, puzzles those who have a plague of the church. These are a charge to pastors. They up from some dark river all o land. They get into our home our families, our churches and our bread-trays until we cry mi to the Lord to deliver us from plague of the frogs. Is there a charge in all our borders that h frog in the cletern? If so, let to that charge. Let me hav draught of sweet water that tainted with the thought-of
But this poor world in which w is a land of frogs. There are no in heaven.

Mr. James Burke who, twenty years ago, and for many years, a well-known citizen of Houston, Texas, was then a store clerk at Natchez. After careful examination of my papers and the subject generally I showed them to my friend Burke with a view of organizing a society there. Burke approved the suggestion, and we organized a society in the city, and then several more in the surrounding country. Afterwards Mr. Burke was employed as traveling agent, and he organized societies in many portions of the State, and they extended north to Tennessee and Kentucky, while in the North extended southward and in less than ten years they had spread mostly over the whole country.

The Southern work occasioned a stir in the Missiounary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church again this year. In an earnest appeal for larger appropriations to this Mr. Ford asked especially for $50,000 for the Auetin Conference. He said the cougregations in that Conference were mainly composed of Northern people, but were still poor and unable to support their ministers. Whereupon this colloquy took place: Dr. Hatfield, of Chicago, asked "What kind of people are they who can not support their ministers?" "They are Chretien people," replied Bishop Harrie. "It seems to me continued Dr. Hatfield, "that there must be a screw loose somewhere. I should think these people ought to do something for themselves; I think such souls could be placed in a good mustard seed." "I object to that manner of reference," Dr. Buckle exclaimed. "There seems to be some of us here who are inclined to the language of Wall street, to 'hooray or bear,' this work. Dr. Hatfield's rhetoric is not to be dignified even by a harangue. I have never heard in this body a comparison so made outside of all propriety as his statement that 1,000 Christian souls were of so little importance that they could be placed in a grain of mustard seed. I should expect to find something of that sort from the poorest portions of Chicago; not in an assembly like this." "It should be remembered," added Bishop Harrie, "that the Texas Conference embraces a territory as large as the England New York and the New

NEVER SAY DIE THOUGH YOU COUGH Till Your Heart Aches

When the "LIFE RESTORING" East India Remedy is at hand, a cough will satisfy the most skeptical. It is the only remedy for Cough, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Nerve, Indigestion, and Nasal Catarrh. It is an Imported Remedy. Try it—prove it for yourself.

Here are a few extracts from letters of persons who were CURED, and now order for their friends:

"I feel cough is a disease, and as the medicine cured my only brother of a Hemorrhage of the Lungs about a year ago, I wish to try it for him."

HANNAN MICKLE, Near Woodbury, N. J.
Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

"As your medicine cured me of Consumption, some three years ago, and I want to try it. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles."

JANE A. ASHROOK,
Lynchburg, Va.

"I know all about the Cananah India. Fifteen years ago it cured the danger of the Asthma, and I had it very bad for several years, but was perfectly cured. Please send me a $1 box of your medicine."

Deep River, Towson Co., Md.
JAMES A. CALHOUN, Chicago, Ill.

"It has cured Mrs. Robert of General Debility of the whole system of two or three years' standing, and she is now as well as ever."

BEROUE & LESLIE,
Simpson's Store, Washington Co., Pa.

Ask your druggist for Dr. H. JAMES' Cananah India, and if they fail you, send us a direct order for $1.00 per bottle or three bottles for $3.00. Cash and Outright. $1.00 each. CRADDOCK & CO., Proprietors, 1022 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

DANGER SIGNAL

When a person gives you counterfeit money he perpetrates a crime against the law and your pecuniary interests, but when he gives you an inferior and dangerous medicine in the place of one of recognized and well known value, he perpetrates the crime of crimes, for he endangers your health and life.

"The New York Herald," Sept. 21, 1885, says: "I enclose a counterfeit article is to injure the manufacturer and the buyer, and the buyers will soon drop away from a counterfeited medicine that they find worthless. Manufacturers of counterfeit articles fail because they have not the experience and apparatus of the large manufacturer to produce the same quality results. The large manufacturers have the utmost incentive, while they are protected, to make their medicine as perfect and curative as possible."

For example, take the experience of Simmons Liver Regulator prepared by J. H. Zein & Co., of Philadelphia; their firm has devoted years of time, employed the most eminent chemists of the land, and spent thousands of dollars in bringing their medicine to the perfection it has attained. They expended a large amount of money in bringing it to the attention of the people, and the Simmons Liver Regulator is now widely popular. In order to make money from the great reputation gained by this remedy, unscrupulous adventurers have gotten up cheap counterfeits, dangerous to health, and stick on these brands a name closely resembling Simmons Liver Regulator, to deceive the unwary into buying their inferior goods.

FRANZINA, Nassau Co., Fla.
"I have used Dr. Simmons Liver Regulator and always found it to do what is claimed for it. The last bottle and two packages did me no good, and were worse than nothing. I see it is not put up by J. H. Zein & Co., and now I am glad to get the pure and genuine. Send me some from honest hands (with a good Zein & Co. signature on the wrapper). The fictitious stuff will injure some one badly."

Baso, T. Rich.

The genuine Simmons Liver Regulator has become the Families Family Medicine and has the endorsement of the thousands who have used it. If you want Simmons Liver Regulator see that the Druggist gives you the genuine, not something he claims is "just as good," and because he makes more out of it.

Our Young People.

THE FIRE.

BY ETHEL E. TILSTON.

Oh, little, fire! for the maple tree,
Where your nest is hid so snugly,
With scarlet flames is ablaze, I see.

For Autumn, that wondrous, gold-hued boy,
Has come, and with a flaming torch he plays,
And he fires the trees with a reckless joy.

On the maple's height, the bright sparks fall,
In the evening wood, the falling wall;
On the sturdy oak trees, staves and tall.

Oh, little, fire! to the southland fly,
For the woods are blazing beneath our sky,
And your home is on fire—B. R. Nichols.

Mr. Editor: Since I last wrote to the Advocate, we have moved to the little town of Levee, on the N. J. and C. R. R. About twenty-four miles from Jackson. We have no Methodist Church here, consequently no Methodist Sunday-school; but I attend the Baptist. There is only one church in town that belongs to the Baptist, but they are kind enough to allow Bro. C. A. Powell, of Union, to preach in it once a month. Rev. Mr. Pettigrew is pastor of the church. Something caught my missionary heart last spring, but grand-mamma says she wants me to be a missionary, if I live to be grown like Miss Lebbie Rankin. I wish we had a church, so we could have a Methodist Sunday-school; then I could study "Our Young People," which I like so much. What has become of Uncle John Jones? Why does he not write more for the young people? Mamma says when she was a girl and went to school in Port Gibson, he used to preach such nice sermons every Sunday evening to the children. I remain, Your little friend,

M. E. ROBERTS.

A Good Word for Rattlesnakes.

BY ALICE W. POLKINS.

"But of all mean things, I think the meanest is a rattlesnake."

"Do you?"

The boys had been telling each other splendid bear stories, and from those had wandered on into stories about all sorts of animals, till Harriet wound up with this criticism of snakes. It was Uncle James who came in quietly and said, "Oh, you?" in that very quiet tone which the boys know meant that he did not agree with them.

"Why, Uncle Jim, you don't like rattlesnakes, do you?"

"No," said Uncle Jim, slowly, throwing himself into an arm-chair by the fire, and knocking the ashes from his chair. "I can't say I am especially fond of rattlesnakes; but you must give everybody his due. And, after all, you know, the rattlesnake is a gentleman."

"Why, Uncle Jim! have you forgotten how near Johnnie was to a rattlesnake once, and how mamma fainted away when she heard it, and how papa hurried out to kill it?"

"No," said Uncle Jim, composedly; "I haven't forgotten how near Johnnie was to the snake; but the rest of you seem to have forgotten how easily he got away from him."

The boys looked at each other silently.

"But that," explained Rob, who was the eldest, and therefore the most logical, "was because Johnnie was so brave and quiet and self-possessed, and didn't scream or poke at the snake, but just stood quietly past him. You said so yourself, Uncle Jim."

"Yes, it was because Johnnie was so self-possessed. But would any of your royal tigers or noble lions or splendid bears have waited quietly to see whether Johnnie was going to behead him or not? I don't believe any of them would have let a little boy creep within a foot of his nose, and waited just to see whether he was going to poke at them first. But the rattlesnake just coiled himself up and waited. Johnnie didn't poke, and so the snake didn't strike. I acknowledge that he is a very sensitive gentleman, and if his honor had been touched—a rattlesnake's honor is his skin, you know—he would have struck back pretty hard without stopping to think whether you meant to hit him. He wouldn't let himself be trampled on, that is very certain. But then neither would you nor I."

Again the boys looked at each other silently.

"Would you like to hear a story about a rattlesnake?"

"Of course we would."

"If it is a true story," added the logical Robert.

"I can't vouch for its being true; but it was told to me as true, and it is not an impossible story. A gentleman out hunting had just raised his gun to his shoulder, when he heard a snake's rattle behind him. He waited just a second, he was so anxious to secure his game; but he heard the snake rattle again, and thought it best to stop and see what it was. A little distance behind him, coiled and waiting. The man had been in his path. As soon as it saw that he had heard its warning, and stepped politely aside, the snake slowly uncoiled, and glided past him on its way. And the gentleman says, whenever he tells the story, that he never felt so mean in his life as when he lifted his gun again and shot that snake in the back."

"I should think he would!" exclaimed the boys indignantly, their sympathies now all enlisted on the other side.

"But, Uncle Jim," said the logical Rob, "wouldn't you have shot him? If you saw a rattlesnake anywhere, even if he wasn't doing anybody any harm, wouldn't you kill him?"

"Certainly."

"Well, that isn't the way you treat a gentleman."

Uncle Jim smiled. "That is true, Rob. Perhaps I should not have said that the rattlesnake is a gentleman, but only that he is more gentlemanly than a lion, or a tiger, or a bear, or a skunk. He is a little too sensitive about his honor, of course. A true gentleman will wait to see whether you mean to strike him before he strikes back. But he never begins an attack; he never runs after you; he can only jump his own length, and he is not very long, and he can't jump at all till he has waited to coil himself all up in a ball. He has very little chance with a man who can walk and throw stones, and he will never take what little chance he has without giving you warning with his rattle that he is going to strike."

"Then why are people so afraid of rattlesnakes, Uncle Jim?"

"Because if they do strike, their poison is so likely to prove fatal, and there is always danger, of course, that you will step on one in the long grass without seeing him—an insult which the rattlesnake never forgives, however little you may have intended it. But if you are only a foot away from him when you see him, you are safe. Step back a little and you have nothing to fear. I read once in a book of adventure, of a man who climbed a tree to escape from a rattlesnake, and had to stay there all night. It was a very effective story, but he was a very foolish man."

"I should think he was!" laughed the boys.

"Oh, you laugh now; but half an hour ago I think very likely some of you boys might have been climbing trees to escape rattlesnakes. All you need really do, if you haven't already offended the snake, when you see him, is to walk quietly down the road, though you had better stop and kill him first. He won't kill you. Don't you remember that Johnnie hadn't space enough to walk away in? that he had to crawl? and still the snake did not touch him."

That night when papa came home, he did not know what to make at first of the chorus of boys that greeted him: "O papa, didn't you feel real mean when you killed that splendid snake that was so kind to Johnnie?"—Harp- or's Young People.

DOGS AND TEMPERANCE.—One bitter cold day last winter the policeman walking up and down in Fairmont Park saw a faithful dog sitting beside a sack of flour. His drunken master had left him to guard it, and then had gone away to forget all about it. Pitying the poor fellow, they tried to call him off to a more sheltered place. But he would not move, nor would he suffer any one to touch the bag. Hour after hour passed by, and the faithful, faithful watcher was nearly frozen at his post, yet he would not desert. Finally his head dropped, and it was plain that he had become insensible; so humane hearts had him quickly taken into the guard-house, while willing hands helped to restore him again to life. If they could have given him a better master it would have been a double charity. If that dog could vote, do you not think it would be on the side of prohibition?

THE RIGHT SIDE OF HEAVEN.—A little Swedish girl, walking with her father on a starry night, was so attracted by the brilliancy of the sky, all lit up with twinkling stars from one end to the other, that she seemed to be quite lost in her thinking. Her father asked what she was thinking of so intently. Her answer was: "I was just thinking, if the wrong side of heaven is so glorious, what must the right side be?"

DON'T HAWK, AND BLOW, AND SPIT, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR 1886.

The aim of the Companion is, to provide the best matter for the instruction and entertainment of its subscribers. In pursuance of this purpose, we announce important accessions to its list of Contributors, that already includes nearly all the distinguished Authors of this country and Great Britain, and some of those of France and Germany. A few selections from the Announcements for the year 1886 are given below.

Illustrated Serial Stories.

A CAPITAL SERIAL FOR BOYS, by IRON TRIALS, a Thrilling Story, by AN ANONYMOUS LETTER, by QUEER NEIGHBORS, by AWAY DOWN IN POOR VALLEY, by

J. T. TROWBRIDGE.
GEO. MANVILLE FENN.
M. R. HOUSEKEEPER.
C. A. STEPHENS.
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK.

Adventures.

ARCTIC ADVENTURES, by
THE SLAVE CATCHERS of Madagascar, by AMONG THE BREAKERS, by CANADIAN ADVENTURES, by ADVENTURES OF STOWAWAYS, by MY ESCAPE from Morro Castle, by a Cuban Patriot, JUAN ROMERO.
A BOY'S ADVENTURES in Montana, by MY ADVENTURE with Road Agents, by EXPLOITS with Submarine Boats and Torpedoes in Naval Warfare, by

Lieut. GREELY, U. S. N.
Lieut. SHUFELDT.
C. F. GORDON CUMMING.
E. W. THOMSON.
WM. H. RIDEING.
JAMES W. TOWLE.
FRANK W. CALKINS.
T. C. HOYT.

Natural History.

INCIDENTS OF ANIMAL Sagacity, by
NEW STORIES from the Fisheries, by Prof. SPENCER F. BAIRD.
DOGS WHO EARN THEIR LIVING, by JAMES GREENWOOD.
STORIES OF Old Trappers and Fur-Buyers, by F. W. CALKINS.
AMUSING SKETCHES OF Whale-Hunting, by A. F. MYERS.
PERILS OF PEARL DIVING, by Col. T. W. KNOX.
THE ROGUE ELEPHANT, by W. T. HORNADAY.
THE KEEPERS OF THE ZOO: or Anecdotes about Animals, gleaned from the Keepers of the Zoological Gardens, London, by

REV. J. G. WOOD.
Prof. SPENCER F. BAIRD.
JAMES GREENWOOD.
F. W. CALKINS.
A. F. MYERS.
Col. T. W. KNOX.
W. T. HORNADAY.
ARTHUR RIGBY.

Special Articles.

CHANCES FOR AMERICAN BOYS, by DRAMATIC EPISODES in English History, by GLIMPSES OF ROUMANIA, by A MUSIC LESSON, by the Famous Singer, OBSCURE HEROES, by
THE VICTIMS OF CIRCUMSTANCES, by
THE SPEED OF METEORS, by OUR FUTURE SHOW: by THE CENSUS, by ADVICE TO YOUNG SINGERS, by

ADVICE TO A BOY
ENTERING COLLEGE,
Four Papers, by

President C. W. ELIOT, of Harvard University.
President NOAH PORTER, of Yale College.
President F. A. P. YARNARD, of Columbia College.
Professor HENRY COIT TYLER, of Cornell College.

Useful and Practical.

BOYS WHO CAME FROM THE FARM, by M. BUTTERWORTH.
VIOLIN BOWING—Buying a Violin, by ROBT. D. BRAIN.
LOCKS AND KEYS; or Wonders of Locksmiths, by H. E. WILKS.
SMALL STOCK-RAISING for Boys, by LEMUEL DIXON.
SHORT-HAND AS A PROFESSION, by HERBERT W. GLEASON.
HOW TO FORM a Young Folks' Shakespeare Club, by Prof. W. L. COLFE.
HOME-SEEKING IN THE WEST—Home-stending—How Land is Pre-empted—Farming and Irrigation—How to Secure Land by Tree Culture, by E. V. SMALLEY.

PERSONAL ANECDOTES of John Marshall, by J. ESTEN COOKE.
DRIFTED IN: A Story of a Steam-Boat Train, by OSCAR KNOX.
EXPLOITS OF AMERICAN DISCOVERY, by ENJ. F. SPENCER.
A RAW RECRUIT, and What Happened to Him, by A. D. CHILDS.
STORIES OF LETTER-CARRIERS, by T. W. STARKWEATHER.
THE PERILS OF PRECIOUS CHILDREN, by THOS. S. HOPKINS.
A BOY at the Battle of Fredericksburg, by THOS. S. HOPKINS.
THE "CRITTER BACK" REFINEMENT, and Other Tales of Old Campaigns, by AMOS MURRAY.

Illustrated Sketches.

YOUNG MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, by AMONG CANNIBALS, by
THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS BISMARCK, by LORD TENNYSON AMONG HIS FAMILIARS, by FIGHTING THE ARCTIC COLD, by AN EDITOR'S EXPERIENCE IN THE WILD WEST, by LIFE IN TURKEY, by the U. S. Minister to Turkey.
TRICKS OF MAGIC AND CONJURING EXPLAINED, by BITS OF TRAVEL IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA and Santa Fe, by

H. W. LUCY.
JOSEPH HATTON.
MRS. L. M. AMES.
ERAM STOLER.
Lieut. SCHWARTZ.
J. L. HARBOUR.
Hon. S. S. COX.
"PROP. HOFFMAN."
HELEN HUNT JACKSON.

The EDITORIALS on leading events at home and abroad will be fundamental in character, and marked in their impartial treatment of the subjects discussed. THE CHILDREN'S PAGE will be a special feature, as heretofore, and will be filled with stories, jingles, and pictures adapted to the youngest readers.

FREE TO JAN. 1, 1886.

To any one who subscribes now, and sends us $1.75, we will send the Companion free from the time the subscription is received to January 1st, 1886, and a full year's subscription from that date. Send Money Order, Check, or Registered Letter.

Subscription Price, $1.75 a year. Sample Copies Free. Please mention this Paper.

Address PERRY MASON & CO., Publishers, 41 Temple Place, BOSTON, MASS.

D. H. Holmes.

We hereby announce that from this date we offer our whole stock of Merchandise on hand and to arrive, amounting to near one million dollars, at and BELOW COST. Such an occasion for purchasing first-class Dry Goods, at unprecedentedly low figures, may not occur once in a lifetime.

All Goods are marked in plain figures.

155 Canal St.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE,

Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cordage.

Ammunition, Base Balls & Bats, Bath Tubs, Baskets, all kinds, Clocks, Croquet, Extractions, Fishing Tackle, Hardware, Earthenware Cooking Crockery. Send for new catalogue.

J. C. MORRIS,

40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

B. D. WOOD & BROS.,

Dealers in Best Qualities of

COAL and COKE,

47 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

—OFFICE OF TUGBOATS—

Elmer E. Wood, Charles Wood, W. M. Wood, Mamie Wood, Will H. Wood.

Ramsay & Co's Hydraulic Ram in Operation.

FARMERS AND OTHERS

having spring or running water can have the water conveyed to their premises by using a Hydraulic Ram. More than any other system and also LIFT and FORCE PUMPS, Hydraulic Rams, Etc., can be obtained at low prices.

Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

ELKIN & CO.,

100 CANAL ST. 100

Have received per Latest New York Steamer their Fall and Winter Stock of Carpets,

Oil Cloths,

Linoleums,

Cortices,

Smirny Rugs and Carpets,

Window Shades,

Curtains,

Upholstery Goods,

All in New and Stylish Patterns, at Lowest Possible Prices.

ANDERSON, HARRIS & Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Platform and Half Platform Spring Wagons, CINCINNATI, OHIO, U. S. A.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, selling such popular and attractive books as Hon. Alex. H. Stephens' "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix; "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR;" "BURROUGHS' CITIES RECOVERED;" one of the best and fastest selling religious books. Also fine Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription. Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., Richmond, Va.

WM. H. PIERSON

SUCCESSOR TO WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 16. 6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them. Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent U. O. D.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW, RICH BLOOD.

These pills were a wonderful discovery. No others like them in the world. Will positively cure or relieve all manner of disease. The information around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills. Put out about them and you will always be thankful. One pill a dose. Illustrated pamphlet free. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 10 cents, in stamps. Dr. J. S. Johnson & Co., 22 C. H. St., Boston.

AGENTS WANTED STOCK-DOCTOR FOR THE PICTORIAL COMPLETE. Embracing Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Poultry, Bees and Dogs. By Hon. J. Peckham and Dr. A. H. Baker. V. B. Co. every subject pertaining to Stock of Farm both in Health and Disease. Two charts for telling age of Horses and Cattle. 720 Engravings and 14 Colored Plates. Farmers clear $100 a month. ACT NOW! Exclusive Territory. Book absolutely without competition. For full particulars and terms apply to "Parsons' Purgative Pills," Dr. J. S. Johnson & Co., St. Louis, Mo., or New York.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 17, 1885.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	6 3-16 @	—
Ordinary	7 3-16	—
Good ordinary	8 1-16	—
Good middling	8 7-16	—
Low middling	8 1-16	—
Middling fair	10 1-16	—
Fair	10 13-16	—
Galveston middling	9 1-16	—
Mobile middling	8 1-16	—
St. Louis middling	8 1-16	—

SUGAR.

Inferior	34	42
Common	34	42
Good common	42	42
Fair	42	42
Good fair	42	42
Fully fair	42	42
Prime	42	42
Superior	5 5-16	51
Choice	42	51
Seconds	42	51
Yellow clarified	51	51
Gray clarified	51	51
Choice whites	51	51
Granulated	51	51

MOLASSES.

Syrup	25	30
Fair	25	26
Strictly Prime	39	40
Choice	41	42
Fancy	41	42

RICE.

Fancy	—	—
Choice	—	—
Prime	—	—
Good	51	52
Fair	41	41
Ordinary	34	34
Common	24	24
No. 2	24	24
Rough	2 00	2 75

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 00	—
Minnesota patents	5 00	0 00
Extra fancy	5 75	6 25
Winter wheat patents	6 10	6 25
Choice	4 85	4 95
Fancy	5 00	5 15
Extra fancy	5 35	5 45

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 00	3 10
Orzo meal	2 25	—
Grits	3 10	—
Hominy	3 25	—

GRAIN, ETC.

CORN:
White	50	51
Yellow	50	51
Mixed	50	51
OATS:
Western	37	—
Texas rust-proof	39	40
BRAN:
1 cwt.	—	90
HAY:
Choice	19 90	19 50
Prime	17 00	15 00

PROVISIONS.

POULTRY:
Meat	0 24	—
Prime mess	0 00	—
Rumps	8 75	—
BAKED:
Fancy breakfast	9	03
Shoulders	4	—
Sides, clear	61	—
Sides, clear rib	—	63
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	102	111
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	4 35	4 34
Sides, clear	—	51
Sides, clear rib	—	51

FISH.

MAKEREL:
Extra No. 1, in blb.	18 00	—
Half blb.	9 50	—
No. 1, in blb.	9 50	—
Half blb.	5 10	—
No. 2, in blb., large	7 75	—
Half blb.	4 25	—

GROCERIES.

COFFEE:
Rio, choice	94	113
Cordova, choice	12	13
Java, choice	22	23
BUTTER:
Western dairy	16 17	17
New York dairy	16 17	17
Country	—	—
LARD:
Choice	64	62
TEAS:
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50

OILS.

Coal, cases	17	—
Coal, blb.	12	—
Cotton seed	31	—
Lard	61	—

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:
Western, per crate	—	—
Chicago, per 100	8 00	10 00
POTATOES:
Louisiana	1 35	1 00
Western	1 35	1 00
KRUT:
5 lbs.	5 50	6 00
ONIONS:
Louisiana	—	—
Western	2 50	—

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING:
12 b.	104	—
2 b.	114	—
BALING TWINE:
3 b.	16	—
TIPS:
3 handle	1 25	—

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	40 00	4 50
Young	1 50	3 00
Chickens, Southern	3 01	3 25
Young	1 75	2 25
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	12 00
Eggs:
Western	19	20
Southern	21	22
WOOL:
Lake	21	214
Louisiana	18	194
Wool	10	11
HIDES:
Green salted	8	—
Dry salted	11	—
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	—	—
Oak, barrels	75 00	—
Oak, claret	100 00	—
Oak, hoghead	130 00	135 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	50 00	—
Barrels	24 00	—
Half barrels	—	—
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	—	10 00
Meal	—	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	8	6
Sulphuric acid	2	4
Bone black	24	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, continued its session to-day. The following yearly appropriations were made: $500 for the French work of the Louisiana Conference, $11,000 for the Chinese work, $20,000 of which is for repairs to the Chinese Church in San Francisco, $20,000 for Japanese work in California, Northern New York $500, Puget Sound $500, Wisconsin $200, Alabama $250, Arkansas $500, Austin $500, Baltimore $350, Blue Ridge $300, California $350, Central Alabama $250, Colorado $500, Columbia River $450, Delaware $1200, Detroit $350, East Tennessee $200, East Missouri $300, Florida $400 and Georgia $350. The appropriations for domestic work were completed, the total being $205,000. The grand total of appropriations by the conference this year is $1,250,000. On Dec. 17 a grand missionary meeting will be held in the Academy of Music here. Bishop Harris will deliver the address, and Messrs. Harris and Rev. Drs. Reed and Buckley, will deliver addresses. Three hundred singers have been engaged.

MISSISSIPPI CITY, Miss., Nov. 12.—There were two cases against parties for violating the Sunday law, in one case they were fined $50 and in the other the sentence was suspended until the next term of the court, and the growth of the business from its inception in 1896, when there were 700 men order offices, that issued $4,000,000 in orders, to the last fiscal year, when the 7335 offices issued orders amounting to about $120,000,000. The fees now aggregate about $11,000,000 per annum. The total amount of payments and repayments of postal notes was $9,948,023, and the excess of issues over payments $48,250. The aggregate amount of fees received from the public was $152,018. The increase in the amount of postal note business was above 141 per cent.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 12.—Particulars have just been received of a disastrous accident which occurred near the little village of Rockfield, twenty-six miles north of this city, this morning. The little four-year-old daughter of Jacob Dhein, lime burner and stone quarrier, innocently picked up a large dynamite cartridge, used for her plaything, and threw it into the kitchen stove. A terrific explosion followed, shattering the house, killing the little girl, fatally injuring Mrs. Dhein and seriously injuring other members of the family. Mr. Dhein had several bones broken, but it is thought he is not fatally injured. The force of the explosion was so great as to scatter portions of the building for miles about.

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—To-day's session of the National Grand-Order of Patrons of Husbandry opened with attendance largely increased over yesterday. At the afternoon session Master James Draper, of the Massachusetts State Grange, delivered an address of welcome to the visiting patrons, to which Hon. P. Dabney, of Mississippi, responded on behalf of the National Grange.

GALVESTON, Nov. 13.—An awful calamity befell Galveston this morning, in the shape of a conflagration, which started at 1:30 o'clock, in the Vulcan Foundry, on Mechanic street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. So far as is known the fire is accidental. The wind was due north and increased in fury as the fire progressed. The total area of the burnt district is 100 acres, and forty and a half blocks were swept clean of everything. Something over 400 houses were burned, and it is estimated by the United States Census that 1000 families were rendered homeless, a great majority of whom (especially the poor ones) lost everything.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Ex-Senator Wm. Sharon died at 3:32 o'clock this afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The jury in the case of Rev. Dr. Hicks, the spiritual adviser of the assassin Guitau, against the Evening Star Company for $35,000 damages for alleged libel in the publication of the statement that Hicks had solicited for the transfer of Guitau's bones to the medical museum for $1000, rendered a verdict to-day for the plaintiff of one cent damages.

GALVESTON, Nov. 14.—The Knights of Labor to-night finally adjusted their troubles, Capt. Sawyer, of the Mallory Line, accepting the resolution adopted by the joint committee of citizens and Knights. According to the final report submitted to-night it was a mutual misunderstanding all around.

HAZLEHURST, Miss., Nov. 16.—About 9 o'clock to-night it was discovered that the storehouse of J. P. Matthews & Bros., on the centre lot of Railroad avenue, west side, was on fire. The flames spread rapidly both ways and in a few minutes the entire block was ablaze and was soon destroyed. The fire communicated to the Redding House, north of the above block, destroying everything on the south side of that block except the old postoffice building.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The trial of Mr. Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, Mr. Sampson Jeeves, of the same paper, Mrs. Rebecca Jarrett and Mme. Louise Moorey on the charge of indecently assaulting Eliza Armstrong, was begun to-day at the Central Criminal Court. The jury returned a verdict of guilty of indecent assault against all four prisoners. The justice then passed sentence on the four prisoners: Mr. Stead, three months' imprisonment; Rebecca Jarrett, six months, and Sampson Jeeves, one month, all without hard labor, and Mme. Louise Moorey, six months with hard labor.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A large crowd of factory girls to-day mobbed Mr. Charles Edward Lewis, the Conservative member of Parliament for this city, and treated him in a most shameful manner.

CAIRO, Nov. 13.—A refugee who has arrived here from Khartoum states that after the murder of Gen. Gordon his head hung on a butcher's hook for five days, and was pelted and spat upon by the natives.

BELORADE, Nov. 14.—The Serbian army is marching in three divisions on the left wing. Gen. Seschynski commands the right wing. Gen. Seschynski is the whole force is expected to concentrate at Sofia Nov. 22. The roads are covered with snow, retarding the progress of the army.

THE SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE. EUFALA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Knott and Midway, at Knott, Oct. 10, 11. Bellah circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11. Saltpetre circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11. Oak circuit, at Spring Hill (Monday), Oct. 11. Bellah circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11. Louisville circuit, at Tabernacle (Friday), Oct. 11. Clayport circuit, at Tabernacle, Oct. 11. Villula circuit, at Anthony Chapel, Oct. 11. Henry circuit (Thursday), Oct. 11. Lawrence circuit, at Spring Hill, Oct. 11. Perote circuit, at Abbeville (Wednesday), Dec. 2. Greenville and Malott, at Greenville, Dec. 2. Eufaula circuit, at Eufaula, Dec. 12.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER. This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can not be sold in competition with the adulterated low test, short weight, cheap phosphated powder. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

AGENTS WANTED for the MISSOURI STEAM Washer. Active, honest persons all over the country, with or without teams, to sell the Washer. It is the best machine ever invented. It is a great labor saver. It is a great money maker. It is a great business. It is a great success. It is a great triumph. It is a great achievement. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology. It is a great climatology. It is a great hydrology. It is a great oceanography. It is a great geography. It is a great history. It is a great biography. It is a great autobiography. It is a great fiction. It is a great drama. It is a great comedy. It is a great tragedy. It is a great romance. It is a great adventure. It is a great mystery. It is a great horror. It is a great science fiction. It is a great fantasy. It is a great magic. It is a great witchcraft. It is a great sorcery. It is a great wizardry. It is a great enchantment. It is a great spell. It is a great curse. It is a great blessing. It is a great miracle. It is a great wonder. It is a great marvel. It is a great feat. It is a great deed. It is a great act. It is a great work. It is a great service. It is a great benefit. It is a great blessing. It is a great gift. It is a great treasure. It is a great wealth. It is a great power. It is a great strength. It is a great courage. It is a great wisdom. It is a great knowledge. It is a great skill. It is a great art. It is a great science. It is a great religion. It is a great philosophy. It is a great literature. It is a great music. It is a great painting. It is a great sculpture. It is a great architecture. It is a great engineering. It is a great medicine. It is a great law. It is a great politics. It is a great economics. It is a great sociology. It is a great anthropology. It is a great geology. It is a great botany. It is a great zoology. It is a great astronomy. It is a great meteorology

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.-NO. 48.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1530.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

THAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
GARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—117 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Readers and wives of deceased Presbyters and/or all members of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. B. WHELEIN.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. B. O. HINCHITT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. J. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

HELL GATE.

BY SUSAN WALKER SPENCER.

In a dark, sunken reef of passion hide,
Beneath the restless currents of my life,
I lay and wept my slaps. Upon the tide,
As with blood, my poor body have died.
Faded, forlorn, forsaken in the strife,
Faded, and every word to life
With pain, wrought by doubt and hate and pride,
I lay and wept, and knew the remedy.
To-night, when I could my heart control,
I lay and wept, and knew the remedy.
To-night, when I could my heart control,
I lay and wept, and knew the remedy.
To-night, when I could my heart control,
I lay and wept, and knew the remedy.

The Sickness of Zinnne.*

Zinnne was sick. I grow confused when I try to recollect her place of abode. It seemed once I heard that she resided on such and such a street in a large city. Then the report was that she was living in a small town, then again some one said she was in the country, deep in the piney woods. Of only one thing I was absolutely sure—that she was sick. The rumor had been abroad some time. There lingered no doubt in the minds of those considering her case. Dr. Outgoing, her last physician, was certain of it. He said as much to Dr. Incoming, the physician who was to follow him.

"You will find her very far gone," he said.

"What seems to be the matter with her?" asked Dr. Incoming.

"And then followed the consultation. The two physicians looked at the form lying before them. She had been upon her back for many years. This, perhaps, was the reason her physician reported each year at an annual gathering of doctors like himself that her particular case was 'looking up.' Indeed, when one got to thinking about it, it was about all that she could do under the circumstances. I say that they looked at her. She had a frail, wasted appearance. Evidently she did not occupy much sitting room as she once did.

"Why, sir," said Dr. Outgoing; "time was when the house could hardly contain her. She, so to speak, spread herself and filled the building, but—dropping in a sad tone—"you see what is left of her."

A moment of thoughtful silence and contemplation. Then Dr. Outgoing continued, "In rainy days she is even thinner, and at night she can hardly be seen. Moreover, she seems to have but little feeling—the afferent and efferent nerves are deadened. You can jostle or jog her sharply, and she gives no sign. It matters not in regard to treatment whether it is gentle or severe—it is all alike to her. I have blistered her and she groaned not. I have then spread healing and soothing plasters all over her, and she evinced no satisfaction."

"It seems to me," said Dr. Incoming; "that she looked brighter when I came in just now. Certainly an appearance of life; an expression of hope."

"O, yes!" interrupted Dr. Outgoing. "She always does that way. She did the same for me when I was installed as her physician four years ago. She looked brighter for awhile. She gets color and appears revived with each new physician for several weeks or months, and then she goes right down again. I remember,"

continued the doctor; "that when the physician who preceded me told me just as I tell you these facts, I hardly believed it; but felt sure the patient was better, and wrote in my first official bulletin that there was every prospect of her recovery; that we thanked God; took courage and would go forward. At this time," went on the doctor, with a heavy sigh; "her form rounded out; she covered more sitting room; seemed animated; but, alas! It is all over. You see for yourself how spindling she is. She has wasted away to nothing. The last time I prescribed for her, which was on last Sunday night, I could hardly see anything of her, she seemed so emaciated."

"Maybe," said Dr. Incoming; "your treatment has been too severe; too much allopathy, for instance."

"Not at all," replied Dr. Outgoing. "I commenced with homeopathy. I didn't dream at my first diagnosis that she was so critically ill; so I gave her little sugar pellets and highly colored, but harmless, draughts and effervescent drinks taken from the fields of nature and science; but to my astonishment she grew rapidly worse."

"Why, I heard" put in Dr. Incoming; "that she increased in size at that time."

"Yes," returned Dr. Outgoing, with a groan; "but it was an unhealthy state of things, a dropsical or bloated condition. I soon saw that she had no true strength. What did I want with so much flesh before me if there was no real life present?"

So I discontinued homeopathy and went to powerful medicines administered in allopathic doses. I felt you it was simply amazing to see how the flesh disappeared under this treatment. She shrank away to nothing after the third or fourth dose."

"What did you give her?" asked Dr. Incoming.

"Well, I gave her some decoctions of wormwood and administered sulphur freely. I used also some biting acids and caustic on some proud flesh I discovered. I also relied on fly-blisters, not to speak of cupping, bleeding and one or two surgical operations. You see for yourself what is left of her."

"Did you do nothing to build her up?"

"O, yes; I gave her plenty of strong meat, but she turns from it with loathing. I urge it on her, telling her she must go on to perfect strength, and she closes her eyes and stretches out on her back flatter than ever."

"Has nothing else been tried?"

"Yes; every physician she has employed has had a plan and treatment of his own, but nothing has succeeded."

"So, then," said Dr. Incoming; "she has had a number of physicians?"

"A dozen," replied Dr. Outgoing; "to my certain knowledge. And she actually intimates that this is partly the matter with her. She says she is like the woman in the gospel who suffered much of many physicians. Nevertheless, she has hopes connected with every new physician who arrives to take charge of her case. That accounted for her brightening up a few moments when you first arrived."

"Ah, indeed!" said Dr. Incoming, with a dry cough.

"Yes, sir," pursued Dr. Outgoing; "she may take a fancy to you or she may not. No one can tell. She is very whimsical and hard to please."

"Did she like anyone especially?"

"Well, yes. Now I think of it. She had several favorites. She says she once had a doctor who was very lively and hopeful; that he used to hold her up from her seat, and by propping her up in some way made her stand awhile, telling her that she stood in her own strength; that she did feel better for awhile. But he left her after two or three years; is now in a distant State, and no one else will do her that way, and so she is down flat again. Then she speaks occasionally of another whom she says didn't believe in medicine, particularly bitter medicine, nor in strong meat; but gave her thin soups, dashed with something sparkling and exhilarating, and a light hash diet made up of she hardly knows what, only it was pleasant to her taste. Moreover, she says he kept her laughing all the time; he said so many funny things. At one time, she never can forget it, she laughed until she cried. Under his treatment she almost forgot she was sick. Now and then she felt, when alone, a great pain in her heart; but while he was talking and prescribing she forgot her malady; indeed he insisted all along that there was nothing the matter with her; that she was all right. Then she wound up the recital by saying, 'How much I would like to see him again, and where is he now, anyhow?' Moreover, she speaks of another who put her to sleep with opiates. True she was easy; but she feared during those years her disease made rapid inroads."

"How about her voice?"

"She has none to speak of. Years ago she quit singing. Several months since she made an effort; but the failure was so marked that she has not tried again. And yet what a singer she once was! As to talking, she is about done. Her voice, as I told you, is nearly gone."

While the two physicians were engaged in this consultation they were setting upon a piece of furniture called a pugilist, which, from its height, gave them a good view of the patient. After Dr. Outgoing had finished speaking they sat together looking at the wasted object before them. Zinnne meanwhile had manifested little or no interest in what was being said. Sometimes she idly turned the leaves of a hymn book; sometimes she lifted her heavy eyes to glance through the open window at the distant clouds, but never showed by a sign that she understood the remarks made upon her condition. After some additional conversation in regard to her case Dr. Incoming, in bidding farewell to Dr. Outgoing, announced that he intended calling in to his assistance four or five other practitioners well and favorably known. "I haven't a doubt but that you have met them. Their names are Drs. Sollum, Propoorzeeshun, Lowd, Criezy and Cevere." Dr. Outgoing arched his left eyebrow and elevated his right shoulder in reply.

In due time the gentlemen arrived, and first Dr. Sollum exhibited his skill. He lost little time in making his diagnosis. "My dear friend," said he, in a funeral manner; "I am under the sad necessity of informing you that you are very far gone, indeed. From the crown of your head to the sole of your feet you are diseased. There is no soundness in you." As soon as Zinnne heard this far she at once collapsed, figuratively speaking, and straightened herself out for burial. Cold at first, she became much colder. Her eyes became lack-luster and the whole body rigid. Dr. Incoming at once protested. But Sollum retorted, "You sent for me to help recover the patient, and I have started right. It is necessary, first, to impress upon her her desperate condition, then she will take the alarm, reaction will set in, and—"

"It looks to me," interrupted Dr. Incoming, with a groan, as he contemplated the rigid body before him; "that you have about finished her." "Very good," said Dr. Sollum, with frigid dignity; "I will retire and trouble you no longer." And retire he did.

The second evening Dr. Propoorzeeshun took charge. His method, he said, would be different. His idea was to draw out her resources and surprise and encourage her with her strength. He accordingly took his position before the recumbent form, and in a very cheerful and confident manner thus delivered himself, "My dear madam, if you feel that you are all right and well, please signify the same by holding up your right hand." The patient was motionless. "Ahem!" said Dr. Propoorzeeshun, somewhat taken aback; "I will slightly alter my request and will offer it plainly and slowly, so that you may thoroughly take it in. 'If, my dear friend, you would like to become well, please stand upon your feet.' To this there was some response, though peculiar. It seemed as if only a portion of the body arose after much hesitation and effort. Dr. Propoorzeeshun was radiant; but even while he was congratulating himself and had turned to speak to Dr. Incoming, Zinnne evidently weakened and sank back rapidly and looked as though she had never stirred before nor could ever rise thereafter. It proved a dead faint, and nothing else that was done for her, that evening could arouse her.

Time would fail to tell all that was done on the evenings that followed. Suffice it to say that Dr. Lowd greatly tried her nerves; indeed so much that she refused enough to express herself and positively refused to listen to anything he had to say.

Dr. Criezy won upon her for awhile; but she soon wearied of hydropathy and said it made her feel sick and uncomfortable.

The last one who tried his skill was Dr. Cevere. His first announcement certainly was not soothing. "Madam," said he; "I discover that several of the members of your body are diseased. The only hope for you is their amputation." This brought Zinnne to her feet—while she delivered a flat refusal—adding that they were no more diseased than his own members. All this was communicated with such spirit that Dr. Cevere was for a time thrown off his balance; but he soon recovered and returned to the charge. "I am, moreover, confident," he continued; "that much of your trouble springs from internal derangement. Certain organs are not performing their proper functions; your stomach is overloaded with indigestible matter, and right here, among other things, I see the need of an emetic. This I will proceed to give you. What you need is to become very sick, not as you have been, but sick absolutely of yourself, a feeling as if the very pains of death had got hold upon you. I urge the emetic upon you because you have partaken of things—"

"You mistake," said Zinnne, solemnly; "I have nothing in me at all."

"But, madam, your eyes and tongue declare it, and other symptoms are unmistakable. You must take this emetic. What you want is a perfect cleaning out."

The emetic was administered. In due time Zinnne exhibited some quins.

"Now, then," said Dr. Cevere, encouragingly.

"I can't do it," replied Zinnne, gloomily.

"O, but you must. Do this way," said the doctor, making certain motions; "take also this draught of hot water; it will help you."

"I repeat," said Zinnne; "there is nothing in me. I have done nothing imprudent or wrong. Why have you all agreed to torment me before the time?"

What need to say anything more? The week's conference and labor ended as Dr. Outgoing's eyebrow had predicted—in nothing.

The physicians in attendance left at different times and in ways peculiar to themselves. Dr. Sollum left with a groan. Dr. Criezy went away shaking his head. Dr. Propoorzeeshun departed looking mystified, and with the air of a man who had reached the end of all earthly expedients. "Nothing less than a thunderbolt from the sky, a miracle from Heaven," said he; "can do the work."

Dr. Cevere, in leaving, shook the skirts of his coat in a remarkable manner, and at the front gate was observed to wipe off the dust from his shoes.

Dr. Incoming was left alone with the patient for the balance of the year. Some say he looks more haggard and prostrated than his patient.

The time is approaching for the regular annual convocation of physicians, and the doctor is preparing an official bulletin relative to the health of his interesting charge. I have just looked over his shoulder and read the following original and thrilling item, "Zinnne is looking up."

B. CARBADINE.

Anthropopathy.

The primary value of a thought is in its relation to the subject contemplated, and its secondary value is in its right application to other subjects affected by their relation to the original subject. In other words the doctrine of anthropopathy is valuable in the first instance in just so far as it represents the nature of God, and in the second instance in its right application to man. By the observance of these simple rules I have read the article on this subject in the October number of the 'Quarterly Review,' by Rev. S. J. Morris, with great interest.

The editor very considerably and truthfully says, "His article is very deferential to Scripture and to eminent human authority, and it is not to be characterized as a bold venture at war with reverential views of God. Indeed, it is such a clear and forcible statement of the author's views as reveals in him the conviction of his thoughts and at the same time a deference to those who think otherwise that accords to them both sincerity and piety. A very commendable spirit in anyone who enters the trend of theological discussion. Yet this is by no means the chief merit of the article. The author proceeds upon the accepted hypothesis that without revelation both the being and the nature of God are unknown facts to man. Then, as both are made subjects of revelation, it follows that an intelligent apprehension of the nature of God is as necessary to a reception of him in his relations to us as is being. Otherwise, why such a revelation? If being alone, and not the nature of being, had been necessary to inspire and guide faith, then the declaration, 'I am,' had been sufficient. But every reader of the Bible knows that a greater portion of revelation is given to a description and illustration of the nature than to the being of God. Therefore, the only question is, do these revelations and illustrations represent the nature of God? If they do, the doctrine of anthropopathy is settled; if not, we are at sea. Then the only way to settle this question is an appeal to the authenticity of the Scriptures that represent the emotional in God. Admit this point and the controversy is at an end and the doctrine of the emotional in God is established. And let it be borne in mind that the question relates solely to the fact and not as to how the fact may exist in relation to other facts. To ask how the perfect God could remain perfect and yet possess an emotional nature is about as rational as to ask how the perfect God could create a perfect being with the possibility of becoming imperfect. Or to ask how a perfect God can suffer and yet remain perfect is as rational as to ask how he can become incarnated and yet remain the Jehovah of the Bible. The how is not made a subject of revelation, and, therefore, reason can not answer it. But if the fact is made a matter of revelation, then faith must accept it without the how from the reason. And is not this just the thing every penitent soul does in coming to God through Christ? Who, among the millions of the redeemed in all ages, allowed, in his faith, the divinity of Christ to escape from the cross as they looked and were saved? And who among the commissioned would so present Christ at the altar or would seek to explain away the deep meaning of these words, 'The Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which can not be uttered?' After all, the controversy hinges upon the sole proposition as to whether the emotional is an original susceptibility of the divine nature and not the effect of these susceptibilities upon the being of God. We can neither know the one nor the other only as God has revealed himself to us and logic can be as effective here as in explaining how 'the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.' To assume that susceptibility in the divine nature to suffer or be happy, to be angry or to love, are, indeed, evidences of an imperfect nature, is to go beyond what is written of God in the only book of authority in such a controversy. An author of high standing has written thus of this subject: 'Anger is not evil per se. The mind is formed to be angry as well as to love. Both are original susceptibilities of our nature. If anger were itself sinful, how could God himself be angry? How could he, who was separate from sin and sinners, have looked round upon men with anger?' And the same must be true of pain or any other susceptibility of the divine or human nature. The simple fact that they exist argues neither for nor against a perfect nature. The only argument derived is from the cause or causes that give rise to the exercise of these susceptibilities. And if the cause in the case of God be a pure feeling toward his subject, whence the inference that pain is contrary to the perfect being of God.

"For love of us he died,
And all to torture died;
'Twas love that bowed his faltering head,
And up'd his gushing side."

J. N. WEEMS.

The Lord's Supper and Scriptural Proportions.

But when I am asked to acquiesce in the statement that the celebration of the Lord's Supper (I prefer this title to the one in common use because St. Paul uses it; and because the phrase "holy communion" occurs nowhere in the New Testament) is "the highest act of Christian worship," I can not but recall what seems to me wholly incompatible with such a statement, I mean the proportionate treatment of it in the New Testament. If it had occupied in the minds of the inspired writers the prominent place which it now occupies in the minds and months and writings of many, we may, I think, assert with safety that it would have been morally impossible that St. Peter should have written two epistles, St. John three, St. James and St. Jude one each, and that in none of the seven there should be any mention of, or even an allusion to the Lord's Supper. And further, that St. Paul in thirteen out of fourteen epistles, while largely entering into the length and breadth and depth and height of Christian privilege and duty to his beloved and advanced converts at Ephesus and Philippi and Thessalonica, and giving detailed pastoral instructions to Timothy and Titus, should have made no mention, absolutely none, of the Lord's Supper. This is not a matter of doubtful opinion, it is simply a matter of fact. No Christian will presume to charge the great apostle with any disparagement of the institution which he had received of the Lord Jesus; but it may, I think, be expected from all unprejudiced readers of the New Testament that they will observe the apostle's proportionate dwelling upon it to be very different indeed from the usage now prevalent in certain quarters and to amount to a practical rebuke of it. In one epistle only did he write about the Lord's Supper at all; and then it was to rebuke and correct abuses of irreverence and selfishness, such as it is difficult to associate even in imagination with an assembly of persons whose avowed object was an act of worship—"one is hungry and another is drunken." Our church apologizes for kneeling at the Lord's Supper, by pleading that it is well meant, "for a signification of our humble and grateful acknowledgement of the benefits of Christ therein given to all worthy receivers, and for the avoiding of such profanation and disorder in the holy communion as might otherwise ensue." Whence this apology for kneeling, and the eulogy which follows in the same rubric, if the ordinance in question be indeed "the highest act of Christian worship?"—McNellie.

Mississippi Conference Matters.

The various railroad companies have given reduced rates as follows: The Natchez, Jackson and Columbus (deducts one-fourth going and coming). The Vicksburg and Meridian charges two cents per mile on the return trip. The Mobile and Ohio, the Illinois Central, the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas, and the New Orleans and North-Eastern deduct two-thirds on the return trip. The Louisville and Nashville has not been heard from. Should any of our members on their arrival find no reception committee at the depot, let them report at the parsonage. "It is supposed that the Brookhaven and the Vicksburg districts will not be represented by laymen or local preachers as the presiding elders have sent no list.

W. C. BLACK.

—Our vital union with Christ is a very old truth, yet it is one that is ever new—a surprise to the believer as he goes on and tries it. To many of us, doubtless, it has been a new discovery, long after other truths were grasped. First, let us understand that it is a fact. I find more and more that the right order in which to regard the life of the soul is this: First, fact, then faith; then, as the result, feeling.—Rev. H. G. C. Moule.

—Good taste rejects excessive nicety. It treats little things as little things, and is not hurt by them.—Fenelon.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1885.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
THE FAITH WE NEED.

BY W. L. C. H.

Oh! for the faith that doubts no word
The Lord to man hath spoken;
That when the voice of God is heard
Asks no deliver token;
That trusts each precious promise true
When most the signs are falling;
And, when there's naught that man can do,
Knows Jesus is prevailing.

Oh! for the faith that plants our feet
Where naught our hold can sever,
And makes us stand while surges beat
Upon the rock forever;
That gives us wings within the night
And moves us when darkness thickens;
That keeps us strong to win the fight
And dying courage quickens.

Oh! for the faith that welcomes death
When'er the Master calleth;
Nor hides the word within its sheath
Until the last for falleth;
That enters unawed the shadowy vale,
And there no evil feareth,
Undaunted still, while'er assail,
Thill Christ the Lord appeareth.

Evil Speaking.

BY INVALID.

"Speak not evil one of another, brethren."
If all brethren would heed this injunction—would avoid speaking "evil one of another"—surely there would be more harmony and less discord in this miserable world! It is a deplorable fact that this evil is carried to such an extent that it is felt in every community, among every class, from the lowest gossip to the—shall I say it? Alas! 'tis true, a pity because true, that brethren—ministers of the gospel of peace—too often "speak evil one of another."

How well I remember the first instance (in my memory) coming under this charge—once a preacher speaking evil of another, both Methodists. I was visiting a friend, where I met our pastor. He was genial, jovial and deeply consecrated, faithful in the Master's cause, yet afflicted with this fault. A preacher's name was mentioned—a former pastor of our hostess, and one beloved of her household; yet this "brother" took up his name and disparaged it until I wondered it was ever enrolled on the book for church membership, ventilated his character, both private and public, until I wondered again that it was passed—that he was ever admitted as a member of Conference. There was but one doubt of which he could possibly reap the benefit, and this was to doubt the veracity of the villifier—a brother preacher, a follower of Christ.

"Why do you not prefer these grave charges against him at Conference? For, if he is guilty, he ought not to disgrace the pulpit—rather the name of Christianity. If innocent, then—"

A guilty flimsy spread over his usually benign countenance, and, to my disgust and astonishment, he retraced nearly every word, and said:

"Oh! Bro. — is a good sort of man. I like him as a preacher; but, as a man, he won't do every time. Oh! he's a good preacher, does good; but he is a little wrong sometimes."

"Speak not evil one of another, brethren," I said, looking him steadily in the face, my feelings mingled with regret. Well, I merely said: "Sir, you are the first preacher that I ever heard speak evil of another, and I shall always remember it with pain and regret, for I am equally sorry for both of you. I have always thought that a preacher was a very little lower than the angels."

On another occasion I was deeply pained to hear a minister relate, during his first visit to my "Bethel," incidents in the life of a brother preacher, commenting most unfavorably upon some action the absent had taken in certain important matters, where his honor, as his honesty, was seriously involved. Had the testimony been given against the accused in a court of justice where criminals are convicted on the testimony of one, the verdict would have gone against him if the jury had agreed with the witness, or prosecution. Poor man! (I mean the traducer—not the accused, for he was my cherished, trusted friend and bore a spotless reputation.) I handed the man my Bible, and asked him to read I Corinthians xiii. Then I mentioned that this was the chapter Bro. H. had read for me on one occasion, saying that he was one of my most beloved and esteemed friends.

"Yes, oh! yes; Bro. H. is a sweet, good man. I love him dearly—as much as I love any man in our Conference."

Oh! for that charity that thinketh no evil.

Another preacher I remember whom I never heard speak very well of another. There was always some defect or failing to be deplored—some intimation that their good could be spoken of in an evil manner; that he knew of some weakness, something derogatory to their character, of which, of course, the church knew nothing—some "idiot-syn-crazy," as he termed it. I believe it was a feeling of envy or one of intense dislike toward others. Another fault I remember almost as evil in its influence—or results—something, I think, extremely unbecoming in a preacher, as well as being an unkindness bearing the semblance of brotherly love—a wrong sort of glorying in another's infirmities, a would-be doing evil that good may come, whereas only evil is the result. I have reference to one preacher, or any other Christian, reviewing our past and contrasting the present for the benefit of those who are dead in sin and trespasses, but who may be encouraged to hope for pardon by being told that Bro. So-and-so was once worse than he—a debased, dissipated fellow almost beyond the hope of redemption, but now a monument of God's mercy, a brand plucked from the burning. The worst part of it is, it is told in a manner to create the impression that he was quite a hero in his prodigal days, as the "James Boys" have been depicted by their biographers—characters to be admired even then, but so miraculously saved by grace. Sometimes they insinuate that not all of the old Adam has been crucified—that he is not to be tampered with or trusted. Brethren, these things ought not so to be.

To illustrate: On one occasion a preacher being present, another was mentioned, when the former said:

"Just think what that man was before he became a Christian! One of the most dissipated, profane men—in fact, an outcast from society, given up as lost, when the tide turns and he becomes what he is—a Methodist minister."

Those who had heard the story and knew the man put no wrong construction upon the matter, drew no unfavorable inferences as to his present manner of living as a reformed character; but unfortunately strangers are apt to do this, and it is useless to attempt to remove the impressions created, especially among the people who are not of that long suffering sect—the Methodists—and who are ever ready to cast stones at those who bear this reproach for Christ's sake. I saw, as I felt, that this unbecoming and untimely review of the character of the absent one had created contempt, as well as suspicion, in the mind of at least one stranger present, and the result was the influence was felt, will ever after change the current of the lives of some of the parties present—the estrangement of friends, the withdrawal of interest and sympathy in a matter of deepest concern to another, suspicion against the reformed, as well as against those who would connive as such, as his friends were doing to recognize such. In writing of this evil (unconscious unkindness) it seems almost as bad as the other; but I feel that someone who has felt the pain should implore others to "speak not evil one of another, brethren." Surely this may be taken, as it is given, in the spirit of kindness, even as some "pulpit habits" have been pointed out as being evil in their tendencies.

"Those Fanatics."

BY HON. W. H. GOODALE.

I have been reading anti-prohibition speeches recently—not that I have run entirely out of good reading, but because I want to know what our work is doing in the way of "stirring up the enemy"—what they think of us and say about us and our cause. Some of these speeches are old, and some of more recent date; some are red-hot with unsuppressed wrath, and some are better tempered; some are argumentative, some hortatory, some abusive; but all seem to agree in calling us—who think it time this government should dissolve its partnership with the whisky traffic; time that the powerful educational influence of law should cease to call the greatest of all evils "good"; who don't exactly see the justice in compelling those of us who want no whisky for a pay double, even a quadruple, tax to support its paupers, its insane, its criminals—they all seem, I say, to agree in calling us "those fanatics."

This word "fanatic" is a sort of "second-hand" word. It is not used for the first time in its application to us. I don't, indeed, if there was ever a reform started under the sun that its opponents did not call its advocates "those fanatics." I have not a doubt—though my dictionaries, even to Skeats, are silent upon the subject—that when Noah was building the ark the revelers and revilers who were looking on called him "that old fanatic, Noah." Those early Christians who allowed Caligula and Nero, and the long list of non-fanatics, to torture them so, just for a mere sentiment, and those martyrs of a later date who could sing hymns while the flames fed upon their shriveling flesh, while their triumphant souls caught even through their burning eyeballs rays of celestial light from the ever-nearing hills of God. What dreadful fanatics they were, to be sure!

These word-caskets! With how firm a grip they hold their jewels through all the long ages! How this word "fanatic" takes us back along the line of the centuries. How strange that it should have had its origin in a word that means "to talk." Strange when we consider its present meaning; not strange when we consider those to whom it is applied, for the temperance people can talk, even to the women—now the most effective branch of the service—vox formina facit. The place that was talked about, spoken of, dedicated to the gods, was the fanum—the temple. We temperance people need not be ashamed of our origin. "Inspired by a divinity"—the divinity of the fanum; hence "enthusiastic," which means, you know, "full of God." It seems that those early enthusiasts who claimed this inspiration were not as sensible as we modern temperance workers are, or ought to be. They had visions (Some say the word "fanatic" is derived from shainomai—to appear) and dreamed dreams as no well-regulated enthusiast would ever dream of doing, and so they got the word into disrepute early in its history; but still the jewel of its early life and real radical meaning lies hidden to this day in a casket still unbroken, though ever so roughly handled.

The anti-prohibitionists do not mean to call us "inspired"—at least not by any divinity that frequents sacred temples to any considerable extent; nor do they mean to bear favorable testimony to our ability as "talkers" (however justly we may merit such testimony since the advent of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union) unless on the principle of vox et præterea nihil. They really mean it as a term of reproach or, at best, of commiseration. "They are honest, well-meaning people, sir; but impracticable, quite impracticable, sir."

Well, perhaps so. We shall see. I have been looking over in my mind (it would save me much trouble if I had it on paper) the list of those "temperance fanatics" living and dead, for our cause is old enough to have made a history for itself. Here are some of them:

We must begin, of course, with Dr. Benjamin Rush, "as mild-mannered a fanatic as ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship." He had the moral courage to strike out against the public sentiment and universal usage of his day with a blow straight from the shoulder. The wonder is that they did not put him in prison for it, as later on they did that prince of fanatics, Dr. George B. Cheever, for publishing that wonderful "vision" he had, called "Deacon Giles' Distillery." He should have kept it to himself; but, then, fanatics do not mind going to prison for conscience's sake. It is what they are for.

And then there was old Dr. Lyman Beecher. I can see his venerable figure crowned with the glory of ripeness, just as he looked thirty years ago when he lectured to "us boys" at Andover. Joseph Cook was one of those very boys who listened harder than any of us, and what a wretched "fanatic" he has turned out to be!

And then there was the earnest, uncompromising, scholarly fanatic, Dr. Justin Edwards, whose very name is sacred to me because his home, redolent of his pure and hallowing influence, was thrown open to me after his death by his warm-hearted Christian wife, who was to me all that a mother could be during the year I spent under her roof. How uncompromising was his fanaticism upon the great issues of the Sabbath and temperance!

And Dr. Moses Stuart, of whom Wendell Phillips has said, his "life-long study of the Bible and profound critical knowledge of both its languages place him easily at the head of all American commentators." He dared to write an argument on "The Scriptural View of the Wine Question," which men have sought in vain to set aside ever since. Hear Phillips keep calling him out: "By his side stands Dr. Nott, the head of Union College, with the snows of ninety winters on his brow. Around him gather scores of scholars and divines on both sides of the Atlantic. In our day Taylor Lewis gives to the American public, with his scholarly endorsement, the exhaustive commentary by Dr. Lees on every text in the Bible which speaks of wine—a work of sound learning, the widest research and fairest argument."

As I write, the names come too thick and fast upon me, for my eye has fallen on the "Footprints of Temperance Pioneers" (another name for fanatics) the "centennial hook," and I now ransack my memory no more. Look at this list of twelve fanatical Presidents of the United States, and the rank heresy to which they have subscribed: "Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirit is a drink is not only needless, but hurtful, and that the entire diuine of it would tend to promote the health, the virtue and happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction that should the citizens of the United States, and especially the young men, discontinue entirely the use of it, they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and the world. James Madison, Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, M. Van Buren, Franklin Pierce, Abraham Lincoln, John Tyler, Z. Taylor, Millard Fillmore, James K. Polk, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson." (See "Footprints of Temperance Pioneers," p. 33.)

It seems that the Hon. E. C. Dolan—no doubt, another fanatic—secured these signatures at various times during a period of thirty years. The same volume gives the names also of R. D. Murray, M. D., L. M. Sargent, Rev. Lehen Armstrong, Hon. Reuben H. Walworth, Rev. John Wesley, John Marsh, D. D., Thomas Jefferson, John G. Palfrey, Albert Barnes, D. D., Heman Humphrey, D. D., Thomas P. Hunt, Hon. Garit Smith, Jonathan Kittredge, Dr. W. R. Scott, Charles Jewell, M. D., Wilbur Fluke, D. D., Francis Wayland, D. D., Hon. Lewis Cass, and so many more that I can not even write the names always honored and revered, but fanatics all upon the question of total abstinence. Verily, when the roll of these fanatics shall be called on the high battlements of heaven I would be there and go their way.

Time does not permit me to call the roll of the living nor complete the roll of the dead. If we are to wear the names of "fanatics" and "enthusiasts," let us wear them as a crown. Let us be "talkers" to some purpose—aye, till the very citadels of their power quake before the eloquence of truth; and, above all things, let us prove our right to be called "enthusiasts" by being "filled with the Spirit of God."

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 13, 1885.

From the Work.

M'COOL, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Having closed my round of meetings, I give an account of the five held since my last report. At McCool Bro. J. A. Bowen helped me in his usual telling way, making a lasting impression for good. The meeting resulted in eight conversions and seven accessions. We have had fifteen accessions here since Christmas. The meeting at Liberty Chapel was a glorious revival, in which we had fifteen conversions and seventeen accessions. The church there was very much encouraged. From thence we went to Morven Chapel, where we had unusual success. Here we had thirty conversions and twenty-two accessions and every other interest well attended to. Then we went to Liberty Hill, where we were told by the principle members it would be useless to hold a meeting, saying the church was too dead to revive it, but we persisted, and eight days' work revolutionized the neighborhood and fully revived the church, bringing in old and hardened ones. This meeting astonished the people throughout the country on account of thorough work done. We had eighteen conversions and fourteen accessions. Our last meeting at Bowie Chapel, an old church which was abandoned before I came here, and supposed to be beyond redemption by most everyone, was in many respects the most successful of all—eighteen conversions, twelve accessions and nearly all thoroughly reclaimed and two prayer meetings a week running all the time. Collections all up, etc. Now in conclusion I wish to say we have had 240 conversions and 175 accessions, and regular prayer meetings at all the churches except one, and the good work goes on and the finances, we think, will come up all right. Now our local preachers, (and, by the way, as good a corps as you ever know on any charge), Bro. Warsaw, Hines, Boyett, Hull and Fullilove, were up in a sailboat to visit the old mission, reaching it early in the afternoon. When, to their astonishment, the people were just returning from church on Sunday! What! Most assuredly this is Friday. Most assuredly it is Sunday. Can't be possible! And they were all amazed out of measure. We have kept our calendar exact. So have we! A little item of common sense, sometimes neglected a little, explained the matter at a flash, and all had a hearty laugh over their own obtuseness. They were both right. Friday was Sunday, and Sunday was Friday! It could not be otherwise. In coming out one party took the eastern and the other the western route. Of course one lost a day and the other gained a day as to English time.

One Day in Seven.

I have read in the ADVOCATE, of October 29, an argument on "The Sabbath Question—Change in the Day," copied from the Central Christian Advocate. It opens on this wise:

"It is granted by nearly all that we now observe the Sabbath on a different day from that first given and afterwards repeated in the decalogue. A few try to adjust the chronology as to make it appear that we now worship on the day originally given."

The Sabbath, or the "Sabbath Question," is a matter of unspeakable importance to the church. It should be understood, and well understood as far as it is capable of being understood, by, at least, all who undertake to teach Christianity. And although there are many things pertaining to the history of the Sabbath which, like other ancient history, are very much hid away in far distant, dim and obscure rubbish, there are few things about it that we well know. We know that the church never did live, much less grow and prosper, without it. Nay more, we know that in all time past, as far as time comes down from the past, religion has quickened and retarded its growth in exact proportion as Sabbath keeping has been quickened and retarded.

But there are two things, or classes of things, we ought not to essay to teach; first, things we do not ourselves understand, and, secondly, things unphilosophical or unscientific. In the above extract what is meant by "a different day from that first given"? or, by "the day originally given"? A particular period of twenty-four hours, almanac and watch in hand, could be prescribed to persons living on any particular parallel of longitude, but that would not prescribe a particular sacred period to persons living east or west of that parallel. Our friends in Arizona keep the Sabbath, and yet it is a "different day" from the one we keep. And our friends in Charleston, S. C., keep a different one still. The missionaries in China keep Saturday, though they call it Sunday.

The mistake of Sabbatarianism is that they suppose the consecrated season consists of a particular period of time for all mankind instead of a moving day changing or sliding with the diurnal motion of the earth. There is no same day for more than a very small portion of mankind. It is supposed that at a very early period a precise Sabbath day was designated with every hebdomadal day successively, and that this count by sevens has been accurately kept to the present time. This would be a very hazardous supposition. Why, chronology has not been able to number the years with any approach to accuracy, much less the months, weeks or days. In the time of Christ the Jews in the little province of Palestine kept their regular Sabbath, but where is the probability, not to speak of the knowledge, that the more numerous Grecian Jews of other countries kept the same day? The Greeks had a seventh day festival of some sort. And it is altogether probable that the millions of Hebrews, who several centuries before this migrated to various Grecian countries, would, in their posterity, adopt the weekly festival of the country where they lived, though for a different purpose.

The days as they arise, one by one out of the womb of the morning, are not distinguishable one from another. They all look alike. We group them into sevens, and every seventh one we set apart for a Sabbath. And whether we call it No. 1 or No. 7 it is the same. The Jews celebrated every seventh day, of course, and so do we. We work six days and rest and worship on the seventh.

It is said the apostles changed the Sabbath day from what was then called the seventh day of the week to the first day. That may be probable; but what of it? If they did so, it was a mere local, chronological arrangement, making one week to have eight days in their estimation. They merely skipped one day and continued to observe every seventh day as before. This has been done hundreds of times since by other people, though for other reasons, and the world kept right on without being hurt. So in 1752 the British Parliament enacted that eleven days should be stricken from the calendar, so that the next day after the second of September should be the fourteenth.

The world being a globe revolving on its axis, and not a plane with the sun passing over it, as the ancients supposed, it becomes a scientific impossibility for any given successive period of time to be observed as a Sabbath by everybody unless everybody stays at home. Traveling people must change their Sabbath period occasionally or confine their journeying to North and South directions.

The following facts are stated somewhere: A mission ship sailed from England to a certain island in the South Pacific some thirty miles distant from another island, on which there was already an old missionary station. The new comers, some of them, set out in a sailboat to visit the old mission, reaching it early in the afternoon. When, to their astonishment, the people were just returning from church on Sunday! What! Most assuredly this is Friday. Most assuredly it is Sunday. Can't be possible! And they were all amazed out of measure. We have kept our calendar exact. So have we! A little item of common sense, sometimes neglected a little, explained the matter at a flash, and all had a hearty laugh over their own obtuseness. They were both right. Friday was Sunday, and Sunday was Friday! It could not be otherwise. In coming out one party took the eastern and the other the western route. Of course one lost a day and the other gained a day as to English time.

I believe it was Edgar Poe who put the matter a little different. It was in London. A young man wanted the old gentleman's daughter. The father hesitated, but said, "Well, when three Sundays come together." So the young fellow was put to his wits to bring three Sundays together. He procured the help of two friends to travel. One would sail east, and the other west round the globe while he would remain at home to take care of the girl. The voyages performed and the three met in London, Sunday. The calendar of each had been kept exact. Sunday! No, this is Saturday; there is my calendar with not a flaw. No, no; this is Monday, and there is the proof. They were all right, of course, and there were three Sundays on three consecutive days with unmistakable certainty.

I allude to those simple matters of familiar science to show the futility of supposing that particular, specific periods of time are set apart in each week for Sabbath hours for the observance of all men. The thing is impossible. And yet nothing is more simple than Sabbath keeping; one day in every seven. Not, however, with universal exactness as to periods of time. Those who travel will occasionally find themselves where their Saturday or Monday is the local Sunday. To prevent this, you must stop the globe from turning over, or make everybody stay at home. When your Sunday, correctly ascertained, falls on a local Saturday or Monday you must do so the South Pacific missionaries did, count two days for one and jump over one, or count one day twice and jump back.

If it be said that the mere keeping of one day in seven leaves every man to select his own Sabbath, the reply is that that is hypercriticism. Sabbath keeping is not mere individual; it is social. Sunday is not the separate property of individual men, but the property of the community, of the Church, of the State. The same calendar that tells when court day comes, or when a certain bill of exchange falls due, tells when Sunday comes. You must not only keep a personal Sabbath, but you must keep it as a public celebration.

As to a supposed change of the day by the apostles, in the first place, I do not consider the question important, for in any case it decides nothing as to Sabbath keeping. They celebrated one day in seven, so do we. As to a Jewish Sabbath and a Christian Sabbath that looks to me like twaddle. The Sabbath is for man, not for countries, seasons or nationalities. The world knows the Sabbath. It is certain that the apostles and other Jews right there at Jerusalem paid the most profound reverence to the day of the Savior's rising, which was the next day after the Sabbath, and that they continued to give it marked hebdomadal significance. It was the Lord's Day recurring weekly. How far this custom obtained in other countries and in later years we are not informed. If there had been a formal legislative undertaking to remove the Sabbath period—supposing these had been such a specific, hebdomadal, twenty-four-hour period—one day forward, it is likely we would be informed something about it. But he this is may, whatever was done was not done at one time and place. During several hundred years and in various countries the church paid vastly more importance to one day in seven than to specific periods. They attached vital importance to the former, leaving the latter to take care of itself.

The Sabbatarian doctrine supposes an exact hebdomadal period of twenty-four hours, running through all time, applicable to all people in all conditions, with an unerring count into sevens, of all the days of all centuries, which is a blind overlooking of the absurdity it involves. If we had an exact count of all the days from the first, dividing them into sevens, to the present time, even in our longitudinal neighborhood, there is not one chance in a million that we now have the right day. Moreover, Sabbath keeping at all in the West is a very recent thing. And yet we keep one day in seven.

If the Sabbath day—twenty-four hours—is one exact space or period of time, then there must necessarily be about eighty or one hundred and sixty different Sabbaths; otherwise must of them would be made up of different fragments of days and nights. But the Sabbath law means one day in seven, irrespective of longitudinal space, then one Sabbath a week for all men is all that is needed.

YAZOO CITY, Mississippi.

Some Changes in the Ritual Needed.

MR. EDITOR: Some expressions in our ritual for the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and baptism at least seem to be inconsistent with our teaching and contrary to the doctrine of the Bible. I am not alone in thinking so. As a church we have taught that if man repents of his sins God will forgive him and "remember his sins no more." (Hebrews x, 17.) And to the forgiveness of our sins we also teach that we are regenerated and become new creatures in Christ Jesus, and such we are expected to lead a new life. "Old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new." (II Corinthians v, 17.) The apostle, with our Savior, taught that after regeneration we are to cease from sin (Romans vi, 1-14; Peter iv, 1-3). "Old and sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon you."

The invitation to the sacramentable seems to indicate an address to persons who for the first time contemplate such a thing and seems to question whether some Christians have repented. If a man be a Christian at all he has repented or did repent before he became one. His repentance is a past act, it may be many years back, and demand present repentance of the commission of sin up to the present moment. It denies repentance at all. Every time after the Supper you propose to intend to lead a new life and yet the next month or quarter you are led to doubt that you have done so, although every time you say you intend to lead a new life. To God this must appear somewhat childish and borders upon solemn mockery.

Again, in the confession the preacher confessing for himself and the people says, "We acknowledge and bewail our manifold sins and wickedness, which we from time to time have grievously have committed by thought, word and deed against thy divine majesty, provoking most justly thy wrath and indignation against us. We do earnestly repent and are heartily sorry for these, our misdoings; forgive us all that is past and grant that we may ever hereafter serve and please thee in newness of life." Here is an acknowledgement of a very wicked course of life up to the present occasion—our manifold sins and wickedness—most grievously committed, etc. We are a presiding elder this occurs every week and to some people every month. This sounds very strange to us, but it is an expression of praise and thanksgiving for the grace of victory over the flesh and the world as avowed in the beginning. See the question, "Dost thou renounce the devil?" so that thou wilt not follow or be led by him?"

If this be a reference to sins committed before our Christian experience it should be so worded as to express that fact, as the Apostle Peter says, "When we lived in lasciviousness, lusts," etc. If it refer to a life of manifold sins and wickedness running up to the present occasion, then we ask, what does repentance mean? It is to say and do? We might say, some do, we have faith, but then it is dead faith without works, and might be classed as sinners in deed and truth, which is contrary to our profession.

Again, this ritual pulls a Christian back and down from his high and holy calling. He must content himself with

Queen and Crescent Line
New Orleans and Northeast
Railroad.

—The Short Line—

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGER

—To All Points—

North and East and in the North

Low Rates and Quick Time

Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THOROUGHFARE
Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Train with Mann Boudoir Sleeping and Buffet

—FROM—

NEW ORLEANS

—TO—

Meridian,

Birmingham,
Chattanooga
and Cincinnati.

---

Leaves N. O. 12.30 P. M. Arrives N. O. 1.00
" N. O. 6.15 P. M. " N. O. 7.40

---

Freight and Passenger Depots,

Freight and Ticket Offices,
34 and 36 St. Charles street, N

H. COLLEBRAN,
General Freight and Pass's Agent,
Queen and Crescent Line,
Cincinnati
BARNARD BROWN,
Commercial Agent,
New Orleans

Kennesaw and Shenandoah Valley Route.
(East Tenn., Va. and Ga. R.)

---

Double Daily Trains.

No Change of Cars to the Springs
Summer Resorts of Tennessee
and Virginia,
NEW ORLEANS TO WASHINGTON WITH
CHANGE—EQUIVALENT TO NO
CHANGE TO NEW YORK.
Fifteen Hours Quickest Route to Washington,
N. C., or Staunton, Va.

Trains Leave New Orleans 7:45 A. M. and 7:00 P. M.

For Schedules, Circulars, Springs' Guide and general information call on or address,

J. C. ANDREWS, Gen'l South Agent
158 Common St., New Orleans

CHAS. N. KIGHT, Trav. Pass. Agent
Houston, T.

B. W. WRENN, Gen'l Pass. Agent
Knoxville, T.

---

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. DEPT. OF COMMERCE TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington

Route
C B & O R R

The Only Through Line, with Its own track,
Chicago, Peoria, DENVER,
St. Louis and
Elkhart by way of Omaha, Pacific Junction, At Kansas City. It traverses all of the six great
ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI,
NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLO
With branch lines to their important towns. It runs every day in the year three elegantly equipped through trains over

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchafalaya,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and St. Louis,
Chicago and Sioux Falls,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha.

Direct Connection made at each of its points with Through Trains to and from each of its branches.

At each of its several Eastern and Western terminals it connects with the Grand Union Depot Through Trains to and from all points in the States and Canada. It is the Principal

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY
For Tickets, Rates, General Information regarding the Burlington Route, call on Agent in the United States or Canada, or
T. J. POTTER, 1st V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO,
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO,
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS AGT., CHICAGO.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. R. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1885.

Chaplain McCabe makes the striking statement that "the Methodist Church has given $2,650 a day for a hundred years to the cause of church and institution building in this land." At that rate she will soon be a substantial free-holder. In that direction we are to achieve permanent success.

The press telegrams report another liberal donation to Vanderbilt University by Mr. William H. Vanderbilt. That gentleman is showing large wisdom in his benefactions. Gifts to the great institution that bears his name will continue to bless the generations when his achievements as a railroad magnate have been forgotten. The university is in wise hands, and will be more and more a benediction to the church and country.

As we go to press the great contest in Atlanta is being decided at the ballot-box. In the free exercise of their rights as citizens the qualified voters of the "Gate City" and of Fulton county will say whether or not the matchless evil of the age shall be vended in their midst. The prohibitionists have made a gallant fight, and deserve to succeed. Senator Colquitt, ex-Congressman Felton and Hon. W. B. Hill, son of the late Ben Hill, have led the forces of reform assisted by the pastors of the city, Sam Jones, Sam Small, Dr. Haygood, and others. They represent the better classes of both races and the people who enthusiastically give respectability to a community. If victorious in the struggle, we may expect the movement to spread with greater rapidity over the Southern States. Other communities will catch inspiration from this triumph and organize for the overthrow of the rum demon. But if defeated, the brave battalions will pick their flints and renew the onset. At this writing all the indications point to a glorious victory. May Heaven grant it!

The grateful citizens of Birmingham, Ala., gave $1,478 to Revs. Sam Jones and Sam Small for their two weeks' evangelistic labor in that city. Some secular papers have objected to such excessive remuneration as out of all proportion to the time and kind of service. Whereupon our confreres of the Alabama Advocate say some suggestive things. The stinging rebuke of the following extracts will be commended by all right-thinking persons:

"If this sum, or three times as much, had been paid to lawyers or politicians for as much work done at the bar or on the stump; nothing would have been said about it, except, perhaps, that it was a very poor compensation. Or if a half-nude woman had played in the theater and taken out of town $1,500 or $2,000, the next morning, in all probability, the newspapers would have contained no remarks about the money she received, but would have praised her for the pleasure she had given to a 'refined and cultivated audience.' * * * For such miserable meanness we have an unspeakable contempt, and hope to see the day when the talent, learning, zeal and devotion of the ministers of the gospel will receive such reward as will at least enable them to live in comfort and die without leaving their families in penury."

It is well known that Mr. Cyrus W. Field erected several years ago a monument to Major Andre, of Revolutionary fame, who was condemned and executed as an English spy, on the very spot where he met his death. The story of his life strikingly intermingles the heroic and tragic. He was a brave soldier, and it was with intense sorrow that General Washington consented to his execution. But a monument to his memory here, even after the lapse of an hundred years, has awakened opposition. Twice efforts have been made to destroy it, but without success. Mr. Field and Archdeacon Farrar together visited the spot recently, and at the former's request, the distinguished Englishman wrote the following for the vacant side of the monument:

Brave, gifted, young,
He did and dared all at
his country's bidding,
And died for her sake
a shameful death.

England buried him in Westminster abbey,
Washington mourned for his hard fate and generous of America which honors her own Nathan Hale.
Raises this monument on the spot where his gibbet stood and his body lay.

Two Church Dedications in One Day.

The spirit of church extension is growing apace among "the people called Methodists." They are no longer willing to wink at the time of past indifference, and are determined to dwell under their own tabernacles. The days of union churches and the school-house as a place of worship are gone to return no more forever. Too long have our capacious powers as a church been confined in those "pent-up-uticas." We can not develop a normal family life in a boarding-house. Nor can a church thrive in tents and borrowed rooms. To emphasize the methods peculiar to our Methodism, and which have given us greatness, we must have our own ecclesiastical homes, and under our own disciplinary rules and regulations. The restoration of Israel was impossible so long as her temple was destroyed and her altars laid waste. Dwellers in tents are never pure patriots. Attachment to the soil and ownership of a home are the inspiration of the loftiest patriotism. We rejoice, therefore, in the Nehemiah spirit of our Methodism. It is prophecy of permanency and the guarantee of growth. Pastors are unusually zealous in building and improving churches and parsonages, and, in consequence, Zion is putting on her "beautiful garments."

These reflections were occasioned by our observations and labors on last Sabbath. In response to an invitation from the pastor, Rev. J. T. Nicolson, we had the pleasure of dedicating the new church at Muddy Springs, four miles west of Magnolia, in the morning, and of rededicating the remodeled and refurbished church in the town of Magnolia in the evening, with a lecture on temperance sandwiched in the afternoon. The day was warm and bright, and the congregations at each service large and attentive. For years the little company at Muddy Springs had worshiped in an inferior, uncomfortable house "under the hill." But at length, under the leadership of their present pastor, a neat frame chapel has been erected on a commanding elevation, which is "beautiful for situation" and the joy of the whole neighborhood. Around the entire building luxuriant live oaks have been planted, promising in the near future additional attractiveness and comfort to the location. The church was dedicated free of debt; but so opportune an occasion for a good collection was not to be unimproved. So the congregation was asked to pay in full all the Conference assessments, which was done in a little while, and everybody felt happy.

Returning to Magnolia for dinner, we were soon conducted to the church for a lecture on temperance. A large audience gave diligent heed to an earnest exhortation on the liveest public question of the day. Our friends there are united and active, and hope to achieve a victory over every effort to reopen the saloons. That town is an all-sufficient argument against the statement that prohibition destroys the business of a community. During the present season, without a saloon, the cotton shipments from Magnolia have increased about seven hundred bales over last year. That kind of injury would be a timely help to some whisky towns of our acquaintance.

In the evening a vet congregation crowded the church to its utmost capacity to witness the formal reopening and rededication services. About eight hundred dollars had been expended on the building, adding greatly to its appearance and appointments. But for its rather inconvenient distance from the center of the town the brethren would be entirely content with their estate.

This is the fourth consecutive year the present pastor has served that people, and, in obedience to the statute of limitation, must soon bid them adieu. In all respects his quadrennium has been a grateful, joyous success. Two new churches—one at McComb City, and one at Muddy Springs—have been built and the house at Magnolia repaired—all at a cost of $4,000. Two hundred and eighteen members have been added to the church, and the several connectional collections have steadily improved. No wonder the people feel sad at the hour of parting.

In his recent lecture on Browning, Archdeacon Farrar is reported to have said:

"He is essentially the poet of humanity. His contempt of Byron is due to the fact that the latter speaks falsely of mankind. In all of Browning's poems there is something, as Mr. Lowell has said, that makes for religion, devotion, and self-sacrifice. His teaching is better, braver, manlier, more cheerful, more healthy, and more religious than all that has ever before passed for poetry. He is pre-eminently a poet of conscience, a poet of love, and a poet of true religion."

An American Westminster.

In a recent magazine article Archdeacon Farrar makes an earnest plea for a Westminster Abbey in the United States. He is of the opinion that it would prove a patriotic and educational stimulus to the whole country. There is plausibility in the suggestion, and truth as to its effect upon our national life; but a chief embarrassment to the enterprise we have no state church. Our profound convictions concerning, and traditional jealousy of, the entire separation of Church and State would prevent the enterprise being modeled after England's grand mausoleum. But whatever the fruition of such a hope, it has occasioned some fine writing by our distinguished visitor. We quote some passages from his article:

"All your history would gradually crystallize round such a nucleus. It would become the eternal memorial of your fame. Ingenious youth would there find the cenotaphs of men like Raleigh and Penn. and Gov. Bradford and Miles Standish; and the names of the Pilgrim Fathers; and busts and statues of the civil and military heroes of the War of Independence—of Jefferson and Otis, and Patrick Henry and George Washington; and the heroes and martyred President of your Civil War. Just as the church of 'St. Paul outside the walls of Rome' has medallions of the long lines of Popes down ward from St. Peter, so your Valhalla would have pictures of the lengthening line of Presidents from Washington. And there would be the sculptured features of your sweet singers, Bryant and Longfellow; and your eminent thinkers, Thoreau and Emerson; and of your great historians, Washington Irving and Prescott and Motley; and of such orators as Henry Clay and Daniel Webster; and of your men of genius like Nathaniel Hawthorne and Edgar Poe; and of your great theologians, Jonathan Edwards and Channing; and of your earliest Bishops like Seabury and White. And there, when they sink to the grave, full of years and full of honor, would be placed in due time the memorials of such writers as Bancroft and Parkman, and Lowell and Whittier and Holmes."

Letter from Bishop Keener.

THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE OF 1885.

The Virginia Conference closed its session in this place on Tuesday night, at ten o'clock. It met on the previous Wednesday—that is, all the Examining Committees and Boards and members generally were on the spot just a week. The classes are reported upon Friday and Saturday. This prompt beginning and limit of a body so large lightens much the burden of its entertainment. The attendance was unusually large. The hospitality was worthy of a people so famed for an open house and a hearty welcome. The strength of Methodism in the State may be estimated by the statistics of the Conference, though it occupies not more than two-thirds of Virginia. I was in this classic place and in this house, when the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, first met in 1846, when Bishop Paine and Capers were elected and ordained. The noble forms of Soule and his colleague, James O. Andrew, rose before me as I opened the Conference. The entire sum raised for all purposes was $339,994 78, which is an average per member of $5 30. There were 2,364 conversions reported from among the Sabbath-school children, and only five schools in the entire body who used other Sunday-school literature than our own. The increase in membership was over 2,000. Much time was given to the affairs of Randolph-Macon College, and it was well spent. That noble institution has at last been taken in hand by the principal stations and towns of the Conference, and will presently be endowed by them with one hundred thousand dollars. Institutions which have become venerable by reason of age and service deserve the attention and liberal support of our church members. This Conference provides nobly for the superannuated and widows and orphans of the body. In this it follows the lead of Louisiana. The vote on the change of name occupied only the time necessary to the ceiling of the roll. With the notable exception of one "yes," the whole Conference voted against any change of name. Requiescat in pace. The ministers elected to the General Conference are J. E. Edwards, R. N. Sledd, W. W. Bennett, J. D. Blackwell, Paul Whitehead, P. A. Petersen, J. J. LaFerty; alternates—L. S. Reed, A. G. Brown, Laymen—W. W. Walker, Richard Irby, L. L. Marks, R. W. Peatross, W. T. Chandler, Thomas W. Mason, W. W. Berry; alternates—W. M. Jones, James Cameron, C. B. Winfree.

The number of preachers received on trial was small. There is danger of discouraging young men of plain education who are moved to enter the ministry. As our colleges increase we shall lose vigor if we do not guard this point. Self-reliance, aggressive force, knowledge of men and common sense are frequently with the untrained youth of moderate opportunities, and are qualities, when baptized with the Spirit of Christ, which fully compensate for the lack of higher education in achieving the conquest of this rough world.

The singing of this body is a delight. There are several members of the body highly gifted in the divine art of song. I am not surprised that the galleries are crowded, and that the Methodists of Virginia literally feast their souls on spiritual food during a Conference session. May it be so everywhere and always! I enclose you a list of appointments.

PETERSBURG, VA., Nov. 18, 1885.

The Valley, Agriculturally and Spiritually.

I have recently visited that portion of Mississippi in which "the wilderness has become a fruitful field, and the fruitful field may be counted for a forest"—a literal fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy. I wish I could say that "the Spirit has been poured upon us from on high," and that the prophet's vision is being fulfilled in its more glorious spiritual import in the region of which I speak. But does not the physical naturally precede the spiritual—at least, in manifestation? Are not visible things often the shadows of the invisible—the tangible forms in which unseen powers stamp their impress upon the senses of men? The supernatural is close above the natural, as the type above the letter? The literal fulfillment of prophecy constantly precedes and betokens its spiritual realization. What civil engineer of our day could so briefly and accurately describe a railroad as did this same Prophet Isaiah more than twenty-five hundred years before the first railroad was ever built? Hear him: "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain." This is to facilitate the coming of the Lord that all flesh may see him together. Who can doubt that railroad making shall mightily hasten the spiritual coming of Christ?

Yes, the wildernesses of the great Mississippi Valley are being rapidly turned into fruitful fields, and the fruitful fields of cotton may be counted for forests. As I rode along by the growing cotton, the top of my hoisted umbrella scarcely reached the height of the stalks. Where the leaves had been eaten off by worms, and the bolls were well open, the broad fields seen by moonlight appeared like vast brushy plains covered to the depth of three or four feet with snow. Negroes congregate in great numbers in this valley, and but for overflows it would rapidly become the home of the great body of that race in America. They have here fairly good health, and find their labor far more profitable than in, perhaps, any other part of the world. One or two hundred years hence seven-tenths of the negroes on this continent will probably be found in this valley making cotton for all the nations of the earth. Only water has heretofore hindered the clearing and cultivation of this vast region. Now, however, the levees are maintained with greater care, and experience shows that as land is opened the remainder dries more rapidly, so that there is not so much difference between high land and low as was once thought. When a great overflow comes it covers all the land, and when there is no overflow almost every part of the valley is dry enough for cultivation. Some planters, too, are at last taking a hint from their predecessors, the mound builders, and learning that with a moderate expense they can throw up mounds of sufficient size and height to save their stock, provisions and laborers from damage or destruction by overflows.

Railroads are also being constructed in this valley so rapidly that one can scarcely keep up with their names and directions. Cars are now transferred across the river by boats, by the dozen at a trip, at Vicksburg and at several other places. The result of all this will be the transformation of this valley from a sparsely settled region into one of the most populous portions of the globe. The valley of the Nile had its day of greatness; the valley of the Mississippi may be expected to occupy in the near future a place far more important in all that pertains to the welfare of man than Egypt's fertile valley ever reached.

Thus shall the way be prepared for the church of God. Hitherto the land in this valley has been owned almost exclusively by large planters who did not, as a rule, reside upon their plantations. The whole population was made up of negroes and a few unmarried white agents or managers. Now white families are moving in and opening many small places. For more than thirty years the Methodist Church has been sending missionaries to whites and blacks in this valley. She has yet only a few parsonages and churches; but the number is increasing. The people are learning that the church wants a title to land before she builds a house on it, and that what are called union churches are as inexpedient as union plantations would be. Twenty new churches and, at least, three parsonages are wanted on the Vicksburg district, and are under more or less active contemplation. We are stressing the matter of house building, and are expecting the Lord to come and dwell with us when we have made ready his sanctuaries.

W. L. C. H.

Methodism and the Nation.

The Methodist Times, of London, is a free lance in denominational journalism. With a boldness not indigenous to conservative English thought, its mind is spoken on all great social, moral and religious questions. Already its influence has become potential in national affairs, and its brilliant editor, Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, is one of the most popular of Exeter Hall speakers. In a recent editorial on church disestablishment, he boldly charged that Drs. Osborn and Rigg did not represent Methodist sentiment on that question. Strange to say, they favor the union of Church and State and deprecate the disestablishment agitation. On the progressive spirit of Methodism on both sides of the sea, he has this to say:

"The great dignitaries of the establishment look with regret and alarm at the swift advance of democracy. They know, like Lord Derby, that social and ecclesiastical privileges can not be permanent in a democratic country. Happily there is nothing in Methodism to prevent us from receiving the new democracy with open arms. Indeed, the greatest triumphs of Methodism have been achieved in the democratic communities of Englishmen beyond the seas. Methodism flourishes most vigorously in the free and bracing atmosphere of the United States and the British colonies. We believe that the political and social changes which are now passing over England will give us such an opportunity in this country as we have never yet enjoyed. We are devoutly thankful for many signs that the Methodist Church of Great Britain is realizing her duty to the British nation. Rev. Charles Garrett's temperance manifesto, which is selling by tens of thousands, the numerous resolutions of district and quarterly meetings in favor of Mr. Stead's crusade, the practical and fearless teaching of our pulpits reviving the characteristic features of John Wesley's ministry, and, above all, Rev. William Arthur's 'Word to the electors of 1885,' prove that Methodism is rousing herself to a Christlike activity worthy of this great hour in our national history. Nothing could be more timely or more useful than the political address which Mr. Arthur is publishing. It begins by reminding us of the startling fact that the next parliament will represent not blades of grass, but families. The franchise, therefore, ceases to be material; it has become moral."

A Methodist Church Congress.

Studying the Church Congress as one of the latest developments of the spirit of religious and ecclesiastical inquiry, leads the Central Christian Advocate to suggest the feasibility of a Methodist Church Congress. There is timeliness in the suggestion, and we give it cordial approval. In no way has the Episcopal Church so caught the public ear, and evidenced a desire to be abreast of current thought and control it to the glory of God, as by this Church Congress. The largest liberty of opinion is allowed in all discussions of social and religious problems, and the holiest inquiry encouraged. Such a movement would be helpful to our Methodism in many ways. We need a freer interchange of thought between latitudes and longitudes in the interest of ecclesiastical unity.

Why should we not have an American Methodist Church Congress? We have had an Ecumenical Conference of all the Methodist organizations, and a Centennial Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in both of which we emphasized our points of agreement and preserved a brotherly silence on our differences. The general impression is these assemblies have been of inestimable value. We found ourselves so nearly one in heart and thought that we could hardly refrain from asking, Why are we not one in organization? There was such closeness of Christian fellowship and sincerity of brotherly regard among those who had stood apart that it was no small happiness simply to sit together. It was no doubt, wise that Conferences constituted as these were should not discuss differences of church organization, which are nearly the only Methodist differences. But there are no good reasons why the differences and certain tendencies in Methodism at large should not be thoroughly canvassed and discussed by a company of representative, fair-minded men of the various Methodist organizations. We are sure that misunderstandings would be dispelled, and that we should find ourselves nearer together by a frank interchange of thought on our differences, and that we should enable each other to arrive at more correct judgments. Some of our differences have been little more than the hasty methods of developments pursued by earnest men who were hardly treated with the consideration which they deserved. Time and thoughtfulness have placed them in new lights.

Why, then, we ask again, should not the representative men of American Methodism take advantage of the example furnished by the Church Congress? No other churches more clearly recognize the principle of church development and the wisdom of observing the presence of the Holy Spirit and the leadings of the divine Providence. Meeting on a common ground, to discuss the questions of the time on their merits, we should at least improve in Christian charity and Christian fellowship.

The Great Prohibition Fight in Atlanta.

MR. EDITOR: I know you delight to chronicle all events of battle against the devil. We are now in the midst of a hard fight. The lovers of truth, honor, sobriety, virtue, morality, etc., on one side, and the lovers and doers of evil on the other: the cause of God against the devil in the shape of whisky. Every indication points to victory for us. Can we not sing glory to God on high when our fair city is redeemed from the red-eyed monster—a demon more powerful than all others. In fact, I might say, the father of all other evils. Only a few days await the marching of the forces for the onslaught. Our banner of pure white will be lifted on high on the morning of the twenty-fifth instant. It leads a host guided by Jehovah against a host, with a banner blacker than night, guided by the archfiend of damnation.

Who shall win? God is on our side. Who shall be against us? The prayers of the good people of this city ascend daily to the throne of mercy for deliverance from this curse of all curses. We have found one thing in the way of our meetings, and that is, there is no place in the city large enough to hold the crowds that gather to hear the grand speeches in behalf of our cause. We procure Sam Jones' big tent after his meeting closed in Birmingham, and with it the persons of the two Sams. Last night the tent was full to running over by about one thousand; so even that does not give us room enough.

The ladies are not only meeting daily to pray for the cause, but they attend our meetings and work side by side with their husbands, brothers, sons and friends. What a power! With God and the women for us need we fear? No; we go forth, feeling nothing, but work with songs triumphant swelling up in our throats. Every reader of the Advocate can help us by sending daily—yes, hourly prayers to God for our deliverance.

The presence of our two strong Sams is cheered to the echo. Let one of them show himself at a meeting, and everything must hold until the deafening sounds die away. A touching introduction was that by Mr. Campbell Wallace, a man known of all Georgians, the president of the State Railroad Commission, of Sam Small to a large meeting a few nights ago. After a member of each of the illustrious families of Jackson, Hill and Milledge had spoken Mr. Wallace led Sam Small out, and said: "About thirty years ago I superintended a small Sabbath-school. To that school a gray-headed grandfather used to lead his little grandson, who grew to manhood with a brilliant intellect, but who went down to the lowest plane of debauchery; but now I thank God have lived to see the day when I can introduce that boy and man as a devout servant of God and as a speaker against the power of whisky."

Knowing Sam Small as we do, and where he once was, but is now, there was not a dry eye in the house. How grandly and elegantly did he fight the demon of demons! Will not be a thanksgiving to us when we see the sun go down on a city redeemed?

In the terrible fire at Hazlehurst, which destroyed an entire block of buildings, we regret to learn that Sister Lindfeld, the widow of the late Dr. Lindfeld, was one of the sufferers. This is the third time she has been burned out of house and home. A cheerful note from her daughter, Miss Mattie, reports that most of their furniture was saved, and that they are not in need of assistance. They are heroic and self-sustaining, though tenderly appreciative of the loving messages and inquiries received.

—A great Methodist musical jubilee will be held in the Academy of Music, New York, December at half-past seven P. M. Harris will preside, and speeches will be delivered by Dr. J. M. Reel, C. B. Fisk, Dr. J. M. B. Bishop, C. H. Fowler and B. J. ...

Jackson, Tenn., 11:05 A. M.,
Friday, until further notice.
arrangement will, greatly accord date returning Exposition to and Louisiana, Mississippi and neezee land seekers.

J. W. COLEMAN,
Ass't Gen'l Pass, A

Ten- | lot And now such an end
the faith of the pastor none can ever know.
She was loyal to her conv
g't. | and most conscientious in t

but he fictions
he dis-

NEW C

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas

e
 e
 e rce

 w

 A.
 it
 e 12 0, ble
 De-

 =
 =
 S

 E

 'B'

 0000.

 ves.
 a

 ANY Re-or
 ,000.
 e rable nt.
 iama
 ns.

Christian Advocate.

Marriages.

YOUNG-KENNARD—At the residence of the bride's parents, October 29, 1885, by Rev. J. A. H. Jones, Mr. W. L. Young, of Lexington, Miss., and Miss Florence P. Kennard, of Port Gibson, Miss.

DRAY-SINGULAR—In the Methodist Church, at Thibodaux, Miss., November 11, 1885, by Rev. E. G. H. H. Dray, Mr. R. L. Drake, of Verona, Miss., to Miss Clara B. Singular, of West Point.

WATKINS-ROBB—At the residence of the bride's father, November 1, 1885, by Rev. H. R. Caldwell, Mr. O. F. Pittman to Miss Lizzie L. Robb.

HUGG-LOTT—At the residence of the bride's father, November 6, 1885, by Rev. H. R. Caldwell, Mr. R. M. Hugg, of Byram, Miss., to Miss Gussie A. Lott, of Spring Ridge, Miss.

Obituaries.

WILLIAMS—Sister Hannah E. Williams, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Williams, was born in Franklin county, Miss., November 27, 1799, and fell asleep in Jesus, Tuesday morning, October 6, 1885.

"Like the setting of a morning star," the light of her life melted imperceptibly into the effulgence of a glorious dawn, where the Sun of Righteousness forever "scattered night away." She embraced religion and joined the Methodist Church in her young womanhood. Her conversation throughout her life was marked by the truth of her profession. Not demonstrative in disposition, she was seldom heard to speak in religious meetings. But she often spoke to the young in loving tones of their religious interests. Her disposition was amiable without weakness. Grace refined her soul till she was eminently patient and even-tempered. Perhaps her most striking characteristic was her thoughtfulness for the comfort and welfare of others. Her doubts, grew out of her constancy in Bible reading. She studied and expounded the example of him who came "not to his ministers unto, but to minister." This was her heart and compass. So she passed "through peace to light."

At the age of forty-two she was happily united to Mr. Electus Williams, of Hamburg, Franklin county, Miss.,—"Uncle Lecky," as he was affectionately called in the neighborhood. (He preceded her many years to the heavenly inheritance, dying at a good old age.) She was his second wife, and he had children of his former marriage to be trained. This delicate office of step-mother she filled with wonderful fidelity. It is believed that in all this country there was not such another untroubled and practically faultless step-mother. She had no children of her own; but her "John C. Williams," tells me that he knew no difference in affection between her and an own mother. The grandchildren, who were all devotedly attached to her, could hardly be persuaded that she was not their real ancestor.

Her remains lie in the old homestead under care of this loving and attentive son, helping to train the rising generation, honored and beloved of all, till the Master bade her "come up higher."

Visiting her the day before her release, I found her calmly reposing on the great and precious promises. Her vital powers almost exhausted with age, for she was nearly eighty-six, and her mind was still strong enough to choose the hymn we should sing. Tears of grateful joy and hallowed adoration coursed down her face. Her heavenly smile and benediction will long be remembered by a loving pastor.

BROOKS—On the 5th of August, 1885, the shadow of death fell on the Christianized heart of that widely-known and well-beloved minister of Christ, Rev. Joseph H. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference, and his son, Thomas Tate Brooks, was called home.

Many hearts of loving friends were touched by the grief of that sudden loss. But thank God, "the sorrow not as those who have no hope."

Thomas Tate Brooks was born in the city of Memphis, April 23, 1853, during his father's pastorate at Asbury, now Herndon Street Church. He was baptized by Rev. Moses Brock.

When quite young, he professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Sylvestria, near Holly Springs, Miss., at a meeting held by Rev. John Moss, then presiding elder on Holly Springs district.

He was attentive to duty, and enjoyed religion till his father left Sylvestria.

In a new community he formed acquaintances that led him first to neglect religious duty, then to the loss of religious enjoyment, and finally to a temporary withdrawal from the church. But prayer prevailed, and that noble trait, love of parents, was so strong that he could not be lured out of his parents' church. "The church our blessed Redeemer bought with his own precious blood."

More than three years ago he renewed his covenant with God, and onward lived a life of faith that gave the victory over death.

His trial was beautiful. What a crown of glory to his young manhood! I never saw his thoughtfulness to take every care and burden off of his father and mother surpassed. The spirit of our holy religion prevailed in his family life. Father, mother, sisters and brothers all felt the sweet influence, nor did visiting friends fail to feel its gentleness.

The family are gathering home. May heaven's choicest blessing still attend those who are following on.

W. P. HANTON.

STUART—Mrs. M. C. Stuart (nee Mayes) was born June 23, 1823, and died September 15, 1885. She was married January 17, 1839, to Ben. C. Stuart, who, less than a year ago, preceded her to the grave. Theirs was a long and happy life, over fifty years of which were in the Methodist Church, Wilkinson county, Miss. We may think of them as reunited forever. Seven sons and a daughter were the fruit of their union. Of this family of ten, father, mother, two sons and the daughter have been taken within two or three years. How grievously does death sometimes do its work! Five manly and Christian sons remain to mourn these heavy losses, but not as those without hope.

Mrs. Stuart was a devout Christian and, consequently, one of the best of mothers and wives. From her emanated an influence for good in the household—its strength and ornament. Amidst afflictions and reverses, the hours of loving ones clung to wife and mother as the angel that bound them to heaven. She died, an exceedingly happy and glorious death. Her earnest, far-reaching exhortations to the strong men (her sons) who stood by her bed and promised to meet her in heaven, will linger about their hearts as the fondest of memories. Her name is as sweet incense to children and grandchildren. Let God be praised and glorified.

THOS. W. BROWN.

PARKER—JAMES A. PARKER was born July 4, 1801, and died October 25, 1885.

Our young brother had been serious and thoughtful upon the subject of religion for several weeks previous to his death, and having been deeply impressed at a camp meeting held at Tabernacle in North Alabama Conference, where he witnessed wonderful displays of Divine power and the conversion of several of his associates, he determined to become a Christian. And about three weeks and a half before his death, under the preaching of the gospel of Christ, these serious impressions resulted in his conversion, and he at once took a decided stand upon the side of God by uniting with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and maintained his Christian integrity until God called him home.

There was not so much demonstration in his conversion, but the change wrought in his life witnessed the genuineness of his religion.

It was hard to see one so young die, and to witness his extreme suffering, yet all have the consolation that he is saved. The hand of Providence was in it all, and he has a wise purpose in the end, where the witnessing of God rest upon the mother and brother who have been left to weep the early departure of their loved one.

HESLER H. TUCKER.

HOSBA—Mrs. SARAH A. HOSBA, wife of Rev. O. F. Hosba, was born in Alabama, March 22, 1833. In her infancy her parents moved to Holmes county, Miss., of which she was a citizen the balance of her life. At the age of fifteen she professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at Emory, of which she continued a faithful, acceptable member to the day of her death. At the same altar in July, 1852, she was united in matrimony to the Rev. O. F. Hosba. At 4:15 o'clock of the afternoon of September 19, 1885, Sister Hosba died in peace, and before the sun went down her spirit was on its flight to the climes of life and immortality.

On Sunday, September 27, the writer preached Sister Hosba's funeral at Emory to a large sympathizing congregation.

Sister Hosba was the mother of twelve children, six on earth and six in heaven. As a loving Christian and the great desire of her heart, and to this end she labored earnestly while she lived on earth. Her husband says she was a steadfast, unmovable, always shining in the work of the Lord.

Sister Hosba seemed to have a premonition that her days were few on earth. The day before she took her bed in her last illness, she said: "I feel that I shall not live to see the next frost," but added, "I am prepared for the change."

The gently influence left on the family yet cause her children to "rise up and call her blessed," her husband also, and praised her. A sweet remembrance is looked for by the family and friends on the shining shore. Her pastor,

G. W. BROWN.

McSPADDEN—SAMUEL N. McSPADDEN was a true man, in the strictest sense of that term; true to his family, his country and his God. True to his church, his pastor and his pastor's family. He was a good steward and trustee, and a liberal giver to the Lord. He was a comfort to his pastor, and a strong pillar to the church. He was transparent, frank and faithful.

Bro. McSpadden was a man of prayer, not eloquent in the common acceptance of the term, and yet he was eloquent in a theological and Biblical sense, because he was simple in words, pointed in position, sympathetically to tears, and full of faith in his Lord.

Bro. McSpadden was born in Willson county, Tenn., August 26, 1824; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Opelousas, La., in 1877; was soundly converted to God at the time of his accession. He was a blessing to the church at Opelousas during his entire stay with them. He removed to Texas in search of health in 1883, and there died near Duck Hill Church, on the Lord's day, August 30, 1885. His funeral was largely attended, and his pastor, Rev. J. L. Alderson, said the last words over his mortal remains.

He leaves a devoted wife, some relations, a score of friends and the church to mourn his loss. We do not sorrow as those who have no hope. Our brother is in heaven.

T. J. BOUGH.

WHEELER—W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing Goods, Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS. Stoves, Grates, House-furnishing Hardware. IRON and SLATE MANTLES. GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES. Ornamental Work. GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING. GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION. I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country. The best stove in the market is the Celebrated CHAMPION MONITOR. I have stoves varying in prices from $10 to $100. J. H. CAMPBELL, 101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE, Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cordage. Ammunition, Hammocks, Buss Balls & Bats, Ice Cream Freezers, Bath Tubs, Oil Stoves, Baskets, all kinds, Soap, Stationery, Extractions, Water Coolers, Fishing Tackle, Whips, etc., etc. Holman's Earthenware Cooking Crocks. Send for new catalogue.

J. C. MORRIS, 40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

B. D. WOOD & BROS., Dealers in Best Quality of COAL and COKE, 47 Camp Street, New Orleans. Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

OFFICE OF TUGBOATS, Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood, Mamie Wood, Will H. Wood.

THE "IVORY" is a Laundry Soap, with all the qualities of a choice Toilet Soap, and is 44-100 per cent. pure. Ladies will find this Soap especially adapted for washing laces, infants' clothing, silk hose, cleaning gloves and all articles of fine texture and delicate color, and for the varied uses about the house that daily require the use of soap that is above the ordinary in quality.

For the Bath, Toilet or Nursery, it is preferred to most of the Soaps sold for toilet use, being purer and much more pleasant and effective, and possessing all the desirable properties of the finest unadulterated White Castile Soap. The Ivory Soap will "float." The cakes are so shaped that they may be used either for general purposes, or divided into two perfectly formed cakes, of convenient size for toilet use.

The price, compared to the quality and the size of the cakes, makes it the cheapest Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

CLARK—JULIA, daughter of J. H. and Fannie Clark, died of black jaundice, September 23, 1885, aged twelve years, four months and nine days.

Thus passed away this most loving child. Too delicate for earth, she was transplanted by the Master to a fairer clime. At an early age she evinced a pious spirit, and when only ten years old, joined the Methodist Church. Fearing her tender years rendered her incapable of comprehending the grave responsibilities she was about to assume, her parents interrogated her, concerning the step she wished to take. Unflinchingly came the answers to their questions, till all doubts were dispelled, and she was allowed to enlist under the Saviour's banner, "because she loved him."

Her devotion to her parents was beyond the common range, though other children, solitudes and loving, were ready to stand any and every kind of greeting was ever the first to await the father on his home coming. Her hands were the first to lend him willing assistance, and, as if unable to restrain a loving impulse, she would often stand near soothing him with fond caresses, as he rested in quiet converse with the family.

When the mother worked, Julia delighted in assisting with knitting or sewing, never better pleased than when knowing she helped the sewing fingers that had worked so long for others.

During the brief but severe illness that tore her from the bosom of a devoted family, she evinced the same courage she had shown in every undertaking of her child life. No clouds of unconsciousness obscured the calm mind, and on the approach of the dread messenger, the father asked, "My child, are you ready to meet Jesus?" and the willing lips said, "Yes, sir."

"Have you no fear of death?" he said; and, as if intending to express only a regret at leaving the dear ones, her little arms stole lovingly around him, and as firmly as before, she answered: "No, sir."

With the dawning of a new day, the gentle spirit took its flight to a better world. And now, bereaved parents, and you, devoted sisters and brothers, that sweet greeting awaits you at the "golden gates" up yonder. May you, when called upon, be able to answer, "Ready."

A FRIEND.

YOUNG—MRS. MARTHA CARABINE YOUNG was born in Pickens county, South Carolina, November 14, 1808, and departed this life August 5, 1885, at her home in Sarepta, Calhoun county, Miss., after a short illness. She was married to Jones Young, March 11, 1835. She lived a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for more than fifty years. She was often tried in the way, but never of the way. She was a devoted Christian, a kind mother and good neighbor. She leaves many friends to mourn after her.

May God bless her children and friends, and give them grace to bear their affliction.

H. C. CALLAWAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

One Million Specimen Copies Free

OF THE Youth's Companion

If you wish to examine the paper, send your full name and address to the publishers.

Published Weekly. Circulation 350,000 copies. Only $1.75 a year.

New Subscriptions sent at once, with $1.75, will include the paper FREE from the time the subscription is received to Jan. 1, 1886, and a full year's subscription from that date. Mention this Paper. Address

PERRY MASON & CO., Publishers, 41 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

We hereby announce that from this date we offer our whole stock of Merchandise on hand and to arrive, amounting to near one million dollars, at and BELOW COST. Such an occasion for purchasing first-class Dry Goods, at unprecedentedly low figures, may not occur once in a lifetime.

All Goods are marked in plain figures.

155 Canal St.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, and to acquire popular and attractive books as Hon. Alex. H. Stephens' "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix; "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR;" "BURIED CITIES RECOVERED;"—one of the best and latest selling religious books. Also fine Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription. Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., RICHMOND, VA.

The Southern Insurance Company, OF NEW ORLEANS. Office, No. 31 Camp Street.

Capital Subscribed $200,000.00. Paid in $100,000.00. Assets, Jan. 1, 1885, $21,700.07.

Fire, Marine and Marine Insurance at fair and equitable rates. Losses promptly adjusted and paid. Ample security offered to insured both by the resources and conservative policy of the company.

ERNEST MILTNERBERGER, President. H. SALLY, Vice-President. SCOTT McGRIBBE, Secretary.

Finance Committee: John T. Moore, Jr., M. Schwabacher, J. H. Menge, Louis Bush, J. A. Lafaye.

WATCHES. We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12. Key-winding Gold Watches at $15 to $25. Stem-winding Gold Watches at $15 and upwards. All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co., 110 Canal Street, New Orleans.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing Goods.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Stoves, Grates, House-furnishing Hardware. IRON and SLATE MANTLES. GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES. Ornamental Work. GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING. GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION. I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country. The best stove in the market is the Celebrated CHAMPION MONITOR. I have stoves varying in prices from $10 to $100. J. H. CAMPBELL, 101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE, Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cordage. Ammunition, Hammocks, Buss Balls & Bats, Ice Cream Freezers, Bath Tubs, Oil Stoves, Baskets, all kinds, Soap, Stationery, Extractions, Water Coolers, Fishing Tackle, Whips, etc., etc. Holman's Earthenware Cooking Crocks. Send for new catalogue.

J. C. MORRIS, 40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

B. D. WOOD & BROS., Dealers in Best Quality of COAL and COKE, 47 Camp Street, New Orleans. Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

OFFICE OF TUGBOATS, Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood, Mamie Wood, Will H. Wood.

THE "IVORY" is a Laundry Soap, with all the qualities of a choice Toilet Soap, and is 44-100 per cent. pure. Ladies will find this Soap especially adapted for washing laces, infants' clothing, silk hose, cleaning gloves and all articles of fine texture and delicate color, and for the varied uses about the house that daily require the use of soap that is above the ordinary in quality.

For the Bath, Toilet or Nursery, it is preferred to most of the Soaps sold for toilet use, being purer and much more pleasant and effective, and possessing all the desirable properties of the finest unadulterated White Castile Soap. The Ivory Soap will "float." The cakes are so shaped that they may be used either for general purposes, or divided into two perfectly formed cakes, of convenient size for toilet use.

The price, compared to the quality and the size of the cakes, makes it the cheapest Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

CLARK—JULIA, daughter of J. H. and Fannie Clark, died of black jaundice, September 23, 1885, aged twelve years, four months and nine days.

Thus passed away this most loving child. Too delicate for earth, she was transplanted by the Master to a fairer clime. At an early age she evinced a pious spirit, and when only ten years old, joined the Methodist Church. Fearing her tender years rendered her incapable of comprehending the grave responsibilities she was about to assume, her parents interrogated her, concerning the step she wished to take. Unflinchingly came the answers to their questions, till all doubts were dispelled, and she was allowed to enlist under the Saviour's banner, "because she loved him."

Her devotion to her parents was beyond the common range, though other children, solitudes and loving, were ready to stand any and every kind of greeting was ever the first to await the father on his home coming. Her hands were the first to lend him willing assistance, and, as if unable to restrain a loving impulse, she would often stand near soothing him with fond caresses, as he rested in quiet converse with the family.

When the mother worked, Julia delighted in assisting with knitting or sewing, never better pleased than when knowing she helped the sewing fingers that had worked so long for others.

During the brief but severe illness that tore her from the bosom of a devoted family, she evinced the same courage she had shown in every undertaking of her child life. No clouds of unconsciousness obscured the calm mind, and on the approach of the dread messenger, the father asked, "My child, are you ready to meet Jesus?" and the willing lips said, "Yes, sir."

"Have you no fear of death?" he said; and, as if intending to express only a regret at leaving the dear ones, her little arms stole lovingly around him, and as firmly as before, she answered: "No, sir."

With the dawning of a new day, the gentle spirit took its flight to a better world. And now, bereaved parents, and you, devoted sisters and brothers, that sweet greeting awaits you at the "golden gates" up yonder. May you, when called upon, be able to answer, "Ready."

A FRIEND.

YOUNG—MRS. MARTHA CARABINE YOUNG was born in Pickens county, South Carolina, November 14, 1808, and departed this life August 5, 1885, at her home in Sarepta, Calhoun county, Miss., after a short illness. She was married to Jones Young, March 11, 1835. She lived a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for more than fifty years. She was often tried in the way, but never of the way. She was a devoted Christian, a kind mother and good neighbor. She leaves many friends to mourn after her.

May God bless her children and friends, and give them grace to bear their affliction.

H. C. CALLAWAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LEMON ELIXIR. Cures Indigestion, headache, malarial, bilious disease, fever, chills, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration by regulating the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood.

Lemon Elixir is prepared from the fresh juice of Lemons, combined with other vegetable liver tonics, cathartics, aromatic stimulants and blood purifiers. Fifty cents for one half-pint bottle. $1 for Pint and 50¢ for 50¢ bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by all wholesale druggists.

Lemon Hot Drops. Cures all Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, Asthma, Hay Fever, and all Lung diseases, except Consumption, which disease it palliates and greatly relieves. Price, 50 cents. Lemon Elixir and Lemon Hot Drops. Sold by druggists generally, and by all wholesale druggists.

Prepared by Dr. H. M. MOORE, Atlanta, Ga.

WATCHES. We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12. Key-winding Gold Watches at $15 to $25. Stem-winding Gold Watches at $15 and upwards. All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co., 110 Canal Street, New Orleans.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing Goods.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Stoves, Grates, House-furnishing Hardware. IRON and SLATE MANTLES. GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES. Ornamental Work. GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING. GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION. I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country. The best stove in the market is the Celebrated CHAMPION MONITOR. I have stoves varying in prices from $10 to $100. J. H. CAMPBELL, 101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE, Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cordage. Ammunition, Hammocks, Buss Balls & Bats, Ice Cream Freezers, Bath Tubs, Oil Stoves, Baskets, all kinds, Soap, Stationery, Extractions, Water Coolers, Fishing Tackle, Whips, etc., etc. Holman's Earthenware Cooking Crocks. Send for new catalogue.

J. C. MORRIS, 40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

B. D. WOOD & BROS., Dealers in Best Quality of COAL and COKE, 47 Camp Street, New Orleans. Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

OFFICE OF TUGBOATS, Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood, Mamie Wood, Will H. Wood.

THE "IVORY" is a Laundry Soap, with all the qualities of a choice Toilet Soap, and is 44-100 per cent. pure. Ladies will find this Soap especially adapted for washing laces, infants' clothing, silk hose, cleaning gloves and all articles of fine texture and delicate color, and for the varied uses about the house that daily require the use of soap that is above the ordinary in quality.

For the Bath, Toilet or Nursery, it is preferred to most of the Soaps sold for toilet use, being purer and much more pleasant and effective, and possessing all the desirable properties of the finest unadulterated White Castile Soap. The Ivory Soap will "float." The cakes are so shaped that they may be used either for general purposes, or divided into two perfectly formed cakes, of convenient size for toilet use.

The price, compared to the quality and the size of the cakes, makes it the cheapest Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. Soap for everybody and every want. Try it. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

CLARK—JULIA, daughter of J. H. and Fannie Clark, died of black jaundice, September 23, 1885, aged twelve years, four months and nine days.

Thus passed away this most loving child. Too delicate for earth, she was transplanted by the Master to a fairer clime. At an early age she evinced a pious spirit, and when only ten years old, joined the Methodist Church. Fearing her tender years rendered her incapable of comprehending the grave responsibilities she was about to assume, her parents interrogated her, concerning the step she wished to take. Unflinchingly came the answers to their questions, till all doubts were dispelled, and she was allowed to enlist under the Saviour's banner, "because she loved him."

Her devotion to her parents was beyond the common range, though other children, solitudes and loving, were ready to stand any and every kind of greeting was ever the first to await the father on his home coming. Her hands were the first to lend him willing assistance, and, as if unable to restrain a loving impulse, she would often stand near soothing him with fond caresses, as he rested in quiet converse with the family.

When the mother worked, Julia delighted in assisting with knitting or sewing, never better pleased than when knowing she helped the sewing fingers that had worked so long for others.

During the brief but severe illness that tore her from the bosom of a devoted family, she evinced the same courage she had shown in every undertaking of her child life. No clouds of unconsciousness obscured the calm mind, and on the approach of the dread messenger, the father asked, "My child, are you ready to meet Jesus?" and the willing lips said, "Yes, sir."

"Have you no fear of death?" he said; and, as if intending to express only a regret at leaving the dear ones, her little arms stole lovingly around him, and as firmly as before, she answered: "No, sir."

With the dawning of a new day, the gentle spirit took its flight to a better world. And now, bereaved parents, and you, devoted sisters and brothers, that sweet greeting awaits you at the "golden gates" up yonder. May you, when called upon, be able to answer, "Ready."

A FRIEND.

YOUNG—MRS. MARTHA CARABINE YOUNG was born in Pickens county, South Carolina, November 14, 1808, and departed this life August 5, 1885, at her home in Sarepta, Calhoun county, Miss., after a short illness. She was married to Jones Young, March 11, 1835. She lived a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for more than fifty years. She was often tried in the way, but never of the way. She was a devoted Christian, a kind mother and good neighbor. She leaves many friends to mourn after her.

May God bless her children and friends, and give them grace to bear their affliction.

H. C. CALLAWAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

One Million Specimen Copies Free

OF THE Youth's Companion

If you wish to examine the paper, send your full name and address to the publishers.

Published Weekly. Circulation 350,000 copies. Only $1.75 a year.

New Subscriptions sent at once, with $1.75, will include the paper FREE from the time the subscription is received to Jan. 1, 1886, and a full year's subscription from that date. Mention this Paper. Address

PERRY MASON & CO., Publishers, 41 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

We hereby announce that from this date we offer our whole stock of Merchandise on hand and to arrive, amounting to near one million dollars, at and BELOW COST. Such an occasion for purchasing first-class Dry Goods, at unprecedentedly low figures, may not occur once in a lifetime.

All Goods are marked in plain figures.

155 Canal St.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, and to acquire popular and attractive books as Hon. Alex. H. Stephens' "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix; "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR;" "BURIED CITIES RECOVERED;"—one of the best and latest selling religious books. Also fine Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription. Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., RICHMOND, VA.

The Southern Insurance Company, OF NEW ORLEANS. Office, No. 31 Camp Street.

Capital Subscribed $200,000.00. Paid in $100,000.00. Assets, Jan. 1, 1885, $21,700.07.

Fire, Marine and Marine Insurance at fair and equitable rates. Losses promptly adjusted and paid. Ample security offered to insured both by the resources and conservative policy of the company.

ERNEST MILTNERBERGER, President. H. SALLY, Vice-President. SCOTT McGRIBBE, Secretary.

Finance Committee: John T. Moore, Jr., M. Schwabacher, J. H. Menge, Louis Bush, J. A. Lafaye.

WATCHES. We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12. Key-winding Gold Watches at $15 to $25. Stem-winding Gold Watches at $15 and upwards. All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co., 110 Canal Street, New Orleans.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing Goods.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 56 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 24, 1885.)

COTTON.

Low ordinary	6 3-16 @
Ordinary	7 3-16
Good ordinary	8 1-16
Low middling	8 1-16
Middling	9 1-16
Good middling	10 1-16
Middling fair	10 1-16
Fair	10 1-16
Galveston middling	9 1-16
Mobile middling	8 1-16
St. Louis middling	8

SUGAR.

Inferior	32	32
Common	44	44
Good common	44	44
Fair	44	44
Good fair	44	44
Fully fair	44	44
Prime	44	44
Strictly Prime	44	44
Choice	44	44
Secundo	44	44
Yellow clarified	5 13-16	5 13-16
Gray clarified	5 13-16	5 13-16
Choice whites	6 1-16	6 1-16
Granulated	6 1-16	6 1-16

MOLASSES.

Syrup	26	38
Fair	26	38
Strictly Prime	41	42
Choice	41	42
Fancy	41	42

RICE.

Fancy	42	51
Choice	42	51
Good	42	51
Fair	42	51
Ordinary	42	51
Common	42	51
No. 2	42	51
Rough	2 00	2 40

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	5 00	—
Minnesota patents	5 00	6 00
Extra fancy	5 25	6 50
Winter wheat patents	6 10	6 25
Choice	4 85	4 85
Fancy	6 05	6 15
Extra Fancy	6 35	6 45

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 00	8 10
Coru meal	2 30	2 35
Grits	3 10	—
Hominy	3 25	—

GRAIN, ETC.

CORN:
White	47	49
Yellow	47	49
Mixed	47	49
OATS:
Western	37 1/2	38
Texas rust-proof	—	39
BRAN:
W. C. W.	57 1/2	10
HAY:
Choice	19 00	20 00
Prime	17 00	18 00

PROVISIONS.

PORE:
Mess	9 62 1/2	—
Prime mess	9 00	—
Rumps	8 75	—
BACON:
Fancy breakfast	9	9 1/2
Shoulders	6 1	—
Sides, clear	6 1	—
Sides, clear rib	6 1	—
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	10 1/2	11 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	4	35
Sides, clear	—	51
Sides, clear rib	—	51

FISH.

MAKRELL:
Extra No. 1, in bbls.	18 00	—
Half bbls.	9 50	—
No. 1, in bbls.	9 50	—
Half bbls.	5 10	—
No. 2, in bbls.	7 75	—
Half bbls.	4 25	—

GROCERIES.

COFFEE:
Rob. choice	94	114
Corvora, choice	12	13
Java, choice	22	23
BUTTER:
Western dairy	15	16
New York dairy	15	16
COUNTRY:
Choice	64	62
Fair	50	50
OLDS:
Coal, cases	17	—
Coal, bbls.	31	—
Cotton seed	31	—
Lard	61	—

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:
Western, per crate	—	—
Chicago, per 100	—	11 00
POTATOES:
Louisiana	1 35	1 00
Western	—	—
KROUT:
5 bbl.	5 50	6 00
ONIONS:
Louisiana	—	—
Western	2 50	—

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING:
11 lb.	104	—
2 lb.	114	—
BALING TWINE:
1 lb.	15	—
TIES:
1 bundle	1 25	—

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	40	4 50
Young	1 50	3 00
Chickens, South'n	3 00	3 25
Young	1 75	2 25
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	12 00
EGGS:
Western	20	22
Southern	21	22
Wool:
Lake	21	21 1/2
Louisiana	21	21 1/2
Burry	10	11
HIDES:
Green salted	8	—
Dry salted	11	—
STAVES:
Oak, legs	—	—
Oak, barrels	75 00	—
Oak, clare	100 00	110 00
Oak, hoghead	130 00	135 00
Hoop Poles:
Hoghead	50 00	—
Barrels	24 00	—
Half barrels	—	—
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	—	10 00
Meal	—	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	2	6
Sulphuric acid	2	4
Bone black	—	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—At yesterday's session the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry elected the following officers for the ensuing two years: Hon. P. Darden, worthy master; J. C. Draper, of Worcester, overseer of the grange; Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey, lecturer; A. J. Rose, of Texas, chaplain; J. E. Hall, of West Virginia, steward; W. H. Stenson, of New Hampshire, assistant steward; F. M. McShirley, of Washington, D. C., secretary; Henry Tompkins, of Delaware, gate keeper; Mrs. Kate Darden, of Mississippi, pomona; Mrs. S. H. Neal, of Kentucky; Mrs. J. S. Jos. C. Draper, of Massachusetts; lady assistant steward, Mrs. E. M. Lipscomb, of South Carolina.

RAYVILLE, La., Nov. 18.—The election held yesterday in Richland parish to determine whether or not spirituous liquors shall be sold in the parish during the ensuing year has resulted in a majority of 316 for license.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—An explosion of a tank of oil at the Philadelphia Lubricating Company Works, at the foot of Moore street, this morning resulted in the death of a man and the probable death of a boy, the seriously injuring of four others and the partial destruction of the establishment.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 18.—A Helena (M. T.) special to the Pioneer Press says: James Dempsey reached this city to-day from Fort McJinnis, and tells a painful story of his two companions being devoured by wolves while on their way across the mountains. Dempsey says he climbed a tree and saw his companions torn to pieces and devoured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—At the meeting of the Medical-Legal Society last night various speakers held that cocaine is a poison and should be so labeled and sold. Prof. Doremus knew a woman who was poisoned to death by cocaine used on an aching tooth.

GALVESTON, Nov. 19.—Contributions continue to flow for the relief of the fire sufferers. The total amount subscribed thus far reaches $85,500, of which $71,500 has been received. The relief committee reports it has relieved 687 applicants, representing 2500 persons.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 19.—An anti-prohibition meeting was held at the courthouse here to-night. The speakers were of the effect that the adoption of prohibition here would not improve the morals of Atlanta, but imperil its material prosperity.

HELENA, Ark., Nov. 19.—Last night at about 10 o'clock the citizens of Helena were aroused by what many of them at first thought to be a very heavy rain storm, but on looking out they were surprised to see a clear sky, filled with what appeared to be snow flakes, and not rain, that was pattering with such force against the roofs and windows of the houses. Investigation proved that the air was filled with (to this locality) an unusual and novel sight. It was that of almost gray space in the air being filled with gray specks. Citizens who have seen the dreaded pest sweep down and consume whole fields in Kansas say that in numbers the violation last night exceeds anything ever seen in that country tenfold. They were passing from east to west. Great numbers of the birds appeared to be flying against buildings and other obstructions, as they were flying very low, and this morning porters and clerks had to shovel them off the sidewalks into the streets. They are the genuine Kansas grasshoppers.

DENTON, Texas, Nov. 20.—Fifteen tramps, confined in the jail for refusing to work, were waited upon last night by a mob of unknown men, who overpowered the guards. The tramps were well laid, and then told them to "git." They got, and not a tramp has been seen in Denton to-day, and no more are expected this season.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 20.—Ex-Congressman W. H. Felton, of Barlow, addressed 8000 Prohibitionists in the Gospel Tent to-night. He spoke for an hour, and kindled the wildest enthusiasm. Women shouted, jumped upon the seats and waved their handkerchiefs, and men tore off their anti-prohibition badges and rushed upon the platform, shook the orator's hand and declared for prohibition. There were 3000 negroes in the audience. The look in the face of the dry law sweep the field next Wednesday, though the anti are betting two to one that they will win by controlling the negro vote at the polls. At present the great majority of the negroes are for the Dry ticket.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 21.—The Vanderbilt University has received a handsome donation from Wm. H. Vanderbilt, of New York. The latest gift, the amount of which is not known, will, it is understood, be used in adding several thousand volumes to the library. The university has recently received many contributions of books, and with the addition of those to be secured through the generosity of Mr. Vanderbilt, the institution will soon have one of the finest libraries in the South.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 22.—The Colored Orphans' Home in this city was totally destroyed by fire this morning. The children, fifty-four in number, were at breakfast when the fire was discovered. It had many considerable leaps and was rapidly enveloping the entire building. The matron and her assistant, by rare presence of mind and perfect discipline, prevented a panic among the terrified children and marched them from the building without a single accident. All the clothing and nearly all the furniture was burned, and the buildings are now a heap of ruins. The children were taken temporarily to the city hospital building, where they will remain until better quarters are obtained. The benevolent citizens are supplying them with clothes and provisions. One Home was established by a benevolent lady from Massachusetts out of her own means and with the assistance in the North, and when the buildings were destroyed there were sixty-five inmates, eleven of whom were away at the time of the fire. It is the only colored orphan's home in this section of the South. It will be rebuilt on an enlarged scale.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—A fire which broke out on the third floor of the five-story tenement, 404 East Sixty-four street, early this morning, was the signal for an agonizing scene of terror and death. About $100,000 damage was done to the building and the property of tenants. There had been some hair escapes, and two women with their children were reported to have been slightly burned, but the firemen were not prepared to find a whole family smothered to death. In the rear room, on the top floor of No. 404, they came upon Mary Tealka, a widow forty years old, and her children, Mary, aged six, and Annie, aged six years, lying dead. It was three hours after the outbreak when this discovery was made, but no other bodies had been discovered up to 8 o'clock this morning.

KEY WEST, Florida, Nov. 23.—The steamer Rio Grande, from Galveston, has arrived here with the cotton in the forward lower compartment hold on fire. The fire is making headway. The compartment is being flooded by means of steam pumps and fire engines.

GALVESTON, Nov. 23.—The steamer Rio Grande, which arrived at Key West this evening with her cargo on fire, cleared from this port last Friday. She is an iron-built screw steamer, 2048 tons burden, and carried 4000 bales of cotton and a general cargo of other merchandise. Her cargo was valued at $250,000 and is insured chiefly in foreign companies for about $220,000. Her cotton was largely consigned to English firms. The vessel is valued at $300,000. The Mallory Line has been unfortunate, having lost four other steamers since 1882, two of them going down with all on board.

FOREIGN.

BELOHABE, Nov. 17.—The Serbian division marching on Widdin, gave battle to the Bulgarians near Widdin, and inflicted upon them a crushing defeat. The loss was heavy on both sides. The Servians captured 1000 prisoners.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Official Serbian reports say: On King Milan's arrival in Belgrade he was welcomed by the inhabitants as the "liberator." The Servians have met with enthusiastic receptions at every place in Bulgaria. The people have made many complaints against the Bulgarian administration, especially against its tribunals.

M. Bright, speaking at Birmingham last night, said he thought this day of great and powerful estates were passing away. He favored a wide distribution of land, abolition of the game law and more equal taxation.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—There were from 7000 to 10,000 persons present at the final meeting of the Relief Committee to-night. L. O. Davis presided. Resolutions were passed condemning the government for the execution of Riel.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—M. de Lesseps celebrated his eightieth birthday to-day. He received many presents. All the foreign ambassadors and prominent persons in Paris visited him and paid him their respects, and ex-Emperors of Egypt and Khedive of Egypt telegraphed their congratulations. M. de Lesseps is confident that he will live through the Panama Canal. He has not yet fixed the date of his departure for Panama to inspect the work on the canal, but says he will start soon.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 19.—The relations between France and China are still strained. The Chinese government is delaying the completion of a commercial treaty with France.

BELOHABE, Nov. 19.—To-day's dispatches from the front are adverse to the Servians. Gen. Meskovitch failed in his attempt to capture Slavin and was unable to join the forces to Slavin and Sofia.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Dispatches received here state that the Servians have become dispirited over the recent reverses. The Bulgarians, on the other hand, have been aroused to the highest pitch of enthusiasm by the example of Prince Alexander and his victories. They have gradually driven back the Servian advance line until the Bulgarian forward line of entrenchments is within a mile of Dragoman village. In the fighting of yesterday the Servians lost 800 men killed and wounded.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 22.—The Balkan Conference has drafted a final protocol, which embodies the decisions, and declaring that the restoration of the status quo ante is equally binding upon Serbia and Bulgaria. It is reported that if King Milan refuses immediate peace under the terms of the conference he will be declared an enemy to the peace of Europe, and that the signatory powers will enforce his deposition.

BELOHABE, Nov. 23.—King Milan was forced to retreat by the failure of the commissariat service. He will remain on the defensive at the frontier until the arrival of Gen. Lesbabin's division and the rest of the reserves.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A dispatch from Belgrade says: The Servians have evacuated all the positions hitherto occupied by them in the hands of the Bulgarians. The Servians are still retreating. It is stated that Bulgarian cavalry has occupied Zaribrod.

Advices from Zaribrod state that the weather there is terribly severe, and that the roads are blocked with snow. The roads across the mountains are impassable.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROCK BOTTOM!

Our Clubbing Arrangement 1886.

We offer the following club rates to take effect after December 1, 1885. Cash in full to accompany all orders.
The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the following publications will be sent one year, postpaid, at prices in outside column:
	Publisher's price.	Our price.
Southern Cultivator	$5 00	$2 70
Daily Picayune—12 mos.	14 00	13 00
Weekly	7 00	6 50
Times-Democrat	5 50	5 25
Harpers Magazine	5 00	4 75
Weekly	6 00	4 75
Bazar	5 00	4 75
Young People	4 00	3 80
Democrat's Magazine	4 00	3 55
Send cash in full with all orders.
Carver & Jamieson.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

RUFULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Enon and Midway, at Enon	Oct. 10, 11
Enon circuit, at Spring Hill	11, 12
Skipperville circuit, at Pleasant Ridge	24, 25
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Greensboro station, at Belhel	Sept. 20, 21
Cuba circuit, at York	22, 23
Havana circuit, at Havana	24, 25
Livingston and Ruwa, at Livingston	26, 27
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel	31, Nov. 1
Gainesville circuit, at Gainesville	1, 2
Belmont circuit, at Wesley Chapel	31, Nov. 1
Chocoma circuit, at Chocoma	1, 2
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Powhatan, at Byrnesville	Sept. 19, 20
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Douglasville, at Camp Ground	Oct. 3, 4
Milton station	10, 11
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Franklin Street Church	Oct. 3, 4
St. Francis Street Church	10, 11
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Gros Terre and Paine River, at Harmony	Oct. 24, 25
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Shreveport, at Shreveport	Oct. 3, 4
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

HOMER DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Vernon circuit, at Oak Ridge C. Ground	Oct. 17, 18
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

OPELOUSAS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Bulphur Mine	Oct. 3, 4
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1
Enon circuit, at Enon	31, Nov. 1

||
||
||

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 49.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1531.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—119 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELKIN.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THIRTY-FIVE.

BY N. P. WILLIS.

O, weary heart! 'thou'rt half-way home!
We stand on life's meridian height—
As far from childhood's morning come,
As to the grave's forgetful night.
Give youth and hope a parting tear—
Look onward with a placid brow—
Hope promised light to living here,
And reason takes the guidance now.
One backward look—the last—the last!
One silent tear—for youth is passed!

Who goes with hope and passion back?
Who comes with me and memory on?
To look the downward track—
Joy's music hushed—hope's rose is gone!
Farewell, and her gliding troop
Farewell, without a sigh or tear!
But heart gives way, and spirit drops,
To think that love may leave us here!
But we no longer when youth has gone!
Midway to death and life and love!

Let stay—'tis 'twere a twilight star
That sends its thread across the wave,
Lead down a path beyond the grave!
And now—bless God! His golden line
Comes over—and lights my shadowy way—
And shows the dear hand clasped in mine!
But, hark! what those sweet voices say:
"The better land is in sight."
And, by its clustering light,
All love from life's midway is driven,
Save her whose clasped hand will bring thee on to heaven!"

Recapitulation—No. 4.

BY REV. V. J. ALLEN, D. D.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MISSION-ARIES FOR CHINA.

(We turn in confidence to the history of Christendom for a solution of this history of China, via closing sentence in our last communication, No. 3.)

We have already referred to the Roman-like achievements of the Chinese; their extensive conquests; their reduction of barbarous tribes and unification of the whole under one intelligent, non-aggressive, peace-loving government, etc., as constituting a preparation for the operation of the missionary enterprises, which finds its parallel only in the similar preparation with which Christianity was introduced into the world. Indeed, with a simple change of names, what Fröde has said of Rome is equally applicable to this day to China: "But the life which is to endure grows slowly; and as the soil must be prepared before the wheat can be sown, so before the kingdom of heaven could throw up its shoots, there was needed a kingdom of this world where the nations were neither torn in pieces by violence nor were rushing after false ideals and spurious ambitions. Such a kingdom was the empire of the Caesars—a kingdom where peaceful men could work, think and speak as they please, and travel freely among provinces ruled for the most part by Gallios, who protected life and property and forbade fanatics to tear each other in pieces for their religious opinions. 'It is not lawful for us to put any man to death,' was the complaint of the Jewish priests to the Roman governor. Had Europe and Asia been covered with independent nations, each with a local religion represented in its ruling powers, Christianity must have been stifled in its cradle. If St. Paul had escaped the Sanhedrin at Jerusalem, he would have been torn to pieces by the silvermiths at Ephesus. The appeal to Caesar's judgment seat was the shield of his mission and alone made possible his success."

The above quotation is a long one; but is justified by its appositeness to the case in hand, and the need that exists for a better knowledge and appreciation of China as the mission field of the world. But there is still another element, rather intellectual than political, that enters into and immensely embraces the quality and extent of this great imperial preparation on the part of China, to-wit: The wide-spread influence of Confucianism. But just as in the case of the great political achievements of the Chinese, so here, but few have ever bestowed a moment's thought on this fact considered in its relation to the missionary enterprise, and so, no doubt, the idea of its constituting an element of preparation will be deprecated rather than approved by the many. However that may be, the fact that Confucianism is co-extensive with the empire sits in every seat of authority from the throne down the slenderest slat-stool in the humblest of village schools, and comprises a system of intelligence which controls all the sources of knowledge, the schools, the literature and learning and thought of the land is enough when considered in the light of the immediate future to entitle it to a place with the former. But that is not all, for its influence, though of a somewhat negative kind, has been almost as extensive in the realm of spiritual ideas as in the schools of literature, morals and government. As a system it is most generally spoken of as atheistic, and we have used that term in this series of letters; but properly speaking it is only a mild kind of agnosticism, having none of the characteristics of a vicious destructive atheism. Not knowing, it simply ignores; and if not called agnostics its adherents would most probably be best described as simply ignorists, and, therefore, to be allied with the "brute and irrational barbarians" who may be supposed rather to ignore the being of God than to deny it, preferably to being confounded with the adherents of that "terrible system, that leaves nothing above to excite awe, nor around us to awaken tenderness."

Commanding the whole field intellectually and in a sense discouraging all religion by simply ignoring the unknown and worshipping only the three visible sources of existence, heaven, earth and ancestors, it has well nigh paralyzed and suspended the faith of the nation, which in consequence cannot be said to have any intellectual or intelligent, positive, religious opinions, unless a sort of ideal pantheism, which the first breath of natural philosophy would sweep away, may be so termed.

Here, then, we have a state of preparation for the introduction and diffusion of Christianity, comprising, politically, an extent of territory, intellectually a medium of languages and letters, and spiritually, a suspension of faith or general despondency of religion, not exceeded in the better known history of the Roman empire in the days of the apostles, and which, taken together with the other great facts previously mentioned, constitutes China a mission field at once the largest, best prepared and most accessible in the world. And believing, as we have already said, that this condition of things is anticipatory, a dumb agony of coming events, we now turn in confidence to the history of Christendom for a solution of this history of China. But before calling for the agents there are yet two other points of inestimable value in this connection: 1. Some explanation of the facts heretofore presented and involved in this history of China, a solution of which is sought at the hands of Christendom, and (2) some evidence of the capacity, fitness and disposition of Christendom, hitherto always taken for granted, but never proven, to meet the demands so confidently made upon it. And as these two points may be satisfied in one inquiry we now propose to call attention to the philosophy of this history of China and contrast with it the fundamental principles underlying the growth and development of the history of Christendom. That the Chinese are a numerous and great people; that they have elaborated a wonderful civilization, achieved a conspicuous and prolonged history, etc., are facts sufficiently established to pass unchallenged. But how it has come about that these should present so many points in striking opposition and contrast with Christendom, points so invested and at variance with all our preconceived notions, is a question that has given rise to no little speculation and inquiry. To our minds, however, there can be but one answer that is fundamental, to-wit: The absence of revelation. Then history and civilization are unmixed human productions. The human element, alone and unassisted, is manifest everywhere. In religion they have obeyed the instincts common to universal humanity in seeking out an object of worship; but their feeble conceptions have not raised them above themselves. Everywhere the human touches the human, and as vines in the absence of suitable trunks and supports twine about one another and topple over and perish in untruthfulness, so is it here, where idolatry a purely human invention, is the only and perishable support of undying souls. Even Confucius has been idealized by his followers, the ignorists, who, though looking with contempt on the ordinary systems and forms of idolatry, have erected altars to him as the embodiment of the human element in their civilization. While in the person of the emperor, who affects to reward or punish, promote or degrade the popular gods (idols) at his pleasure, the human element attains its highest expression. He makes and un-makes the gods of his people—using this authority simply as a device of government. But with all this the errors of the unseen world—death and the future state, the evils of life, fought with disaster and misfortune, and vain imaginations, filled with fears of devils, ghosts of dead men and shades and apparitions, still oppress them sore amid their darkness and helplessness. Such is the religious condition of the country, and it may well be doubted whether the unaided human mind, at its best estate, is capable of achieving results any different or any better. This experiment would seem to be exhaustive. As to their civilization one word will suffice to describe it, great as it is in comparison with what has been achieved by other heathen nations. It is superficial, wanting alike in intellectual grasp and in sight and in the more subtle force and energy of the spiritual. Everything indicates the presence of limits, a subjection of the human mind to restraints. The rudiments of all possibilities are present, but the power to develop is wanting. There is no impulse; no inspiration; no progress, and life has become a fixed and barren sound, a mere monotony of toil, weary and heavy laden. But vain as has been the help of man, there is yet hope for China. Thanks be to God! And as the dumb and silent unconscious earth, smitten with drought, yearns on every split and crack and fissure of its parched and thirsty surface towards heaven for rain, so China, exhausted, helpless, human, however unconscious and unarticulate her appeal, yearns toward Christendom for relief and help. And help will come. For he who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, hath laid help upon one that is mighty. Help, that is the fundamental idea of Christendom, its active principles, the reason and justification of its existence. Of old the oracles of God were committed to the Jews. In that was their advantage. But in the latter days both the oracles and the gospel are the heritage of Christendom. To Christendom, therefore, must the ends of the earth look. Emmanuel is identified with Christendom. God with us, God in Christ revealing the world unto himself, God working in us to will and to do of his good pleasure, constitute Christendom the embodiment and source of Divine help, help for soul, help for mind, help for body, help universal, for the whole man, for the whole world. The history of Christendom is the history of help. God's purpose in Christ Jesus unfolding, enlarging, extending. And what is the civilization of Christendom but the achievements of this divine principle? And whence the forces still at work enlarging the bounds of knowledge, recovering to man his lost dominion in the realm of nature and uplifting and bettering his estate? Ask China her history, her civilization! They are the products of the gospel, another name for this Divine help, for "it alone has seized this principle in all its force and applied it in all its extent. In a word it alone has thoroughly discovered and fully satisfied the wants of human nature." The gospel, then, is the help for which China yearns, though unconsciously, and it alone has the capacity, the fitness and disposition to satisfy her wants, and thus solve and complete her long history.

(To be continued.)

A Pastor's Recreation.

MR. EDITOR: To a pastor who has his hands, head and heart so full as to render a voluntary absence from his charge inadmissible, a providential recreation is hailed with pleasure. Such was the experience of your correspondent when summoned to Chattanooga, on November 4, to perform a marriage ceremony for the only daughter of his only brother. The route was over the V. and M. and the A. G. S. railroads. On the latter road the first experience was had in a Mann Bondoir Car, and the experience was by no means satisfactory, whether it was the roughness of the road or the construction of the sleeping car, something gave me the same experience of him who said:

"Macbeth doth murder sleep, the innocent sleep;
Sleep that knits up the ravel'd sleeve of care."

According to my testing of the two I should give the preference for comfort to the Pullman Sleeper over the Mann Bondoir. In the latter you lie across the road, so that your head or feet are elevated according as the curve in the road happens to make the lower side of the track on the one side or the other; while in the former you lie up and down the road and are independent of inequalities.

Chattanooga wears an air of thrift and progress, which is really refreshing to a citizen of a quiet, inactive town in the farther South. New buildings are going up in every quarter and the city limits are extending in each direction. The tasteful and elegant Centenary Church was projected by the Southern Methodist and completed, at a cost of over $40,000, in less than one year after it was begun. It stands now as a monument to the liberality and piety of the people and to their energy and enterprise as well. It was greatly in their favor that their old church lot and building were in the very heart of the business portion of the town and were sold for a price nearly sufficient to secure a lot in a more eligible quarter and to construct upon it the present imposing edifice. The courteous pastor, Rev. G. C. Rankin, took great pleasure in stating that in the opinion of one high in authority at Nashville the Centenary Church was in many respects superior to the beautiful McKendree.

Lookout Mountain was equal to the description I had heard of it, even though it was quite a glowing one. You missed the ice-cold summits and the clear blue lakes, for which alpine scenery is celebrated. But there, towering well up above the elevated horizon, was the sharply defined profile of the distant heights, which brought under one range of vision portions of five different States. Over these is Missionary Ridge, lying up against the sky, as peacefully as if it never had witnessed the scenes of blood and strife which were enacted upon it on November 29, 1863. The town of Chattanooga lay stretched out underneath you with every spire, every factory and every dwelling plainly visible. Very distinctly traced in the famous Moccasin bend in the Tennessee river, showing the heel, the toe and the leg in proportions that seemed quite natural.

On returning, we stepped over one day at Birmingham to hear the renowned Sam Jones. The morning was raw and misty, yet quite a number gathered under the great gospel tent, capable of seating 5,000 people. Promptly on time the great evangelist appeared upon the platform. He is of a light, wiry form, black hair and an eye that flashes through you like a dart. Looking up at the tent, he said: "No doubt the flapping of this tent gives many of you uneasiness. I can safely assure you that there is no danger of its falling. But suppose it should fall and kill you, there is no better time to die than now. Indeed, you might have more notoriety from dying in a gospel tent than in any other way. True, they might get your name spelled wrong; but I'll promise you that I will do the best I can to have it right." He then read his text, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him and he can not sin because he is born of God." There followed nearly an hour of practical, yet discriminating, exegesis, of mirth-provoking humor, of scathing denunciation of sin, of occasional brilliant periods of eloquence and of dramatic pathos. I give you a few samples. He said: Scripture in its construction is greatly in accordance with the experience of the person. Once this passage to him was like a two-edged sword, but afterwards it became full of comfort. "Can not sin" did not mean a physical, but a moral impossibility. If you were to know a man noted all his life for honesty, you would say that man can not steal; or, one who had never in a long life swerved from truth, you would say he can not lie; so one born of God can not sin as long as he is true to the spirit within him. "He that is born of God," the son of a King. Take a young man of good family and he will be ashamed to go far wrong. "I don't go much on aristocratic stock, Bourbon blood, as they call it. I never saw a boy who was always bragging on his father that it didn't turn out that that was all he had to brag on." "I don't go much on people who are sensitive to criticism." A horse with unsound spots on him will kick if he sees you coming near him with a currycomb. A currycomb is mighty rough on unsound spots. Some sisters are always getting their feelings hurt; they are always a-doctoring them, giving them Simmons' Liver Regulator and one thing and another. A sensitive preacher is like a wax doll, every time you put your finger on it you make an impression. Sure enough preachers are like India rubber. Lord, give us more India-rubber preachers. "Whenever I see a woman turning up her nose at me and saying, 'The vulgar fellow,' I just feel like saying, 'Look here, old girl, the devil has got a mortgage on that nose and he is going to foreclose it before long.'" "I overhauled my life four years ago, and found that I had quit all the sins I wanted to, but was still hanging on to some I didn't want to quit. Now, some of you don't want to quit cards, whisky and progressive euchre. I had intended never to dignify progressive euchre by mentioning it in the pulpit; but as I have, I will tell you that I have no more respect for a church member who plays progressive euchre than I have for the meanest negro in the chain gang. Wonder you don't let your feelings hurt you and get up and rack out."

He had an experience meeting in the afternoon. He said, "Now I want you to speak just about ten words; if you spin it out, we'll sing you down." Large numbers gave an experience. I kept an account of the last ten minutes and twenty-nine spoke. Many experiences were like this: "I ought to be the most grateful man in the world. When Mr. Jones came here I was a miserable drunkard. Now I have been converted, and by the grace of God I will serve him as long as I live." At the night service one hundred and forty gave him their hands in a solemn pledge that they were going to join the church at the first opportunity. Under the influence of his preaching upon the desecration of the Sabbath, the town council of Birmingham passed an ordinance closing all business houses on the Sabbath day.

As I sat and listened to the wonderful man, sometimes laughing, then weeping, then thrilling with his burning periods, I decided that his great power was due to three things: 1. His intense earnestness. He spoke and acted just as if he saw hell yawning beneath and sinners falling into it; 2. His utter self-abnegation. He impressed you that he had no more thought of self, or of what people were thinking of him, than of the wind that was blowing; 3. And, mainly, the manifest presence and influence of the Holy Spirit. No other power could have thus swayed that vast throng.

He gave me a positive promise that he would visit Jackson, Miss., early next spring and give us a benefit.

C. G. ANDREWS.

The Central Mexican Mission and the Change of Name.

I have been requested to give an expression on the subject of the change of church name as related to our mission work. It is my opinion there is no necessity here for a change, nor would a change be any benefit to our mission. The forty-five native preachers appointed at our last annual meeting to their several districts, stations and circuits, testify that no other Protestant Church has gained a stronger hold on the Mexican people than the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and I do not believe one of these preachers would vote for a change of church name. Under its banner, as it now waves, we have fought our battles and won our victories in this field. Its success and influence in the country are as great, and its history and prospects as bright, as any of its sister churches. If only let alone in this respect, and duly encouraged by the mother church with the means necessary for its work, it will show not only stability in acquisitions made, but a constant growth in numbers and spiritual power that will gladden the hearts of all who have given it the support of their prayers and money.

In this connection I make mention of a kindred subject which may interest your readers. A suggestion was made to the writer of this, in New York, last winter, by a person high in position in the Methodist Episcopal Church: "Why can we not unite our two missions in Mexico, where we occupy the same field? We could turn over to you our work in that country," etc. I repeat this suggestion for what it may be worth now or in the future. Certainly the Southern Methodist Church could well afford to accept such a proposition should it ever be presented for action. Great economy in men and means would be secured by such a union, and a fresh, forward impulse given to the cause.

W. M. PATTERSON.

CITY OF MEXICO, NOV. 5, 1885.

To the Louisiana Conference.

MR. EDITOR: I am requested, by Rev. George Anders, to give you information about a part of Louisiana, which he, with a friend of his, visited as evangelists a few weeks since. This makes the second trip these young men have made into that part of the State where they have met with great success. Bro. Anders thinks that a good circuit may be formed in that part of the State with just a little exertion on the part of the Louisiana Conference. The country alluded to lies along Black River, in Concordia parish, fifteen miles below Trinity. There are five settlements and a church in each, except one, where they have lumber and material ready for building. It is near Bro. Cornell's district, perhaps under his control or jurisdiction. These young men from Amite county have visited that country by request, as evangelists, twice, and on the two trips have had application for membership from about forty persons, among the number thirty conversions, a good number have taken up family prayer and are praying in public. The object of this article is to get the attention of the Louisiana Conference aimed at this particular part of the parish of Concordia, and to request the Conference to send them a preacher, if possible. They promised to give Bros. Anders and Roberts a good support if they would only stay and preach for them. Hope you may be able to publish this before the Louisiana Conference meets, that some provision may be made to supply these people with the bread of life.

Yours respectfully,
H. BRADFORD.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1885.

THE HOLY BREAD.

BY S. H. THAYER.

"Give us this day, our daily bread," unthinkingly said the child at night; the meaning of the upward flight of that low prayer, it could not tell; it knew the words by heart as well. Yet, bending at its mother's shrine, could not divine the heavenly theme, which seemed a rare and wonderful dream.

The years their swiftly came and fled; unheeding, said the youth again the prayer that seemed not at all in vain.

"Give us, this day, our daily bread," said the man of mature years, and his prayer was not in vain. The glorious happiness of earth, its joy and mirth; the bread it came, though prayer to him was but a name.

The child, the youth, to manhood grew, and rougher grew the storms of life, and deepening sorrow, sterner strife.

Bore down upon his tolling brain.

"Give us our daily bread," again he said. The answer came in death that hushed the breath.

Of one who had worshipped more than all above.

And swiftly yet the answer came, as in a flame, To try his soul, and from his eager grasp it stole.

The jeweled treasure he had wrought;

And as again he blindly sought,

By utterance of the daily prayer, the daily share Of bread to win, there came a vision of his sin.

And now, whenever the prayer he said, there rose the dead.

One in his heart. "O God, thy hand hath sent the dart.

But she whose steps I oft have led,

I hear her voice—she is not dead;

In ceaseless murmurs of the sea she whispers me;

In every prayer her spirit glows my spirit there."

"Give us, this day, our daily bread," the words man said.

His weary soul now toiled no more for earthly toll.

Now he had found the holy bread.

Above the world of earthly dead;

Beyond the valley of despair, beyond the prayer,

A Christy light illumined the way—it was not there.

Age whitened on his sacred brow; a heavenly vow Long years had led his soul in prayer for heavenly bread.

The cross, in him, was lifted high.

A sign of faith that could not die;

Till in his life it wrought a calm, a nameless charm,

And still he said, "Give us, this day, our daily bread."

"The Bible in Education."

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

"The Bible in Education." Does this mean to ask whether or not there can be intellectual expansion without the Bible? Does it aim to draw out the idea that education without the knowledge furnished by the Bible is incomplete? Or does it mean to suggest that there is much in the Bible essential to education—essential to that full development of the mental faculties nowhere else to be found? Our views of the subject must depend on the adjustment of these questions. It is certain that many nations of the earth have been very far advanced in knowledge—in science, philosophy and general literature—who knew nothing of the Bible. No grander specimen of native intelligence ever adorned the earth in any age or nation of it than Aristotle. Yet he was a heathen; he knew nothing of the higher and purer ethics of life. Out of his mind were evolved two dicta, one of which has outlived his day and constitutes at this time—2,300 years after his death—the nucleus of one of the chief sciences of the present age. The classified differential of things is purely Aristotelian. But while his dictum of logic has lived, his dictum of matter has perished. The former was in harmony with the decree of God that things stand related, but in all things differentiated. The latter violated the truth revealed in the Bible, that Infinite Wisdom can organize matter, giving it "quality, quantity, figure and propriety of body." Had this fact been hinted to the great philosopher, such might have been his views that he might have taken the place in philosophy which he holds, and will hold, to the end of time in the field of logic. But it is very certain that he was to a great extent educated without the Bible? Was this education complete? Would it have been complete had he known the Bible? To answer either question in the affirmative would be to disregard the facts, to claim more for the Bible than the Bible cares for itself. Still, to say that a knowledge of the Bible would not have made him wiser would be equivalent to saying that additional knowledge does not make one wiser.

It is not for me to enter upon an argument in defense of the Bible as a revelation from God. The subject admits it as The Book, and so I accept it; so I must regard it. Viewing the matter from this point, I rather wonder that the question was raised as to the Bible in education. What is poetry without Shakespeare? or oratory without Demosthenes? or fiction without Dickens? Our answer is: Just what education would be without the Bible. Take the Bible away, and we would have a religion without a Lord, a cosmos without a Maker, an universe without a God.

But, apart from these abstract ideas, the elimination of the Bible from the realms of education would leave many ages of the world's history engulfed in oblivion. The genesis of things could not be known. The poetry, the literature, the philosophy of one of the most noted nations of the earth would be unknown facts. The writers of all ancient history—the Maccabees, Josephus, Philo, the Jew; the Talmud, Rollin, and other—appeal to the Bible for their information concerning the Hebrew nation. This wonderful people is known to us only through the Bible. As a historical book, it is indispensable. It serves a purpose; it covers an epoch. Rollin's reliance for the early history of the Medo-Persian empire is upon the Bible. His details are drawn thence. Only enough of profane history remains to confirm the truth of the sacred record. So of the first Babylon; so of ancient Nineveh. What of all antediluvian history? Confucius, the great Chinese oracle, goes back to the deluge, fixes his dates and names to correspond to those of the Bible with proximity which could hardly have been accidental; but his history beyond that period is vague, broken and very uncertain. All other so-called Bibles have their origin within the memory of man; but this one stands the test of the precepts of common law. "I goeth back to a period to which the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." It is corroborated by a thousand oracles. Like other books, it is either useless, hurtful or helpful. If it is useless, it contains no truth; if hurtful, it contains falsehood; if helpful, it contains information—it imparts knowledge. It has furnished wisdom to our most learned barristers (See Blackstone, on "Eminent Domain"); it has supplied the missing link to our most elaborate historians; it has imparted wisdom to modern Boards of Health; it has furnished the text for our finest poetic productions; it has established a rule for the most extensive pastoral undertakings of the present day. Such a book is certainly of some importance to a progressive, wisdom-loving, knowledge-seeking people.

But let us look more minutely into this book. What of its poetry? Nowhere are the fundamental laws of poetry more grandly displayed than here. The rules of measure are not here recognized; metre forms no part of biblical poetry. It stands on the grand conception of the ideal; it stretches out on the line of imagery; it carries the thought to the remotest possibility; it deals with the raging passion which leaps up within, or the stubborn fact which comes from without. Take, for one example, Isaiah's expression in regard to the results of an intermingling of the righteousness of the earth and the righteousness of heaven, by which salvation is produced (xlv, 8):

"Drop down, ye heavens, from above,
And let the skies pour down righteousness;
Let the heavens be opened, and let them bring forth salvation,
And let righteousness spring up together."

Take the same author (xxxv, 1, etc.):

"The wilderness, and the solitary places
Shall be glad for them;
And the desert shall rejoice, and blossom
As the rose.
It shall bloom abundantly, and rejoice, even
With joy and singing:
The glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it,
The excellency of Carmel and Saron.
They shall see the glory of the Lord,
And the excellency of our God."

One more example from Isaiah (xxxiv, 1, etc.):

"The cormorant and the bittern shall possess it;
The owl also, and the raven shall dwell in it:
And she shall stretch out upon it
The line of confusion,
And the stones of emptiness.
They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom,
But none shall be there,
And all her princes shall be nothing.
Thorns shall come up in her palaces,
Nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof.
It shall be a habitation for dragons,
And a court for owls.
The wild beasts of the desert shall meet
With the wild beasts of the island."

What can more fully describe the supreme desolation of a once proud, populous country? The vilest of birds and the wildest of beasts hold high carnival in the palaces of princes who have been slain! Confusion bounds the land, and emptiness fills it!

Joel (iii, 3) describes the extremes to which the appetites of drunkards may lead them:

"They have cast lots for my people:
They have a lot for a virgin,
And sold a girl for wine,
That they might drink."
(To be continued.)

Four Reasons against Prohibition.

Funk & Wagnall's Homiletic Review, for November, contains Dr. Crosby's "Symposium on Prohibition," in which he gives four reasons for his opposition to prohibition. Before setting forth his reasons he concedes to the State the right to prohibit the use and sale of alcoholic liquors. He admits also that something ought to be done to lessen the appalling evil of intemperance, but denies that that something is prohibition. His first reason is the oft-repeated phrase, "Prohibition does not prohibit." If he had succeeded in making good that assertion, he might have spared himself the time and pains of writing his three other reasons. Whenever I am convinced that an enterprise I have taken in hand can not be accomplished, I shall desist without waiting for additional reasons. His going on to adduce three other reasons shows that he did not have perfect confidence in his first. And if he can not rely on it, without attempting to bolster it up by other arguments, surely the friends of prohibition may be excused for distrusting its infallibility.

His second, third and fourth reasons for opposing prohibition are contained in his first. He ought, therefore, to have made sure of this first reason, and, having done so, calmly awaited the result of his invincible logic. Let us look into his reasons for thinking that "prohibition does not prohibit." He asserts that "there are more drinking saloons in Portland and Bangor to the population than there are in New York City." I do not know how he gets his information—whether from trustworthy sources or not; but I do know that the friends of temperance in Maine have given testimony adverse to this statement. It may, however, be true that there are many places in these cities where small quantities are kept to supply whisky guzzlers who are willing to pay enormous profits to the dealers rather than do without their favorite beverage. But that is not to the point. He ought to show that drunkenness and its attendant evils have not been diminished by prohibition. This he has not attempted, because the facts would not sustain him. He admits that prohibition has succeeded in suppressing drunkenness in the rural districts, but does not believe it can succeed in large cities; hence it is unwise to press it. Prohibition, then, according to his own admission, has prohibited in some degree; and hence that standard objection to the cause is removed. We get adverse testimony from Kansas, from Georgia, and every place where prohibition has been tested, which goes to shake our confidence in the old trite argument, "Prohibition does not prohibit." As if aware of the meagerness of his facts, Dr. Crosby next attempts to show why prohibition has not, and can not succeed. He says, "The public conscience is against a prohibitory law," and he concludes it can not be enforced. I do not know what he means by "public conscience," unless it be the conscience of the majority of the people. If that be the meaning of the phrase, then, wherever prohibitory laws have been enacted, it has been done at the demand of the public conscience, and the same "public conscience" stands pledged for their enforcement. In this country law is regarded as the expression of the will of the people, or of a majority of the people.

After prohibition, by the demands of the people, has become the law of the land, will that same people oppose the enforcement of a law of their own creation? If a small minority of the people could impose laws upon the majority without their consent and against their protest, we could see how the "public conscience" might hinder the execution of such odious laws. But we can not see how the "public conscience" can frustrate laws that owe their existence to its demands. The truth is (and Dr. Crosby knows it) there will never be a universal prohibitory law in this government until a majority of the people will it; and if that time ever comes, the will of the people will see to the enforcement of the law. To talk or write of the "public conscience" obstructing the enforcement of prohibitory laws is mere twaddle. The public conscience may hinder the passage of such laws, but will not hinder their enforcement.

Dr. Crosby's second reason is in these words: "A prohibitory law would be promotive of a law-breaking spirit." If a prohibitory law could manage some way to get itself into existence without the knowledge or consent of the people, then, I grant, it might "be promotive of a law-breaking spirit." Men long accustomed to their cups will be greatly tempted, no doubt, to violate the law; and so of every law that interferes with or restricts their carnal pleasures. But the wisdom or expediency of a law is not to be determined by this fact, but by its tendency to promote the general welfare. There is in the human species a strong inclination to violate the law against unchastity; but that does not argue that the law should be repealed. If every law that men are inclined to violate was repealed, in order to save them from indulging a spirit of lawlessness, I suppose the penal code would become a nullity.

His third reason is stated thus: "Were a prohibitory law enacted, the efforts of temperance men would be greatly obstructed." I would ask, if prohibition universally prevails, where will be the need of effort on the part of temperance men? In that event, prohibition will have left but little for temperance men to do. After the battle is fought and the victory won such temperance men as Dr. Crosby will have nothing to do on that line, and the danger he deprecates is an imaginary one. Indeed, nearly all the evils the fertile brain of the good Doctor conjures up, as the result of prohibition, come in the event of failure. But if, as he calculates and hopes, prohibition falls, upon what principle of justice can these evils be charged to prohibitory laws?

His fourth and last reason is one that I have no space to discuss. It is stated in these words: "A prohibitory law is a reflection upon the Savior of the world." If that is really true, it ought to have great weight with Christians. He contends that the "Savior made drunk wine which, if taken in excess, would intoxicate." If he did, it is a reflection upon him to condemn the drinking of intoxicants in others.

Mr. Editor, can not you, or Dr. Harmon, or Dr. Abbey, or someone else, refute this specious argument? If not, I will in a future communication.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

From the Work.

NASHUA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I am winding up my year's work. I have had a good time this year religiously. I have held ten protracted meetings. We have received into the church eighty-six members, and have had about sixty-five conversions. We are not doing so well financially; but hope to make a tolerably good report at Conference. Three new churches have been erected on the circuit this year—one is completed and the other two will be. I think we're on the rising ground on this circuit. To God be all the glory!

J. H. HOLLAND, P. C.

HATTIESBURG, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We are now closing up the labors of 1885. Results: One hundred and fifty-three accessions to the membership of this charge; one new house of worship built and fully furnished and another in process of erection; two others painted, each furnished with chandeliers, one with a bell and the other with an organ; an one hundred debt paid on the parsonage at Ellenville and a considerable amount expended on various other matters of church work of less importance. Our financial report at Conference will be full in every feature, unless it be that which refers to the support of the ministry. Congregations at all the appointments are good, and we are constantly receiving new accessions. Prof. Sims is fully meeting the sanguine expectations of his friends, and the District High School, under his control, bids fair to become a permanent and perfect success. If any of the people of South Mississippi, or of any other section, desire to have their children and wards taught by one who is a model instructor and a model character in every respect, they should send them to the Hattiesburg High School. The place is healthy, and board and tuition have been put down to the lowest figures. To the following brethren we are indebted for valuable assistance during recent meetings: J. D. Hays, B. S. Rayner, D. F. Glone, N. M. Clark, J. M. Weems, C. B. Galloway, D. D., E. J. Taylor and C. L. Watson. Bro. Watson is a layman, well advanced in life; but he is full of zeal for God and is "strong in the Lord and in the power of his might." His godly walk and conversation and his fervent, energetic prayers have been a gracious benediction to us. May he be blessed and spared to the church which he loves so well for many years to come. And I must not close this notice without making special reference to faithful workers among the lady members of the Ellenville Church. A few of the ladies there have taken the house of worship in hand, and they are making it a gem of beauty. I am not authorized to mention their names, nor is it necessary to do so. God knows them, and they are recorded in heaven.

J. W. McLAURIN.

NEWTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have often thought of writing to the Advocate; but have deferred until now. We can say of a truth that our "lot has been cast" in a pleasant place this year. Our people are a kind and appreciative people. We were made to rejoice a few evenings since by a crowd of our town people pouring in, each with something useful, they all seemed to know just what was needed at the parsonage. So you see, Mr. Editor, we get "pounded" here as well as in Louisiana. We give God all the praise for being so pleasantly situated this year. Our parsonage is a very much out of repair; but the ladies met last Monday eve and organized a ladies' aid society for the purpose of repairing the church and parsonage, therefore we expect to have the parsonage more comfortably arranged for the preacher next year. There is not much missionary zeal here yet; but we hope to report a good woman's missionary society here. We are still urging the prohibition movement. Think ere long Newton county will be free.

MRS. M. A. PEENLES.

LOUISVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We are fast winding up our work on Louisville circuit for this year. The Lord has been with us. We have had more than one hundred conversions and sixty accessions. Have built one new church, costing six hundred dollars. Painted our church at Salem, which adds much to the looks of our camp ground there. Have held our fourth quarterly meeting. Preacher's salary will be paid in full. All the collections ordered by the Conference will be paid. We expect to build a new church here at Louisville next year. And last, but not least, there are about sixty of the different Advocates taken on this circuit. God bless our papers.

J. A. LEECH.

BIG CANE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing such cheerful news from the different works, I will give an epitomized account of the Evergreen and Big Cane circuits, Louisiana Conference. At Evergreen we have a splendid Sabbath-school; through the influence of which we have large congregations. Have also bought a new organ, and are aided by Bro. Price and a select number of others. Our organist, Miss Edaline White, makes vocal with praise the house of God, which we will soon have entirely completed, having all the material and money on hand to do so. Bro. White smiles approvingly while his earnest utterances in prayer show the depth of his gratitude to God for the work.

At Big Cane we have one of the oldest Sabbath-schools on the work. I am in the State; being for nearly twenty-five years continued through all the year. Dr. S. P. Ward, the efficient superintendent, is always at the post. We have at this point the Preachers' Home, which has recently, through Sister Dora Collins, had all available space well filled with nice new furniture.

At Lone Cypress we have built a new house, and have, we think, the promise of good things in store at this appointment.

At Slidestown we have a fine large church, now nearly completed, which will be quite comfortable to a nice little Sabbath-school, which, for the last twelve months, has been houseless. There is talk at this point of a parsonage and a preacher of their own next year.

We have, at wayside appointments, five other Sabbath-schools, doing, as the Discipline directs, wherever ten regular attendants can be secured. We have eleven regular appointments consequently must be "Staked Out," to monthly preaching. But we are glad that we can offer as food convenient, weekly, the Advocate. We have on this work twenty-seven subscribers to our Advocate. This year eighteen members were received and eight children baptized to date.

S. H. WHATLEY.

Book Making and Book Reading.

Dr. Marshall's letters on tract distribution and the advantages thereof have been read and are appreciated. Two recent communications, in the Nashville Advocate, from the Rev. T. M. C. Birmingham, of Arkansas, on "Tracts, Books and Colportage," have been read and appreciated, and not a few other thoughts, essays, enquiries and exhortations, written and published and unwritten and unpublished, have been considered and more or less appreciated. The subject is not a new one, nor is its great practical value properly rated. Our people generally read nothing simply because they do not read.

It is the disgrace of the church that worthless printed trash is read far beyond books of value. Josh Billings makes several hundred thousands by mere burlesque spelling. And other literary clowns, from Shakespeare down, generally as destitute of morals as of a knowledge of their use, get rich and die in disgrace by reducing public intelligence to, generally, its lowest denomination. Meanwhile we have good books—not many, it is true—a few million here and there, unread, and becoming old and moth-eaten and faded and "shelf worn," as the Publishing House calls it. But we can make books as many as can be sold.

These exhortatory exhortations and complaints are easily thought and easily written. They will almost write themselves if you furnish the stationery. But what of all this? A score of such newspaper articles do not answer the important question: How to perform the doing of it. The doing of it; the doing of it! That is the question. With some knowledge of the history of tract societies and of tract making, of Dr. Hamilton's tract departments in 1855-58 and of our depositaries of 1859-60, I still believe that the doing of book and tract selling can be performed.

Our old tract society, of 1845, was never well organized and put in good working order, nor were the tracts printed for it of a good selection as to either matter or form. But hampered as it was, it did considerable good. The tract department, under Dr. Hamilton, inaugurated in the latter end of 1854, and continuing through 1857, dealt largely in books as well as in bound pamphlets and leaflets. It lost $30,000 in money, but in what sense and to what extent that could be considered a loss to the church is an open question. It was that much money, far better out than in the pocket of the original owner so far as he was concerned, and invested in spreading and probably the reading of a hundred thousand books. How much good the church is deriving now from that investment would be a question not easily answered.

The depositaries ordered by the General Conference, of 1858, under the supervision of this writer, and continuing until broken up by the war, distributed several hundred thousand books and tracts, and paid into the Publishing House over ten thousand dollars in money over and above all expenses. Notwithstanding the short-lived success of this last named depositary system it might not be advisable to renew it in that form. A better system, it is believed, can be set on foot. And to this I beg leave now to call the attention of this editor and his readers. Of course this is but a brief outline. Let the Mississippi Conference, now about to meet in annual session, memorialize the General Conference to meet in May next, to institute a plan for the distribution of cheap literature. Then let the General Conference direct the Publishing House to set apart a department of literature, either such as may be on hand or to be made, which will be furnished to colporteurs authorized by Annual Conferences at cost. This cost shall not be what is generally so considered, or rather so named; but the actual money paid for the material so used and to the workmen for manufacturing, with not a cent added for use of machinery, sort. This will reduce the cost much lower than most people suppose. I enclose you a neat little book of twenty-four pages, made at our Publishing House, as an outside job, on a secular subject, and on which the house made its usual profit. This book cost eight and one-half mills. This class of books and tracts for colpor-trage might be furnished at even less than cost, if deemed advisable. The House is in a condition now to spend five or ten thousand dollars a year in this way. The Publishing House was never intended from the first to merely make money, but to furnish cheap literature to the church. Then the Annual Conferences will form a system of colportage under restrictive, prudential rules. It can, no doubt, employ young preachers and others who are willing to engage in the business. In this way a suitable person might be put on a mission, or non-supporting circuit in this way. There would not seem to be any serious obstacle in the way of a system of this sort. But the General Conference must set it working with the Publishing House as one of the chief instruments. What is to hinder us in this way from distributing several tons of temperance or prohibition leaflets every year. Right here we need a class of tracts of large print especially adapted to distribution among the colored people. They must be reached and reached largely just here. The thing is easy. Get whisky out of the way and we can do almost anything. An experiment for two or three years might cost us a few thousand dollars. And this, if so, might turn out the best investment we could make of that amount of money.

The church itself has no money either to make or lose, never bad—do not want any. It only assists the money makers in a judicious handling of a small portion of their earnings. Now, Mr. Editor, what do you say?

YAZOO CITY, MISSISSIPPI.

R. ARNEY.

A Soldier's Letter.

IN CAMP, NEAR CARTER'S MILL, LOUISIANA, NOV. 2, 1864.

MY DEAR MOTHER: To-day I am twenty-three years old, and it is with mournful pleasure that I unlock the sacred treasures committed to memory's keeping and gaze with retrospective glance upon the chequered scenes of the past with its load of departed joys and sorrows; its wrecked hopes and hurried loves and hates. Going back to the first dawn of memory, I feel myself again a child kneeling by your side to say my evening prayer and receiving from your lips lessons of eternal wisdom which have followed me in my wildest and most wayward days, checking me with a still small voice when walking in the paths of folly and intoxicated with wild pursuit of pleasure in the halls of gayety. Those were bright and joyous days; they have ever been as a "green oasis" rising up to relieve the desert waste of my life. Little to me was a peaceful stream flowing onward, undisturbed by the wild storms of passions or the mad dreams of ambition. No dark cloud of disappointment or sorrow ever shrouded the sunlight of happiness from my soul. Spring, with perennial beauty and sweetness, held perpetual sway in my heart. In my happiness and innocence I never dreamed of the future, only to clothe it with fantastic beauties and durable pleasures. Alas! that those days ever had an end. Many and sad have been the changes since then. Disease and death have invaded your little circle of loved ones. Three little mounds in the graveyard are representatives of three bright winged angels taken from your arms and transferred to the arms of our Savior.

Sister E. J.'s death was my first great sorrow. I can never forget the feelings of sorrow and utter loneliness that swooped over my young heart when I realized that she was to be taken from me. I saw her gasping for breath and struggling in death. I rushed from the house in perfect agony, and seeking a lonely spot in the orchard I wept my first tears. Ah! they were very bitter tears. I felt that my only playmate and companion was about to leave me forever. There stood our playhouse filled with childish toys, all planned and arranged by her hands. And I asked myself, Will she never play with me again? The very thought was full of agony. I shut my eyes and wished that I might go with her. When I returned to the house my sister was dead. She was laid out cold and motionless; her hands folded across her breast. With an aching heart I gazed long upon her loved features. Calm and peaceful in death, her features were wreathed in smiles. Then you came and took me into another room and told me that she was gone to heaven; that angels had carried her above the stars, and that, if I would be a good boy, my sister's spirit would watch over me through life, and when I came to die she would come and take me to her own bright far off home. I thought very strange of all this. Yet I believed it, and was comforted. I promised that I would be good and serve God, that I might see my loved sister again.

Since then two more have been taken from the home circle and transferred to the circle in heaven, making the number seven—seven upon earth and seven in heaven—just half of your jewels have been gathered home. Five of the seven, who still walk the sorrowing paths of life, have professed a saving faith in Christ. I know that I much of sorrow and suffering has fallen to your lot through life; yet you have much to rejoice in, much to be thankful for. I know, too, that I, in my wild and wretched days, have often caused you pain; yet all I am and all I ever may be, I owe to you. I know not that I shall ever see you

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METROPOLITAN EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HENNING.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1885.

We earnestly invite all pastors in our patronizing Conferences to give special attention to the circulation of the ADVOCATE within the next few weeks. More money is circulating in our territory now than at any other season of the year. Please see to it that all old subscribers renew and many new friends are gained. Our purpose is to improve the paper and make it more and more a valuable pastoral helper in each home it is privileged to enter.

The death of Vice-President Hendricks has reopened the question of the presidential succession, and the opinions of statesmen are very various. In the interim of Congress, the House without a speaker and the Senate without a President pro tem, President Cleveland is the only life between an organized government and chaos. Were he to die before Congress assembled, there would be no legal successor in the presidential office. Some legislation on that subject is just now a national necessity.

Bishop Walden, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has made some interesting calculations as to his church's offerings for foreign missions since 1833. The New York Advocate displays them and pronounces them "cause for gratulation." He shows that during the past fifty-two years his church has given $7,537,759 38 for carrying the gospel into the regions beyond. Considering the manifold expensiveness of planting and sustaining the church at home, itself a new country with a growing population, this is indeed an admirable showing.

The English elections indicate Liberal reverses, if not defeat. By a coalition of the Conservatives and Parnellites, the present government will probably remain in power. Mr. Gladstone accepts the result gracefully, and says he only consented to deny himself needed repose from public care in the hope of contributing somewhat to the settlement of the Irish question. The parties will be quite equally divided in Parliament, and as the Irish vote is traditionally unreliable, the Conservatives have no sure lease of power for a single fortnight.

The day our land was filled with mourning at the first news of the death of Vice-President Hendricks, the cable brought sad intelligence from the court of Spain. Two nations sat together in sorrow. The young King Alfonso died after a brief illness, sincerely lamented by all Europe. His devoted to his people, even to imperiling his life among the cholera sufferers, had commanded their admiration and loyal support. Kind in heart, and conservative in the temper of his mind, his reign was peaceful and highly honorable. His little daughter has been proclaimed Queen with his widow, Queen Christina, as Regent. The new cabinet is said to be a popular one, and hopes are entertained that the orials may pass without a revolution.

A charming letter from Dr. J. B. Cottrell will appear next week. Time seems in no wise to affect the sparkle of his spirits or the flow of brilliant thought. In a private note accompanying the correspondence, he talks pleasantly of the ADVOCATE and then gets off such a genuine piece of wit that we must beg pardon for an extract. He says: "I enclose you some 'roughness' for your rack. There may be a few cuckle burrs in the straw, but you needn't prick your fingers picking them out. My old cow got off on a rampage day before yesterday, and I've just gotten her in with four milkings in arrears. I am just in from milking the old sinner, and all the buckets, jars and cups were in requisition. A score or more of cuckle burrs were entangled in the hair on the milk reservoir—25 of 'the articles' at least. The old critter stood gently and let me disengage them. What if Zion were thus doleful? Could we not then get at 'the sincere milk of the word' more felicitously? How we have to spread—to spraddle—to avoid being chafed by the cuckle burrs of Calvinism and Romish dogmatism slipped in upon us. I'd like mightily to see you."

The Great Victory at Atlanta.

One of the most remarkable and memorable struggles in the municipal history of America has just been concluded in Atlanta, Ga. Immediately after the passage of the "iron-clad" local option law by the last Legislature, the friends of prohibition in that city began to organize for the contest. That law provides that the question of "license" or "no license" is to be determined by ballot, and by counties, on petition of a certain number of citizens. If the majority vote is in favor of license, there may be another ballot after two years; but, if the prohibitionists carry the county, the question is settled for all time. Already all the 133 counties of Georgia, except 14, have decided in favor of prohibition. In these counties are located the large cities which are strongholds of the rum power and have been supposed invincible against temperance "fanatics." And of these cities the capital city of Atlanta was regarded as the most difficult to capture, being a great railroad center and containing the most attractive saloons and the largest number of wholesale liquor establishments. It required no little faith and courage, therefore, to make the first attack on Fulton county. Defeat there would be felt over the entire State. But, nothing daunted, our friends, marshaling their forces, outlined their plan of operation and entered fearlessly into the conflict. They did not make the mistake of under-estimating the strength of their enemy. Realizing fully the wealth and fertility of his resources and the difficulty of counteracting the influences brought to bear upon the ignorant classes, every friend became an active worker and every soldier a sleepless sentinel. The ablest negro preachers were summoned to assist in winning their race to the side of reform, and the eloquent speeches and sermons of Bishops Campbell and Turner, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, will not soon be forgotten. Determined efforts were made by the whisky men to frighten or entice the negroes away in a body; but they signally failed. Hundreds of them stood for the right and voted as they prayed in defiance of threat or the temptation of a glittering consideration.

And the result was a clean victory. There was no toleration of the doctrine that "the end justifies the means." They would not do evil in order to achieve great good. Not even to banish the demon from an entire city could it be allowed to purchase a single vote or deposit one fraudulent ballot. There was great activity displayed by both sides in securing a full registration, and never was there such a result. Nearly twice as many as at any former election registered, paid their poll tax and exercised the functions of freemen. On the night preceding the election the liquor men gave a grand barbecue to the negroes, and tried to feast them into their ranks. But at the same hour the prohibitionists held a gospel meeting for them, and the spacious tent was crowded to overflowing. The one party left their banquet and paraded the streets; the other marched out of the great gospel tent, several thousand in number, bearing aloft their banners and transparencies. And thus the enthusiasm continued until the polls were closed on the afternoon of the twenty-fifth ultimo.

Another significant feature of the contest was the entire absence of party politics. Democrats and Republicans worked together without difference of opinion or jealousy of party interests. Shoulder to shoulder they stood, battling for a great moral principle whose triumph is far more important and sacred than any mere party success. And that demonstrates the wisdom of non-partisan prohibition. The movement should be kept aloof from the contests for place and power. Advocates of moral reform must not be after the spoils of office. This lesson of the Atlanta victory is worthy of all emulation. So soon as we make prohibition a distinct party measure, unless forced to it by the hostile action of one of the great parties, we are handicapped for all time. We need not disturb the political affections of any citizen. Let him be Democrat or Republican, protectionist or free trader, so he favors the legal and constitutional suppression of the liquor traffic. He can subscribe most entirely to every syllable of his own party creed, and yet give his vote and influence for sobriety, and good morals against the open saloon and the gambling den.

The liquor men have served notice of contest. Already able counsel have been employed, and the poor prohibitionists are threatened with the august name of Roscoe Conkling as their representative before the Supreme Court of the United States. They will die in the last ditch. "There's millions in it," and a ready acquiescence is not to be expected. But their only hope is a legal technicality. The doctrine of prohibition has too often been passed upon by the highest courts of the land ever to be successfully assailed. A clear majority of the citizens of Fulton county cast their ballots against the sale of liquor within its limits, and under the provisions of the Georgia statute the traffic is to be banished henceforth and forever. In an appeal to the courts they are leading a forlorn hope. But their efforts to set aside the victory of the ballot-box ought to warn our friends that continued organization is necessary to secure the impartial, rigid enforcement of the law. The liquor power arrays itself against law, and then argues that such legislation is inoperative. Venerate the judiciary, and prohibition will prohibit.

The Atlanta victory is a trumpet call to the friends of reform all over the South. If a city so infested with doggerles, and aided by the thousands of dollars poured in from the great rum centers, can be emancipated from the bondage of iniquity, we may well hope for the redemption of the whole land. Trusting in the God, whose blessings upon Atlanta were invoked by a million, and more, of Christians on the day of election, we shall sing the song of victory from sea to sea. This result is not to be wrought in a few months, nor is the contest to be a merry dress parade. There must be long patience and lofty courage and earnest prayer. We may expect sneer, insult, misrepresentation and bitter opposition; but these may be gladly endured for the rich recompense of reward. Under the laws we now have let an aggressive movement begin in every neighborhood. Every new victory is an educator of public sentiment. The States are to be captured by fighting in detail—by winning a town or a county at a time. These at length will aggregate a power of influence as resistless as the tides and terrible as an army with banners.

Death of Vice-President Hendricks.

The sudden death of this distinguished citizen and second officer in the United States, on the afternoon of the twenty-fifth ultimo, was a great shock to the country. There had been no tidings of his illness, and no apprehensions were felt but that he would be able to fill out his vice-presidential term. His illness was only for a few hours, and his passing away a surprise to his own household. His wife having left the room but a few moments before, he died without an attendant at his bedside. No last words were spoken—no messages bequeathed to his fellow-countrymen. And thus to the great, as to the small, the solemn warning comes—"In the midst of life we are in death." Lofty station and humble place must alike be visited by the last enemy. No mansion is too stately for him not to enter, and no man too great to escape his certain aim and fatal shaft. And yet no others are so often and so sadly deluded with a false security. There is a certain intoxication or fascination about public life—such an ennoblement about high political position—that disorbs men of their usual caution and, in face of calm judgment, promises an unlimited tenure of life. The sudden death of this great statesman in the very midst of his career, as one of the trusted leaders of his party which has succeeded to power, ought to be a warning, loud and clear, to the whole people.

Mr. Hendricks died at the age of sixty-six, and with a name of unsullied purity. From early manhood he had been more or less identified with party politics, and occupied every place in the gift of his countrymen up to Vice-President; but there was never a stain on his name or a blur on his shield. He was engaged in many fierce political campaigns, and fought like a Trojan for the triumph of his party; but no political antagonist ever questioned the sincerity of his motives or the unsullied integrity of his character. That is much to say, and is an example worthy of all commendation. When "suspicion shadows so many men in high official station, and the spirit of detraction is so conscienceless and unrestrained, such a record needs to be read by the whole American people. And this ought to be an appeal to the public to give loyal, unqualified support to public officials until they are found to be unworthy. A pure, patriotic, Christian citizenship and statesmanship are not an impossibility. True service to country in no way interferes with loyalty to Christ. The two should co-exist and be equally emphasized. Our Lord's exhortation is, "Render, therefore, unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." There is no conflict of duties. Fealty to God and loyalty to Caesar are in perfect harmony. Let us learn that lesson anew around the bier of the second officer of our great government. As governor of Indiana, member of Congress, United States Senator and Vice-President, he lived before the country a life of unimpeached and unimpeachable integrity.

The career of Vice-President Hendricks is an encouragement to every aspiring young American. He occupied a chief place in the eyes of the nation for many years, and attained high position by dint of his own persistent and imperial purpose. Though liberally educated, having graduated at Harvard in 1841, he was not a genius nor a man of unusual gifts. In the practice of his profession he was painstaking and reliable, but never brilliant. His cases were prepared thoroughly and presented strongly, but never exhibiting the grasp and sweep of genius. In official life he was conscientious, accurate and prompt; but neither in the halls of Congress nor on the platform did he exhibit the graces of an orator or any unusual prescience as a statesman. Yet by persistent labor and a pure life he achieved results that will render his name immortal in the history of this continent. What he did is an inspiration to all. With like resources at command and similar rewards in view, each life should be a success, if not sublime. He was buried on Tuesday, of this week, at Indianapolis, with national honors. The great men of the country were there, and messages of condolence from foreign courts were received. Around the open grave of the Vice-President a reunited country gathered and wept.

Short Articles.

BY T. A. S. A.

"Born out of due time." To all the methodical fungi grown up in Moses' seat Jesus was a marplot. He is the stone which the builders rejected. There was in him the irrepressible, the untamable and irreconcilable spirit of authority. Man wants a law that he can use or lay aside as suits his convenience or inclination—one that will stretch or bend without breaking. Jesus was not born to teach such law. Just when the rich man was saying to his soul, "Eat, drink and be merry," Jesus said, "Thou fool!" Just when Peter said, "Though all forsake thee, yet will I never," Jesus said, "Before the cock crows thou wilt have denied me thrice."—Just when Paul is in sight of a city where he is about to reveal in the blood of martyrs he is smitten down. Just when earthly fame opens God shows us where kings at last descend to oblivion. Even our inspirations are of the same type. The call to dare or suffer comes at the wrong time. Like too early or too late a frost, it nips the unripe fruit or the bursting bud.

But if such be true when we look at blasted hopes and plans frustrated, "born out of due time" brings us full compensation in sorrow's hours and pain's sharpest throes. Weeping Mary becomes the joyous messenger of hopes and assurances immortal. The homeless Paul, wandering and in chains, talks more grandly of "the house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." "Always sorrowing, always rejoicing," life's screaming car wheels complain of the power that drives and the power that stays—pushing most when the grade is steepest and load heaviest, and holding back where speed might come of itself. All out of time; but life's wheels run on, creak on in the charge of "One, who born out of due time," runs a special train on limited time for you and me, who must not obstruct the track over which his tremendous trains of freight and passengers must move.

"Do you think novel reading positively injurious?" a young lady asked me this evening. "Not always positively; perhaps, oftener negatively injurious," was the answer. There is much harmless fiction in the world. There is much good fiction. But there is more and better plain fact. Harmless fiction kills, intellectually and morally, by negation. Nitrogen is a harmless gas; but, if we breathe it without any admixture of oxygen, we very soon die. If I kill myself, it makes no difference whether I do it by inhaling chloroform or nitrogen. With one I positively kill myself, and with the other, negatively; but no scientist could tell which was the deadliest, when both killed. Much of the culture of the age is of this harmless kind; but after a certain stage has been reached these cultured people are as incapable of the cardinal virtues of Christianity as the opium eater is of the common sense views of life. The faculties by which sturdy spiritual manhood is characterized are starved and substituted by sentimentalism which acts from no conscious obligation to a sovereign authority and looks to no definite recompense of reward. He who loves the flavor of a peach in a codfish ball better than in the ripe peach has a perverted taste. Yet he may be an aristocrat because he affects that diet.

One with uneducated, native taste would take the peach, less codfish ball.

"I don't take the ADVOCATE; but a friend sends it to me every Monday. Mary loves to read what you write, and hunts that first." With her have I been straying? Has the child's feet been misled by me? I hope not. But I meant to say of the friend who sent the ADVOCATE. She does not go out herself; but she sends her Advocate. How many could do the same, but they do not! Only across the street, and only a paper now old and ready to be destroyed. Do not tear it up. Your neighbor is too poor to take it; send it over to her. Even if she does not appreciate it, the bright-eyed little girl will. This child led me to her mother's house. I was passing down the street, and she recognized me. I asked her name, and she told me. How old? Seven.

"And you know the multiplication table, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"And do you love to learn?"

"Yes, sir."

"And what do you read?"

"Everything I get."

Ah! that everything! Her sister had a novel in her hand. The seven-year-old next. Books, papers, ADVOCATES, for the child before her taste is confirmed for the novel!

Metaphysics, Not Muddy-Physics.

If you want to destroy the influence of a preacher, just let the people begin to say, "He is too metaphysical," and straightway his power for good is gone. The people are greatly prejudiced against metaphysics, or what they call metaphysics. It is a big word and a hard word—generally not well understood—and it is used by the people to define a nameless something—they know not what. Now, metaphysics is a great science, and it ought to be studied carefully and closely by all preachers of the gospel. Indeed, a pretty thorough training in this branch of learning is next of kin to thorough training in theology. The two go pretty well together—in fact, so intimate is the relation between them we have a word that links them into one—metaphysico-theological.

Physics is the study of matter, of material things; metaphysics is the study of mind, immaterial things. The more one knows of metaphysics, of intellectual philosophy, of the human mind, the better is he qualified to adapt his preaching, to expound theology, to the human understanding. Some preachers are deeply metaphysical, and still the people never suspect it because they are simple, plain, direct, and their preaching is understood by the commonest minds because it is so metaphysical. The study of metaphysics taught in the books, or found in men or in the preacher himself, has made, or helped to make, the preacher what he is—efficient and acceptable expounder of theology to the people. So common and widespread is this error with regard to metaphysics, that it would be impossible to persuade the people that a preacher of this kind is a deep man, a profound metaphysician as well as theologian. "Why," say the people, "I know he is not a metaphysician, for we understood every word he said." Exactly so; and for this very reason I know him to be a man of good sense, and that he has a clear knowledge of the human mind—of metaphysics.

Now, some preachers are given to "muddy-physics," and the people have mistaken "muddy-physics" for metaphysics. A genuine metaphysician is always clear, lucid, easy to be understood, acceptable to the people—the common people hear him gladly; but a "muddy-physics" is a burden and a bore wherever he goes. The more intelligent and cultivated people know a "muddy-physics" from a metaphysician at once; but the common people do not know that "muddy-physics" is a burlesque on metaphysics. Some preachers, it seems to me, try to be obscure, hard to be understood, tracing, or pretending to trace, lines of thought where no thought is. They ape philosophy, ape metaphysics, ape theology, and seem to feel themselves complimented when told that they were not understood. Preaching that is not understood is not worth anything. It may be in a dead language to the mass of the people even when English words are used. Some preachers seem to hunt for hard words, uncommon words. It sounds large—particularly to unlettered folks—to put in a "jaw breaker" now and then. To cultured people, to thinking men, it makes the preacher look ridiculous and contemptible in the extreme.

Preachers ought to study metaphysics; but they ought to preach metaphysics; but they ought to leave their metaphysical tools in the workshop, where they belong. Many of the terms used in metaphysics are

Greek of the hardest kind to the great mass of the people. If you do not know enough about metaphysics to turn it into the every-day language of the people, why, then, let it alone. Children should not play with edged tools. It is well for all of us to remember that muddy water appears to be deep, while clear water appears to be shallow. Thousands of good people mistake mud for depth.

A preacher should revolve his subject in his own mind until he understands it, and then tell it to the people in the simplest and most direct way possible. The people will not call such a preacher deep or profound or learned; but they will come to hear him, follow after him, hang upon his words and give him credit for being a man of "common sense." That is what the people call it; but really it is metaphysico-theological sense.

GILDEROT.

"The Suicide of the Soul."

This is the title of a very suggestive editorial in the Richmond Christian Advocate, the most of which we reproduce. It is a fearful fact that even the sacrifices we lay upon the altar must be guarded, or their virtue and reward will be lost. Spiritual experiences themselves sometimes lead to vanity. We have known men to become proud of their praying, and others to be vain of their experiences. On the whole subject the Richmond speaks discriminatingly as follows:

How paltry are titles, distinctions, eminences and applause at the price of the "peace I once enjoyed." The man who carries the basin and towel, servant of all, minding not high things, only bath the fellowship of the Spirit. Insulation from pride and unholy lust of pre-eminence alone insures free course of that unseen and magnetic influence that makes the rule ore of earth kinde and light. The weak current and the uncertain syllables betray a loss of a divine power toward the dirt.

A fine spirit once with us—James D. Couling—said that when a boy in the ministry he had a dream that fixed his course of life. A young man of good parts turned himself in the direction of popular oratory. He gave free rein to his fancy and memorized brilliant extracts. In his prime he died suddenly, and in the vision of the night he seemed to appear to Couling, telling him of a hideous doom in the nether world, warning the trembling speaker never to make a pulpit the theatre for display for poetical declamation and rhetorical zeal. From that night Couling shunned the flowery path of sacred speech. How pithy, pointed and practical he was we all know.

Bishop Paine, at the last General Conference, having finished some personal business he had with the writer, narrated incidents of Bascom as a caution to himself as you do for pulpit display for all the world. The Bishop told how to his own knowledge that dazzling declamation was accustomed to walk his room all night, and so nervous in the morning as to hold with uncertain hand the cup of coffee, barely tasting food while preparing to preach. He gained the bishopric, presided at one Conference and died. Paine said Henry Bascom's pride of reputation was a shirt of Nessus.

As avarice is seen among men of modern fortunes as among the rich, so there may be an equal vanity and hot desire for the first place in the heart of aspiring impotence. The man can not leap the hedge like a greyhound; but, squeezing himself between the rails, he is as hot in pursuit of the same game. As unlines seeking admiration arrays itself in finer garb than Venus herself, so the arts to advancement are often used with assiduity by individuals of middling gifts as men of genius. Is the holy calling it is the suicide of the soul.

Yours fraternally,

J. W. LAFRANCE.

MR. EDITOR: I wish, through the columns of your paper, to make a suggestion. In your last issue I heard stating the necessities of our condition and critical illness of our ventral and beloved brother and father in Israel, Rev. Joseph Nicolson. What I would suggest is this: He will certainly receive an appropriation from the superannuated preachers' fund at Conference. Therefore, let our preacher of the Mississippi Conference, who has collected anything of this fund forward to Bro. Nicolson say, one or two dollars of same to be charged to him and taken out of his appropriation at Conference. He would need the money now much more than he will then. Or, better still, let every preacher make a private appeal to a few personal friends, and by this means raise a few dollars, a true and tried veteran of the cause. I am doing both.

Yours fraternally,

R. J. COTTON.

ANGUILLA, MISS. (Nov. 21, 1885.)

—Bishop Granbery is holding the Conference in Arkansas.

—Rev. J. W. Compton, of the Columbia Conference, has been chosen one of the corresponding editors of the Pacific Methodist.

—Rev. H. B. Scruggs, of the North Mississippi Conference, was in the city on Sunday en route to Texas, where he will in future reside.

—Archdeacon Farrar will deliver a lecture in New York to-day, entitled, "Farewell Thoughts on America," and then set sail for merry England.

—Bishop Hargrove passed through the city on Tuesday morning from Texas to Kosciusko. We regret he hadn't time to pay the ADVOCATE office a call.

—Bishop Whittle has appointed the twelfth of December as the day on which the clergy of his diocese are requested to preach against intemperance.

—Rev. Isaac W. Joyce, D. D., of Cincinnati, has been appointed by the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church fraternal delegate to the Methodist Church of Canada.

—The North Mississippi Conference meets this week in Kosciusko, with Bishop Hargrove in the chair. The editor left on Tuesday evening to attend the session.

—The donation of Mr. William H. Vanderbilt to the Vanderbilt University, of which mention was made last week, was a $10,000 check for the benefit of the library.

—The Arkansas Methodist has come out in new dress and larger form. We congratulate Drs. Winfield and Dye, and wish them the journalistic success they eminently merit.

—Dr. John Mathews is having such crowds attending his new church (Washington Street, Kansas City) that arrangements are being made to provide five hundred additional sittings.

—Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Sons, of 298 Broadway, New York, have our special thanks for specimens of their superb Christmas cards. The artist's genius must have been well-nigh exhausted in producing these beautiful designs.

—Rev. W. W. Hopper, writing from Port Hudson, La., says that his charge will report well, both spiritually and financially, at Conference. He concludes: "Decks will soon be cleared of Conference claims and all in excess of assessments."

—We had a pleasant call last week from Hon. H. C. Williamson, member-elect of the Mississippi Legislature from the county of Carroll. He has been an active, efficient legislator in several sessions of that body, and is a prominent candidate for Speaker.

—Sam Jones has commenced his meetings in St. Louis, assisted by Sam Small. The weather has been unpropitious, but the crowds have been great and the interest increases. The meetings will be held mostly in Centenary Church, of which Dr. Tudor is pastor.

—The star of Prince Alexander, of Bulgaria, is in the ascendant. In person he led his heroic legions against the invading Servians and routed them with great slaughter. King Milan, of Serbia, is now suffering the mortification of defeat and the folly of ambitious rashness.

—A note from Bishop Keener, written from the seat of the North Carolina Conference, reports himself as in the health, and a delightful session of the Conference in the old North State. After the session of the South Carolina Conference the Bishop will return home from a three months continued absence.

—Dr. Ahrens returned from the German Mission Conference on Tuesday morning in company with Bishop Hargrove. He remains on the New Orleans district as presiding elder, and is also pastor at Craps Street. Delegates elect to the General Conference: Clerical—F. Vordenbaumen; alternate—J. A. G. Rabe, Lay—A. Dering; alternate, H. R. Roco. Dr. Ahrens will give an account of the Conference in our next issue.

—We sympathize with Rev. J. W. Newman, of the North Alabama Conference, in the sore bereavement he has sustained by the death of his saluted wife. She was an accomplished lady and an intelligent Christian. We had the pleasure of meeting her last winter on the cars moving from Birmingham to the parsonage at Gadsden, and feared then that the time of her departure was near at hand. At the recent Conference Bro. Newman was appointed to Huntsville.

—We have received the "Prospectus of the Free-Churchman," a paper to be published in Water Valley, Miss., beginning January 1, 1886. M. D. Fly will be the editor, and A. B. Fly, Jr., and M. D. Fly, proprietors. The paper will be independent both in religion and politics, but will especially advocate the doctrines and polity of the Methodist Free Church in America. These brethren are well known in our Episcopal Methodist connection with us, and are eminently able to make an interesting journal.

—The Rev. Dr. Pope, of the Wesleyan Methodist Connection in England, reported some weeks ago as in failing health, seems not to improve. The gravest apprehensions are entertained as to the result. The London Methodist Times, of November 12, thus refers to his illness: "We devoutly wish that we could inform our readers of some real improvement in the health of Dr. Pope, and that we could encourage the hope that Didsbury College will soon enjoy again the invaluable services of our great theological tutor. Since the publication of our last issue, a slight change for the better has taken place, but the probability of Dr. Pope resuming his work is still as remote as it has been any time during the last few weeks."

—The North-West Texas Conference met at Paris, Tex., November 18, Bishop Hargrove presiding. E. C. DeJernett was re-elected secretary. The Conference promptly agreed to raise the amount assessed to Palme Institute after an address by Dr. McFerrin. Dr. Young conducted missionary day in an interesting way. M. M. Dunn and Calvin L. Ballard were announced as transfers from the North Mississippi Conference.

By a unanimous vote the Conference negatived the proposition to change the name of the church. It required six ballots to secure the clerical delegation to the General Conference. The following were elected: M. H. Neely, W. H. Hughes, T. R. Pierce, M. C. Blackburn; alternates—J. M. Binkley, R. M. Powers. Lay delegates—Asa Holt, J. W. Fulton, J. H. Mathews, R. A. Morris; alternates—F. H. Welch, J. S. Noble.

—The North Alabama Conference session at Gadsden was an enjoyable and profitable occasion. Bishop Wilson presided, and was sufficiently recovered from his long illness to discharge all his duties, in the chair and out. On Sunday he preached with the vigor and eloquence of other years. Prof. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, was present, and delighted the Conference with his speaking and preaching. Bro. L. D. Palmer was on hand looking after the interests of the Publishing House. Rev. W. C. Dunlap addressed the Conference in behalf of Palme Institute, and received $700 in cash and subscriptions—the full amount assessed. There was an increase of $203.10 for foreign missions, and a decrease of $158.50 for domestic missions. The collection for church extension failed to reach the figure of last year by $2.65. The Conference agreed to raise one-fourth of the assessment for foreign missions, and forward the same to the treasurer by February 1, 1886. The following were elected delegates to the General Conference: Clerical—Anson West, S. M. Hosmer, V. O. Hawkins, T. G. Slaughter; alternates—J. A. Thompson, R. A. Timmons. Lay—Dr. W. C. Wheeler, A. C. Miller, Rev. W. L. Wilson, Dr. W. L. Thompson; alternates—Judge W. B. Wood, J. H. Harris.

We are indebted to the thoughtful kindness of Rev. John G. Jones for the following account of a happy social event. The ADVOCATE's blessings will follow the young titheants to their Virginia home. "Married, November 24, 1885, at Crystal Springs, Miss., in the Methodist Church, which was filled to its utmost capacity, by Rev. B. F. Jones, Rev. J. G. Jones, Rev. E. E. Harrell, of the Virginia Conference, to Miss Laurentia Lewis, daughter of Rev. W. B. Lewis. "At the conclusion of the ceremony, while yet standing at the altar, the bride received from the Sabbath-school of the church by the hands of Mr. Lawson, who is a zealous Sabbath-school worker, as a token of their love for her personally and their gratitude to her for her four years' zealous work in their Sunday-school and Bible class, a magnificent silver pitcher and cup. As Mr. Lawson delivered the gift he made a short, but very appropriate address, setting forth the love and gratitude which prompted the donation. On returning to the parsonage the bride received such a profusion of valuable bridal presents as has seldom been seen in Mississippi. One thing which the bride party prized highly was that there were present six itinerant preachers of the Mississippi Conference who are near blood relations to the bride—three Lewises and three Joneses. After partaking of the wedding feast, and spending several hours in the most agreeable social enjoyment, the bride party took the midnight train for the groom's maternal home in North Carolina. Mr. Harrell has a pastoral charge for next year at Chatham, Va.

North Louisiana Notes.

In November, 1884, the writer accompanied the presiding elder of the Shreveport district on a visit to the church at Bayou Sale, Many circuit. On beginning a service on Sunday it was observed that the house did not contain more than one-half the congregation. The preacher made some remarks upon the subject of building a new house, which seemed to bear immediate fruit, for the sum necessary was subscribed before the congregation dispersed from the place. On last Sunday the new house was solemnly dedicated to God's service in the presence of a multitude of people, and at the close of the evening meeting the young gentleman who had subscribed the first bale of cotton a year ago and who had been very active in building the church, was admitted to membership, a good omen of future increase. In the Quarterly Conference it was stated that more than seventeen hundred dollars had been contributed this year to church building on the double circuit of Many and Sabine under the ministry of the two preachers, Rev. H. J. Boltz and Rev. J. M. Franklin, and this has not been a good year for building churches either, because of short crops and hard times. I regret to say that the salaries of the preachers had not been paid in proportion to the contributions for other purposes; but it is to be hoped that it is not too late yet for the balance to be made up. "Who planteth a vineyard and eateth not the fruit thereof? Or, who feedeth a flock and eateth not of the milk of the flock?" This is a very large circuit, and will probably have to be divided.

I am now on a visit to my son, at Natchitoches, who, being a professor in the State Normal School, has shown me the foundations of this new educational enterprise. The place is beautiful for situation; the town is as old as Philadelphia, and the citizens feel great interest in the success of the school. Quite a handsome class of young ladies and gentlemen are here preparing themselves for the work of teaching. The State and the Peabody Fund have given liberal sums to pay the expenses of the first year, and, no doubt, the school will become a permanent training school for the public school teachers of Louisiana, an institution greatly needed. Board is reasonably low; the buildings are ample; tuition free, and the faculty are accomplished instructors. Like all State institutions it labors under the infirmity of non-religious influence, for where Jew, Catholic, Protestant and infidel are all equally concerned Christ is not remembered. This was long time a convent, and what pious instructions were here given the world has forgotten, for the march of secular education has trodden down these sacred relics of the past. But is there to be no place for religion in our State institutions? If not, then the churches, for the sake of self-preservation, are bound to have schools of their own. While the light of modern science falls into these cloistered halls, let not the sacred mysteries of religion be hauled from them; but rather let the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ shine into them.

F. M. ORACE.

Ascension Parish—Some of Its Claims.

MR. EDITOR: By the earnest request of one faithful man I write this article, hoping herein to set forth some of the claims of Ascension parish upon the Louisiana Conference. Two organized churches, four flourishing Sunday-schools and several other points easily accessible to Protestant preaching, afford a very favorable opening to our work in this dark and neglected district. The country, so far as I can ascertain, is pretty thickly settled, though many of our flock are poor. There seems to be some vital power in the hearts of a few, although they have never had a pastor appointed by the Conference. The church work here has been done by some of our earnest Mississippi brethren. The schools here will have a five or six months' run next year. They pay thirty dollars per month in cash and only require five hours per day. Now, I am informed that if the people can get a pastor they can procure one of the schools for him in order to supplement his salary. This, with a little quinquage and about one hundred dollars missionary money, would be a reasonable support. Why not send these destitute people a preacher? Does it not seem that their night has been long enough? "The harvest, truly, is plentiful," but there are now no reapers.

Fraternally yours,

C. E. McLEAN.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

The secretaries of the Woman's Missionary Societies, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, will please give to their pastors their reports of money received and the number of missionary periodicals taken since the last Annual Conference, December, 1884. The pastors will be pleased to receive quarterly reports to add to their reports for Quarterly Conference. We occasionally add to the written notice of our monthly meetings the request that all who do not attend will please send one portion of the hour in prayer.

MRS. E. D. JONES,
Vice-Pre. W. M. S.
CABLES, MISS., Nov. 30, 1885.

The Night before Conference.

On Tuesday, December 15, the Woman's Missionary Society of this place will have a public meeting. There will be addresses by Rev. J. M. Weems and Miss Jennie E. Petty, and some juvenile declamations. The Vicksburg and Meridian railroad and the New Orleans and North-eastern arrive in time for the exercises.

W. C. BLACK.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

OARVER & JAMERSON.

Books and Periodicals.

—The Bay State Monthly, for November, has been received and examined. In the general purpose and spirit of this magazine we are much interested. It occupies a field all its own. The editorial taste displayed in its conduct is of the first order. Pickett's Charge, The Patriot—Samuel Adams, The Old State House, The Precious Metals, Kate Field's New Departure, Elizabeth, etc., indicate the character of this number. Boston: Bay State Monthly Company, 43 Milk street.

—The Quiver, for December, is on our table. This number begins a course on "Famous Pictures and the Lessons they Teach," with Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Infant Samuel," giving a very satisfactory engraving after the original. Two new serials, "The Hair of Sandford Towers," and "Oliver Langton's Word," are begun in this number. "A Husband and Wife Mutual Improvement Society" is a capital paper by Rev. E. J. Hardy. Indeed, this is an excellent number and is cordially commended. Cassell & Co., New York. $1.00 a year in advance.

The Magazine of Art, for December, is a number to delight the eye and the mind. Its frontispiece is a reproduction of Van Ryssdale's "Caecede with the Watch Tower." The opening paper is on J. W. Waterhouse, A. R. A., illustrated with several fine engravings from his best work. One, "The Oracle," is given a full page in which to show its beauties. "Art in Egypt," "A French Theatrical Museum," "A Chapter on Chairs" and other fine papers make up an admirable number. The department of notes is as full and interesting as usual. Cassell & Co., New York. $3.50 per year in advance.

—The Homiletic Magazine, for November, is on our table, and is always welcome. We read this monthly with interest, and it contains the richest thoughts of the greatest English divines. Opportunity is thus given to compare the different methods of pulpit discourse. This number opens with a fine sermon, "The Crucial Hour," by Rev. E. Bersier, D. D. The department of Practical Homiletics is well filled. The synopsis on the question, "Is Salvation Possible After Death?" continues. A very readable paper in this issue is on "The Morality of the Old Testament." Some fine articles appear in the Expository section. New York: A. D. F. Randolph & Co. Price, thirty cents.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York, and the highest medical authorities, as the most perfect and general remedy for the most difficult and dangerous diseases, in which Cod Liver Oil is required, and is more beneficial to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and R. H. TRUX, New York.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.
MRS. WINDLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used for children's teething. It soothes the child, settles the stomach, allays all pain, cures wind, colic, and is the best restorative for diarrhoea. See a bottle and the best restorative for diarrhoea. See a bottle and the best restorative for diarrhoea.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap boils and dissolves, 25c. German Corn Remover kills corns, 25c. Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c. Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 15 minutes, 25c.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROOMS AND BOARDING.

ROOMS—Furnished with or without board; central, central, in immediate neighborhood; Exposition and Jackson railroad cars pass the door; every convenience. First class accommodations. 132 Grand street. Mrs. G. F. THOMPSON.

ROOMS AND BOARD, AND ALSO MEALS FURNISHED.

Mrs. J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN, No. 175 ST. JOSEPH STREET (Near St. Charles St.), NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Cars and Churches very convenient.

YALE & BOWLING,
WHOLESALE
DRY GOODS
AND NOTIONS
17, 19, & 21 Magazine and 88 Common Streets,
NEW ORLEANS.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

OARVER & JAMERSON,
Publishers.

H. D. COLEMAN.—Do not fail to read the advertisements of this enterprising manufacturer, which will be seen in this issue of the ADVOCATE. Mr. Coleman offers to the public machinery of every description, the make and quality of which is unsurpassed; all made in this city under the direct supervision of first-class mechanics. He is also the agent of a long list of Northern and Western manufacturers. Write for catalogue.

Very rash—A boy with measles.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of Dr. M. W. Case, offering to the public a remedy for catarrh, beside the testimonial given in the advertisement. The doctor will mail to any address his pamphlet, with treatment and further testimony.

Trade wind—A drummer's talk.

WEAVING HOUSE ENGINES.—For prices and testimonials write to H. Dudley Coleman, 9 and 11 Perdido street, New Orleans.

A trim ankle is as pretty a horse carriage as we want to see.

The heat Ankle-Boot and Collar Pedic are made of zinc and leather. Try this.

Some ministers only "stand high" in the community when they are in the pulpit.

Direct importation of China matting, fine carpets, etc., in endless variety at Hirsman's immense establishment, 25 and 27 Chartres street. Here is found the largest stock in the South. With ample facilities for exhibiting to purchasers, and prices lower than ever, you will be well pleased that you called at Hirsman's.

Henry Ward Beecher is in favor of high license and he wants it proportionately broad.

Fine clothing for men and the finest in the city for boys can be found at McDowell's, St. Charles and Common.

Any wood butcher can nail up a counter, but it takes a detect live in a counterfitter.

In cooking, to get the best results, get the best stove. The first cost is a trifle more for a good than for a poor article. A stove that will cook to perfection, and withstand the heaviest blows and not break, is the one to get. These are the qualities of the Home Comfort, J. H. Aitken, agent, 110 Camp street, New Orleans. See advertisement.

Be a young woman ever so modest, it is perfectly proper for her to woo the drowsy god.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

Mary and Willie, aged respectively six and four years, were sitting together in one large rocking chair near a window during a heavy thunder storm. As the lightning grew more vivid and deafening, Mary, who sat nearest the window, began to be greatly frightened; but her little brother very promptly said, "Let us sit on the thunder-side, sister." Was ever any thing so beautifully polite or truly chivalrous!

Mr. George Manville Peim, whose work is constantly increasing in popularity, has written a serial story called "Ira Trials," for the YOUNG MAN. It deals with boy life in an English manufacturing town, and is said to be unusually dramatic.

"I can't understand it," said Mrs. Bromley, the other day. "When dry goods are cheap money is always scarce. It's like a pair of scales where both ends go down at once."

THOSE who preach, lecture, declaim or sing, will do and do well if they will read and read the "Honey of Horeb" and "The Restoration of the Voice in Cases of Hoarseness." It also cures coughs and sore throat rapidly and completely. Sold by all Druggists at 25c., 50c. and $1.

There is a man in Hoboken who has failed in business so many times that his friends offer odds that when he pays his debt to nature he won't pay over twenty cents on the dollar.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Waterbury's Steel Pens.

P. WERLEIN.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of Pianos, Organs, and musical instruments, increases at the Werlein Music Palace, 135 Canal street. The wonder is where will the custom come from to absorb this immense stock. The liberal terms combined with satisfactory prices and safe guarantee offered by Mr. Werlein, give the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is continually spreading out in every direction, and necessitating the carrying of a large and well selected stock of music and musical instruments of every description. Call and see; courteous treatment is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished on application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite all summer resort. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change cannot be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents, that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

A MONTHLY BOARD for 3 live Young Men or Ladies in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., Philadelphia.

The Great Electric Lamp, 50 to 60 Candle Power.

Burns coal oil at any time with absolute safety. The best and cheapest light ever introduced for private use. See Halls, Mines, Churches, Factories, etc. Give us anything ever offered. Write for Descriptive Circulars; terms to dealers and agents.

HALL & TAYLOR, Manufacturers, 260 W. Balto. St., BALTIMORE, MD.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash,
Blind and Door
FACTORY.

199, 201, 203, 205, 207 Gravier Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO.
Proprietors.

Shut, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Flooring and Ceiling, Newels, Balusters, etc., always on hand, and made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty

BRANCH OFFICE:

NO. 53 CAROLINE STREET.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

CHINA MATTING

JUST RECEIVED DIRECT FROM CHINA.

RED CHECK, DAMASK and JOINTLESS, in all colors, offered at the very lowest prices.

A. Brousseau's Son

22 and 24 Chartres Street, 22 and 24

Lace Curtains from $1.50 pair upwards.

Curtain Poles from 75 cents upward.

WINDOW SHADES.

OIL CLOTH, LINOLEUM,

CARPETS

In all grades and at prices to suit.

Curtain and Furniture Goods in great variety.

Hartshorn Spring Rollers at Factory prices.

HOME COMFORT

These Ranges have been awarded Four Medals at the World's Exposition.

J. H. AITKEN & CO.,

110 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, AGENTS.

SHAFTING, JOURNAL

BOXES AND PULLEYS,

For Transmission of Power.

Made of best iron, and by use of latest improved machinery, I am enabled to compete with other manufacturers, and solicit the patronage of the trade.

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN,

No. 8 Perdido St., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DIUTURNITY.

A Chemical Essay.

Showing the world's infamy. Its human future. Unfolding the mysteries of the past. A history of the world. The story of science. Scope of Christianity. History of a Millennium. Human second coming of Christ, and the glorious destiny of mankind.

Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.50 by Mail.

"No ordinary ability is displayed. Have read the whole book with unflagging interest. Very readable and very remarkable book."—J. C. Abel, Stevens, in N. Y. Mail.

"One of the most remarkable books ever read. Reminding one of the Bible, Apocryphal and Apocryphal. One of the great inducements to philosophy. Original, bold, and suggestive."—Rev. Dr. T. O. Summers, South. Ch. Adv.

"A man of mature and scholarly mind and extensive reading. Style, clear and elevated."—Ch. Adv.

"Historical, clear, precise, and clear."—Ch. Adv.

"An entirely original, argument, readable and remarkable."—J. C. Pres. Herald.

"Naturally in the line of the book of the age."—Ch. Adv.

"Very readable and very interesting."—Man.

"All the above and over one hundred more commendatory quotations."

Ecce Ecclesia.

By REV. H. ABBEY.

(First published anonymously.)

Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. 12 mo. $1.50 by Mail.

"A familiar treatise on ecclesiastical science, correcting many popular errors. Cited elaborately when the author was unknown."

"It will make a sensation in the religious world. Better still, it will dispel many errors."—Pres. (Ch. Adv.).

"The author is an acute and original writer, and writes very clear out of the original rules in which most writers fail."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"Ecce Ecclesia."—The greatest book of the age."—N. Y. Ch. Adv.

"There is no book in my library I prize more."—Rev. Dr. F. J. Will, St. Louis.

"The book is as it has existed in all ages (one of the most original and suggestive ever read); one of the most valuable and valuable ever written."—Rev. Dr. T. O. Summers, in South. Ch. Adv.

"It ought to place the author among the leading writers of the age."—Ch. Adv.

"Calculated to modify the theology of the world."—Ch. Adv.

"Protest

Christian Advocate.

Marriages.

WELLS-HOLMES.—At the residence of the bride's father, Col. Robert Holmes, Desoto parish, La., November 18, 1885, by Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburg, Mr. T. J. Wells, Jr., and Miss Estelle Holmes.

MITCHELL-BISHOP.—On November 18, 1885, by Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburg, Mr. D. F. Mitchell, of Texas, and Miss Doris I. Bishop, of Desoto.

WEBB-KIRKPATRICK.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Winston county, Miss., November 18, 1885, by Rev. Joseph A. Leach, Mr. N. W. Webb, of Texas, and Miss Kirkpatrick.

FOHN-WOOD.—At the Methodist parsonage, Sharon, Miss., November 19, 1885, by Rev. J. B. Parker, Mr. Wm. F. Ford, of Dallas, Texas, to Miss George E. Wood, of Sharon, Miss.

HAYES-GIBSON.—Near Camden, Miss., November 18, 1885, by Rev. J. B. Parker, Mr. C. H. Hayes, of Mississippi, to Miss Gibson, of Camden, Miss.

CHAMBERLAIN.—At the residence of the bride's mother, November 18, 1885, by Rev. L. P. Newell, Mr. R. E. Clark, of Winston county, to Miss Lou Chamberlain, of New Orleans, Miss.

Obituaries.

GRAMLING.—Died at her home near Mayaville, Miss., October 6, 1885, Miss Emma Gramling, in her twenty-second year.

Miss Emma joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Brookhaven, Miss., in 1879. The same year she graduated from the Brookhaven College. She returned to her home in Issaquena county, and maintained her religious integrity to the day of her death.

Born and reared in a community not only lacking in piety, but where worldly-mindedness and sin abounded, it took religion of the true type. Such she not only possessed, but she was a true religionist. Her worldly-mindedness and sin abounded around her, like a young heroine of the cross, with her faith founded on the Rock of Ages, she stood unmoved. Her Christian character was unblemished. Two months before her death she died an invitation to the parsonage to die on Sunday, asking the writer at the time if he thought it wrong to visit on Sunday. "This merely gives an insight into the conscientiousness of her character."

Some six weeks before her death, after I had preached from Christ's promise to give rest to the weary and heavy-laden, she came up to tell me how much she enjoyed the sermon, more than any she had ever heard me preach. Only to think, that she who delighted so much even in this life to hear of that rest, had been translated by the angel of death, from this world of trial and conflict, to enjoy forever that rest that remains to the people of God.

She was consecrated and devoted to her Master and his cause. She loved the church and Sunday-school. Since death has robbed us of this faithful and zealous young Christian, often have I unconsciously listened to the light of her well-known voice that sung in such melody of her Savior's love. But she is gone. Oh! how we miss her. Another seat is vacant in the Sunday-school and church. That sweet voice that so often made melody in the home circle is hushed in death. But cheerful face made lovely by the light of God's countenance, always carrying sunshine and joy wherever it went, is buried beneath the sod; but her glorified spirit has joined the redeemed host to spend an eternity in praising her God.

"She being dead yet speaketh." "Her works do follow her." "She conquered when she fell." I am confident that her life and death has quickened the zeal, aroused the lethargy, the indifference of some in the community.

Having lived such a beautiful and consistent life, it is not surprising that she died such a triumphant death. Death to her was no terror. It had been robbed of its sting. When her physician told her that she could not live much longer, she replied: "That's all right; I'm ready." She talked cheerfully of her death and expressed her willingness to go. She asked those around her not to weep for her, but to try to meet her in heaven. After reading her dear old Bible, which had long been her companion, singing and praying, her spirit was borne by "angel hands" to her "immortal home."

She who had lived with such courageous fidelity to her Savior, who honored him with a triumphant death. The community mourns, the church mourns, and every one that knew her unite in shedding tears of sorrow with the bereaved family.

Let us all strive to emulate her example, take courage in the face of death, she won over the last enemy and meet her in "the sweet by and by," where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

To the bereaved family we would say: You weep not as those who have no hope. She has gone to her Savior. By living as she lived, you can meet her where "parting is known no more."

M. H. MOORE.

Tallahatchie Floridian please copy.

McKINNON-MELISSA YOUNG.—Daughter of William and E. Matheny, born in Copiah county, Miss., May 1, 1841, and died at Angelina county, Texas, November 8, 1885. She was married twice: first to G. W. Henington; next to R. E. McKinnon, January 6, 1866, who lives to mourn her loss.

Sister McKinnon was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of ten. She left eight children to follow her to the better land, and three preceded her there. She had well developed, too, all those virtues which make home happy and endear her to neighbors and friends, and she was much loved by the community.

As a Christian, her life was marked by quietness and humbleness of spirit. She encouraged her husband to the faithful to his religious engagements. She was kind and tender as a mother; affectionate and faithful as a wife; noble and generous as a neighbor; and constant and devoted as a Christian. Her God saw best to call her home, by sending death in the form of that dreadful disease, consumption.

Her last moments she was resigned, having no fear of death, but assured those standing by that she was ready for the solemn change. Sad, indeed, would be the hearts of those who were not for the light of her last words shining there, giving a sweet contrast to the broken-hearted family. Just before her last words, she asked all the members of the family to meet her in heaven, and she died shouting:

"Farwell, God, farwell, Mother; but, thank God, not forever. No, only a little while, then we will meet on that beautiful shore in the sweet by and by."

J. O. CALHOUN.

HICKMAN.—MRS. MISSOURI JANE HICKMAN, daughter of Isham and Elizabeth Beasley, and wife of Andrew J. Hickman, was born in Copiah county, Miss., September 23, 1851; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. A. B. Nicholson, in 1871; was converted at Providence Camp Ground in October, 1875; was married to A. J. Hickman, December 5, 1875, and died at her home in Lowrance county, Miss., November 5, 1885, aged thirty-two years, one month and twelve days.

It is with a sad heart we chronicle the death of this noble and Christian woman. Having been born in the lap of Methodism, and nurtured in her doctrines and polity, she exhibited in her life and character the peculiar characteristics of that genuine piety which enable our people "to die well."

Sister Hickman was gentle, kind and amiable, and her Christian modesty was a gem in the crown of her moral womanhood. Her experience as a Christian was steadfast. Her faith unswerving, and her life a beautiful commentary on the religion she both professed and lived. Though thus early called away, it was not before she had "professed a good profession before many witnesses," and her Christian character and worth had come to be known and appreciated.

The writer of this imperfect tribute has been her pastor for three years, and knew her well, and has often studied her peculiar traits of Christian character, gentleness, forbearance, patience, and tenderness of heart. We will miss her sadly, but our loss is her eternal gain. She leaves a husband in sorrow, and four little children in lone orphanage. May heaven's richest blessing abide with them ever.

The following resolutions were adopted by Bahala Chapel Sunday-school:

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Hickman, our Sunday-school and community has lost a worthy and devoted Christian, and Bro. Hickman a faithful and loving companion, and their children a kind-hearted and affectionate mother.

Resolved, That while we feel the sorrow and deeply sympathize with her worthy brother and former superintendent, we bow with humble submission to the will of him who is too wise to err and too good to do wrong.

Resolved, That a copy of the above be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday-school; also a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

H. P. LEWIS, For Committee.

DOYLE.—Miss Emma N. Doyle, daughter of Capt. D. B. Doyle, departed this life September 10, 1885, at Doyle, Webster parish, La.

Miss Emma was a faithful and worthy member of the Methodist Church, and doubtless enjoyed sweet fellowship with her Savior, and an ever-abiding confidence in him as her best friend. Emma was kind to her devoted father and mother, and affectionate to her kind brothers and sisters. By her gentle and modest manners she won the hearts of all who knew her.

Sister Emma was a true and constant member of the Sunday-school, for which she worked diligently. But her place therein is forever vacated. But Jesus had said, "Come up higher."

Our thoughts naturally reverted back to her last work for the Master—raising money for the erection of a new church at Doyle. That church is now going up, and soon the family with neighbors and fellow-worshippers will enjoy the benefits and comforts of the same; but dear Sister Emma, whose untiring energies were devotedly given in fitting up their temple of worship, will be missed when they gather at that beautiful church.

But thanks be unto our God, she will not be missing when we gather around the beautiful white throne on high. Her devoted pastor,

H. M. BLOOMER.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

It is very annoying when in the bath to drop the soap and have to feel for it. The Ivory Soap floats, and is without exception the most luxurious Soap for bathing, it lathers freely, and is easily rinsed off, leaving a sense of cleanliness and comfort attainable by no other means.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

CATARRH. CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, DEAFNESS, CURED AT HOME. NEW PAMPHLET, FREE. Address, Dr. M. W. CARR, 1311 Avenue of the Americas, New York City.

DR. CASE'S CARBOLATE OF TAR INHALANT. BALTIMORE, Md., Va., August 29, 1882.

Dr. M. W. CARR:—I began the use of your remedy for Catarrh and Bronchitis in September 1881. I tried it for three weeks, and it completely cured me. I was very much distressed by the disease. My usual occupation was constantly interrupted. Now I am perfectly well, and I feel as if I had been born again.

Yours truly, D. G. C. BUIST.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Wrought & Cast Iron Jack Screws.

These Jack Screws have broad base, stout handle, in half-pinted top. We make more than 20 different styles and sizes. Price from $6 up.

Send for Jack Screw Price List.

RUNNEY & CO., Seneca Falls, N. Y., U. S. A.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $15. Stem-winding Gold Watches at $15 and upwards. All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & Co., 119 Canal Street, New Orleans.

W. G. WHEELER, Clothing and Furnishing Goods.

Successor in Wholesale to WHEELER & PIERSON, 54 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

Stoves, Grates, House-furnishing Hardware.

IRON AND SLATE MANTLES. MANUFACTURER OF GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES AND—

Ornamental Work. GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING. GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION.

I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country.

The best Stove in the market is the Celebrated CHAMPION MONITOR. I have stoves varying in price from $6 to $100.

J. H. CAMPBELL, 101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WOODEN WARE, PAPER GLASSWARE, Hardware, Stoneware, Tin, Cerdage.

J. C. MORRIS, 40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas street.

B. D. WOOD & BROS., COAL and COKE, Dealers in Best Qualities of

47 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

MECHANIC'S & TRADER'S Insurance Company. 14 CARondelet STREET, New Orleans, La.

Solicits Fire, River and Marine Risks. AT LOWEST TARIFF RATES.

Geo. H. Frost, Secretary. Lloyd R. Coleman, President. J. M. Craythorn, Asst. Sec. and Fire Clk. Maria and River Clk. (Late Sec. Union Ins. Co.) R. C. Shortridge, Collector. F. A. Zou, Inspector.

Factors' and Traders' Insurance Company. 49 CARondelet STREET.

Paid Up Capital $1,000,000.

ED. A. PALFREY, President. JOHN PHELPS, Vice President. THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Issues Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest Tariff Rates.

CRESCENT Insurance Company Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1820—25-cent stock in 1820.

CASH CAPITAL $400,000.

Has paid over NINE MILLIONS for losses since 1820.

Annual and Term Policies issued on Desirable Fire Business.

W. R. LYMAN, President. CHAS. H. DOLBEAR, Vice President. CHAS. E. RICE, Secretary.

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ANDERSON, HARRIS & Co. MANUFACTURERS OF Carriages, Phaetons.

Platform and Half Platform Spring Wagons, CINCINNATI, OHIO, U. S. A.

SEND FOR FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

WM. H. PIERSON SUCCESSOR TO WHEELER & PIERSON CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS, Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 16 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them. Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent O. O. D.

D. H. Holmes.

We hereby announce that from this date we offer our whole stock of Merchandise on hand and to arrive, amounting to near one million dollars, at and BELOW COST. Such an occasion for purchasing first-class Dry Goods, at unprecedentedly low figures, may not occur once in a lifetime.

All Goods are marked in plain figures.

1556 Canal St.

EMPLOYMENT

Will be given to all who are ready and willing to work. This is a good chance to make money, selling such popular and attractive books as Hon. Alex. H. Stephens' "HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES," with new appendix; "GAY'S ENCYCLOPEDIA AND SELF-EDUCATOR," "BURIED CITY RECOVERED"—one of the best and fastest selling religious books. Also the Family Bibles. A beautiful line of Albums—sold only by subscription.

Write for descriptive circulars and terms.

B. F. JOHNSON & Co., 1013 Main St., Richmond, Va.

The Southern Insurance Company, OF NEW ORLEANS. Office, No. 31 Camp Street.

Capital Subscribed $500,000.00. Capital Paid in $100,000.00. Assets, 1st of January, 1885, $317,700.00.

Fire, River and Marine Insurance at fair and equitable rates. Losses promptly adjusted and paid. Ample security offered to insured both by the resources and conservative policy of the company.

ERNEST MILTENBERGER, President.

H. GALLY, Vice-President. SCOTT MOGHRE, Secretary.

Finance Committee: John T. Moore Jr., M. Schwaetzer, J. H. Meager, Louis Bush, J. A. Lafaye.

No. 56 USE THE St. Charles St.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can, in some cases, restore the sight, if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard: they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cool, and the result is that the optic nerves always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Beware of Counterfeits—None Genuine Unless Stamped.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, MEDICATED.

Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who wish to procure these spectacles, or send for a circular containing description, prices, etc., and directions for insuring a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

A. ANSELL, SUCCESSOR TO HERC. HOUSAH, CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY, 56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

In writing mention this paper.

T. J. CARVER. B. O. L. RAYNE.

T. J. CARVER & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, 44 Perdido Street.

The patronage of our friends and the public respectfully solicited.

PRAYER AND PRAISE. Edited by REV. ATTIOUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D., and Prof. R. M. MINTOSH.

We confidently believe this to be the most powerful combination of Gospel Songs for Prayer meetings, Fairs, meetings, Camp meetings, Religious meetings, Missionary meetings, Revivals, and Religious Festivals, ever published in this or any other country.

PRAYER AND PRAISE contains 200 pages bound in the best style of the art, with a beautifully illustrated title page, and neatly printed from new type, in three editions, as follows:

Bound Notes, Character Notes, and Words Without Notes. PRAYER AND PRAISE is a carefully selected and arranged collection of a first-class practical hymn and "True Book," and if you are in need of such a book, order a copy for examination before you supply the demand with any other.

PRICES—Music Portions—75 cents per copy; 85 per dozen; $6 per hundred. Words Portions—25 cents per copy; 35 per dozen; $3 per hundred.

Specimen copies of Music Edition on request sent by mail, postpaid, 75 cents; specimen copy of Word Edition, 25 cents. All mail orders as above, to be sent to T. J. CARVER & JAMESON, 111 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PEMBERTON'S The WORLD'S Great Nerve TONIC FRENCH WINE COCA

The medicinal ingredients in this Tonic, in the form of Health, Strength and Vitality to Mind and Body. The ideal Nerve Tonic and Brain Food. It is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers, and all other ailments. This Tonic is the most powerful and purest of all the medicinal preparations for the cure and prevention of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, chronic and Acute Headaches, Neuralgia, Migraine, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Stomach and Liver Disorders, Scurvy, Scalds, Burns, Ulcers,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 50.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1532.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

REMARK AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
GARVEY & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, . . . $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.
All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WERLIM.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. BULLIVANT, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THIS WEEK'S.

Fairy frigate on airy seas,
Sport of the sunshine, joy of the breeze,
Obedient to a myriad feathered quays,
Mourning by a myriad silver rays,
What is thy freight, O Thistle-down?
Wafted, winged, on a leafless life,
Lunched on a breeze of death's wide,
Hither and thither thy pinace glides,
Thither and thither thy fair barque rides,
What is thy freight, O Thistle-down?
Loose the nosegays and drop the seed!
Be for exiles and pilgrims' need,
Sweep all and scatter all,
Ne'er shall the Thistle-down now be more,
What is thy freight, O Thistle-down?
A tiny seed in cradle fair,
Born on the waves of the summer air,
The germ of a life, though veiled, we see,
A beautiful possibility—
This is thy freight, O Thistle-down.
Wonderous care for a Thistle seed!
Fables write on wings of a seed—
Revered eyes may wonder and see,
And precious truth in this allegory,
This is thy freight, O Thistle-down.
Of the crisis of love and restraining land!
The waiting wings and the silken strands
Craving the life of the hidden seed,
Germ of the life that is life indeed,
Safe as thy seed, O Thistle-down.
—The Quiver.

Letter from Dr. Cottrell.

The ADVOCATE circulates extensively throughout the regions in which your Kentucky correspondent used to itinerate, and there are not a few who have inquired why they see so seldom anything from this pen in their organ. The spirit is willing, but the heart is faint. Simply to sit down and write to a newspaper, or to friends through one, from any other prompting than that of genuine impulse in enthusiasm on behalf of something that has smitten the mind and made concession, is like letting off bilge water; and to embarrass an editor by subjecting him to the necessity of declining to let appear or of "letting it go in" with reluctance and under protest of his wiser judgment, is not the most amiable and considerate thing that one may do. I remember once, before the war, it was proposed to establish a special organ for the Alabama Conference when it was one of the patronizing Conferences of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and incidental to the discussion of the province and function of the church paper, your correspondent submitted that it was not the proper economy or policy to have all its literature after the order of ground, bottled and sifted material. One may not live on essences. He must eat food. Hay, fodder and shucks are as necessary in feeding stock as is grain. So let our Advocates and Methodists have racks as well as troughs. I proffer a little "roughness" for your rack.

Several of your contributors interest me. Dr. Ahrens is ever solid and sensible. Bro. Thomas Welr, whom I remember as a comrade of old in Alabama and Mississippi, ever considerate, courteous and unpretentious, does not write without an object and a purpose. The sunny soul of my friend, Angus Dowling, one of the most appreciative and just of men, sheds the light of his thought along your columns not too frequently. Bro. James J. Billingsley, in your issue of November 19, on "True Religion," gives criticism that is timely. Dr. R. Abbey is ever instructive. Sometimes I felt a little solicited regarding the Doctor's zeal on behalf of the religious nurture of children. I read in one of his essays once that as it is never that one is too old to be a Christian, so it is that one is never too young. Feeling keenly, not to say solemnly, in common with the other orthodoxes of our Zion, the responsibility of guardianship along the line of dogmatic orthodoxy, I have feared that such a statement postulates, philosophically and scripturally, a theory of genesis in each individual, personal member of humanity contrary to that upon which there has been such insistence, namely, that it is of nature and the devil, and not of God in Christ Jesus, our children have their initial being. To insist that out of a Christian infancy it is practicable to evolve a Christian childhood in order to ultimate Christian manhood and womanhood might, by some who are eager to scratch at anything which seems to discredit our doctrine of depravity, be deemed as implicative of the necessity of the root of the being—the nature—of each being in the God of love and life and power and wisdom rather than in the devil. An effectual fall to any heretical conceit of this sort I submitted, through another channel, a year or more ago. It was after this catechetical order: Question—What of every child naturally engendered of the offspring of Adam? Answer—It is conceived in sin and shapen in iniquity. From the crown of its head to the soles of its feet it is full of wounds and bruises and putrifying sores. The whole head is sick and the whole heart is faint; of such is the kingdom of heaven.

Dr. McFerrin and Bro. Noland, of the Central Methodist, about two years ago were insisting strenuously upon an insistence by our preachers on "birth sin." The alarm this aroused in my soul voiced itself impulsively. There seemed to be in this form of expression a yielding on the part of my confederate guardians of our doctrine of depravity. They seemed by it to allow that sin sets in at the birth, when David had put it at conception, followed by an iniquitous shaping. David being a sober, diabolic writer, and never as would a poet, dealing in tropes and hyperbole, of course meant literally what he said when he affirmed the facts of his origin, and that he was "a worm and no man," and that "the hills skipped like rams and the little hills like lambs." Of course it is not at all incumbent upon us who stand for the defence of "the old landmarks" to affirm whether David was a grub worm, a tobacco worm or a tape worm; or, whether it was a reel, cotillion or waltz the hills were having, or just an immemorial skipping. Our theology is liberal and generous, and will allow for diversity here, so long as it is not denied, that David was a worm and that the hills did skip. I beseech of Dr. Abbey that he has on his life preserver when he dives into these controversial waters; that he wear his gossamer when he gets out under this drizzle. The D. Ds. were dubbed for defence of dogma—doctors of depravity! Let us never slight our patient. Without "original sin" we would be in as pitiable a plight as our Baptist brethren would be without the "original Greek."

When is F. M. Grace going to resume his series, historical, of the old Alabama Conference? I have his articles in a special scrap-book with J. W. Shores' letter concerning the same, and I await the others expectantly. And that volume of sermons of W. C. Harris that Grace has promised? Wat. Harris! As true and clean and lovable a nature had he as ever was embodied in human form. He was the most unique in appearance, manner, habits, methods of study, of conversation, gentle. He was a benediction to my soul and to my wife and little ones as we were together, in 1854, about the quaint old city of Pensacola and out upon the waters of the beautiful bay and off in the piney woods at camp meetings. Then at the Conference sessions! Oh! why did he die? Not a night but he seems to come to me as I lie awake, and it is as if a rainbow arched my firmament of thought. And Thomas S. Abernethy, Jr., how he sparkles and cornucopiates! He was the Sydney Smith of the younger ministerial brotherhood of the old Alabama Conference.

"Hearts are dust! Hearts' love remains;
Heart's love will meet us again!
'Tis not within the force of fate,
The fate ordained to separate."

I have, at times, felt an impulse moving me to pen for the ADVOCATE some things on the remiscellaneous line in history of the years gone in old Alabama—criticisms of men who impressed and profited me. But the great numbers who would have read with interest are asleep all abroad in city, town and village and in country cemeteries. In regard to church and other affairs up here on the Ohio river your readers are not specially interested. Our recent Conference at Greenville was about as Conferences usually are, spiced this session by election of delegates to the General Conference and with the question of change of name. After an unanimous vote against the proposed change I offered a resolution that the Conference memorialize the General Conference to change, by its own authority, the name to that which in 1850 met with such uniform favor, namely, Episcopal Methodist Church. The resolution met with less favor in the vote than in expression, conversationally, in private, among the brethren. Some, who are by no means obscure or unimportant, have said to me since that they prefer the name Episcopal Methodist to the one we have, but that they hope for an organic reunion between the churches North and South at no distant day, and that a change of our name now might impede that. So the significance of this adherence to our candle elongation is not altogether as some suppose. I have said to these brethren that whenever that essay at organic reunion sets in, occasion will arise for consideration as to whether the time has not arrived for an Episcopal Methodist to organize itself and move out of and off from every historical and traditional embarrassment in benevolent, Catholic endeavor on behalf of humanity. Some simplifications and abbreviations which, through inevitable human infirmity our fathers could not make, might transpire. The Wesleyan Methodists, of England, in a very compact, self-conserving and aggressive ecclesiastical organization, have not found it at all needful to adopt a single dogmatic statement from the thirty-nine articles of the Church of England. It may yet occur to the minds of theological, evangelized educators that the distinction between doctrine and dogma makes a difference also. No one presumes that because nature, under direction of Divine power, left Hell Gate at the mouth of East river that it was there to abide. If dogmatic Hell Gate is treated dynamically, might not commerce of thought and communion of sentiment be somewhat more free and more inspiring? And then again, churches seem to be most powerful when they have no historical consistency to guard and vindicate.

To some of my old-time friends it may not be yet known that I am one of the corresponding editors of The Centenary, a monthly published at Florence, S. C. It is elegantly gotten up, and the price is one dollar for twelve months. Let my friends communicate with me at Cloverport, Ky. Their names, with one dollar, will be gratefully received. The motto of The Centenary is, "A closer union of the churches, of the States and of the nations." A union is not a mixture. There can be no organic union of one individual entity with another except as the one becomes fragmentary and loses its identity by becoming incorporated with that which retains its own identity and individually. What is merely schismatical may have a prosperous run for a season, but eventually spends its force, and is then either recovered to its proper relation to that which is normal and consequently augmented, or it is abiding, or dies off through inevitable dissolution or disintegration, after being adrift for a time on the current of history. None of us can foresee what the changes of the future are to be; but we do know that thought and word and conduct stimulus of the highest motive alone secure personal, individual salvation, and according to such individual salvation is each of us properly remembered with that which is compacted according to an effectual, infallible working, having increment through edification along the years marked by many dispensations.

CLOVERPORT, KY., Nov. 23, 1885.

"Ordination of the Twelve."

With no intention to take sides or interfere with the question raised and recently introduced into the ADVOCATE by my two very good friends, Bros. Ellison and Pugh, respecting the mode of the ordination of the twelve apostles, I would like to wedge in a word or two between them.

In the first place, if there was any outward ceremonial ordination at all, the history is entirely silent on the subject, so we have no information about it. Like many other things that must have occurred, the accounts are so rigidly laconic that we know nothing about it. Secondly, it is in the highest degree improbable that there was any such ordination as this question supposes. Is it ordination to the ministry or to the apostolate that is meant? They were not probably one and the same thing. Quite likely the apostles were preachers—part, or all of them—before the Savior became acquainted with them. Be this as it may, they certainly all underwent a special designation to the apostolic office. The word ordained in Mark III, 14, proves nothing. The new version says appointed. Parallel passages indicate an appointment or designation.

The stress and vitality of this subject lies in this, What was the apostolate? It is unfortunate that our books are so reticent just here. They play around the subject and tell us a number of things not at all important so far as I see; but where is the book, outside the New Testament, that attempts to explain the peculiar functions of an apostle? To say they were "sent forth to preach the gospel" does not answer this question. Nor does "power to heal diseases" answer it. My own views on this point, somewhat elaborated, may be seen in Ecclesia and City of God, and perhaps elsewhere. The Scripture history on this, as on all other historic subjects, is exceedingly brief; but, by considering the scope and surrounding condition, enough may be ascertained to make it plain. Rigid verbalism will only confuse and mystify the subject.

What was the one great specific object and end of the personal teaching of the Saviour? One replies, "To introduce the gospel." But that reply is no answer. It leaves us just where we were before or else it misleads us. It is certain that Jesus introduced no new doctrines; no new rules of morals, nor no new mode of conducting worship or governing the church. Then what "gospel" did he introduce? As to religious doctrines, principles and morals, he did nothing. Let it be repeated, and, if need be, emphasized; he taught and enforced those already taught in the New Testament. Then what new thing was there to introduce? To this vital question the reply is, Himself. To introduce himself to the church and through it to the world was the one, single, great object of his personal ministry. A lig for all those flourishing, rhetorical teachings, a hundred in every library, that make Christ revolutionize things generally and set up new modes and systems of dispensing divine grace. They are wholly untrue. But there was a new thing to be done; a thing vitally necessary to the very existence of religion itself. The time had now fully come when Christ himself, in his proper messianic character, was to be introduced, made manifest to the church. This, in the nature of things, he could not do directly and individually of himself. Besides other mighty reasons it was physically impossible for him to see, converse with and become acquainted with six millions of people scattered throughout the then known world. He must have assistance. Hence the need of apostles to be sent where he could not go himself, or to go before him and do things which, in the nature of the case, he could not do or could not so well do himself. But before they could do this they must be prepared—qualified for a work so new and so different.

There was but one thing for Jesus to do in his lifetime. All other things were subsidiary to this end. This one thing was to make himself known to the church. His messianic ship was an open question. He bore no outward, visible marks of divinity. So he selected twelve suitable men to be with him. Let these words be emphasized—to be with him—that they first, by what they would see and hear, would be strongly impressed with this belief. So at the time of his death there was a small company of men very far better qualified than any others to receive the final, crowning testimony as to his true character. Then they were on the ground and familiar with the facts of his death, burial and rising. There they saw him frequently during the forty days and were at the front of observation and felt the outpouring of the Spirit at Pentecost.

Now we have a few men, schooled and drilled in the best manner possible, and thus qualified to testify to all the church the unmistakable verity of the great and overwhelming fact of the incarnation of the Son of God, hitherto veiled in spirituality. How wise and how simple this arrangement!

Now we see the apostolic office. No merely preachers to preach, but men to testify. Of the former there were several hundred in and around the city; of the latter these twelve stood pre-eminently away above all others. So they went everywhere testifying that "Jesus is Christ." This was the burden of their preaching. "Paul was constrained by the word, testifying to the Jews that Jesus was the Christ." And as to particular details of a thousand things said and done in these constant and numerous interviews between Jesus and the twelve, we are of course not informed. He ordained twelve. That is, he selected, appointed, set apart, these twelve men for that work. And let me remind Bro. Pugh that Greek lexicons is not the place to look for the meaning of the word ordain, or to find out anything about ordaining, in the sense we apply to it in setting apart a minister for church work. It is a new word, or a word with a new meaning, made long since the making of the material of which Greek lexicons were made. There could be no such word in Greek literature.

It may be presumed that Jesus fully explained to them what he expected them to do and how to do it. But I know of no good reason for presuming that there was anything ritualistic about it.

R. ARDEY.

Crystal Springs Station, Mississippi Conference.

I am closing up my fourth year in this delightful station. It has been one of the most pleasant charges of a ministry of twenty-six years. There may be a little "frog in the cistern," but where is there a church without a frog? Besides, in this case it is a very little one, and but little damage is done. Indeed it is a question whether a "frog in the cistern" may not be a means of grace. The "thorn in the flesh" kept Paul from being exalted above measure. May not the "frog in the cistern" serve the same or a similar purpose? Still we must confess that a frog is a disagreeable thing to have. From the little croaking pests "good Lord deliver us."

During the past four years there have been added to the church in this charge, by letter and profession of faith, in all, over one hundred persons. But there has been a constant drain on the church. Quite a number have removed by letter; several have been dropped by order of the church Conference, and some have died. Ten of our number have died this year. So that, numerically, the church is no stronger now than it was four years ago.

The past year has been one of special interest. We have baptized eight adults and twenty infants and received thirty into the church. About one hundred and seventy-five dollars have been expended on the parsonage, which is now in a comfortable condition, and over one thousand dollars have been expended on the church, which is now a thing of beauty. Repaired, remodeled, repainted within and without, it is one of the most tasty and lovely churches in all this land. In addition to this our people have promptly met all the assessments. We will make a full report at our approaching Conference in Meridian. Indeed this has been done for the last four years. All the assessments have been paid in full, and will be, no doubt, in the future as in the past. We have a real live board of stewards here. They look after things. I have been free from care as to money matters now for four years. And it is so easy to collect my missionary and Conference money.

It would do you good to look in on our Quarterly Conference. Our presiding elder says it is a treat to hold our quarterly meetings. He says he feels after the Quarterly Conference adjourns that he has enjoyed a season of Christian fellowship. All are harmonious, and seem to be studying the best interest of the church. And it would seem that this feeling is mutual from the following resolution adopted a few days ago by our fourth Quarterly Conference, to-wit:

Resolved, That we acknowledge with grateful hearts the eminent abilities and devoted services for the past four years of our esteemed presiding elder, Rev. J. A. B. Jones. In labors abundant, in ability pre-eminent, always holding high the standard of our Methodist Christianity, we recognize in him a Christian minister worthy of his high calling.

God grant that a suitable pastor may be sent to this people next year. A comfortable parsonage, a cordial reception, a good living and plenty of work await him. Let him come in the spirit of the Master and he will be received as a messenger of God. As for myself, I turn regretfully from a church I have learned to love as I do my own life and from some of the best friends I have ever found anywhere and say to the Conference, as I have always said, "Here am I, send me."

W. R. LEWIS.
Crystal Springs, Mississippi.

"Women Preachers."

In the ADVOCATE, of the nineteenth instant, Mrs. L. Cray Sadler refers to our long controversy touching "Women Preachers" and brings out the judgment of my own beloved Bro. B. L. Selman, of the Alabama Conference, as sustaining her position. I had enjoyed a sense of complete victory, not only in the case of Mrs. Sadler, but in another controversy also in the Nashville Advocate with a beloved sister whose name was refused me when applied in the proper way. In the discussion in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE Sister Sadler utterly failed to show a single instance in the whole Bible in which the word "preach" was employed to express the ministry of a woman. In my last article in the discussion I made this demand, and she failed to give one. Now, if she or Bro. Selman, or any other person will show in the Bible the word "preach," employed to express the ministry of a woman, I will gracefully surrender. Till then I hold the ground and the guns, too.

AMIRAL DOWLING.
Ozark, Alabama.

Note of Thanks.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in the ADVOCATE, of the third, that my friends are anxious about my support and have contributed sufficient means to support me until the time of our Conference, when I receive my appropriation from the Board. I have received aid from the following kind friends: Peter James, Joseph Layzra, E. Myers, Joseph Arge, per R. B. R. B. Downer, an unknown friend, Handsboro, Miss., Mrs. E. R. Denham, Baton Rouge, La., Mrs. Robinson, Rev. C. G. Andrews, Rev. S. J. Cotton, Mississippi Conference, Mrs. Cockern, Taighpaha, La., per R. B. Downer, an unknown friend, Biloxi, Miss., per R. B. Downer, for which I return my thanks and prayers to the donors and request that whatever is sent from anywhere to be forwarded by express. This is written by request of a friend.

Yours in Christ,
JOS. NICHOLSON.
Ozark Springs, Miss., Dec. 3, 1885.

—What men want is not talent, it is purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve, but will to labor. I believe that labor, judiciously and continuously applied, becomes genius.—Lytton.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1885.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
COMMUNION WITH GOD.

BY LOCAL ITINERANT.

Poor human sight may never see
The Kingdom above,
Poor human ears may never hear
His voice in tones of love.The senses one, the senses all,
May never apprehend
The infinite, All-glorious God,
Our Father and our Friend.For he's not matter, He is mind,
A spirit all is God,
And can not apprehend he
By this mere earthly clod.But in this earthly clod there
He hath a soul enshrined,
And it is neither flesh nor blood,
But is like him—his mind.A moral nature, much like God's,
And with a moral sense
That often apprehends him here,
And will when hurried hence.A spirit may with spirit talk,
And God with man commune;
And this communion sweet may put
The soul in sweetest tune.Yes, spirit may with spirit talk,
Our God may talk with us;
And best communion this may be,
And be established thus.Our inward consciousness may know
The Spirit all divine,
And it may live within our hearts—
In yours, dear friend, and mine.

"The Bible in Education."

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

(Continued.)

This imagery is unsurpassed. Apply the rules of rhyme and rhythm, and the best Shakespearean efforts do not excel it. Such was the style of all the poetry of that age.

DeWitte and Heher, as well as the rabbis, give numerous examples of the poetry of that age—in none of which occur anything better in regard to measure than a system of parallelism. This is found in greater perfection than those instances noticed, in Genesis iv, 23, 24:

"Adam and Zillah, bear my voice;
Wives of Lamech, receive my speech.
If I slay a man to my hurt,
And a young man to my wounding,
If Cain be avenged seven times,
Then Lamech—seventy times seven."

(The parallelism here is complete, being 6 lines of 8 syllables, or 6 8's.)

Not till the times of Greece and Rome did the laws of rhyme and rhythm receive much consideration at the hands of the poets. Not till the days of Horace did this principle receive its perfect touches. Imagery, however, which is the soul of poetry, is found in the Bible in the fullest glare of its own glory. Isaiah lx, 20:

"No longer shall thou have the son for thy light by day,
Nor shall the brightness of the moon enlighten thee;
For Jehovah shall be to thee an everlasting light,
And thy God shall be thy glory.
Thy sun shall no more decline;
Neither shall thy moon wane;
For Jehovah shall be thine everlasting light,
And the days of thy mourning shall cease."

It may be asked if this imagery of the Bible is to constitute the only plea for it as an important factor in education. We answer, By no means. As a treatise on the laws of health it has no superior. No better system can any city devise than that contained in the Bible. It must not be too much modernized. Its very simplicity is the reason for its great efficiency. Cleanliness is the price of health, and it is far more important to have the city clean than the children in it.

As a code of morals no other book is so complete. Its summary—"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them"—is more than all Cato's works embodied. Moral and mental science explain the reason for the rules of moral rectitude; but give no additional force to them. What is moral wrong if it be not the prohibited moral acts of men? Why is the murder of a man more than the killing of a dog, since life is taken in either case and can not be restored? Let skepticism answer. Why is it virtuous to resist an evil impulse, but vicious to indulge it? Let some philosophical oracle answer if it can. But, after all, we run back to the Bible to find that our ideas are drawn from it, and our answers are shaped by it. As immortality is greater than mortality—as right is superior to wrong; so is man—the immortal man—superior to the "beast that perisheth"—so is virtue to vice.

What elevates woman in all Christian countries and degrades her in heathen lands? By the Christian's Bible she is the better part of the husband's self; by the heathen philosophy she is his slave, his hewer of wood and his drawer of water.

Whence do we learn our destiny? Said Thales: "Show me if you can—and it will be very hard to do—that man is not immortal, and I die satisfied." The Bible settles this question if its testimony be received. It "brings life and immortality to light." It tells us that forbearance is more manly and honorable than a hasty and rash resistance; that to "deal gently, to love mercy and to walk uprightly" comprises the whole duty of man as between men. Could any book tell me more as to my duty to my fellow-men? Does any other tell me as much? No other book so educates the manhood of man and at the same time draws out the mercy side of his nature.

From what source will you find the moral faculties if not from this? Is it enough to develop the reason and leave the morality of our race undeveloped?

Will the nation learn righteousness from Gibbon? Will it learn mercy from Galileo? Will it learn sympathy from Nero? Will it learn honesty by observing the tricks and intrigues of the vicious? Truth may be learned from a thousand sources. The true in electrical telegraphy may be gathered from Franklin and Morse and Henry. Fulton has taught us the true power of steam. Edison has enlightened us on the phonetic power of the electric current. Aristotle has given us logic; Euclid, mathematics; Newton, gravitation; and Copernicus, planetary revolution. The Egyptians gave us the science of war, the Phoenicians gave us letters, the Swedes gave us watches, and the Romans gave us our calendars; but God—the Bible—gives us immortality.

Of men we take wisdom in philosophy, in science and in literature. From men we learn diplomacy, political economy, commerce and navigation. But just how to make the most of life in all that makes life worth living—just how to reach the real point of manhood, where true manhood is seen, where all that is little, low or mean is eliminated—is taught in the Bible, and there alone. Many thousands who ignore the Bible—who possibly have no recollection of the gathering up of ideas from it—have their moral equipment in its precepts gathered by absorption.

A clergyman declared he had discovered a great truth—he had found that men never dance except they be first intoxicated by wine, women or music. I referred him to the old Roman sage, Tacitus, who declared "No sober man will dance." He honestly thought the discovery was original, whereas it was simply the lingering spark in the reservoir of memory asserting its right to shine. In the busy hours of the recitation-room the idea, the forgotten idea, had fixed itself in his mind. Years had passed away; but still he was awayed by it as by some newly discovered truth. So is much of life. It may be the lullaby of baby days; it may be the anguished-wrung exclamation of some tortured soul; it may be the "aside" expression at the theatre—still its home is in the Bible; its origin is there.

If we are not to ignore the laws of culture in their relation to genealogy, it must require many generations to eliminate the effect of Bible truth upon our race. Low and obscene habits followed for generations produce low blood. Reversely, refined and cultured habits followed for generations produce tendencies to purity of life. The only ancient race of people who accepted the Bible as the only authority in matters moral are the only people who, without country or king, have maintained a pure nationality through successive generations. The marks of the father are seen upon the son, both as to his intellectual and physical status.

How much of Bible lore manifests itself in the sentiments and conduct of man it is impossible to say. That the worst of men, at times and in places, are under its influence through popular sentiment there can be no doubt; and that this influence would linger for a time even if the Bible was banished from our homes, is a scientific fact. If this potent and self-generating influence is bad, let it be at once broken down. Take it from your curriculum, build it from your shelves, banish it from your homes, and let it have neither lot nor place in all the land. But if it is a good influence; if men who live by its rules and deport themselves accordingly to its precepts are good, true, honest and brave; if its readers are better than its revilers, why not have it read by all? Mark you, I am not seeking to have the Bible brought into the school-room to be made a tool for the pedagogues, nor to be administered by professional quacks. I am speaking of the Bible as an important factor in education. Its poetry, its history, its biography and its laws can be studied nowhere else. The laws of Solon owe their origin in many of their most important features to the laws of Moses. Without its historical revelations, much of the history of the world (as has before been remarked) would never have been read. Its biography introduces us to some of the sublimest characters of ancient times, and the boasted "common laws" of the civilized world would have been a failure without the laws of Moses as handed down to us in the Bible. Shall such a book have no recognized place in the library of the student?

Tell me of the man who conquered Palestine, Egypt, Syria, Chaldaea and Assyria—the monarch who built up the first great empire the world ever had in it. If you tell me of his wars, you speak from the Bible. If you tell me of one of the grandest triumphs of architecture of ancient times, you speak from the Bible. If you speak to me of the first great ship built, you speak from the Bible. If you tell me of the first code of moral laws, you tell me what I have read in the Bible. If you tell me of the first engraving in rock, you refer me to Sinai and the "tables of stone." If you attempt to define, in keeping with any rational system of ethics, the "whole duty of man," every step in the process will be through the Bible. "He must be honest," So says the Bible. "He must be just." So says the Bible. "He must be brave." So says the Bible. "Fear not man who has power to kill the body, but afterward can do no more." "He must be patriotic." So says the Bible. The only reason ever offered why Jesus should do a great work for a man was that "he loved our nation and hath built us a synagogue." "Man must be industrious." So the Bible declares, "If any will not work, neither shall they eat." "He must provide for the comfort of his family." So says the Bible, "If any fall to provide for his own house, he has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

Says one: "All this may be true; but the Bible is too unscientific to be relied upon." To this may be answered: The great Author of the book seems to have purposely made it so. It is unscientific in the sense of out or not. Science has been left out of it; it is not a treatise on any branch of things, but of the methods of that genesis. It records facts, but details are left out. It does not tell us whether the means used were protoplasmic forces or electrical forces, or whether the force employed was simply that of motion. It does not tell us definitely the duration of the periods of the genesis, but simply that it was not instantaneous. Some unnatural division of time is alluded to as existing for three periods before the sun's rays reached the earth. "The evening and the morning were the first day," the "second day," etc. It does not tell us which body moves around—the earth or the sun. It employs common forms of expression—"sunrise," "sunset," etc. It sets forth great truths in the simplest forms of expression. It tells us of the decomposition of the human body after death in the most unique style possible—"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." In like simple language it tells of the return of the spiritual part, the animus to its original source—"the soul to God who gave it." It tells us in one word what the elaborate works of Darwin, Helmholtz and Huxley fail to reveal after the perusal of many large volumes of learned treatises: The Great First Cause is God. Its law of success is written in one line—"Wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Its ultimate rule of right can not be mistaken—"As ye will that others do, so do ye to them."

This book for which I write—for which I try to reason—has been the study of many of the world's greatest men: Adam Clark, then whom no one of more extensive learning in all its branches, has written a book; Dr. Doddridge, whose sacred poems are sung throughout the civilized world; Sir Isaac Newton, one of the greatest of philosophers; Ainsworth, the acknowledged scholar; Luther, who revolutionized the world and who, though dead, still holds it in revolution; McKnight, one of England's richest scholars. Besides these, Locke, Hill, Hurst, Henry, Scott, Burroughs, Ryland, Poole; and in our day I may point with some pride to the leading educators of the land as the students of the Bible. Without its history, its ethics, its biography, its psychology and its laws no education can be complete.

The Church—No. 7.

Yes, I love the church. Do I love it enough to see it that I do nothing to disgrace it? In the first place, then, do I do "no harm"? And here a little self-examination might not be amiss. Do I ever pause and look over my own course? Self-examination! We do not ask you to let anyone else probe your heart, nor find the holes in your coat or the stains on your garments; but ask you to examine yourself—all yourself. Do I take the name of God in vain? Do I do it only occasionally—only when I am mad, say? Do I get mad at all, and thus cause outsiders to say, in disgust, "Look at that man's religion"? Do I stab the church thus?

Do I tipple? Do I sometimes feel it in my head and heart? Am I sometimes foolish or funny from the effects of alcohol? Do I thus cause "the church" or "the Redeemer" bought with his own precious blood" to bleed in the public streets and be trampled on by the profane?

Do I indulge in games of obnoxious, deal in dice, cards, lotteries, etc., and thus cause the wicked to point the finger of scorn, and say, "Look at that Christian!"

Do I seek light, vain, wicked company? Is it seen that I enjoy myself there? Do I sometimes trip the fantastic toe, and love the horrible hugging of much of the dancing? Do I thus cause the sneer of contempt from the faces and lips of the servants of the devil? Do I love the church, and yet wound her thus? Am I doing "no harm"?

Am I cross, morose, sour, scolding, fault-finding, quarrelsome, brawling, complaining, and do I thus cause observers to say, ironically, "See what a lovely Christian that is!"

Am I often speaking evil of my neighbors, of ministers, of magistrates? Do I tattle, tell secrets, or even bad things of my neighbors or others when not necessary, thus causing the servants of sin to say—those out of the church to say, "Those out of the church are better than those in it?"

Do I sing lewd songs, tell vulgar tales or crack obscene jokes? Are my heart and lips as pure as the heart and lips of an angel? Should they not be?

Am I opposed to this self-examination? The writer is not examining you. The examination is, or ought to be, your own. We both love the church. We should do nothing to wound her in the house of her friends, nor in the house of her enemies.

Are we sap, rotting sticks in the frame of the building endangering the whole structure? Are we loose, shaly stones wrought into the building among the lively, living stones? Are we so crumbling away that the house must be repaired or fall? Are we soft, salmon brick? And do others see us scaling off and dropping out in such a manner that we must be moved and better material worked into our places, or the superstructure will tremble, totter, fall? We know in our own parish a building, an immense fraternal hall, that is in this condition now. It cost thousands of dollars, and yet, because of these half-burnt bricks, is untenable, dangerous. It must soon be repaired or fall. The fire of God's love should burn us into good hard brick, or we have no good claim to any place anywhere in the building. It is more trouble to get us out than it is to put new and better material in.

We do not object to any persons joining the church who have "a desire to flee the wrath to come," even though they are unconverted. They wish the help of the church, and if they and the church labor, seek and pray for them, they will soon be converted, sanctified, saved.

Let us ask ourselves: Do I do "no harm"? Have I even this negative part of Christianity?

Mr. Editor: In your issue of November 19, in my article, No. 6, on "The Church," where I was speaking of the hymn, beginning, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," your print makes me say: "I might never compose anything better; nor did anyone else." It should read: "Dwight never composed anything better; nor did anyone else."

If my manuscript led the printer astray, I ask his pardon.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Rev. Gabriel Hawkins, M. D.

Bro. Hawkins was born at Spartanburg district, S. C., November 25, 1827. His father, Rev. Herbert Hawkins, was a local preacher, and a son of Joshua Hawkins, of Virginia, and a revolutionary soldier. His mother, Mrs. Armin Boswell Hawkins, was the daughter of Col. Isaac Foster, of Spartanburg, S. C., and for many years sheriff of Spartanburg district.

While at school in his native district Bro. Hawkins was converted and joined Mt. Zion Baptist Church on September 27, 1843, and was baptized by Rev. J. G. Landrum. In 1847 he emigrated with his parents and settled on Moahu Creek, in Pickens county, Ala. With the exception of two or three years given to teaching his minority was spent in school and on his father's farm. Yet among his earliest impressions was the conviction that he was called to preach the gospel. This troubled him greatly. He dreaded the cross and the self-denial, and in his strife against this strong conviction of duty he went to the State Medical College of Georgia, where he graduated with credit to himself and received the degree of M. D. But he never practiced his profession. Soon after his return home, and while he was perfecting his arrangements to enter the practice of medicine, a serious illness arrested his course. This, "like the lightning stroke by Luther's side," was to him God's warning. He resolved, if spared, to heed the call to duty and become, instead of a healer of bodies, God's means of healing souls. How well and faithfully he kept this promise, his labors of love and sacrifice for the cause of Christ fully attest.

But there was yet a serious trouble to be disposed of before he could feel himself fully prepared to enter this work. Of his experience at this time he thus wrote: "In my heart I could not endorse close communion. To me it seemed contrary to the spirit and genius of experimental religion. I read Howell on communion to fortify my mind on the subject, and found that the whole argument in favor of it turned on exclusive immortality, which dogma, from my knowledge of the Greek language, I could not embrace. And what knowledge I had of the Bible and its doctrines led me also to discredit the doctrine of Calvinism as held and taught by Baptists. The doctrine of the final perseverance of the saints, as taught by them, was contrary to my experience and my understanding of the word. And their church government seemed to me more like anarchy and confusion than democracy. After several years of study and hesitancy (for I did not like the idea of changing church relations), I joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1853, under the ministry of Revs. S. H. Cox and J. Belton."

In 1854 he was licensed to preach at Bethel, on the Columbus district, under the pastorate of Bros. Cox and Cook, and Rev. George Shaeffer presiding elder. Two or three months after this he preached his first sermon at Unity Grove, near Palmetto, Ala., from Romans xii, 1. His next was at Andrew Chapel, from Luke xii, 3. After these efforts he felt greatly depressed, and but for the encouraging words of Bro. Cook, he said, "I could never have tried to preach again." Almost every minister of the blessed gospel can recall a like experience, yet with the feeling that the bruised reed was about to be broken, came the loving hand of the Father with healing balm.

In the winter of 1854 he was received on trial in the Alabama Conference, at Talladega, Bishop Andrew presiding. His first work was Mt. Zion circuit, in the Columbus district, where he remained but one year, and one hundred and seventy-five souls were converted and joined the church. The next year he was sent to Butler circuit, in the Demopolis district, where he remained only one year, and there were two hundred and thirty-five conversions and additions to the church. At the next Conference he was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce, and was sent to Pickensville and Carrollton, where he remained for two years. Of this appointment he wrote: "I was horrified at the idea of being sent to what was called a station and at having to succeed Bro. Murrah in the pastorate. But good Bro. Shaeffer encouraged me to go, and we had gracious revivals at each church, and the present neat house of worship at Pickensville is the fruit of my labors." At the close of his fourth year in the ministry he was ordained elder by Bishop Paine at Macon, Miss. From this Conference he was sent to Gaston, where he remained for two years. He was then returned to Butler for one year; then to Rembert Hill, one year; to Gaston, a second year, for three years; to Orville, one year; to Columbus circuit, for three years; to Fayette, two years; Havana, four years; Dayton, four years; Gaston, a third time, for four years, when he transferred to the Mississippi Conference and spent the remainder of his useful life on the Paulding circuit.

It would indeed form a thrilling chapter in the history of our brother and of the church if space and data were given recounting his well-rounded success as a preacher and pastor. But we must forbear this pleasure to ourselves and profit to the cause. He was a man of one work, and his whole life was a beautiful illustration and confirmation of Dr. Clark's words, "A faithful ministry is the greatest blessing God can bestow upon a people."

The writer has been furnished many letters from persons in the various charges he had served telling how deeply all mourn his loss who knew his value as a pastor. A fame that shall not die with time, nor fade amid the splendors of the eternal day. He never forgot the impressions made upon his heart by the Holy Spirit to "preach the word" as the power of God to save the soul. His style and manner was the pure Wesleyan, accompanied with the power and unclon of the Holy Ghost. He was indeed a "soldier of the cross," and ever rejoiced with those who came with the shout of triumph into the fold of God. How often, amid the sobs of penitents, the songs and prayers of the church, has he been heard to exclaim with a soul made happy in the love of Christ, "Salvation! Glory to God! Salvation!"

The ideal pastor, the faithful preacher and the universally loved friend and brother, was no less lovely and beautiful in his home relations. On November 11, 1858, he was married to Miss Martha Elizabeth Lawrence, daughter of Mr. H. N. Lawrence, near Crawfordville, Miss., by Rev. S. H. Cox. Together they walked in life to its close; one in thought, feeling, effort and love. By his thoughtful kindness, loving sympathy and willing sacrifice, and brother beautifully illustrated, as husband, the relation that exists between Christ and his church, loving her as his own body, wherever his wife was, was his home, his heart and earthly delight. And none were more blessed in the choice and comforts of a companion than was he. Accepting him as an itinerant Methodist preacher, his life was inspired by his devotion to the church and made beautiful by an uncompromising acceptance of its decrees of duty. However humble and unpretentious the provisions made for the temporary stay of the pastor and family. Her happy spirit made it more than a palace to him, a home where every care and trial was equally shared and sweet rest from vexations toll was freely given. Who can know the sorrow that fills her heart as she looks at the vacant chair; or, describe the feeling of loneliness as the holy day fades into twilight and she watches for the return of the weary one who shall never come again. Yet hope fades not with the departure of her loved one. She has laid her bleeding heart at the feet of the Master in holy resignation and will there await till he "come again and receive her unto himself."

As a father Bro. Hawkins was gentle, affectionate, yet firm in the exercise of parental authority. Blessed with eleven children, four of whom preceded him to heaven, he recognized and obeyed the injunction to "command his household" and to train his children in the way they should go. His success in training his children was a joy to himself and an honor to them. Just before he died he called them to him and told them what a comfort they had been to him and exhorted them to be faithful to the church and meet him in heaven. He then told them his work was done and his reward sure. After he had blessed each one and given them instructions as to how they should live and what they should do, he called his eldest son to him and said: "George, I have given you to the Lord for the ministry. I feel sure he will accept him, and I want him to be a good and faithful itinerant preacher of the gospel. I want him to take my place in the work and do more for the blessed Savior than I have ever been able to do. And as I am yet living by faith, so I give you to Christ with a strong confidence of his acceptance. You must educate him at Greensboro, Ala., so that he may be ready for the work." Thus the strong faith that had supported him through life and the zeal that had inspired his efforts for the church were not abated in the hour of death. His last illness was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

was long and severe, but his resignation

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. S. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1885.

The Life and Writings of Bishop Linus Parker, by the editor of the ADVOCATE, will be issued from the press of the Southern Methodist Publishing House shortly after the holidays. The work has been somewhat delayed, but we hope it will prove more valuable than ever. The thousands of friends of that apostolic man will doubtless be glad to read some memorial of his life and labors.

The press telegrams from London report Mr. Spurgeon, the great preacher, as seriously ill. He is said to be suffering from heart disease, and fears are entertained that his health is permanently broken down. A great light will go out when Charles H. Spurgeon is called hence. For years he has been recognized as the foremost pulpit orator of the world.

Rev. D. C. Browne, of Lexington, Mo., is having fine success in his new pastorate. He writes as follows: "Mr. Editor: We are enjoying a great religious awakening in Lexington. The protracted services have been going on in our church nearly two weeks. The church is falling into line, and co-operating with the pastor most heartily. There have been fifty conversions and thirty have joined the Methodist Church. We go on indefinitely."

The semi-annual union communion service of the Methodist Churches in this city was held at the Felicity Street Church on last Sunday afternoon. All the city pastors were present. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Ahrens, whose address on the occasion is spoken of in terms of highest appreciation. We hope to secure it for publication. This appointment, bringing together, as it does, the Methodists of the city, can but result in good. It unites the spirit and purposes of our people, and cultivates the family life of the church.

Christianity has nothing to fear from the triumphs of science. Indeed, it stimulates thought, unfetters mind and encourages the highest and broadest education. On this subject we commend the following sentences from the Christian World: "We may be quite sure that, until science has wrung its secret from the remotest star, the spirit of reverence and of elevation which pervades the first chapter of Genesis, and refers the origin of all things that are seen to the Invisible and Infinite Power, will not be out of date. The latest generation of men of science will feel themselves untrammelled in their researches by the modest and devout acknowledgment that 'in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.'"

The Morning Star, our Romish neighbor, contains a curious piece of literature on "The Little Gospel." We were quite ready to suppose that such nonsense and superstition would hardly find a public advocate in this latter half of the nineteenth century. The Star says that a company of Carmelites here in New Orleans have made over twelve or fifteen thousand "Little Gospels of the Holy Name of Jesus" within the last year, and distributed them abroad, from the wearing of which "many conversions and cures have followed." Instances are then given to prove its efficacy. One young man was cured of drunkenness and idleness by sewing the Little Gospel in his wearing apparel. An aged Protestant in Louisville was made a Catholic thereby, and an old Creole lady in New Orleans died happy for the same reason, though she had previously refused the sacraments of the church. And then our neighbor proceeds to observe: "Under these circumstances, and in view of the manifest approbation of Heaven to the practice of this devotion, it would seem to be needless to argue the advisability for each one to procure a Little Gospel, as soon as possible, and wear it with faith and devotion." So, so. But please, neighbor, have nothing to say of the superstition of Voodooism, carrying a rabbit's foot or other nonsense well known among the ignorant classes of our country. And by such folly the people are kept in ignorance and the power of the church is made absolute. It is not at all unlikely that these little gospels are pinned in the clothes of unsuspecting Protestants by the zealous, hoping thereby to win them to the true faith.

North Mississippi Conference.

This body met in the town of Kosciusko, on Wednesday morning, Dec. 21, with Bishop Hargrove in the chair. A session of the North Mississippi Conference is always an interesting occasion to the writer and most of all in that place. Around it are gathered all the sweet memories of childhood and youth. How they come trooping up like angels from the past as the old streets are traversed, and old friends are greeted! What varied experiences have been crowded into the intervening years! Many childhood friends sleep in the silent city and many others have wandered out in the wide, wide world in quest of fortune. The old have grown very old, and most vividly recall the swift sweep of years. "The deep lines" in their faces and drooping shoulders, remind us that the sun has not stood still in the heavens, but that our own opportunities are fast passing away. What an object lesson of time's priceless value! The golden moments must be belched into the currency of heaven for life's present and eternal enrichment, or we will soon become poor indeed. Out in the cemetery is one little sleeper, who went away after a few short months in our home. The night's vigil over the fading one, its falling asleep in the arms of a kind neighbor and the solemn company that carried her forth for burial is the one sad memory of bright, rosy childhood. The question comes without bidding, why should that one have been called and this one left? And how have the probationary years been spent? Sweet communion with the past! It chastens joy and begets a holier desire to live for God.

The Conference was called to order promptly at 9 o'clock, by the Bishop who conducted the devotional exercises. Great is North Mississippi in the power of song. True successors of the apostolic fathers, they are yet worthy to be called "the hymn singing Methodists." In prayer and praise there was a cheerful, inspiring key-note to the whole session. The Rev. John Barcroft was elected secretary of course as he has been regularly from the first session at Water Valley, in 1870. Rev. J. S. Oakley was elected assistant secretary, and Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., statistical secretary. There was a full attendance at first roll-call. Only one failed to answer because of the higher roll-call in the skies: Rev. B. B. Brown had died a few months before and gone up to his rich reward.

The presiding elders had met the evening before and arranged the standing committees. They were ready to make nominations, and business moved forward with ease and dispatch. This was our first opportunity to observe the methods of Bishop Hargrove in the Conference chair, and he impressed all as a man of affairs, a capital presiding officer and as having an admirably poised character. His great work in the West has demonstrated the wisdom of his election and entitles him to the gratitude of the whole church.

The second day came the sectional men—Bro. Palmer, business manager of the Publishing House, and Rev. W. C. Dunlap, agent of the Palestine Institute. Bro. Palmer has the push and poise of a well trained man of business, together with the fervor and fire of a traditional Methodist. He inspires confidence in his business judgment and wins friends by his brotherly kindness. His address to the Conference was most reassuring as to the prospects of the Publishing House. We cordially commend his generous utterances in behalf of the Conference organs.

Bro. Dunlap made an appeal for Palestine Institute and sung six hundred dollars out of the Conference and shouts and tears. That was the full amount assessed the Conference for the purpose. Bro. Dunlap made a fine impression and the echoes of his songs will long remain.

The reports of the preachers were generally good—many of them very good. There had been especial activity in church and parsonage building and improvement. The missionary collections showed a slight decrease for domestic missions, and a gratifying increase of about $500 for foreign missions. The figures are as follows: for domestic missions $1747.35, and for foreign missions $5430.10. The following is the statistical summary: local preachers, 157; church members, 33,570 an increase 1474; infants baptized 710; adults baptized, 2012; number of Sunday-schools, 353; officers and teachers, 1914; scholars, 15,753.

There was a grand temperance meeting at the Court House on Tuesday night; such an audience was never packed into that spacious temple of justice, and the enthusiasm abounded throughout. A recent contest on that issue gave special interest and emphasis to the appointment. Lt.-Gov. Shands presided and introduced the speaker, who discoursed at considerable length. On Friday night the anniversary of the Board of Church Extension was held. Rev. T. Y. Ramsey presided, and Secretary Standifer read a cheering report. Addresses were delivered by Bishop Hargrove and the editor of this Advocate and a good collection lifted.

Dr. Kelley arrived on Saturday morning and made a grand missionary speech before the Conference. The progress of our mission work during the past seven years was graphically stated, and many details of missionary experience related with thrilling effect. Not many dry eyes were in the house when his address concluded. The Conference very readily resolved to raise $2000 of the missionary assessment by Feb. 1st, 1886, and forward it to the treasurer. Col. R. C. Clark, of Verona, a lay-delegate to the Conference, then arose and proposed to be bondman for the brethren to that amount, or if desired to give Dr. Kelley a check for $2000 at once to be returned to him when collections were made. It was a generous offer, and the Conference heartily expressed its gratitude.

The Conference Board of Education, through its chairman, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, presented a report strongly endorsing the Granada Collegiate Institute, and proposing measures for its financial relief. That is a fine property, deeded in fee simple to the church, and ought not to be embarrassed or possibly imperiled for lack of four thousand dollars. President Newell has a flourishing school and is growing upon the confidence of the people as a capable, religious educator. We most earnestly trust that the Conference will rally to this institution and relieve it of every embarrassment.

The report on books and periodicals was presented by Dr. T. C. Welr, and was an admirable paper. It gave emphasis to the importance of book selling, and suggested the appointment of a Conference book-agent or colporteur. We were profoundly grateful for the prominent and pronounced endorsement of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Conference organ, and for the cordial, commendatory remarks of the venerable Dr. Murrah, and our old-time friend, Bro. W. P. Barton. We have assurance from the brethren, that our circulation shall be largely increased during the ensuing year.

The vote on the change of church name stood as follows: yeas 1, noes 122. The election of delegates to the General Conference resulted in the selection of the following: Clerical—J. W. Honnoll, R. M. Davis, J. D. Cameron, T. C. Welr, alternate—Lay, Lt.-Gov. G. D. Shands, R. W. Jones, J. B. Streeter, T. B. Sykes.

Among other visitors at Conference we had the pleasure of meeting Dr. W. C. Johnson, of the Memphis Conference; Rev. J. C. Lowe, of the Holston Conference, and Dr. H. F. Johnson, Rev. H. D. Howell and Rev. J. W. Chambers of the Mississippi Conference. We regretted having to leave on Saturday afternoon, with many hospitable invitations unaccepted. Every house in Kosciusko seemed to be thrown wide open, and Conference was never more royally entertained. Great is the hospitality of that central city of Mississippi. Rev. J. A. Bowen the Conference host, was unremitting in his attentions and succeeded in making each delegate feel that his was the choice place of the whole town. Our home was with Dr. J. W. Scarborough, an unvarying and honored friend from our early childhood. To the Doctor and his excellent wife we owe much of the rare pleasure of this visit.

The editor is greatly indebted to Rev. H. R. Tucker for his generous and timely assistance in transacting the business of the ADVOCATE with the Conference. And it gives us gratification to say that all accounts of the brethren present were satisfactorily adjusted and many new subscribers were secured.

The report on temperance prepared by Rev. J. H. Scruggs, occasioned spirited discussion. It was feared that it went a little too far on one or two points, but after some slight amendments it was adopted. Of course it is delicate matter for the church to approach this State with any request or memorial, but certainly on great moral questions that affect the destiny of immortal souls she ought to speak in tones of thunder.

The Conference by resolution made commendatory reference to the Centenary College, expressed high appreciation for its president, Rev. Dr. T. A. S. Adams and requested him to retain membership in that body.

The following are the answers to Admitted on trial—John R. D.

Klug, Henry T. Gaines, Alexander

B. Dearing, Freeman A. Whitson,

Elijah H. Rook, Wiley D. Bass, William H. Young, George H. Jacobs,

John W. Malone.

Remaining on trial—Wm. T. Barnett, W. W. Hoskins, Collin M. Thredgill, Alfred P. Leech, Obed L. Savage, James M. Massey, James O. Bennett, John H. Shumaker, Wm. C. Harris, James H. Brown.

Admitted into full connection—Charles H. Owen, Nicholas G. Augustus, John W. Killough, Kenneth M. Harrison.

Traveling preachers elected elders—J. W. Anderson, J. H. Huiter, C. L. Ballard, G. H. Hodge, J. C. Smith, W. S. Shipman, R. C. Callaway.

Superannuated—S. B. Carson, W. S. Harrison, J. B. Robertson, J. M. Hampton, H. C. Morehead, J. T. Cunningham, J. K. Morris, J. K. Zimmerman.

Superannuated—J. O. Woodward, L. H. Davis, G. D. Wade, W. Murrah, J. P. Commender, E. J. Williams, J. F. Truslow, W. J. Reeves, Geo. Shaeffer, J. F. Markham, A. A. Houston.

J. W. Bell was received as a transfer from the Tennessee Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

SARDIS DISTRICT.—C. N. Terry, P. E. Sardis and Davis Chapel, T. C. Welr; Como and Fredonia, W. T. Sullivan; Senatobia station, K. A. Jones; Senatobia circuit, J. H. Hunter; Hernando and Cold Water, J. W. Bell; Horn Lake, J. W. Shumaker; Iwawig, H. T. Gaines; Cockrem, to be supplied; Chickasaw, W. W. Hoskins; Mt. Vernon, R. P. Goar; Batesville and Wesley, J. E. Thomas; Pleasant Grove, W. J. O'Bryen; Pandoia, J. W. Bates; Mastodon, supplied by (W. H. Echols).

AREDEEN DISTRICT.—R. G. Porter, P. E. Aberdeen station, W. B. Murrah; J. A. Simmons, superannuated; Okolona station, John Hitey; Okolona circuit, J. M. Barco; Vicksburg and Iuka, J. M. Wyatt; Prairie circuit, U. L. Vaughn; J. T. Cunningham, superannuated; Buena Vista, T. J. Taylor; J. R. Robertson, superannuated; Houston and Wesley, Eugene Johnson; Sparta circuit, E. A. Whitson; Pontotoc, A. R. Dearing; Shallice, J. B. Stone; Richmond, J. P. Leech; Sallio, John McElhannon; Tremont, supplied by (J. E. McDougall); Fulton and Smithville, W. S. Shipman; Athens circuit, T. J. Lowry; Ebenezer, C. M. Thredgill; Caledonia, supplied by (L. D. Hollingsworth).

GREENVILLE DISTRICT.—J. W. Honnoll, P. E. Greenville station, R. N. Standifer; Lake Wales station, to be supplied; Deer Creek, J. D. Newsum; Faison and Indianola, J. W. Dorman; Johnsonville and Mound Bayou, to be supplied; Jones Bayou, J. B. Harris; Clarkdale station, W. P. Barton; Jonestown station, N. R. Hamer; Robertsonville circuit, to be supplied; Anatin and Cherry Hill, J. H. Hodge; Filar's Point and Koselita, T. Y. Ramsey; Concordia station, E. L. Spraggins; Bolivar, R. M. Davis.

GRANADA DISTRICT.—S. M. Thomas, P. E. Granada station, T. J. Newell; Granada circuit, W. S. Lagrone; Water Valley station, W. P. Price; Wesley Chapel, A. P. Sage; Abbeville circuit, Q. A. Oaks; Coffeeville, James Porter; Baroka, J. W. Lintor; Charles Creek, C. C. Graham; Old Town, W. T. Shell; Oxford station, E. B. Ramsey; Oxford circuit, J. G. Freeman; Tooele, A. J. Foster; Banner, T. L. Foster; Pittsburg, S. A. Ellis; J. M. Hampton, superannuated; Benza, W. C. Lester; Soroka, J. M. Callaway; Mt. Lewis, West circuit, G. M. Brown; Black Hawk, J. F. Evans; Lexington, D. C. Pount; Pickens, Thomas Camoron; Ebenezer, to be supplied; Newport, W. A. Doller; Kosciusko, T. Y. Ramsey; Sallis circuit, W. W. Williams; McCoil, G. H. Hodge; A. M. McKinnon, superannuated; H. C. Parrott; Zilpah, J. M. Woolam; Nowtownville, J. M. Massey; Belzona, N. G. Augustus; Slidon, to be supplied; G. W. Bachman, colporteur and book agent.

WINONA DISTRICT.—R. P. Mitchell, P. E. Winona station, T. B. Malone; Valden circuit, D. M. Cogdell; Winona circuit, R. A. Burroughs; Greenwood, T. W. Lewis; West circuit, G. M. Brown; Black Hawk, J. F. Evans; Lexington, D. C. Pount; Pickens, Thomas Camoron; Ebenezer, to be supplied; Newport, W. A. Doller; Kosciusko, T. Y. Ramsey; Sallis circuit, W. W. Williams; McCoil, G. H. Hodge; A. M. McKinnon, superannuated; H. C. Parrott; Zilpah, J. M. Woolam; Nowtownville, J. M. Massey; Belzona, N. G. Augustus; Slidon, to be supplied; G. W. Bachman, colporteur and book agent.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT.—J. D. Cameron, P. E. Columbus station, J. H. Scruggs; Columbus circuit, B. F. Phillips; Walthall, W. C. Harris; Crawford, T. W. Dye; Brooksville, E. H. Cacy; Macon and Shugart, S. D. Long; Helena, H. B. Tucker; Salem, John H. King; Louisville, J. A. Leech; Noxubee, J. W. Killough; Starkville station, J. S. Oakley; Starkville circuit, E. H. Rook; W. S. Harrison, superannuated; West Point station, E. G. Kilgore; Tibbee, W. T. Dorman; Tampion, W. T. Barnett; Lagrange, T. H. Roney, and one to be supplied; Chester, L. D. Worsham.

CORINTH DISTRICT.—Amos Kendall, P. E. Corinth station, John H. Mitchell; Corinth circuit, W. M. Young; Iuka station, G. W. Gordon; Iuka circuit, supplied by (M. E. Thumlin); Joseph Johnson, superannuated; Kosciusko, H. B. Harrison; Blackland, M. H. Honnoll; Jonesboro, J. O. Bennett; Ripley and Blue Mountain, G. H. Jacobs; Booneville and Rienz, D. W. Rabb; Baldwin, R. A. Ellis; New Albany station, D. L. Cogdell; New Albany circuit, O. N. Koon; Marietta, W. D. Baes; Pleasant Ridge, to be supplied.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT.—John Barry, P. E. Holly Springs station, E. H. Moon; Holly Springs circuit, J. W. Poston; Pine Mountain, O. L. Savage; Bayhalla and Victoria, J. T. Moody; Marshall, C. H. Owen; New Salem, J. W. Anderson; J. K. Morris, superannuated; W. T. Barnett, Dorman; Ashland, B. S. Raynor; Emory, J. H. Brooks; Snow Creek, J. J. Brooks; S. B. Carson, superannuated; Cornersville, J. H. Smith; Hickory Flat, J. H. Brown; H. C. Morehead, superannuated; Shelby Creek, to be supplied.

TRANSEMPIRE.—C. L. Ballard and S. W. Miller, to the North Texas Conference; H. B. Scruggs, to the Texas Conference; S. C. Sumo, to the Little Rock Conference, and J. M. Boon, to the South-west Missouri Conference.

As we go to press the bulletin boards announce the sudden death of Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, the great millionaire. He died at his late residence in New York City. A marvelous financier, a very prince of railway magnets and a philanthropist has passed away.

One Lesson of the Manger.

The facts which make up one scene in the manger in Bethlehem are of curious and peculiar significance. Here is the fact, that the first worship offered to the incarnate Son of God was offered by strangers, and their worship consisted partly in gifts, and those gifts were of the most costly and valuable kind, and among those gifts the most precious was presented—first. "They presented unto him gifts, gold, frankincense and myrrh." Whatever else may be said of these wise men, they certainly knew the nature of true worship. God has always and everywhere required the best and costliest and the most valuable that the worshipper has! Looking upon this scene, a superficial observer would see in this gift nothing but a special Providence making preparations for the supply of the future necessities of the holy family. It was evidently a special Providence getting this family ready for a coming emergency, but is that all there is in it? May there not be something more than a special Providence here? The special Providence is simply the outside meaning of this transaction. There is an inner meaning to it, broader and more significant than we are accustomed to give it. We have here the first symbol of that high characteristic of Christian life which was to be clearly set forth in the teachings and beautifully embodied in the character and squarely set before the world in the work of him who lay in that cradle. Here is the first symbol of that religion which brings every thought and emotion and effort under the government of devoted love and consecrates its choicest and costliest gifts to the cause of him who is the Giver of all good. Perhaps the wise men had knowledge of the poverty of Joseph and Mary, and their gifts may have been presented with the intention of relieving the harsher aspects of that poverty; but did not God have something beyond that to teach, when under the promptings of his Spirit these Eastern strangers laid down their gold at the infant feet of his Son? The record says, "they presented gold." The gold came first and it was the most valuable! Why is this statement made in this way? Are facts and incidents recorded in the Scriptures in a hap-hazard way, without any meaning in the arrangement? Does the Spirit of inspiration take cognizance only of the facts to be recorded and leave the arrangement of the facts to chance? Is it not a fair presumption, that in the supervision of the records of inspiration, the Holy Spirit will arrange facts and incidents in such a manner that instruction shall be so clearly presented that it will make deep and lasting impressions in the mind? Will he not arrange them in that order in which each fact and each incident will throw its light upon every other fact and every other incident, and all the facts and all the incidents, combining their lights, will cast the steady beams of untarnished truth into the inquiring mind? The man of science says there is a great deal in this matter of arrangement. He tells us that he can arrange two lights in such a way as to produce total darkness, and he says he can arrange them so as to produce an endless succession of lights! He says he can so manage the sound waves that two sounds coming together will produce silence and, then, he can manage them in such a way that two sounds coming together will be shattered into a thousand distinct echoes! Now, as "God is light," we may be sure that he has so arranged the facts of Scripture as to best secure the instruction of men!

What does God design to teach, then, when he says in relation to these wise men, "they presented unto him gold"? What think you of this for an answer? Gold has always been a medium of communication between all people. This offering of gold to the infant Redeemer was a symbol of the fact that his work was to affect all people. It was a symbol that this King was one whose kingship and royal influence would travel out upon this universal medium and affect the lives and destinies of all men! This offering of gold pointed out the fact that the plan of God's operations in earth was about to be enlarged, so that all the nations would be brought within its benevolent embrace! The first scene in the earthly life of Jesus is linked to the last scene, where he commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel! Gold is the only medium through which that commission can be executed. The spread of the gospel has ever been in the ratio of the amount of gold which the church has laid at the feet of Christ! The prayers and songs of individuals and churches amount to very little as long as the gold is withheld. Worship without gifts accompanying it, is not worship. The heart that does not compel the hands to open the treasure boxes, will never realize the presence of an indwelling Christ! The church that withholds "the tithes" is sure to die of spiritual inanition!

German Mission Conference.

Mr. Editor: New Fountain, Texas, the seat of the German Conference, is 650 miles distant from our Crescent City. But, bating the money question, a long journey in a Pullman Sleeper entails no hardship. Six preachers and one lay delegate—J. H. Keller—constituted our party. By defraying some of our expense and by his geniality the latter contributed much toward making our trip a pleasant one. We laid over at Lake Charles, La., and spent the Sabbath with our German friends, preaching to large congregations. Bro. Bradley is doing a good work among the Americans. Monday was devoted to sight-seeing in Houston. Our party admired the architectural beauty of Shearn Church, erected under the pastoral administration of Rev. S. Halsey Werlein—a name held in high esteem in the Bayou City. We visited Bro. Pauly's grave. Over his earthly remains a beautiful tombstone of white marble has been erected, forming a full size pulpit with the open Bible on the top—eloquently expressive!

In due time Bishop R. K. Hargrove called the Conference to order. It pained us to hear of Bishop McTyeire's indisposition. Otherwise the episcopal substitution gave the brethren great satisfaction. Bishop Hargrove combines with the necessary urbanity and dignity encouraging bonhomie, ensuring confidence and good will. With the exception of a supernumerary, all the clerical members were present. Though of different States, with State prejudices fully developed, the business proceeded harmoniously. We are first Methodist preachers, afterward Texans, etc. The Committee of Memoirs, whose chairman was Prof. Rahe, formerly of New Orleans, presented an able report, paying just tributes to the memory of Bishop Parker and Bros. Pauly and Bohm-falk. The collections, with the exception of that for widows and orphans, were satisfactory. The report for Bishops was in excess of the assessment. Numerically, we are but "a cottage in a garden of cucumbers," the entire membership being but 1,342—a net increase of 46 during last year. For the cause of missions foreign and home, including the proceeds of the anniversary collection, $1,688.90 were raised, being about $1.25 per capita.

Dr. Heldt, regent of the Southern Western University, was with us, hopefully and encouragingly setting forth the advantages and claims of the institution over which he presides. He is a good platform speaker, aggressive and strong. Dr. Homer S. Thrall, presiding elder of the St. Antonio district, West Texas Conference, the able historian of Texas, enlightened the brethren with his presence.

The Conference requests the collection of Bishops to add Bishop McTyeire History of Methodism to our German course of study for the fourth year. The proposition as to change of name of our church was unanimously neglected. Next year the Conference convenes at Lake Charles, La. Sunday was the day of days with us. After a melting love-feast at nine o'clock, Bishop Hargrove preached a most impressive and edifying sermon. The hearts of the brethren were cheered. In the evening the Bishop administered the sacrament of baptism and, subsequently, that of the Lord's Supper. It was a precious time. All seemed to feel that it was good to be there. Having thus consecrated ourselves anew to the service of the Lord, we were in the proper mood to receive the

APPOINTMENTS.

WEST TEXAS DISTRICT.—J. A. Schaper, P. E. Llano circuit, Veroenbaumen; Fredericksburg, Schrimpt; New Fountain and Salm circuit, G. Bagusch; Elgin and Elm Creek, G. Muller; Braunfels and West Fork, Char Kurz; Yorktown, G. Gerde; Weinmar and Clatsen, William L. Curo and Victoria, Jacob Meike; C. A. Grote supernumerary.

CENTRAL TEXAS DISTRICT.—A. Knolle, P. E. Houston station, Jacob Bader; Belville, J. A. Rabe; Industry, J. Prinsburg; Lake Prairie, A. Scheurich; Grassburg and Burton circuit, J. Kemp; W. lamsou county mission, to be supplied by (H. Henipfel).

LOUISIANA DISTRICT.—J. B. Ahrens, P. E. Dryades Street Church, P. H. Hensch; Gray Street Church, J. B. A. Ahrens; Sorbonne Street and Oxyka, J. J. Bunn; Buckton and Oxyka, J. C. Knudsen; La. Charles, H. W. Weise; St. Tammany, to be supplied by (F. Matthe); Mobile, to be supplied; editor Familienfreund and Kinderfreund, J. B. A. Ahrens.

Fraternally yours,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 51.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1533.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

PRINTED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased preachers and of preachers who have died in the service of the church, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. R. H. WELCH, D. D., Editor.
REV. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.
REV. CHRISTIAN KEEFER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY, Editor.
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY, Editor.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D., Editor.
REV. W. P. BANTON, Editor.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

GIVE IT ME!

I wonder if there may not be,
Somewhere in God's eternity,
A work-day season, long and bright,
For souls toiled—when the night
Surgeons are their tasks are done—
Who give our golden threads upon
Because of weakness and not of sin?
I know not, yet it seems more likely,
More blessed were the soul's sweet rest
That sometime, somewhere, shall have wrought
Entire life's purpose—dead or thought—
And so I pray, "Oh, if there be
A place in God's immensity,
Where life's work may be rounded—give it me!"

Whisky Logic.

"A prohibitory law is a reflection upon the Savior of the world." So says whisky. And Bro. D. G. W. Ellis wants to know if I can "refute this specious argument." Well, I can try.

Hypercriticism is the bane of reason, and it generally assumes the form of irrelevancy, that is, to deny that which is not in the bill. By twisting and torturing a proposition into an unseemly and unnatural posture, its ill shape may be easily exhibited.

There is nothing intrinsically evil in whisky. All vegetable substance contains alcohol, and if we may not drink it to drunkenness and death, it does not therefore follow that we may not eat bread. The evil that some of us find in whisky is not in the thing intrinsically, but in the improper use of it. Like many other similar evils the harm is not absolute and necessary, but practically certain in certain conditions. Before gunpowder was invented no harm was likely to result from the carrying of concealed pistols. But the practice to become general now among all persons, children as well as adult persons, the ruin of society would most likely follow. So the laws prohibit it. There is nothing inherently wrong in steam power. And yet not many years ago it was abundantly seen that, let loose, the probable destruction of life by injudicious use of it would follow. Hence restrictive and compulsory laws in handling it. There is nothing intrinsically wrong in artistic pictures, or words printed by metallic types, and yet the use of them in what is called obscene literature is forbidden as highly criminal. There is no physical wrong in any particular measured agile steps or motions of the feet and arms, and yet we all know that promiscuous dancing is oftentimes carried to such lengths of inelasticity that if not restrained by laws civil or social, public and private decency would almost cease to exist. And so of many other like things.

Dr. Crosby, of whom Bro. Ellis writes, is not the only man that has been troubled about the water pots of wine at the wedding feast at Cana. There is a difference between looking at a thing—one side of it—and looking into it. Moral and social manners and customs have undergone many changes and conformations since that wedding. Fundamental laws have not changed, but social customs have. What is now called strong drink, in common parlance, was not known for more than a thousand years after the Savior's time. What is now known as distillation was not known until the first year of this present century. There was drunkenness in the time of the Savior, and there is drunkenness now; but the ratio of popular increase has been more than a thousand fold. This invention of the present mode of distilling, in 1801, has almost literally flooded the country with strong drink. Its increase since then is not less than a hundredfold.

If whisky occupied the same social ground now that it occupied even sixty or seventy years ago, and public morals the same, you would see no such great moral and social upheavals as this present moral earthquake which now so wonderfully agitates the very bowels and vitals of the nation. Look at Maine, Kansas, Atlanta! Hurrah for Atlanta! By my religious faith and my hope of immortality I repeat, All hail Atlanta!

This present uprising and great national protest is not, as Dr. Crosby's argument seems to suppose, because ancient wine once a year, or once in ten thousand times, made a man drunk, but because the flood gales of whisky are recently opened, because this floodtide threatens social disruption, because it is causing the ground to crumble beneath our very benightedness, because the preservation of the nation and the welfare of our children demand it.

The wine in the pots of Cana was wine—wine that could and sometimes did intoxicate; but it does not, therefore, follow of logical necessity that later chemical discoveries in producing and mixing alcohol must necessarily be suffered to stifle the commerce, corrupt the legislation and overthrow the morals of a nation or of many nations down here in the nineteenth century. And more: it is clearly, or at least seemingly, implied that wine at feasts was an unforbidden custom in those days. And if intoxicating drink had stayed there, or even somewhere in that neighborhood, this present uprising of the people would not be seen.

And then, if it should be asked, Why, then, this teetotalism? The answer is, because of the awfully dangerous tendency of moderate drinking. This tendency is not now what it was eighteen hundred years ago. Then its potent was small and scarcely visible; now it is morally certain and alarming in the highest degree. Now, whether you wish it so or not, this whole broad land is an Atlanta battlefield. He who supposes that neutrality is a thing of real existence has yet to study the pioneer of moral philosophy.

Scripture must be explained by Scripture. And, remember, the Bible is all Scripture. In like circumstances we must follow Scripture example. Prohibition is advocated now because of the necessity now.

And still it is not the alcohol itself that is prohibited, but the liquor for drinking. If this present question had been present in the time of Christ, who does not know on which side he and the apostles would have marshaled their forces?

H. ARDREY.

YALOO CITY, Mississippi.

The Sunset Prayer Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: The twenty-fourth of the incoming December will complete my sixty-first year in connection with the Mississippi Conference. When I was admitted on trial, in Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 24, 1824, there were forty-one preachers who received appointments for the following year. Our Conference then extended from the eastern boundary of Alabama to the western boundary of Louisiana, including all the intervening country settled by white people and the Choctaw Indians. We were a small brotherhood to occupy such a vast territory, and such was our scattered condition that when we parted at the close of Conference, with but few exceptions, we did not expect to see each other's face again for twelve months. Our epistolary correspondence with each other was necessarily limited, as we had to pay twenty-five cents postage on each letter received, and, after clothes and books and the inevitable circuit horse with his traveling equipage, we had but little to spare for postage out of a hundred-dollar salary, which often fell short of that amount. But we were a most loving band of brothers, and when we tearfully separated at the conclusion of our Conference we pledged each other to meet at the throne of grace in private prayer for each other and the success of our work every evening at the going down of the sun. Hence the organization of what we called our Sunset Prayer Meeting. So far as I know all our preachers, religiously, observed the hour for private meditation and prayer. Our closet was generally the nearest woods adjoining the place where we were to rest at night, and it was a delightful place to hold communion with our Father in heaven, and think of our beloved brethren far away engaged in the same exercise at the same time. I readily acquired the habit of private meditation and prayer at the setting of the sun and have observed it ever since. But, alas for me! I never meet any of my early colleagues at the Sunset Prayer Meeting any more. The last one of them has long since been transferred to paradise, and so far as they are concerned, I am left to finish my journey alone. This thought often produces a feeling of indescribable loneliness. I am now surrounded with a host of itinerant preachers whom I dearly love; but among them all I do not see the face of one of my early colleagues. But I know where to find them again. Their "track I see and I'll pursue" until I overtake them. I fully expect to see them all again, and the time of meeting draws near. I would say it with becoming modesty and humility; but I never thought less of earth and more of heaven than I do now. I have lately read the text of Revelation three times in quick succession, and, in order to refresh my memory with the prophecies that have been fulfilled and those yet to be fulfilled, I have just finished a careful reading of "Benson's Commentary on the Book" greatly to my profit. I do not know when the millennium will come; but I do know it will come in the Lord's good time. But in reading and meditating on the last two chapters of Revelation I have been made to feel that heaven is close by me or else I have got close to it. I have read many books on the fulfillment of prophecy; but I prefer Benson on the Revelation to anything I have ever read on that prophetic book.

J. G. JONES.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 29, 1885.

Rest for the Weary.

BY REV. J. B. A. ARDREY, D. D.

I rest all around. Even in the grave there is no rest. Tombstones lie. After decomposition the mutations of matter are ceaseless. Our bodies will not rest until they are raised incorruptible.

Unrest all around. Even the idler has no rest. Ennui torments him day and night. Neither can rest be found among those who are engaged in life's fierce battles. Struggling early and struggling late. There is physical, intellectual and spiritual unrest to every member of the human family. See workmen, weary; merchants, distressed; politicians, perturbed; men of lore, lamenting their doleful lot. Worry and woe to the beggar; worry and woe to crowned royalty. The so-called favorites of fortune suffer most from unrest. The oak on the mountain's summit endures more of the storm's blast than the sheltered tree in the valley. The prosperous are terrified because of the Damocles' sword suspended over their heads. The doom of Tantalus is the doom of thousands. Man never is, but always to be blessed. The progeny of Sisyphus is woefully numerous. Disappointment hurriedly succeeds disappointment.

Sleep, the Sabbath and peace with God are emblems of the rest in heaven. The willing workman who contentedly eats his bread in the sweat of his brow converts the curse into blessings. After the day's hardships he rests well. Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep, is to him a precious gift. The Sabbath is the day for relaxation and recuperation as well as for religious edification. Sweet rest, when after repentance and fervent prayer God speaks peace to the soul! Peace, he still! said Jesus, and the boisterous billows were calmed. When our sins are forgiven deep serenity pervades the heart. But what of the rest of which these are emblems? We should be fully informed of the true nature of the heavenly rest.

1. In heaven we will rest from the struggles for earthly subsistence. With most people life is a painful endeavor to acquire a competency for themselves and family. They are weighed down with care. It is indeed a difficult and onerous task to secure the means for the support and education of our progeny. But in heaven no poverty and want. No empty pockets, empty cupboards, empty trunks. No mortgages on our mansions in glory. The tables groan under the load of a superabundance. Robes of white silk are furnished to all. In heaven, where the streets are of gold, we shall not want. We rest from our labors.

2. In heaven we will rest from disease and pain. Manifest are the ailments which afflict the children of men. No armor of steel renders us invulnerable to the weapons of the fell host of human maladies. You fortify your lungs, but attacks on the liver bring you to dust; you strengthen the blood, but the stricken nerves will cause pain and anguish; the stomach may be well to do, but ailing kidneys will render collapse inevitable. How numerous are the aches and ailments! But in heaven no sickness and pain. Hospitals, surgeons, physicians, nameless diseases are unknown in heaven. The mind's efforts are not there clogged by the feebleness of the body. No wasting of strength, no sick-bed, no death-bed, no death-rattle, no death, no funeral processions, no graves in heaven.

3. In heaven we will rest from the onsets of Satan. No temptations there, no sin. Here Satan goeth about seeking whom he may devour. None escape his sieve. Often we feel strong, declaring with Peter that we would not be faithless, no matter what might betide; yet soon we are found weeping bitterly. It is deeply humiliating to be tempted to sin, yield to bidious, horrible sin; it is shameful to submit to the tempter and sin against our heavenly Father. But through the portals of paradise Satan never enters. On his Jasper walls his arrows shiver. There we are indeed safe in the arms of Jesus.

4. In heaven we will rest from the bitter anxiety of separation. In heaven we meet our loved ones again. Our dear parents—we shall re-embrace them. Our darling children will weep for joy on our bosoms. Genial friends will join us. And withal, in the vocabulary of heaven's language the word "parting" is not known.

5. In heaven we shall rest from ignorance. Here we know in part; but there we shall know even as also we are known. We shall see God face to face. The mysteries which here afflict us are revealed in heaven. The faculty, as well as the scope of our intellectual vision, will be immeasurably enlarged. The ineffable light which filled the disciples on Tabar with terror will be genial to us in the home of the soul. "More light!" exclaimed Goethe on the threshold of eternity. It will be afforded to the people of God in superabundance.

"The Sickness of Zinnue."

MR. EDITOR: To try to convey to you the sad feelings I experienced when reading, in your last issue, on "The Sickness of Zinnue," would be impossible; but I must tell you that, although I was almost as much in the dark as Bro. Carradine as to her present place of abode, and as I have heard, known and read of her being in so many places, yet I must differ with him about her sickness. Even doctors disagree with each other; so they must not be offended if now and then someone disagrees with them in their diagnosis of the case of Zinnue. Not long since a certain doctor in New York caused a mother to bring her little child in to the lecture room of a medical college, where he had an appointment to meet several other doctors to diagnose the case of the child. He told them the child had an uncommon disease, one that was not often heard of in this country, and he wanted their most learned opinions. Each doctor made a very exhaustive examination of the child and gave as their separate decisions a terrible latin name for the terrible disease of which the child was afflicted. No two agreeing in their diagnosis of the case. Then the doctor who had called the consultation laughingly held up the chubby-faced baby and told them the dear little human bundle had never had an hour's sickness in its life. The uncommon disease was perfect health. Now, what if this might be the case with Zinnue's sickness. But, no! Bro. Carradine was "absolutely sure—that she was sick." Well, we were all the learned doctors absolutely sure the baby was sick, and thought it was too far gone to even look up at least when they had it lying on its stomach, and if they had taken it in hand and prescribed for each or all of those terrible diseases its different, different and squelcherent nerves would have been decided and it would have looked even thinner than Zinnue did in rainy days. It might have brightened up a little when they went out, but not when they came in; for then they would have taken it away from its mother and it would have gone right down again, and by the time Drs. Alopah, Sugaropath, Goldsheet, DeLobella and Hoteau had prescribed for the baby it would not have had voice enough left to laugh at the funny things one of them said. The mother of that baby was almost ready to weep while those learned doctors were handling her precious little one so roughly. Iest it would be not only deadened but really dead. So would I to-night sit down by the rivers of this sunny Southland and weep if I thought Zinnue was as sick as Drs. Outgoing, Incoming, Cevere, Silinun, Propporzesum, Cilexy, Albmyley, Sturnbrow and Windupp have pronounced her to be. Yes, I would weep when I remembered Zinnue. From the early years of my childhood Zinnue has been to me as the apple of mine eye, and nothing less than a thunderbolt from the sky would make me believe she is sick unto death.

"For her my tears shall fall;
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my toils and cares be given,
Till toils and cares shall end."

Was she not like a fruitful vine planted by the river of waters? O beautiful Zinnue, what alleth thee? O thou whom my soul loveth, O thou fairest among women tell me! O ye daughters of Jerusalem, what alleth Zinnue? Awake, O north wind, and come thou South! Hear, O heavens; and give ear, O earth! Is Zinnue sick or left as a cottage in a vineyard forsaken? or is she mourning because the daughters of Jerusalem walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes walking and mincing as they go making a tinkling with their feet. In the very ancient Hebrew book, from which I quote, the marginal reading is tripping nicely as they go. That sounds more like modern language. If this is what is the matter with Zinnue, this same old book says there will come a day when their tinkling ornaments and round tires like the moon, the chains, bracelets, muller's (little) bonnets, head-bangs, tablets, ear-rings, rugs, changeable suits, mantles, crimping pins, gasses, (worn for fashion's sake,) hoods and veils shall be taken away, and she being desolate, shall sit upon the ground. O ye daughters of Jerusalem, is this the cause of the sickness of Zinnue?

It may be one cause; but Bro. Carradine makes Zinnue say that one of her physicians "put her to sleep with opiates." We all know that although doctors differ they use opiates in a certain stage of diseases, and it strikes me that Zinnue was a good judge of her own malady when she said that, and she is still too easy and all her members are easy, they do not need to be amputated, they are simply asleep, and need a brisk rubbing or else they will become paralyzed and her last state will be worse than the first.

"Woe to those that are at ease in Zinnue," said the same old book, and the remedy for all who have taken opiates is action. If Zinnue has had an opiate administered by some of her doctors, or in a fit of despondency concluded to suicide, we have the authority of this same old reliable book which seems to anticipate this very case of the sickness of Zinnue to prescribe a remedy. It says, "Walk about, Zinnue." That is what is the matter, "ease," and the remedy only to "walk." How simple, yet how potent to save! O, ye doctors, Zinnue is too easy yet. Make her walk, keep her walking, make every member walk, from the least to the greatest. Walk in the morning and in the evening; rest not thy feet. Walk, walk, walk about, Zinnue. There is nothing else to do that will counteract that deadly opiate that has made such rapid inroads. Do not stop because she says there is nothing in her. That opiate is in her and you must walk it out. Yes, walk about Zinnue and round about her. Tell her to awake and put on her beautiful garments. Awake out of that deadly torpor. Awake for the morning dawns. Awake, ye careless daughters that are at ease, for beautiful for situation and the joy of the whole earth is Zinnue, and when you have brought Zinnue to her feet she will have voice enough to talk and sing too. Keep Zinnue on her feet, walking, talking and singing, and all the drugs of the apothecary will not put her to sleep again. Walk about, Zinnue, and walk Zinnue about. She will not only look up, but she will stand up and sing "Coronation" with a sound that will startle the doctors and silence the music box and electrify the world. And then—O, how Zinnue will rejoice and all the daughters of Judah be glad!

MRS. L. CLARY SAILER.

National Aid to Education.

MR. EDITOR: Our present Congress will doubtless have much very important work to do. I think the "Blair Bill for National Aid to Education," or one similar, should be regarded as one of the most important that can occupy their time and thought. This is a Christian nation, and national aid should be given on conditions that will subserve the interests of Christianity. Our Roman Catholic friends have opposed the use of the Bible in our public schools; now they oppose the schools because religion is not taught therein. This difficulty can be easily adjusted by simply adopting a catechism, teaching the great cardinal doctrines upon which the whole Protestant and Catholic world agree, with a department on the morals of religion, inculcating the teachings of the decalogue. "Knowledge is power," power for evil, if not sanctified by divine truth; power only for good, if directed by righteousness. Another important work for this Congress is to acknowledge the nation's gratitude to the men who risked their lives in our war with Mexico. The results of that war have increased the nation's wealth and greatness beyond computation. It is but sheer justice that the veterans, their wives and children be remembered by an act giving them some just remuneration. A third important work for Congress is to adopt measures to prevent the transportation of the United States mails on the Sabbath as far as possible.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." The Christian Sabbath is a necessity to a Christian nation. Stop the carrying of the mail on the Sabbath, and we make a long stride toward its religious observance. "Fast, but not least," our present Congress should legislate strongly on the prohibition question. It is not a matter of small moment that our nation is called a "nation of drunkards." This epithet is probably too strong; but, alas! how little is too strong. The silver question may be important; but the first, third and fourth subjects, stated in this simply suggestive paper, are of present vital importance to all the people of this great republic. The second only recognizes a sacred debt due by the government for valuable service rendered.

D. F. WHITE.

Writing from Brodnax, La., Rev. R. H. Isbell thus refers to his pastoral labors:

I am glad to report progress in regard to my work the present year. Have held four protracted meetings with success. Some twenty-seven additions, several conversions, and another protracted meeting yet to follow. Conference collections will be in advance of last year. The Advocate is not forgotten.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. CALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. ADAMS, D. D., REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1885.

The Alabama Conference meets this week at Union Springs, Ala. Bishop Wilson will preside.

The estate of Mrs. Rebecca F. Taylor, who died recently at Jackson, Tenn., is valued at $20,000. This entire estate was bequeathed to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the education of the children of the preachers of the Memphis Conference who have died in the work, and the erection of churches in destitute places.

The Catholic clergy of Philadelphia are using their influence in urging liquor sellers of their faith to close on Sunday. Now when, in obedience to the declarations of the Plenary Council, they urge them to quit the business entirely, we may expect a genuine temperance revival. Fully nine-tenths of the saloon keepers of the United States are Roman Catholics.

The following is from the society column of the New York Sun. The custom has not as yet found favor in our Southern communities; but we join with our cotemporary in saying, "The sooner it is stopped the better."

Dinner invitations have recently been sent out with the ominous word "Cards" at the bottom. If this means that the custom in fast London and Paris society of spending the evening after dinner in gambling is to be introduced here, the sooner it is stopped the better.

Another iniquity, however, has grown popular in our latitude that ought to be kept far aloof from every Christian home. We refer, of course, to the "progressive enchanter" craze. In some instances we have noticed that this nonsense is patronized by church members. By this means so-called Christians are raising up a generation of gamblers.

Although the elections are over in England, the question of church disestablishment and disendowment is as exciting as ever. Something must be done to satisfy the growing sentiment of the country on the subject, or it will soon be the great question of party contest. The telegrams report that Lord Salisbury and his government propose to submit a scheme for church reform. In the meantime the clergy and "lords spiritual" are pleading with desperation for the existing order of things. Even so gentle and philosophical a man as Lord Tennyson writes excitedly on the subject. He says that the disestablishment of the church would be the prelude to the downfall of much that is greatest and best in England. He admits abuses, but argues that ample, and not violent, remedies are at hand. He appeals to politicians who are fond of referring to America as an ideal government to consider our conservative, restrictive provision in the fifth article of the Constitution. It may be, as he suggests, a safeguard to England's Constitution against ignorant and reckless theorists; but no diligent seeker will find therein the slightest encouragement to support an ecclesiastical-political hierarchy. The allusion is rather unfortunate for the poet laureate.

Bishop McTear reached the city on Monday morning en route to the Mississippi Conference at Meridian. He soon found his way to the Advocate office and looked on the scenes that once knew him so well. Bating the slight attack of dengu he stood the labor of his episcopal tour quite well, and is the very picture of health. He attended the preachers' meeting at Caroudelet and delighted the brethren with an interesting account of observations in Texas. The outlook for Methodism in that great empire is most cheering. The several Conferences will report an aggregate increased membership of not less than ten thousand. The Bishop was especially pleased with the Nehemiah spirit of the church. Everywhere the preachers were actively engaged in building churches and parsonages. Another observation worthy of note was the large number of family altars erected—the emphasis given to home religion. There is the conserving power of the church. When it controls and blesses the daily family life, there is guarantee of permanency and increasing development.

The Bishop remained in the city among old friends until Tuesday, at noon, when he left by the North-eastern railroad for Meridian.

The President's Message and Mormonism.

The social iniquity, which, under the guise of religion, has established itself in the great West and claimed the protection of law, has seen the beginning of the end. Agents have been active at home and abroad making proselytes, and the multitudes transported to Utah within the past several years excite surprise, if not alarm. With increasing members, they have grown defiant. First appealing for the rights of conscience in practicing their religion (?), they at length resented any suggestion of interference with their iniquities, and have nobly disregarded plain statutory law. Year after year the subject has been discussed in the halls of Congress, and repressive measures proposed and laid aside. But when the Edmunds' Bill became a law, a few years ago, its operative force was soon apparent. Every ingenious effort has been made to negative its provisions and elude the vigilance of its administrators; but to little purpose. It has unearthed the seditious outrages of the apostles and chief men of the Mormon hierarchy, and aroused the country to demand the entire extermination of the shameless evil. That the people have borne with it so long, and the government has been so deliberate in its suppression, is nothing to our credit as a nation.

But the day of forbearance has ceased and the time of decisive, final action has come. President Cleveland has given the subject prominent mention in his message to Congress, and recommended the passage of a law to prevent the further immigration of Latter Day Saints to this country. We applaud his clear, pronounced utterances, and hope they will soon find emphatic expression in a well-considered statute. An extract from his message will be read with interest by every friend of social purity. It is far in advance of any other presidential recommendation on the subject.

Thus is the strange spectacle presented of a community treated by a republican form of government, to which they owe allegiance, sustaining by their suffrage a principle and a belief which sets at naught that obligation of absolute obedience to the law of the land which lies at the foundation of republican institutions. The strength, the perpetuity and the destiny of the nation rest upon the homes, established by the law of God, guarded by parental care, regulated by parental authority and sanctified by parental love.

There is no feature of this practice, or the system which sanctifies it, which is not opposed to all that is of value in our institutions. There should be no relaxation in the firm, but just execution of the law now in operation, and I should be glad to approve such further discreet legislation as will rid our country of this blot upon its fair fame.

Since the people upholding polygamy in our Territories are reinforced by immigration from other lands, I recommend that a law be passed to prevent the importation of Mormons into this country.

The President deserves all praise for thus squarely meeting the issue and promising the influence of his high office to rid the land of this outrage. He puts the question on its true basis—the preservation of our home life as a people. Whatever else we may have of soil, climate and wise political institutions, they are worth nothing without a pure family. It is the very heart of our civilization. If that is impure, the whole body suffers deadly poison. It is in the home the sturdy virtues are nurtured that make us a patriotic, independent, great people. So long as honesty, social purity, reverence for parents and love of home ties are preserved our country is safe. No party dissensions or sectional disputes can ever disturb its deep-laid foundations.

Fierce political storms may sweep the high seas of our national life; but the old ship of state will ride upon the waves unharmed and unalarmed. And later the news comes that the Supreme Court of the United States, the highest judicial tribunal of the land, has again affirmed a case coming up under the Edmunds' Bill, thereby strengthening the hands of government officials in Utah. Having passed successfully the examination of the great court that tests the integrity and constitutionality of all legislation, we may expect its more rigid enforcement. Assured of the cordial, constant support of the authorities at Washington, Gov. Murray can be even more defiant of Mormon terrorism. His has not been a timid policy, and can now be more aggressive. There is no compromise with this evil—no armistice in the struggle. With the increasing of heterogeneous multitudes from all lands, bringing the vices and evils on which they have been reared, we need to show a more rigid adherence to the peculiar principles and institutions that make us a nation. Every congressional constituency will, therefore, applaud the vote of a representative for a measure that will prevent the polygamous immigration to our shores.

Letter from Bishop Keener.

THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

This Conference adjourned yesterday (Wednesday the 24) at noon. The session included Thanksgiving Day, and another day spent in discussing the question of dividing into two Conferences. The latter proposition was negatived by 23 votes. The Conference includes 77,783 members—a gain of 2,695 for the last year. It sends 14 delegates to General Conference. All the arguments in favor of large Conferences, as well as those against, were brought forth. You of Louisiana know all the advantages of a small Conference and have never known any thing else. The large bodies of Virginia, of North Carolina, of South Carolina, of Tennessee and of North Georgia are felt throughout the State, as well as throughout the church, simply by weight of numbers, and every individual preacher represents this weight in the bounds of his own circuit. The members of such bodies are held to a stricter responsibility than those of a small Conference. In large bodies excellent committees can be had and competent men found for all the work of a session. Better models of pastoral efficiency are likely to be found, a greater variety of pulpits talent.

The Conference has 807 church houses, valued at $984,200 and 102 parsonages. 21 persons received on trial and 27 ordained deacons. The delegates, clerical, are L. S. Burkhead, N. H. D. Wilson, J. E. Mann, W. M. Rabe, J. A. Cunningham, J. R. Brooks, W. S. Black, alternate—W. H. Bobbitt and J. W. North; laymen—D. W. Bain, T. M. Jones, T. P. German, W. M. Parker, C. G. Montgomery, F. C. Robins, N. M. Lawrence; alternates—O. W. Carr, L. F. Hoyle.

Just before reading the appointments, memorial services were held for nine members who had died; John W. Lewis, Robt. P. Bibb, Henry Gray, John W. Floyd, Chas. H. Phillips, John N. Andrews, Baxter C. Phillips, Lemuel H. Gibbons, Wm. L. Hull. To these were added the names of our beloved Bishop Parker and Wm. C. Doub. Bishop Parker had presided at the last session and had drawn all the brethren to him. They deeply deplored his loss. Bro. Doub had been a layman only less than a preacher, who had been missionary treasurer of the Conference for years, and no one could be missed more in its business. The accounts given of some of these noble persons were amazing. One of them had more than 5000 persons converted under his ministry. What a result! More than on the day of Pentecost through the agency of one man. Several of them were venerable in service. They all left a good report. No wonder that Methodism moves forward.

Dr. Morton was present at the session from the far West, full of plans for enlarging our church building resources. The Church, North, has new and immense power in her Church Extension Society. She is dotting our whole territory with her "fraternal" structures. The balmy South is a desirable region for her rheumatic forces to winter in. When here they slip Northward during the summer heats and fevers, but their zeal returns Southward with our invigorating fall season, and continues once again until spring. But on the other hand there is nothing in the North that we desire; not our winters, nor their rare spring season, nor their stifling summer time.

O, the negro! What a field does he present to those adventurous spirits, who wish to Christianize the South! Only, there is not a single colored congregation in the entire South served by a white pastor—mark that! One presiding elder to a Conference is tolerated by colored people if he brings with him money enough to pay the brethren in the Conference. There are 16,800 colored public schools in the Southern States, and they are taught by 15,824 colored teachers. Supported by the Southern States, at an annual cost of nearly $7,000,000. The need for Northern help unless it can reach colored congregations and colored public schools is imaginary. But the negro, only employed by the South for voting, is a good text to raise money with in congregations at the North and it is the one cord upon which much metallic music is rung out. Hence this triumph. Our Church Extension Society is the one barrier needed to arrest this flood. Dr. Morton has during the past four years laid a broad foundation for its work.

Trinity College here is still struggling for support. It has greatly advanced in the attendance upon its schools—some 130, I think. It has educated three-fourth of the Conference. What a marvel that the cities and towns of North Carolina Methodism do not take the matter promptly in hand and endow it.

The vote of Conference on change of name was 2 for, and 163 against.

Death of William H. Vanderbilt.

We only had opportunity last week of making the bare announcement of the death of Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, of New York, the wealthiest man in America, if not in the world. He died suddenly at his own home while talking cheerfully to a friend about railroad business matters. Thus in the midst of his years one of the greatest financiers known to history has fallen on sleep. Among the last acts of his busy life was the elaboration and execution of a grand railway scheme which restored the value of his stocks on the market and recovered the losses his lines had sustained. He inherited his father's great executive genius, and was in nowise inferior to him when in the zenith of his powers. Indeed, it was his active co-operation and counsel that aided the old Commodore in amassing his immense fortune.

Mr. Vanderbilt was not a mere Wall street jobber, betting on the rise and fall of the market. His large accumulations were not the results of perilous ventures, but of careful calculation. Mr. Jay Gould says he was one of the safest and most conservative of men. He managed great interests involving millions with the composure of a salaried clerk, and never allowed the excitements of growing enterprises to becloud his sober judgment.

Mr. Vanderbilt was a modest man, never given to boasting. An intimate friend and millionaire said he never heard him allude to the extent of his fortune. There was no parade of his millions and no offensive egotism of manner. That is an example worthy of imitation by some possessors of only a few hundred ducats.

He seems to have been a man of large benevolence. The extent of his charities were unknown to the world. He had a number of worthy poor and various institutions upon his list, to which annual offerings were quietly made. In his will generous bequests were made to many worthy objects, including $200,000 to Vanderbilt University. He made seemingly a very equitable distribution of his fortune among his heirs, and, most of all, bequeathed to them the priceless treasure of a good name.

He evidently was a wise father, having due regard to the responsibilities of parenthood. The care of vast estates did not allow him to neglect the training of his children. His sons are honorable, industrious men actively engaged in business. It is a significant coincidence that the news of their father's death found each one at work, and one of them at the Bible House, attending a meeting of the managers of the American Bible Society. The millions they were sure to inherit had not taught them to be idle and profligate.

These lessons from the life of a rich man are worthy of remembrance. The current sentiment of the day denies to men of wealth these gentler virtues. It is well, therefore, to give them emphasis, for they teach us that moral and manly worth are independent of circumstances and possible to all conditions of life.

After the Chaff.

The preaching of Rev. Sam Jones in St. Louis is not pleasing everybody. Some sneers are not like it, and some sneers are not delighted. The Romanists, through their organ, the Western Watchman, have attacked him, while the clergy and faithful of certain fashionable churches have indulged in severe criticism. But, nothing daunted, the brave apostle moves right on and hews to the line without fear or favor. All the while, however, the little proselyter is on his grand rounds, picking up every half-awakened sinner possible and giving him cordial welcome into the church of easy confessions. And thus the Lord Christ is wounded in the house of his friends.

On this subject the South-Western Methodist speaks as follows: "Since the meetings began some of the preachers of this city, of other denominations, have espoused the cause of the theatre-goers and euchre players. They regard them as sadly maltreated gentry. They have even taken the pulpit in their defense. This is a bid for the disgruntled, the winnowings of the Methodist threshing floor. Such bids are generally made on revival occasions. We are not ignorant of the devices of worldly, fashionable churches. We have had the preachers of such to take hold of persons, half persuaded to be Christians, at our meetings, and tell them: 'In our church you can dance and go to the theatre. The Methodists are too strict about these things.' And these arguments prevailed, and persons led into churches by the promise that their worldly ways should not be disturbed. The revival purges the Methodist floor, and the worldly and fashionable are blown away. A genuine revival makes them uncomfortable, and they go to churches where divine service is conducted with more dignity. During Methodist revivals these fashionable churches hang out their bids for the disaffected and half penitent. Such advertisements are plainly read in sundry criticisms of Sam Jones."

Prohibition Prohibits.

Our enemies being the judges there is a virtue in prohibitory legislation. Though the taunt is on the lips of every whisky advocate that prohibition is a failure—that it in no wise decreases the consumption of liquor—in their calmer moments when calculations are made, another opinion is declared. Then they sing another tune and rouse their friends to redoubled effort to stay the tide of fanaticism. During the recent struggle in Atlanta, the whisky advocates resorted to every possible agency to defeat prohibition. On the platform speakers declared prohibition a failure, while their committees were preparing documents for circulation, showing how it would injure the liquor business. The lessees of the Kimball House issued a circular for the campaign which surrenders the whole question so far as the efficiency of repressive laws are concerned. It will interest our readers to get such emphatic testimony from the other side, so we reproduce it:

We are now barely able to pay expenses and meet our obligations, and, if prohibition prevails, we shall be ruined. It would be utterly ruinous for us to make a dime, and when we fail to meet the paper that we have already given, and which extends over a period of five years, our creditors will close us out and the hotel will be shut up. We are seriously considering whether or not it would be best to close the hotel for the two years that prohibition is on us and save the furniture and carpets until the people can undo their action. We have put our money into this hotel, and have given obligations for $200,000, to be paid within the next five years. I have figured out what our loss would be under prohibition, and it would reach not less than $60,000 a year, directly and indirectly. We shall be utterly unable to run the hotel if prohibition prevails. We pay $50,000 a year, and without the bar would not give $25,000 a year for this hotel.

You say you would lose directly and indirectly; how is that? was asked. This way: The daily receipts from the bar, billiard-room, cigar sales and barber shop amount to $225 average for the year around. If prohibition prevails, we shall lose the bar receipts, which are about $150 a day. In addition to that we shall lose, at the lowest calculation, one-fourth of our transient patronage, making the total loss about $60,000 a year.

Universal and United Prayer, January 3-10, 1886.

Beloved Brethren in Christ: Never was a time, perhaps, when God's people had more need, with prayer and supplication and thanksgiving, to spread forth their hands toward heaven. We affectionately and earnestly invite you, whether singly or collectively, to lift up your hearts and voices to God during the week of prayer appointed for the ensuing year.

We live in wonderful days. Men go to and fro, and knowledge increases everywhere. It is to be said that while the lightning encompasses the earth with its belt of wire, and while men have frequent, and almost instantaneous, communications with each other in far-off regions of the globe, Christians make but feeble use of that more wonderful power of prayer, by which they communicate with heaven?

"At the beginning of the supplication the commandment came forth"—was the response conveyed by the angel Gabriel to Daniel's petitions. Not even need the instrument be set in motion; not one solitary moment of time is necessary. He who hears prayer has created the desire to pray; the disposition is from him; he puts it into our hearts to summon you into that blessed communication with himself, which is quicker than the lightning flash, and surer than the strongest cable. We may, therefore, humbly say, while inviting you to join in our annual week of prayer, "The Lord hath heard us. God is with us!"

Hitherto the Divine blessing has rested remarkably upon the universal week of prayer. Year after year we receive (praised be God!) renewed tokens of increased interest in these gatherings. The zone of supplication and thanksgiving is ever widening, so that it encompasses more and more the peoples and countries of the whole earth. Let us pray, pray on. Oh! when shall he come; when shall he reign amongst us, to whom the right belongs? When shall wars and rumors of wars cease? When shall vice and sin and misery no longer ravage or destroy? When shall the darkness of idolatry and superstition be turned into the eternal light? God in his mercy grant that our fervent and united prayers may, in the chain of his marvelous providence, prepare the way for the conversion of the nations, for the more speedy manifestation of the kingdom of his dear Son, and for this creation of all things anew in Christ!

We remain, in brotherly love, on behalf of the Evangelical Alliance, Yours faithfully, COMMITTEE.

From Bastrop.

Mr. Editor: The Colored M. E. Church in America is now in session here, under the presidency of Bishop W. H. Miles.

The Bishop is a fair parliamentarian, and conducts the Conference in a very commendable way. He keeps his private minutes, and seems to have the unbounded confidence of his brethren. I looked in upon the Conference this morning and saw an able-looking corps of workers, some of whom show good sense and fine judgment in business matters, and heard the Bishop say: "I told you yesterday, if you brought up recommendations for brethren who drink drinks, we will not receive them. I meant, what I said. No dram drinker can get into the ministry by me." He asked an applicant for admission an trial: "Are you fully persuaded that the use of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is forbidden by the word of God?" "Do you drink liquor?" "No sir." "Not even when it is sweetened?"

The Bishop's visit here is, at this particular time, a God-send to local option, as our election comes off the fourteenth instant.

The license men are sending out cautionary advice to negroes as proposed to vote for local option, and a leading Baptist preacher told me in the presence of the deputy clerk of the district court, a few days ago, that his heart and soul were in the cause, but that he could not afford to take the risk. So, they expect to succeed.

In all the past, I have never seen such stridency in the money market as I now see here, and at Monroe, indeed, it is general in these parts. In every place, finances are sadly in arrears. My receipts to date, are about 40 per cent. of my salary, and every thing else in proportion. I am in fear of going under, both as to my Conference relations and personally. Truly,

J. A. PARKER.

Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference.

At the last annual meeting of this society it was resolved that each vice-president write briefly as to the best mode of conducting monthly meetings, so as to insure the complete success of auxiliaries.

On this subject so much has been said that I scarcely hope to throw a ray of influence that may give new impetus to the work. We now have the helpful programme for each month, which Miss Annie Linfield will gladly furnish every society. The meetings should always be opened with devotional exercises then conducted according to the by laws. The time-honored missionary quilt is still a source of profit, and effective in keeping up interest. Mrs. Weems, of Enterprise, told of the missionary scrap book, which each member keeps a given time adding to it gems of poetry and prose and pictures. When filled the book is sold, thus adding a goodly sum to the treasury. That Enterprise scrap book, I think, enriches the library of the pastor's wife. I will leave the question with the request that each secretary write how her society has been encouraged to go forward in increasing steadily in number and interest.

First in importance is the organizing in each church a society. Dea sisters, please do not fall because a few are interested and some even oppose; but begin at once this work which is to transform the womanhood of heathendom by investing with the dignity and loveliness of pure Christianity. Many auxiliaries at first hedged about by difficulties are now prosperous. If once a society is organized, rarely do the members become so discouraged as to give up. Our pastors have helped us: "Thank them for timely words and deeds; but we should not wait for them to do work which we can perform. Again I would commend the Woman's Missionary Advocate. Each number will thrill your heart and bring tears to your eyes."

Let us not forget the live shares $10 per share, which Miss Ann Linfield pledged our conference society to raise for Miss Haygood's school. I am very glad she is there, and we must not disappoint her faith. Surely each auxiliary take one share, and every juvenile one-half share. The conference society ought to cheer Miss Haygood by taking, at least, one hundred shares. It is desired that the $25 called for by Miss Haygood be in hands of the general treasurer May 1, 1886.

MRS. O. O. ANDREWS, Vice-Pre. Jackson District, JACKSON, MISS., Dec. 7, 1885.

—Dr. McFerrin passed through the city, on Saturday morning last, returning home from the Texas Conference.

—Revs. R. B. Dowder, H. J. Harris and T. F. Thompson, of Mississippi, were in the city on Monday en route to Conference at Meridian.

—The following correction in the published appointments of the North Mississippi Conference is suggested: Carrollton and Greenwood, T. W. Lewis; Carrollton circuit, H. E. Smith.

—The address of Rev. R. P. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, will be Kosciusko, Miss., until further notice. Bro. Mitchell kindly says, "I will do all I can for the ADVOCATE."

—The Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church celebrated the semi-centennial of its organization recently in Philadelphia. The reports of fifty years work was most gratifying and stimulating to every weak faith.

—Bishop H. M. Turner, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, has ordained Miss Sarah Hughes, of Raleigh, N. C., to the ministry of that church. She is a mulatto and is said to be well educated. Our African brethren are taking rather advanced ground on this agitating question.

—Rev. Dr. Albert S. Hunt, corresponding secretary of the American Bible Society, was in the city last week and called at the ADVOCATE office. Dr. Hunt will be remembered as one of the fraternal delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church to our General Conference at Louisville. And it gives us pleasure to say the Doctor has never fallen from the grace of fraternity.

—A "Clarke Memorial Church" is to be built at Portrush, Ireland, in honor of Dr. Adam Clarke, the great commentator. Dr. Clarke was raised in that neighborhood. This church is to take the place of a little chapel built by his efforts in the days of his early ministry. Rev. Dr. John Ker, of the Irish Wesleyan Conference, is engaged in securing funds for this purpose.

—The New York Christian Advocate corrects the statement going the rounds of the papers, that Dr. John Hall, of New York, receives a salary of $50,000. He gets $15,000 a year, and Dr. Buckley says that is not larger than $7,000 or $4,000 in other parts of the city. Dr. Hall is a very benevolent man himself, and his congregation is one of the most liberal to the cause of missions in the United States.

—Delegates to the General Conference from the North Carolina Conference were elected as follows: Clerical—L. S. Burkhead, N. H. D. Wilson, J. E. Mann, W. M. Robey, J. A. Cunningham, J. R. Brooks, W. S. Black; alternates—W. H. Bobbitt, J. W. North, Lay—Donald W. Balu, T. M. Jones, T. Peterman, W. M. Parker, C. G. Montgomery, F. C. Robbins, N. M. Lawrence; alternates—O. W. Carr, J. J. Hoyle.

—The South Carolina Conference held its one hundredth session in Washington Street Church, Columbia, beginning December 9. Bishop Keener presided, and W. C. Power was elected secretary. There was quite a full attendance at first roll call, 116 clerical and 17 lay delegates answering to their names. Three members had died during the year—W. P. Monzon, John W. Kelly and A. B. Lee. The annual meeting of the Historical Society was held on Tuesday night. We go to press too early to give further proceedings.

—The following delegates to the General Conference were elected by the East Texas Conference: Clerical—R. S. Finley, John Adams, Lay—D. W. Ford, William Garrison, D. W. Ford, of Jasper, Texas, is a grandson of Rev. John Ford, of Pearl River, at whose house one of the first Mississippi Conferences was held, and who was conspicuous in the planting of Methodism in the South-west. Thus the virtues of the fathers are seen in the third generation. Bishop McTear reports an interesting session of the Conference, and a net increase of 900 to the church membership.

—Hon. B. Gratz Brown died at his residence at Kirkwood, a suburb of St. Louis, last Sunday morning, with pneumonia. He had been a prominent figure in State and national politics. He was governor of Missouri, United States Senator and candidate for Vice-President of the United States on the ticket with Horace Greeley. He was a fine orator, was philosophical in his cast of mind and a profound thinker. For some years past he has been an active, able advocate of prohibition. As a champion of that great and growing cause we just now regret his untimely death. He passed away at fifty-nine years of age.

—The Little Rock Conference met in thirty-second session, at Arkadelphia, December 2, 1885, with Bishop Granberry in the chair. Quite a number of connectional men were present, and the proceedings were interesting throughout. The delegates elect to the General Conference are as follows: Clerical—Andrew Hunter, A. R. Winfield, C. C. Godden; alternates—H. R. Withers, J. H. Riggin, T. H. Ware, Lay—Dr. J. W. Brown, H. A. Butler, Rev. R. N. Ross; alternates—J. J. Sumpter, T. B. Morton. On the change of the church name the vote stood: Yeas, 4; noes, 80. Over $400 was subscribed for Paine Institute. We notice that Dr. W. G. Miller, of St. Joseph, Mo., was transferred to that Conference and stationed in Little Rock. Arkansas bereaves Missouri of a valuable, superior man.

The brethren are not forgotten by the flocks they faithfully shepherd. Bro. W. B. Hines, at Summit, Miss., thus acknowledges the pleasant remembrances of his people:

I take real pleasure in announcing through our ADVOCATE that the dear Christian ladies and the dear Christian children of two of my appointments—viz, Adams and Ebenezer—have raised money and presented their pastor a fine suit of clothes for Conference, including hat and overcoat. So this pastor lifts his hat and makes his bow in grateful acknowledgement to these beloved members of his flock for their highly appreciated kindness. The Lord has been with us on several occasions in refreshing grace this year. Nineteen have been added to the church, and about as many converted.

Rev. J. S. Oakley, assistant secretary, sends us the full list of delegates elect to the General Conference from the North Mississippi Conference:

Clerical—J. W. Homolli, R. M. Davis, J. M. Cameron, T. C. Wier; reserves—T. W. Dye, T. Y. Ramsey, Lay—G. D. Shands, J. B. Streeter, R. W. Jones, T. B. Sykes; reserves—R. C. Clark, M. C. Shell.

Louisiana Conference.

Preachers and delegates who come to Baton Rouge, via Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad, will pay full fare to Baton Rouge and will be sold return tickets at one cent per mile.

T. K. FAUNT LEROY, P. C.

Rev. I. L. Peebles closes his pastoral year most successfully. The following note is gladly given space in our columns:

The people of Hickory have paid their assessments in full, and bought the preacher in charge a nice suit of clothes for Conference. Words can express our gratitude for such kindness. We are having a struggle with the whisky traffic at this place, but hope to be victorious over it. I was much pleased last Sunday to see quite a number of little boys and girls at Hickman Chapel bringing up their missionary money. Grandson Kayser trusted them thus to do, for I believe they were her grandchildren. All of my collections are up and in excess.

Rev. J. W. Homolli, of the North Mississippi Conference, and presiding elder of the Greenville district, after the adjournment of his Conference ran over to Helena, Ark., and looked in on the White River Conference. He writes as follows:

I am here taking in the White River Conference. They make a better showing in quality than in quantity. There is a want of preachers in this rich and growing Conference. Bishop Granberry is here and seems to be "the right man in the right place." The preachers speak in high terms of him. At this time, Saturday at 2 P. M., they are through with their minute business, and the appointments will be read Monday morning. On change of name they voted a unanimous no. Delegates to the General Conference: J. Anderson and B. Harris—Dye and Jelliff, reserves. The next Conference meets at Jonesborough.

HELENA, December 12, 1885.

Mark Twain's Difficulties in Becoming a Confederate.

In his paper in the Century, "The Private History of a Campaign that Failed," Mark Twain says:

"Our West there was a good deal of confusion in men's minds during the first months of the great trouble—a good deal of unsettlement, of leaning first this way, then that, then the other way. It was hard for us to get our bearings. I call to mind an instance of this. I was going out of Mississippi when the news came that South Carolina had gone out of the Union on the twelfth of December, 1860. My pilot-mate was a New Yorker. He was strong for the Union; so was I. But he would not listen to me with any patience; my loyalty was snatched, to his eye, because my father had owned slaves. I said, in justification of this dark fact, that I had heard my father say, some years before he died, that slavery was a great wrong, and that he would free the solitary negro he then owned if he could think it right to give away the property of the family when he was so attended in life when he was so attended in a means. My mate retorted that a mere impulse was nothing—anybody could pretend to a good impulse; and went on deering my Unionism and libeling my ancestry. A month later the secession atmosphere had considerably thickened on the Lower Mississippi, and I became a rebel; so did he. We were together in New Orleans, the twenty-sixth of January, when Louisiana went out of the Union. He did his full share of the rebel shouting, but was bitterly opposed to letting me do mine. He said that I came of bad stock—the father who had been willing to set slaves free. In the following summer he was piloting a Federal gunboat and shouting for the Union again, and I was in the Confederate army. I held his note for some borrowed money. He was one of the most upright men I ever knew; but he repudiated that note without hesitation, because I was a rebel, and the son of a man who owned slaves."

Books and Periodicals.

EVIL OF ST. ANNES. By John Kents. Illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett under the supervision of Geo. T. And. Boston: Estes & Lauriat. Price, $1.50.

LEGION. By Edgar A. Poe. Illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett under the supervision of Geo. T. And. Boston: Estes & Lauriat. Price, $1.00.

We are indebted to the publishers for copies of these superb volumes. For Christmas offerings we have seen nothing handsomer. The gems of Kents and Edgar Poe are most delightfully illustrated by the artists' genius, as realistic as anything we have seen from the pencil of Dore. We hazard nothing in saying that the admirers of those beautiful pictures will find them invested with a new charm after examining these volumes. Sent postpaid on receipt of price.

THE PETTICOAT NAME. By Margaret Sydney Watson. D. Lothrop & Co. 12 mo. Price, 50 cents.

This is a very readable New England story—a part of the United States which has most peculiar and characteristic provincial life. The plot of the story is laid in an interior town of New England called Buckhamstead. It is simple and yet thrilling, the interest turning on the self-denial of an old maid who burns her father's will, thereby diverting the property from herself to her married brother, Deacon Badger. Dr. Pilcher, gossiping Samantha and the bodybody, Mrs. Bassett, are skillfully drawn characters.

POCKET LESSON NOTES ON THE INTERNATIONAL LESSON. By Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Crafts. 12 mo. (trimmed for pocket). Bound quarterly, 50 pp., each. Illustrated with black-board designs. Introductory price 15 cents; school edition, 5 cents. Funk & Wagnall, New York.

This is in some respects a new departure in Sabbath-school helps. It has the common and revised versions side by side and marginal references. The questions are arranged on a novel plan that cultivates the art of making original questions.

—The Pulpit Treasury, for December, is on our table. It pages always afford a feast for pastors and Christian workers. This number gives a portrait of Dr. E. P. Goodwin, with a sermon, full of eloquent and suggestive thought, on the Holy Spirit and Missions. His life is sketched by Prof. S. I. Curtis, and his church illustrated. The names of the other writers whose sermons or articles appear in this number are halcyon with learning and piety, and the subjects upon which they write are of the first importance to winners of souls. Bishop Lightfoot, on Christ's own Teacher; Dr. Deems, on No Room for Jealousy; Dr. J. Hall, on Annual Conscription; Dr. J. Hall, on The World's Best; Vanity; Dr. W. M. Taylor, on Spiritual Despondency; Dr. McLaren, on Debtors to All Men; Dr. Wm. C. Craze, on The American African as a Preacher and Religiousist; with other writers equally interesting, together with the editor's own department, will furnish some idea of the contents of this number of a magazine which easily stands at the front of all its competitors. Yearly, $2.50. To clergymen, $2.00. Single copies, twenty-five cents. E. B. Treat, publisher, 771 Broadway, New York.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickens's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

OARVER & JAMIESON.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tuberculosis. The consumption of this cod liver oil jelly is a simple and nutritious form in which Cod liver oil can be used, and with more benefit than the fishy oil. It is a single teaspoonful of this jelly to the patient by a single teaspoonful of the light oil, and thus by double the quantity of the light oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TREX, New York.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Max Wessing's Sore Throat Syrup should always be used for children's coughs. It soothes the child, softens the gums, melts all pain, cures whooping cough, and is the best remedy for diphtheria. 25c a bottle.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies. 25c.

German's Corn Remover kills corns, bunions, 50c.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Gray. 25c.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 minute. 25c.

BOARDING HOUSES.

ROOMS AND BOARDING.

ROOMS AND BOARDING, AND ALSO MEALS FURNISHED.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Max J. D. KILLIAN and Mrs. N. HAWTHORN.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

OARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

In another column of this paper will be found the advertisement of Messrs. Terry & Mack, a firm of young, enterprising, experienced merchants, well and favorably known by a large list of customers. Their character for integrity stands high, and their country is unexcelled. They have a new and carefully selected stock of gentlemen's furnishings goods, which they are offering at reasonable rates for cash. Those of our readers, needing goods in their line, should not fail to call at their establishment, No. 9 Carondelet street.

In speaking of the performance of a celebrated singer, a musical critic said, "We hang upon every note"—a remarkable proof of the singer's power of "execution."

Have you heard of Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm? It is really wonderful how rapidly it cures Coughing, Throat and Lung Troubles.

"Ephraim, what makes so many cat-tails grow in the back pond?" "Well, I would say nothing you know. Why, they grow up from kitchen dirt people has thrown in the pond of course. Pears like you women folks doan know nuffin 'bout agriculture."

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.—Do not fail to read the advertisement of W. D. Killman, which will be found on this page. The goods offered by Mr. Killman at reduced rates are all new and choice wares. The religious works are finished in handsome style and are very appropriate Christmas gifts.

An exchange says that a folded newspaper, placed under the coat, in the small of the back, is an excellent substitute for an overcoat. Now is the time to subscribe.

JOHN LAZARUS' SON & CO.—In this issue of the ADVOCATE will be found the advertisement of this enterprising jewelry house, offering in large and well selected stock of jewelry, clocks, watches, plated and coin silver table ware, wedding and Christmas presents in beautiful designs and at moderate prices. All goods sold on guarantee. Call or address John Lazarus' Son & Co., No. 8, St. Charles street.

"O Tommy, that was abominable in you to eat your sister's share of the cake!" "Why," said Tommy, "didn't you always tell me, ma, that I am to take her part?"

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

The seashell man who cants his broad upon the waters will not find it after many days.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of elastic and leather. Try them.

Parachutes—Two deaths.

Those who preach, lecture, declaim or sing, will do the State's Honor of honorable and Tar the speediest restorative of the voice in cases of hoarseness. It also cures coughs and sore throat rapidly and completely. Sold by all druggists at 25c, 50c and $1.

Clergymen are like railway brakemen in one particular. They do a great deal of coupling.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering anything to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

A little girl, aged nine, called her father to her bedside the other evening. "Papa," said the little girl, "I want to ask your advice." "Well, my dear, what is it about?" "What do you think it will be best to give me on my birthday?"

P. WERLEIN.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of Pianos, Organs, and musical instruments, increases at the Werle's Music Palace, 135 Canal street. The wonder is where will this current come from to absorb this immense stock. The liberal terms combined with satisfactory prices and safe guarantee offered by Mr. Werlein, gives the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is continually spreading out in every direction, and necessitating the carrying of a large and well selected stock of music and musical instruments of every description. Call and see; continuous treatment is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished an application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all, has adapted the standard gauge with steel rails, has adapted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their addresses changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will regret it.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

HOLIDAY PRESENTS

AT

TERRY & MACK'S,

No. 9 Carondelet.

SILK EMERILLAS, MUFFLERS,

HANDKERCHIEFS,

KID GLOVES, HANDSOME SCARFS,

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

San Francisco and City of Mexico

EXCURSIONS.

The Illinois Central R. R. will run TWO FIRST-CLASS PULLMAN CAR EXCURSIONS the second week in January, 1886, one to SAN FRANCISCO, the other to the CITY OF MEXICO, stopping four days at New Orleans, one day at San Antonio, and one at Chihuahua. The round trip rates to other point will be as follows:

From all points in Illinois between Freeport and Ashley, and Chicago and Ashley, $143 15; from Dubuque, $115 50; Sioux City, $125. Points between Ashley, Ill., and Jackson, Miss., including St. Louis, Memphis, Aberdeen and Yazoo City, $110. Tickets good to return within six months.

Remember the great American Exposition at New Orleans will be at its best at this season of the year. No snow, no ice, no billiards along this route.

Address the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa, for Extension circular giving full particulars, and for folders, maps, books, etc., concerning California and Old Mexico.

J. F. MERRY, Gen. West. Pass. Ag't.

B. D. WOOD & BROS.,

Dealers in Best Qualities of

COAL and COKE,

47 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

—OFFICE OF TUGBOATS—

Elmer K. Wood, Charles Wood, W. M. Wood

Manila Wood, Will H. Wood.

HOLIDAY AND WEDDING PRESENTS!

Engagement and Wedding Rings,

The Largest and Most Select Assortment, at

JOHN LAZARUS' SON & CO.,

8 St. Charles street

Correspondence Solicited. Prices and Estimates Given.

Sold by all

Newdealers

Johnston's Journal, Industrial America, The Electrical World,

An Illustrated Magazine for the People, published every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People's Edition, 10c. Every

People

BIRTHDAY FLOWERS.
—
BY CLARA K. TROWBRIDGE.

FISCHER — OR — ORGAN
At a Moderate Price,
Write or call on
Louis Grunewald,
NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

---

Special Low Prices on Second-Hand Pianos in First-

Class Order.

---

BEST PIANOS
—AT—
PHILIP WEBER

135 CANAL STREET.
—
Best Place to Get a Piano.
—

MAY 1945
 JAPANESE SURRENDER
 THE JAPANESE EMPEROR HAS ANNOUNCED THAT HIS COUNTRY HAS SURRENDERED TO THE ALLIED FORCES. THE SURRENDER IS EFFECTIVE FROM THE MIDNIGHT OF AUGUST 15, 1945.

ALWAYS THE BEST FOR THIS CLIMATE

PHILIP WEINLEIN
MADE IN GERMANY

Immense Assortment of Pianos and Organs at the very Lowest Prices and on the Easiest Terms.

Music and Musical Merchandise
Wholesale and Retail.
—
Be sure to Call and Examine My Stock of Fine Instruments,

or Write for Catalogues, Mailed Free to any Address.

---

W. E. P. Hamlin

MASON & HAINES

ORGANS:

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions

PIANOS:

New and Improved String & Pedal Action

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.)
N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

---

MISCELLANEOUS.

Harper's Young People.
AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY.
The position of HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE is

PERSONS the leading weekly periodical for young readers is well established. The publishers spare no pains to provide the best and most attractive reading and illustrations. The serial and short stories have strong dramatic interest, while the tales are wholly free from whatever is pernicious or vulgar.

sensational: the papers on natural history and science, travel and the facts of life are by writers whose names give the best assurance of accuracy and value. Illustrated papers on athletic sports, games and pastimes give full information on these subjects. There is not much about it, but its price

An epitome of everything that is attractive and desirable in juvenile literature, Boston Courier. A weekly feast of good things to eat for boys and girls in every family which visits.—Brooklyn Union.

It is wonderful in its wealth of pictures, information and interest.—Christian Advocate, N. Y.

---

TERMS: Postage Prepaid, $2 Per Year.
Vol. VII, commences November 3, 1888.

HEADQUARTERS

—FOR—

Sunday - School Supplies

Consisting in part of

GOSPEL HYMNS, Stages and Combined.

With and Without Music.

Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers
Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bibles

Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books;
Union Spelling Books; Union Quizzes; First
Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards; Tasks, etc. Also a large assortment of Books and Bibles for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents for children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $2 $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches

Readings and Recitation
CHOICE SELECTION

100 CHOICE SELECTIONS
N-24 NOW READ This number is new with the Series, and contains another unknown did Declamations and Readings, such as Sentimental, Oratory, Pathos, Humor. 216 pages. Price 30c., postpaid. Sold by bookstores.

every day and every place. New should columns who want something. New should whole set. $4 Nov. only $4.80. Every different. Nothing better. Club released list of contents free. P. GARRETT 706 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.
Also, MODEL DIALOGUES, 382 pages

Marriages.

Obituaries.

and soon accomplished its work death was quite a shock to the community. The death of such entire

an ex- | IRVING CARRS. Address DR. ACOT
Broadway St., N. Y.

W. R. LYMAN.....President.
CHAS. H. DOLSEN.....Vice Pres'd
CHAS. E. RICE.....Secretary

See our Agents throughout Louisiana,
Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

THE YOUNG AND PRIZE are certainly without rival in all that constitutes a first-class production, and "Tues Hook" and "If you are one of such a book, order a copy for examination before you decide." I wish my only other.

PRICES—MISTY PRIZES—75 cents per copy; $5 per dozen; $60 per hundred.
With children, 25 cents per copy; $2.50 per dozen; $24 per hundred.

Specimen copies will be sent FREE on request for examination mailed, postpaid, 75 cents; specimen copies of THE YOUNG AND PRIZE, 50 cents each, 5 dollars per dozen, 50 dollars per hundred.

Edition, 25 cents. *I making an order, be sure to specify THE KING OF THE BEASTS, or THE YOUNG AND PRIZE, W. D. SKILLMAN, 94 CAMP ST., or CARVER & JAMESON, 118 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

lected. Write us before purchasing. An invoice Error! may save you from $50.00 to $100.00. Add
JESSE FRENCH, Nashville, Tenn
Wholesale Distributing Dept for the South

Swamp on him
t. His entire an ex-

419 Canal street, New O

AGENTS WANTED for
SCOTT'S beautiful
erie Cigarette. Address DR. SCOTT
Broadway St., N. Y.

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

PRICES—MIST Editions—75 cents per copy; 75 per dozen; 50 per hundred.
 With Engravings—25 cents per copy; $2.50 per dozen; $20 per hundred.
 Specimen copies of Single Mail on for examination mailed, postpaid, 75 cents; specimen copy of Edition, 25 cents. Order making an order, be sure to specify the kind or kinds desired. Address
 W. D. SKILLMAN, 94 CAMP ST., or CARVER & JAMESON, 111 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

lected. Write us before purchasing. An investment of $100.00 in the purchase of the JESSE FRENCH, Nashville, Tenn. Wholesale Distributing Dept for the South

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 52.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1534.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
All payments in advance.
All communications to the Editor should be addressed to the Christian Advocate, New Orleans, La.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.
REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

REV. J. H. WILKINSON, Editor.

voice for all. No flattery about it. To the rich it says, come! to the poor, come! to the beggar, come! to the king, come! You and I, after hard work, may prevail upon an individual or family to come; but when the church bells invite whole nations rise up and go to the house of God. You and I have hearts of flesh, and when people resent our efforts to do them good and speak against us we grow silent; but the bell has a heart of iron, and no matter what you say about it it continues to sound the old warning and the old invitation. You and I will soon wear out—these tongues that have so often entreated and urged men will be silent in the dust—but the bells are left, and long after we are gone and the very memory of us perished they will remain to warn and reprove, invite and comfort thousands yet unborn and generations upon generations yet to come.

I conclude with the prayer that when this bell summons the people many many come. When it tolls for the dead may it be for those who have died in the Lord. And whenever and wherever it may be heard may it reprove men for sin, remind them of duty and heaven, and draw them not only to church but to Christ. May we write nobility to the Lord upon this bell! May God take it as his property and use it for his glory forever.

Memphis Conference Notes.

The Memphis Conference met this year at the northern extremity of its territory in the beautiful city of Paducah, Ky. Paducah is on the Ohio river, at the mouth of the Tennessee. It contains about 15,000 inhabitants, has wide streets, well paved with the famous Paducah gravel. The people extended to the Conference a princely hospitality, and every preacher seemed to think he had found home in the city.

The Conference numbers one hundred and twenty-five traveling ministers, nearly all of whom answered roll call. But two, Revs. H. B. Covington and R. A. Unstead, had fallen "asleep in Jesus" during the year. The preachers are a fine-looking body. There are some faces of blue character, bearing the stamp of moral and intellectual nobility. All were in good humor, and what can exceed the cheerfulness of an Annual Conference? They have a right to be "glad in the Lord."

This is especially true of this Conference year. Everything was favorable, the reports showing a marked advance along the whole line. There had been upwards of 7,000 conversions during the year; over 5,000 additions to the church; an increase of about 3,000. The collections were up almost full—foreign missions about $7,000; home missions, $1,100; Conference claimants, $3,000. There was much activity reported in the way of building churches and parsonages. In this last item this Conference is very backward, being far behind some that are much younger in years. But so great was the emphasis laid on this point at this session that I shall be surprised if we do not see a great improvement in the near future.

Our delegates to the General Conference are, clerical—W. T. Harris, A. R. Wilson, R. H. Mahon, J. H. Evans; alternates—W. C. Johnson, J. H. Whit, W. L. Duckworth, J. M. Spence. The lay delegates are T. W. Crowder, S. W. Godwin, W. J. McFarlane, A. W. Newson; alternates—J. T. Inon, L. D. Mullins, R. W. Haynes, A. R. Boone. This is a capital delegation.

Sent but one memorial to the General Conference asking that provision be made for the immediate relief of the families of deceased ministers instead of waiting, as now, until the meeting of Conference.

On the change of name the vote stood 124 against to 1 for the change. I voted against the change proposed of course. I shall live and die believing it a fundamental mistake to call a great branch of the church of God by the limiting term "South," and for the same reason, with other reasons besides, I oppose "in America." I am not a Methodist Episcopal, but an Episcopal Methodist, Methodist, and not Episcopal, is the substantive fact of my ecclesiasticism.

Bishop Hargrove captured the Conference. By his firmness, his courtesy, his admirable tact and thorough practical acquaintance with parliamentary law he conducted us through the session without a single jar. He is undoubtedly a man of affairs. No statistical reports with him and consequent waste of time; but direct questions of gain or loss in the several departments of membership, finances, literature and education. There was no mistake committed when he was made a Bishop.

We had some visitors from abroad. Bro. Williams, as usual, represented the Publishing House and did a fine business. Dr. Young spent a day or two with us and persuaded the Conference to forward the missionary collection early in January. Bro. Dunlap was there and sang $500 out the Conference in a few minutes for the Paine Institute. Bishop Lane also received a liberal gift for Lane Institute. These responses in behalf of the education of the negro are good signs. They are indeed but as drops in the ocean compared with what will have to be done in the long work of negro advancement; but they show that the Southern heart is in sympathy with this work, and that Southern people will support it when it is rightly presented. The irrepressible Whitfield was here and the eccentric Cottrell; both of them in the interest of their papers, as was also Rev. J. W. Cunningham, of St. Louis. Our not having a paper at Memphis seems to make our territory a sort of public domain for the agents of the Methodist press. I told of them get subscribers, as I suppose they do or they would not come, our preachers ought to be the best read body of men in the church, so far as newspaper literature is concerned.

Rev. T. G. Whitten was transferred to Missouri and stationed at Mexico. We regret to lose Bro. Whitten from our ranks. He has made a record for success in the presiding eldership second to none. Bishop Hargrove made three new presiding elders, all of them young men. The appointments of the preachers, I believe, are generally approved.

I am sure the Conference never went to its work in better heart. We meet next year at Jackson, and if you will come up, Mr. Editor, I dare say we will give the New Orleans a fair share of our patronage.

APPOINTMENTS.

MEMPHIS DISTRICT.—T. L. Boswell, P. E. Memphis—First Church, S. A. Steed; Central, H. H. Mahon; Hernando, Street, J. M. Spence; Georgia, Street, D. D. Moore; Springdale, J. P. Walker; Raleigh, J. W. Knott; Bethlehem, A. H. Thomas; Cellerville and Germantown, J. M. Maxwell; Lagrange and Moscow, J. E. Treadwell; Williston, J. D. Sullivan; Macon, A. C. Smith; Grand Junction, T. F. Cason; Salisbury, J. A. Russell; Lagrange College.

BROWNVILLE DISTRICT.—H. C. Johnson, P. E. Brownsville, A. R. Wilson; Brownsville, W. A. Freeman; Stanton, E. H. Stewart; Somerville, R. B. Swift; Donceville, W. L. Duckworth; Somerville, T. P. Ramsey; Whiteville, Richard Hill; Denmark, W. D. Jenkins; Budvar, J. D. L. Hines; Bilvar and Newcastle, C. D. Hillard; Bethel Springs, N. R. Starr; Adamsville, W. F. Barker; Sinton, A. J. Anderson; Falcon, J. G. Jones; Wesleyan Female College, John Williams, president; Central Mexican mission, W. M. Patterson; Mexican mission, J. W. Grimes.

JACKSON DISTRICT.—Warner Moore, P. E. Jackson—First Church, G. H. Jones; East and West, B. F. Blackmon; Jackson, S. F. Chambers; Spring Creek, S. F. Blackmon; Lexington, J. H. Garrett; Lexington, G. T. Peeples; Scott's Hill, R. S. Swift; Decaturville, T. L. Adams; Perryville, Andrew Allen; Safford, J. G. Burke; Henderson, G. W. Wilson; Plumb, J. G. Clark; Trenton, David Leith; G. Clark; Trenton, B. A. Hays; Memphis Conference Female Institute, A. W. Jones, president; Jackson District High School, G. W. Wilson.

DYERSBURG DISTRICT.—J. H. Evans, P. E. Dyersburg, E. T. Hart; Dyersburg, M. Medlin; Newbern and Trimble, T. F. Sanders; Rutherford, W. A. Cook; Kenton, M. M. Taylor; Alamo and Bella, G. H. Martin; Alamo circuit, W. T. C. Young; Friendship circuit, W. H. Evans; Woodville circuit, T. J. Simmons; Ripley and Durhamville, J. M. Scott; Henning, J. S. Renshaw; Covington, E. K. Bransford; Covington circuit, H. J. Turner; Randolph circuit, W. H. Adams; Hall's Point mission, to be supplied by A. F. Haynes; District High School, A. J. Meaders.

UNION CITY DISTRICT.—P. T. Harris, P. E. Union City, R. W. Erwin; Hickman, W. G. Haffley; Hickman circuit, N. P. Ramsey; Columbus, F. Bynum; Tiptonville circuit, W. O. Lander; Tipton circuit, C. N. Gaudin; Union City circuit, S. J. Jewell; Center circuit, H. B. Owsen; Whitesville circuit, G. W. Evans; Sharon circuit, W. H. Frost; Martin circuit, J. W. Waters; Edgar circuit, E. B. Graham; Fulton and Water Valley, J. T. Collins; Fulton circuit, J. V. Fly; Pigeon mission, R. E. Graves.

PADUCAH DISTRICT.—H. C. Schlarf, P. E. Paducah—Broadway, J. C. Hooks; Locust Street, W. H. Leitch; Paducah circuit, J. Edwards; Hicksville circuit, J. R. Haidin; Wickliffe circuit, C. A. Haskell; Milliken circuit, C. J. Mauldin; Clinton, G. T. Sullivan; Clinton circuit, J. H. Wilt; Wingo circuit, J. H. Cole; Mayfield, E. E. Hamilton; Farmington circuit, P. H. Fields; Murray and Benton, W. J. Mcney; Birmingham circuit, D. A. Ross; Brienburg circuit, A. N. Searge; Benton circuit, C. D. Davis; Palestine circuit, D. M. Evans.

MCKENZIE DISTRICT.—J. H. Roberts, P. E. McKenzie, S. H. Williams; Paris, G. K. Brooks; Paris circuit, O. P. Parker; Conyersville circuit, R. H. Pique; Mableville circuit, J. H. Wormalth; Dresden, J. A. Moody; Glenon circuit, L. L. Wade; Handington and Hollow Rock, H. B. Johnson; Handington circuit, A. C. Moore; Bradford circuit, B. F. Peckles; Trezevant circuit, R. E. Humphrey; Milroy, R. M. King; Medina circuit, W. C. Waters; Murray circuit, R. W. Newson; New Providence circuit, W. J. Naylor; Big Sandy circuit, C. G. Bell; Cottage Grove circuit, A. J. Wheeler; Camden circuit, F. B. Davis; agent McTyeire Institute, T. J. McGill.

TRANSFERRED.—J. H. Johnson, to Louisville Conference; J. A. Heard, to North Alabama Conference; T. G. Whitten, to Missouri Conference and stationed at Mexico.

Tracts for the People.

The tendency of the age is not so much to superficiality as to brevity. "Fourteen weeks in chemistry" expresses the idea, multum in parvo. Whether or not the tendency is as it should be, "it is as it is," and we can neither help it nor change it. The New York Herald was the first to see this fact and adopt its self to the conditions of things. Its short stories captured the people and made its owner a millionaire. Serials stood a poor show. The world was too busy for them. Five minutes' leisure time is sufficient to master the moral of one of these short stories; but for the long ones the leisure hours of weeks and months must be given. It is so in morals and in theology. Here is a book on faith. It contains near four hundred pages. Be it ever so inviting there is no time to read it. It will take too long; but this leaflet will be read by everyone who gets hold of it. It is pointed, clear, and takes but a few moments. We need the more extended work, but not for the masses. It does not suit them.

Here is a man who wants a brief statement of the doctrines of his church. I refer him to Haganbach. "O my! what a name; and the book is worse." Well, here is "The Methodist Armour." It has less than three hundred and fifty pages. "Three hundred and fifty pages! No time for so much reading. I want a statement of the doctrines in a concrete form. Four or five pages. Preach us a sermon on our doctrines." This is not altogether imaginary. There is something real in it. It shows the trend of thought, the tendencies of the times.

I know of no better place than some great health resort like Eureka Springs for a thinking observer to see the demands of the times. Surroundings of some sort brought out from these stirring sentences from Dr. Marshall, which, to my mind, sounds the note of renewed success for the future. If Mrs. Marshall's ill health brought about the circumstances which drew out the Doctor's pen on this question, we may be thankful with her for the ill which may bring about so much good. The question will be, "How can we establish and operate a tract department so as not to involve the church in financial loss?" We have an editor, a Publishing Committee, a house, type, fixtures, presses, etc., and one would think the best could be provided. Our old publications (e. g., "Tracts for the Times") are too elaborate. Do not talk of failure. Even these have had their mission and some measure of success. We want pen facts; tracts for every car, boat, stage coach or other conveyance on which humanity goes; tracts scattered by every preacher, class leader and superintendent in the land; tracts in churches, club rooms, prisons, court-houses and everywhere. This will take money. Where shall it come from? Can not each church provide for the distribution of tracts within its own territory? They ought not to cost more than one-quarter to one-half cent per page, and in large numbers less—say two dollars per one thousand copies. We might risk $500 on two of two and a half millions of pages; but not such as the present average tracts. Let them be "quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword"—the pathetic edge is the sharpest and wounds more men than the logical edge. Let some way be devised by which we can have tracts full of truth and reason and sympathy.

J. A. PARKER.

Trapper gives us the idea in his three pages on "Cosmogony." There the prior scene, the plan, the purpose, the possibilities and the facts are about as fully and satisfactorily presented as in many books of hundreds of pages. Time, testimony is left out; all evidence is omitted, and even the proofs of logic are omitted. Still there is the chaos, the order, the cosmos, all in their successive existences. That these three pages been printed separately and sold at two cents each, the people would have bought as many as they could get. They have been bound from their five hundred and twenty-seven pages of prose works, of which these form a part.

The Long Ago.

MR. EDITOR: I always read with much interest whatever I find in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE about North-eastern Louisiana. I made a great many tracks in that country in 1826. My circuit extended from prairie Jefferson in the east away westward from Monroe to a settlement then called Wafers and from the head of Island de Seard in the north to Hank's settlement about twenty-eight or thirty miles below Monroe. Except one item I am not going to give an account of my year's work there more than to say that we had unusual prosperity, and, I think, the membership on the circuit was about doubled. The only item that I will mention was the fact that in the summer of that year I organized the first Methodist society ever organized in Monroe. I refer to this because I once saw in one of our church papers that some other preacher claimed to have formed the first Methodist society there. My little society, consisting of only seven members, may have been dissolved in after years by death and removals and a new one formed; but mine was the first being ladies, with but one exception, and they were most excellent members. The truth of history requires me to call attention to this fact. Since the death of my beloved Catholic sister, Mrs. Dr. Maguire, I know of no one living there that knew of the existence of that "original society." Though she was a Roman Catholic by inheritance, she was a warm friend of Methodism in my day at Monroe. Her house servant, by her encouragement, was really the first person that joined our church at Monroe. My heart and hands were full of work that year.

I want to say something about a new circuit I formed in the fall in what is now Claiborne parish. Quite a number of Methodist families had moved into what was then known as Allen's settlement, mostly, I think, from Arkansas, including several local preachers and one old pioneer itinerant by the name of William Stevenson. They concluded to have camp meeting as a starting point in their new country, and Dr. Talley, my presiding elder, and I were invited to attend. I gathered a company of men on my circuit—some of whom I was anxious to see converted—and by luncheon on the way and camping out at night we arrived at the encampment in due time. It was the most primitive camp meeting I ever attended. We tied our horses to the trees at night and tethered them out to grass during the day. The preachers lodged in a log school-house with a dirt floor. We lived mostly on fresh hog meat, mirlpe sweet potatoes, with a little corn bread and coffee; but the Lord was with us in great power. At the first meeting there was a general move under an exhortation from Father Stevenson, and from that hour it was easy to preach and pray and get happy. The campers requested Dr. Talley to take charge of the meeting, as it was a part of his district. I suppose because I was a lively youth, full of Christian sympathy and zeal, with a strong voice. Dr. Talley said I must preach at ten o'clock Sunday morning. I went to the woods and sought a premonition for the responsibilities of the hour upon my knees and never before had I felt so much of the Spirit's power with me as on that occasion. A wave of deep feeling seemed to flood the whole congregation. The conversions were clear and powerful. Two of my men that went with me were gloriously converted at a words prayer meeting that afternoon. But I must leave the camp meeting in order to talk about my new circuit. Dr. Talley requested me to arrange my circuit so that I could leave it about three weeks and return to Allen's settlement and organize a new circuit, which I did. I will now give from my memorandum book the names of the families where I preached and whose residences were made preaching places for the new circuit; Brumets; Shuckel; John McAdams, local preacher; John Baker, from Claiborne county, Miss.; Crownovers; Decks; Leathermans; Ross, local preacher, on the Sabine. I made out a plan of the circuit; called it Natchitoches, because it was then in that parish; collected 39 members, including those who joined at camp meeting; left appointments for my successor and turned my face toward Tuscaloosa, Ala., where our Conference was soon to meet. I had only about five or six hundred miles to travel on horseback to reach Conference. My new circuit was duly enrolled and the apostolic William Stevenson was appointed in charge of it for 1827. I saw it was a country of good land that would be densely populated before many years. Now they have numerous towns, settlements of learning and industry, charges in abundance where late in 1823 I threaded my way along little dirt paths from place to place. But my tracks have all disappeared in the roll of fifty-nine years. Perhaps there is not a human alive there now that remembers I was ever in the country, but I hope to find a few shavings hereafter that the Lord gave me there. I still take great interest in all my former circuits and daily pray that God may ever bless them with a pure gospel preached by holy and faithful ministers.

J. G. JONES.

HAGANBACH, Mississipp.

Yes, the year is growing old.

—And here is mine and blessed birth, with frosty hand and cold, tracks the old man by the beard, hoary, hoary!

—Longfellow.

—God makes crosses of great variety; he makes some of iron and lead, that look as if they must crush; some of straw that seem so light, and yet are no less difficult to carry; some he makes of precious stones and gold, that dazzle the eye, and excite the envy of spectators, but in reality are so well able to crucify as those which are so much dreaded.

—There is a difference between happiness and wisdom: he that thinks himself the happiest man, really is so; but he that thinks himself the wisest, is generally the greatest fool.

—When one has learned to seek the honor that cometh from God only, he will take the withholding of the honor that comes from man very quietly indeed.—George MacDonald.

—There is only one thing worse than ignorance, and that is conceit. Of all intractable fools, an over-wise man is the worst.

—The cheerful man can feast on all God's work, and find a banquet of satisfaction in every object and event.—William Newell.

—An open hand, an open heart and an open door.—George E. Lees.

—Moderation is a little stream which flows softly, but freshens everything along its course.—Madame Swetchine.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1885.

BARBUSHKA
A Russian Legend.

BY M. ANNIE TRAPNELL.

Barbushka hummed the wheel,
As her hand drew out the thread
From the silken, silvery flax
For the weaver's finest web.

White grew the cottage floor,
With the shining flax and sand—
O! a busy life was there,
None so busy in the land.

Thus old Barbushka toiled,
Idle no moment was there;
A pattern to her eyes she cast
Would our old Barbushka be.

But in a royal train,
Three kings from the orient far,
With their myrrors they came,
Neath the guiding of a star.

And as they passed her door,
Hid the sound of spindle hum,
Old Barbushka heard their call,
"Come, good Barbushka, come."

For we have seen his star
In the East, our distant home,
And now, with our royal gifts,
To worship the Christ-child come.

But, "No," Barbushka cried,
"Not yet can I with you go;
When my house in order is set,
I'll worship the Christ-child too."

So fast she spun the wheel,
And the spindle loom did hum,
And while she made the floor,
Till at last her task was done.

And old Barbushka now
With the royal gifts would gaze,
And worship the Christ-child,
And her simple gifts bestow.

But the royal train had passed,
No glimpse of their faces seen,
No faintest trace left in the air,
Afar o'er the desert land.

No glorious star shines down
To light her lonely way
To the lowly manger bed
Where the heavenly Christ-child lay.

The Christ-child she never saw,
But her search she ceased not,
Throughout the land she went,
To each palace, hall and cot.

'Tis she that in Russian homes
Take care of the children small;
For the sake of the Christ-child lost
She loves little children all.

The stockings on Christmas eve
Her hand doth lightly fill;
For in every little child
She looks for the Christ-child still.

And the Christmas tree she lights,
Till it glows like an Eastern gem;
For she sees in the tapers bright
The Star of Bethlehem!

Thus ever, as ages pass,
Will she watch and wait in vain,
No Christ-child shall bless her eye.

A Communion Revue.

BY REV. J. B. A. AHRENS, D. D.

(Published by request.)

"Do this in remembrance of me."—Luke xxii. 19.
Memory is one of Heaven's greatest gifts. There are cogitation, meditation, imagination and memory; but the dearest of these is memory. It is a museum of rarest antiquities. From the scenes of childhood, which fond recollection presents to view, until yesterday all the subjects of our thought, our impressions, sentiments and different states of affection are ever present to our mind. What else is the power of association but the ability of classifying and collecting thoughts on kindred subjects to themselves—pigeon-holing, so to speak, what transpired in our mind, alphabetically and systematically, for ready use now or later?

Memory is a museum. Here is the room in which are deposited the mementos of childhood. The old homestead with its familiar apartments and appurtenances. In this cushioned arm-chair father sat conducting family worship. In this room little sister died. Near by is the rippling creek with its fish; the orchard, the meadow, the field and the wildwood, and the old oaken bucket which hung in the well—"the old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket, the moss-covered bucket which hung in the well." On an acclivity stands the school-house, and in close proximity the hutch tree, from which the school-master cut his instruments for necessary corporeal impressions. To the right stands the old church where we received the first religious impressions. Even now the portrait of the benign countenance of the dear old man of God appears vividly before our eyes. Adjoining is the graveyard, and in it a grave which slaters and fathers annually decked with flowers, for beneath that flowery mound lay buried all that was mortal of a dear, darling mother. . . . In solemn silence we pass on and noiselessly close the door.

The next room is devoted to the affairs of our youth. All is of rosy hue. The front shelves are weighed down with the material for the castles which we were about to build in the air. Numerous poems, in manuscript. Bright hopes, gay expectations, bombastic programmes printed in flaming colors. Romance and chivalry rampant, everything lovely.

Now follows a suit of rooms devoted to the affairs of manhood. The first room is chaotically filled with the debris of the castles which we had built in the air. In the adjoining room are huge receptacles filled with disappointed hopes, blighted prospects, wrecked plans and enterprises, saturated with our tears. In the other apartments are some mementos of defeats, spoils of war and a few trophies of victories. . . . But enough for transient inspection. Memory is a museum; admission, free.

Strange that so many people's memory has such odious aptitude of retaining only the ugly and unpleasant features of the affairs which concerned them, tenaciously holding on to the censurable in the character and life of their fellow-men. Such memory reminds us of graveyards, full of woful sights and scenes, of weeping willows and lamentation. Certainly, life has its winter; but it has also its spring. And what conception could we have of spring and summer if it were not for the snow and ice of winter? Life's ills are the spices of life. Remember with the sad and afflictive your joys, comforts, delights and raptures. If we allow our minds to be occupied with the ugly and odious, we will ourselves soon be odious and ugly. Our associates have their foibles and faults; so have we. Think of the praiseworthy and commendable in your fellow-men, and be happy.

In the hereafter our memory will be chiefly instrumental in rendering us happy or miserable—assigning us, as it were, to heaven or hell. Looking back on a life of cheerful industry, wise frugality, scrupulous honesty, untainted virtue and true evangelical piety, we would be happy even if mistakenly we had been consigned to hell. On the other hand, the recollection of a life of meanness, baseness, villainy, wickedness would convert our heaven into hell if mistakenly we had found our way thither. Oh! let us live a life of truth and love in order that our memory may be surcharged with the numerous celestial progeny of the same!

In the Lord's Supper our Savior instituted perpetual memorial service. The circumstances, cause and object of his suffering and death are constantly reiterated. As individual churches, we have held memorial services. Loved ones had died. But how different the occasions of those memorial services from this service—a memorial of the suffering and death of the King of Glory. The stereotyped remark at the burial of Christians has been and now is: "Our loss is their gain." And it is true. But in the case of Christ it is also true that his loss was our gain. He suffered that we might be happy; he died that we might live.

Remember the greatness of the price which he paid for our redemption: lucration, humiliation, indignity, ignominy, persecution, arrest and brutal execution on the cross. Remember the astounding benefit accruing therefrom: Forgiveness of sin, justification, regeneration, sanctification. Our transgressions are blotted out and power from on high is imparted, enabling us to walk in the newness of life. You know—remember the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that you through his poverty might be rich. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath shown us, that we are called the sons of God. Beloved, it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when it does appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

In the Lord's Supper we have precious mementos of our Savior's astounding love, of his sacrificial passion and death. A memento may be valueless in itself, but we prize it highly because it leads us to remember persons and scenes dear to our hearts. When that dear boy of yours closed his eyes in death—the boy of whom everybody remarked that his eyes, nose and forehead were just like your own—when he passed away you approached the corpse with broken heart, and with trembling hand secured a small curl from his flaxen hair and enclosed it in a locket of gold. Precious memento, dear souvenir! When many years ago time and circumstances bade you to encounter life's stern realities on your own responsibility, forced to paddle your own canoe, engage in life's contests and perils in its fierce struggles on your own account, mother, weeping, threw her left arm around your neck, kissed you, and with her right presented to you a Bible. "Read it," she said, "my darling boy; read it, heed its contents and sometimes think of your mother." Precious memento, dear souvenir! When traversing our terraqueous hall, crossing holierous seas, visiting distant continents and people on the Alpine watershed, perhaps, you alighted from your beast of burden and pinched a few shreds of moss—a memento of your presence in an altitude high above the clouds. Precious souvenir!

The bread which we shall presently eat and the wine of which we shall partake are dear mementos, precious souvenirs of our Savior's dying love.

"Do this in remembrance of me." Here learn the true nature of sin. To secure forgiveness, to save from its disastrous consequences and to bestow the ability successfully to resist it, it was necessary that God should take upon himself the form of a servant, should suffer untold agonies and finally die on the cross. You want a true definition of sin? You will find it in Christ's heart-rending exclamation—"My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death," and also in that which burst forth from his agonizing bosom when extended on the cross—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" The poison of sin is so virulent, so destructive, that only the blood of the Son of God could prove a successful antidote.

"Do this in remembrance of me." Here learn the necessity of repentance. Christ's body was broken; even so our spirits must be broken. Christ's blood was shed; even so penitential tears should flow. A broken and contrite heart God will not despise.

"Do this in remembrance of me." Here learn the importance of being holy and living a life of holiness. The passages in the Bible bearing on perfect love and Christian perfection are not inserted for rhetorical emphasis, but mean exactly what they say. Our heavenly Father is no dabbler, hungrily spoiling his workmanship or leaving it incomplete. But you inquire, rationally: "How can these things be? This matter about being holy transcends my understanding." Certainly it does. The peace of God is fully equal to the task. It, too, passes understanding—all understanding. Believe, and thou shalt be clean. The blood of Jesus Christ, the son of God, cleanseth from all sin. The holiness of the saints in glory was brought about, only brought about, by the blood of Christ. "They washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Wash and be clean.

"Do this in remembrance of me." Learn that this is an occasion of renewed consecration. He gave himself for us; we should give ourselves to him. Heart, head and hand shall be the Lord's forever. Our life, our love and our labor we will lay on his altar.

The Sabbath Day—Remember It.

The existence of the Christian religion in the land depends on a maintenance of the Sabbath. When our Christian Sabbath goes, our religion is gone. The legislation requiring and authorizing a violation of the holy Sabbath is antagonistic to Christianity in an intense degree. The requiring mails to be carried and providing for the carrying on of business by corporations, syndicates, etc., is to assume a higher authority and presumptuously sets aside the law of God. The Lord God has commanded nations as well as individuals to observe his Sabbath. A nation has no higher authority in its legislative capacity for setting aside the divine law than a single individual to do so for himself. No commendment in the decalogue nor anywhere else fixes more definitely the domain between God and man than the Sabbath law. Should the American Union ignore the line of her north-west boundary, tearing down the iron pillars and scattering the earth mounds which definitely fix the limit between herself and the British possessions, and irrespective of treaty should push her claims and interest into Canada. All honest men would esteem it an outrage on the government of England and well would it be repudiated by the civilized. God has given the Sabbath as a fixed line between himself and man in all his varied capacities. "Sabbaths for a sign." (Exodus xxxi, 13-17). "I give them my Sabbaths for a sign." (Ezekiel xx, 12-13). This sign, instead of being fixed, or as a line run across the face of the country to create some geographical boundary, is run between certain dates of time, giving one part to God and limiting man to six parts. No sign is more definitely fixed, no line between possessions is more clearly run than this. To do away with this sign by any system of legislation or practice is to sacrilegiously invade a sacred light. The spurning out of this line with the foot and claiming all or any part of that day as his own for selfish purposes is laying violent hands on what heaven has sacredly reserved to itself. "Will man rob God?" (Malachi iii, 8). "My Sabbaths," the day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. (Exodus xx, 10). The legislation setting the divine law and substituting its own is placing the human above the divine and "Exalteth himself above all that is called God or that which is worshipped." (II Thessalonians i, 4). He who votes such men into office is partaker of his evil deeds. That the interests of trade, a desire to keep abreast with the news of the day, require the carrying of the mails is nowhere provided for in the sacred Scriptures. No matter how itching the ear, nor what interests may be deemed involved, the command, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," stands now as it has done for thousands of years to utterly forbid any systematic labor on that day. "Thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy maid-servant." (Deuteronomy v, 12-14). A government requires its subjects, sons and daughters, its employees, men-servants and maid-servants, to labor on that day or even permits them to do so when they could equally as well afford to suspend it without any abatement of salary is a Sabbath-breaking government without a mitigating circumstance to the sacrilege. Neither does the claim that trade and commerce require the transportation of produce and merchandise on the Lord's day find any provision in the hook for such desecration. All the clamor of trade does not for these purposes cancel the positive command, "Remember the Sabbath day," nor do they abate one iota of its emphasis. There is no technicality which can be caught at nor quirk in the divine law beneath which offenders may hide from the face of the Judge nor successfully from an enlightened conscience. Every law maker favoring by voice or vote, every member of a company or corporation sustaining in his place the requirement that employees should labor on that day is partaker in the sin of every individual violation, from the section hand to the chief manager, from the roustabout to the steamboat captain. And what is more they enslave the consciences of these many thousands effectually denying them the privilege of the house of God and the access of the minister to them. In the great shops and in the departments of labor along the lines of trade and travel are the mills where the souls of men and women are ground to dust; but they, upon whom this shall fall, will be ground to powder.

In a country like this where agricultural and mechanical pursuits open up so many industries to the honest laborer, the plea that men must submit to the regulations of their employers is not admissible. No man has a right to bind himself to another man to break God's law. If from any cause a living in such employment should be cut off, not one man in ten thousand would set down to starve and listen to his children cry for bread. Some other pursuit would be compelled to yield him a support. The reflection that their employers must answer to God for this sin is true in an awful sense; but that does not relieve in the least degree the employee who volunteers to take a business the conditions of which compel him to violate the same law. "To his own" heavenly "Master he standeth or falleth" it is a tale of soul and body to do evil.

God knew as well when he instituted the Sabbath the industries and enterprises that would develop into railroads and steamboats as he knows it now, but made no exception in their favor, no provision but for them to remember the day to keep it holy. A legislation so directly doing away with the Sabbath allies itself with the atheism and infidelity of Ingersoll ne Voltaire, whose motto is, "Down with the Christian Sabbath." The Christian church has founded schools from the lowest to the highest grade and cultivated literature in all the walks of life. Has sent everywhere, from the city battlement to the remote rural districts, giving out the lesson everywhere. "Obey the powers that be." These ministers have kept pace with the pioneer and frontiersman, cultivating the most refined morals and elevated ideas of citizenship with every worthy national enterprise has personated the "torchlight of nations." Any law maker who could lift his voice or cast his vote to paralyze such moral energy or arrest such an agency is certainly wanting in all the higher elements of true patriotism.

DUKOWITZ.

Danger of Mere Culture.

Rev. R. Heber Newton preached a sermon November 22 which is worth reprinting and careful reading. He warned his hearers against the seductive dangers which a purely intellectual cultivation placed in the pathway of the moral and religious life. In the cultivation of the intellect, he said, there lies the danger of developing it beyond its due proportion, of making intellectual cultivation a substitute for morality or religion, of turning a means into an end. There is a real danger, which we may see all about us in men and women whose faithful self-cultivation has absorbed in the intellect the forces which, through it, were meant to count into the life of the spirit; men and women who, in becoming intellectual, have lost feeling and ardor and passion and enthusiasm have come to think more of knowledge than of wisdom, and, in their devotion to truth, have turned aside from the altars whence arises the worship to goodness. Culture may bring about an over-reliance of the nature, in which strength is sacrificed to grace. You may polish the substance out of a fine gem; a blade may have an edge put upon it which will be too fine for use. Blue blood must not lose too far the flush of the democratic red, or the microscope will reveal how nature punishes purism. Nothing will compensate for virility. Culture is constantly tending to such an overbreeding. Men grow fastidious and feeble. They flower into dilettanti. They become intellectual dunes. The great apostle of culture himself is not without a certain suspicion of this over-refinement, as we meet him in his charming books. Such culture is weakness, and weakness is ineffectual. There is no finer Gothic than St. Owen, of Rouen, but it is the beauty of the autumn of Norman art. Culture may enslave the moral sense in the love of beauty. The beautiful in itself is as divine as the true or the good. It is at heart essentially ethical and spiritual; but as even the religion of goodness has been again and again corrupted, and has become immoral, so the religion of beauty may degenerate into an irreligion and immorality.

Art thus too often finds itself in rebellion against morality. The hunger of the senses may easily lapse into the lusts of the flesh. Beauty may fall from a priestess to a hawd. Italy repeats the story of Greece, and now the renewal of art in our age repeats the old tale. Swinburne finds a voice for the passionate plea of the lovers of the beautiful against the restraints of the moral sense and the bondage of religion. That charming apostle of the religion of art who came to us not long ago, intent on converting us from the barbarism of trousers while turning honest penny wherewith to array himself as wondrously in the garments of the future, told us, among his other counsels of wisdom, that "we should never talk of a moral or immoral poem." "Poems," he said, "are either well written or badly written; that is all. Any element of morals or implied reference to a standard of good or evil in art is often a sign of a certain incompleteness of vision." Shades of Aeschylus and Dante, of Shakespeare and Milton, of Raphael and Michael Angelo, of Beethoven and Wagner, how little ye knew of art! Surely men like Rossetti and Swinburne must stand ashamed before such an infant terrible of aestheticism, who reproduces all their sensuality without their strength or grace. No one need be caught in these backwaters of art who will keep his eye upon the great masters. Take Ruskin as your guide in the school of beauty, and you will be led safely through its perils. He will show you the hierarchy of the sacred trinity, and lead you to see not the beautiful but the good. He will make you feel the constraint of law even in the realms of imagination, and will discover to you the ethical nature of the principles which govern architecture and sculpture and painting. He will cause you to see that whenever in the pursuit of beauty the high ideals of the soul are not discovered art begins to fall and society to corrupt and man to lose his life. Culture may yield one enough knowledge to confuse the moral sense and bewilder the soul's faith without leading on to the larger and deeper knowledge which will reinvigorate duty and renew the spirit's trust.

The first effect of culture in its most popular form, scientific knowledge, is to unsettle faith and unchurch the souls of men. What households can be shut in as to shut out the daylight and keep beyond the doors the air of earth? The remedy of this moral and religious unsettling lies in a manifold advance into a larger knowledge. A little learning is a dangerous thing, but a little more learning is a safe thing. Double the quantity of knowledge, and a doubt genderer will become a faith feeder. The higher up in the scale of humanity a people stands, the prouder is its homage to the moral law. The rash assumption of scientists discrediting religion, and the rash inferences of their followers disavowing faith, are already being called in for reconsideration. A revised science, while just as outspoken concerning dogmatic theology, has not pushed its insinuations against essential faiths of religion. God, the soul, immortality—these great faiths of man, the essence of religion, will grow upon him who carries his studies in science far enough, and his religion will rest upon nature itself. Culture, in seeking self-perfection, tends to a self-centeredness which is, after all, but selfishness. In the lofty hunger for self-improvement one may lose all sense of the loftier hunger for humanity's improvement. The woman who, with an earnest ardor, turns from society's inanities to literature, or music, or art, and who in the due joys of thought and feeling which her studies yield her finds no time to spare for helping her wretched fellow-creatures—the poor who suffer miserably in hunger, who pine in sickness, who in our dark lamentations, who wallow in the mire of imbruted vice in a misery whose only symbol of joy is the rum jug—this cultivated woman may be, after all, indulging herself in the rare luxuries of the intellect and excusing her selfishness in the noble name of culture.

There is no finer illustration in history of a hunger and thirst after knowledge leading to a systematic and sedulous self-improvement than in the story of Goethe. He pondered over the commonest facts which arrested his attention. He would get a learned man up in a corner of a drawing-room and suck him dry in an evening, whether it were body or mind. What words could have more fully closed such a life than his dying cry, "More light! more light!" Yet how plain to all who are not enslaved with the Goethe cult the selfishness of this magnificent man. His poetic nature found in the expression of love its needful inspiration, and he worshipped most ardently at the shrine of beauty. Yet he lingered at no one temple, but wandered from shrine to shrine, justifying his looseness of conduct by the needs of his genius, never so far forgetting himself in the nearest passion as to be carried off into marriage, coolly turning away when he found that he was growing too much absorbed, reckless of what hoards bled or broke behind him. "Vastly below a coarse-faced Socrates must this Apollo find his place. Even for culture's aim—self-protection—such selfishness must prove a missing of the mark. As you throw yourself into the common life, its hungering needs, its throbbing aspirations, you will draw out therefrom your own personal life filled to the full. It was not at the feet of the adepts of India in a life given up to study that Gautama gained his splendid self-perfection, but in a life which blended with the profoundest thought the most philanthropic labors for the ignorant and debased and miserable multitude of his native land, he won his Buddhahood. Fire the poet, or painter, or musician with the passion of patriotism, the enthusiasm of humanity, the worship of the lulite and eternal good, and you shall get the work which will prove immortal. Thus culture opens into religion, and in seeking to win "a perfect method" we surrender ourselves to the leadership of the Christ who reached his peerless perfection not in patient waiting on the schools of the learned rabbis, nor in absorbing studies of the nature which he loved so well, but in devoting himself to the service of mankind, as doing thus the will of his Father in heaven.—North-Western Christian Advocate.

Fields to Be Occupied.

MR. EDITOR: My attention has been called to a communication, in the last issue of the ADVOCATE, from my friend, Rev. C. L. McLean, concerning Ascension parish and its claims upon the Louisiana Conference. About two and one-half years ago Rev. J. D. Jackson crossed the Amite river into that portion of the Louisiana Conference and organized a school, which has been preached to regularly once a month ever since by members of the Mississippi Conference. During the present year Rev. H. L. Scarborough, of the same Conference, organized a church at Magnolia, in Ascension parish. There are also some three or four Sunday-schools, and these two churches already organized in that portion of the Louisiana Conference wholly through the efforts of preachers belonging to the Mississippi Conference. Men who were filling from nine to seven regular monthly appointments on their own work, but who could not withstand the earnest oration from this people for the gospel. All that portion of the Louisiana Conference in Ascension and Livingston parishes is thickly settled by an intelligent people, many of whom are anxious that something should be done for them. It is true that it would be a mission at first, but with earnest, prayerful work it could in time be built up to a good circuit. The territory alluded to extends a distance of about sixty miles along the Amite river and embraces all that portion of Ascension parish lying east of the Mississippi river and all of Livingston parish lying south of the Amite river.

L. Z. GOWERS.

DECEMBER 7, 1885.

The Bible in Colleges.

BY J. N. SMART, D. D.

If the suggestions in the following extract from an article in the Methodist Review for July were generally adopted by Christian colleges, it would be a decided improvement:

It is universally recognized as essential in the investigation of the history or literature of any race or nation that the religious system must be carefully studied. We know how much pain is taken by eminent scholars to ascertain all that can be known concerning the ancient religion of India. . . . The same devotion is paid to the religious systems of China, Persia, Egypt, and Scandinavia. It is felt that we are well rewarded for any reasonable effort to investigate even the religions of any semi-civilized or barbarous races; but the Bible, which underlies our whole modern civilization, and impregnates all its literature and the civil politics of its various nationalities, and as well affects our entire education and mode of thought, even if only of the same value as the ancient mythologies, could not be neglected without a marked deficiency in our system, is, with a few exceptions, excluded from the curricula of all our schools; and this, too, when it is regarded as the basis of the only genuine religion which God has given to man!

In some of the new western colleges, notably some of those under Congregationalist patronage, definite provisions are being made for the systematic study of the scriptures. In many of the seminaries and colleges for women the same arrangements are made, and many more frequently than in those for men. In Wallesey college a more thorough and efficient system of study prevails than almost anywhere else. Two hours a week on different week days are devoted to this, just as the same time is devoted to certain philosophical, scientific, or literary work. The first year's recitation and other studies, both as to recitations and examinations. It requires four years to complete its course, and the same regulations govern it as control in other studies. The first year's recitation covers the patriarchal and Hebrew history to the death of Solomon. The second year completes the Hebrew history, and takes also the poetic and prophetic writings. The third year's study is the life of Christ, as contained in the gospels, and taken in chronological order. The fourth year is devoted to the early propagation of the gospel based on the Acts and the Epistles; also taken in chronological order. Outlines have been prepared and printed to guide and aid the student, which contain a syllabus in the form of questions calculated to present the subject somewhat freshly, and in an orderly manner, to the mind. Many of the outline lessons are preceded by brief introductions explaining or illustrating the general subject, or some particular ecclesiastical, political, or geographical fact alluded to, or throwing some light on contemporary history. The methods of instruction pursued are the same as those usually adopted by our best teachers in the study of history, literature, and philosophy; and the students are familiar with our educational history are aware that these methods are greatly changed within the last thirty years. Each recitation covers about the same amount of ground covered by the same students in the studies. There is no encouragement to turn the class-room into a theological debating club on metaphysical and speculative subjects, or to take advantage of students who might object to being drawn into a class-meeting or an inquiry-meeting. The object is to get at the simple thought and meaning of the writers, and to become familiar with the practical bearing of what is written. With this plan, widely published, has been adopted by several colleges in the west under the patronage of the Congregationalist, and the lines used at the former school of use in these. The same is true of one of the best colleges for women in the

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS B GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D. REV. J. T. SAWYER
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1885.

"GOOD-WILL TO MEN."—During Christmas week we should especially remember the poor. Our children enjoy an abundance of good things. Give your children another pleasure. Take them by the hand and, accompanied by them, visit the hovels of the indigent, distributing presents to their hungry and ragged children.

AD NOTAM.—If the church members who have passed the meridian of life were less censorious and misanthropic, the young people would feel more at home in the church. The professional soid is not an attraction anywhere, but is intolerable in the church. No, the children and young people of to-day are not worse than they were in the days of our childhood. Some of these restless and noisy boys will be stewards in the church some day; these merry maidens will soon be sombre mothers in Israel.

Themembers of the Mexican Border Mission Conference, in recent session, made some generous contributions to the Parker Memorial Church, in honor of Bishop Parker, whom they greatly loved. In a note to Mrs. Parker, enclosing the amount, Mrs. Sutherland writes beautifully as follows:

"I write to tell you of what our little Mexican Conference did at its recent session. As you know, this is our first Annual Conference. We had a most delightful session, and our native preachers did so well with all the business and duties of a Conference. Bishop McTyeire was very much pleased with them and their capabilities. They spoke often of our dear Bishop Parker. I say our, for although we know he belonged to the whole church, yet we feel that in an especial manner he was ours. It had been just a year since they had sent him the little token of their love, and with a very different object we had our little meeting after the close of the regular session of Conference. We had our memorial service, and then was contributed the enclosed amount for the Parker Memorial Church in your city. It is small, but the best they could do, as they had already contributed to so many objects; but they send it with their love for his memory, and their earnest prayers for you and your dear sons."

A Hint for the Holidays.

The following incident occurred some years ago in New York City, and is graphically related in the Parish Visitor. Its reproduction at this Christmas tide may stimulate some of our readers to deeds of kindness. We can in no better way honor the spirit of this season than in making offerings to the Lord's poor:

"A little boy, about ten years old, was standing before a shoe store in Broadway, bare-footed, peering through the window and shivering with cold."

"A lady riding up the street in a beautiful carriage, drawn by horses finely caparisoned, observed the little fellow in his forlorn condition, and immediately ordered the driver to draw up and stop in front of the store. The lady, richly dressed in silks, alighted from the carriage and went quietly to the boy and said:

"My little fellow, why are you looking so earnestly at that window?"

"I was just asking God to give me a pair of shoes," was the reply.

"The lady took him by the hand and went into the store and asked the proprietor if he would allow one of his clerks to go and buy her half a dozen pairs of stockings for the boy. He readily assented. She then asked him if he would give her a basin of water and he replied, 'Certainly,' and quickly brought it to her."

"She took the little fellow to the back part of the store, and, removing her gloves, knelt down and washed those little feet and dried them with the towel."

"By this time the young man had returned with the stockings. Placing a pair upon his feet, she purchased and gave him a pair of shoes, and tying up the remaining pairs of stockings, gave them to him, and patting him on the head, said:

"I hope, my little fellow, that you now feel more comfortable."

As she turned to go, the astonished lad took her hand, and, looking up in the face with tears in his eyes, answered her question with these words: 'Are you God's wife?'

Mississippi Conference.

The Mississippi Conference met in the thriving city of Meridian on the morning of December 16, 1885, with Bishop McTyeire in the chair. Dr. C. G. Andrews was elected secretary, as he has been annually for nineteen years. Rev. J. A. B. Jones was elected assistant secretary; Rev. T. W. Adams, recording secretary, and Rev. J. W. Chambers, statistical secretary. There was a full attendance of the members on the first day, and the session was delightful throughout.

It had been eight years since Bishop McTyeire had presided over the Conference, and he was warmly welcome. The Bishop noted the absence of many familiar faces and the fact that the Conference personnel has greatly changed. His old friends of the earlier years have nearly all passed away. In another decade they will be in the silent city of the dead. Five of our beloved comrades had been called hence during the past year. Joshua T. Heard, the man of mighty prayer, the fervent, genial, joyous leader of the hosts, is not here. David M. Rush, the dignified, cultured, noble gentleman, has fallen on sleep. Miger C. Callaway, the courageous, zealous young apostle, who was rapidly becoming a star of the first magnitude, has been early crowned. James H. Shelton, the faithful friend and devoted pastor, has answered the roll call of the skies. Gabriel Hawkins, the patriarchal pastor of gentle, genial spirit, and the able expositor of the word, dwells with those who have crossed the flood. Noble, chivalric souls! We cherish their memories, and will endeavor to emulate their radiant virtues.

But, while these are called and crowned, others are coming up to take their places. Fourteen young men were received on trial, and all of them of great promise. Thus the Lord Christ is honoring the church! She is raising prophets for Israel.

Rev. W. C. Dunlap, the agent of Paine Institute, addressed the Conference on Thursday in the interest of that worthy enterprise. The Board of Education reported favorably of the movement to secure anti-slavery buildings, and accepted the assessment upon the Conference for that purpose. Bro. Dunlap made a statement of the condition and prospects of the institute, sang a song, and in twenty minutes raised $575—$50 more than the amount called for.

Dr. McKerrin represented the Publishing House, and made a characteristic speech. After all the years of his active service and the rapidly increasing infirmities of age he has his old-time vigor on the platform. His genius for direct, effective address has never been equalled in all our ecclesiastical history. Had his life been turned into the currents of State and national politics, he would have ranked among the greatest figures in our civil history. The Publishing House prospers under the present management, and is doing a great work for the church. More and more the wisdom of the General Conference of 1878 appears. Had that House been allowed to go into liquidation, as many advised, the common honesty of the church would have been impeached and our efforts handicapped for all time.

Dr. Kelley was present, representing the Board of Missions. A wide-awake, vigorous, devoted man is David C. Kelley. He loves the cause of missions as his own life. The years spent in the foreign fields have only intensified his faith in the heathen world's redemption. After his eloquent presentation of our mission work to the Conference, with a candid statement of the condition of the treasury, there was a prompt response to his proposition to forward one-fourth of the assessment for foreign missions to the treasurer at Nashville on or before the first of March, 1886. The missionary anniversary was held on Saturday night. The treasurer reported that $1,034.05 had been collected for domestic missions—an advance of $54.50 over last year. For foreign missions $4,273.57 had been raised—an increase of about eight hundred dollars. After addresses by Dr. Kelley and this writer a collection of $127.50 was lifted.

The vote on the change of the name of the church stood—Yeas, none; noes, 109. The following delegates to the General Conference were elected: Clerical—C. B. Galloway, H. F. Johnson, C. G. Andrews, W. C. Black; alternates—J. A. Ellis, W. L. C. Hunnicutt. Lay—W. L. Nugent, S. B. Watts, George Harvey, T. A. Holloman; alternates—R. W. Millsaps, Irvin Miller.

Bishop Lane, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, addressed the Conference on Saturday afternoon, and raised a handsome collection for Lane Seminary, at Jackson, Tenn.

The Conference accepted a proposition made by the North Mississippi Conference to raise $10,000, $5,000 from each Conference, for church extension, to be known as the "Paine Loan Fund."

Dr. T. A. S. Adams, president of Centenary College, was present during the entire session, preached twice, addressed the Conference twice in the interest of this institution over which he presided and made many friends. The Conference warmly commended the college and pledged renewed loyalty thereto.

The report on publishing interests by Rev. Dr. Abbey was a well-matured paper and full of valuable, practical suggestions. It contained a memorial to the General Conference on the subject of tract publications. The cordial, generous endorsement of this ADVOCATE was all we could ask and was most gratifying.

The city of Meridian is growing rapidly in population and in all the substantial elements of commercial and social prosperity. Our church keeps pace with the city's development under the active, able pastorate of Rev. W. C. Black. He reported over a hundred accessions to the church during the past year. The handsome new church building, of which mention has been made in these columns, nears completion. It will be a worthy monument of the zeal and large liberality of pastor and people. The Conference was delightfully entertained. Bro. Melien and the writer shared the generous hospitality of Judge Hamlin's family, to all of whom we are indebted for every possible kindly attention.

The Conference adjourned on Monday afternoon to meet next year at Port Gibson.

The following are the answers to minute questions:

Remaining on trial.—H. Bradford, L. S. Jones, J. N. Tucker, Charles F. Smith, Marshall J. Marble, James A. Newsom was passed and continued in the class of the first year.

Admitted into full connection.—Mark H. Moore, R. F. Lewis, A. F. Watkins, T. L. Melien, W. G. Backus.

Traveling preachers elected deacons.—B. F. Lewis, T. L. Melien.

Deacons of one year.—Jules V. Penn, S. J. Cotton, V. D. Skipper, J. W. Brown, H. L. Scarborough, A. D. Miller, W. R. Sims, E. F. Edgar, R. F. Witt, J. J. Lovett.

Traveling preachers elected elders.—D. F. Guice, M. A. Bell, James Healey, T. C. Bradford. T. W. Adams approved as above in elder's orders.

Located.—James Healey, J. J. Lovett.

Local preachers elected elders.—James S. Weems.

Died during the year.—Joshua T. Heard, M. C. Callaway, David M. Rush, J. H. Shelton, Gabriel Hawkins.

Superannuated.—J. Lusk, G. T. Vickers, J. G. Jones, E. A. Flowers, William Spillman, E. R. Strickland, T. Y. Armstrong, J. N. Williams, Joseph Nicolson, A. B. Stewart, D. W. Dillehay, Levi Pearce, James M. Gunn, D. Marchant, C. F. Gillespie, R. A. Sibley.

Superannuated.—W. G. Millsaps, J. A. Vance, R. Abbey.

Admitted on trial.—George D. Anders, Nathan J. Roberts, James G. Sibley, Matthew J. Miller, Victor V. Boon, Martin L. Burton, Noland B. Harmon, Joshua M. Morse, William W. Morse, John W. Tinnin, Albert C. Flowers, Joseph Herbert Woodward, Robert S. Gale, Robert Selby.

Transferred.—E. D. Pitts, to the North Texas Conference; W. W. Hopper and C. F. Smith, to the East Texas Conference.

The statistical summaries are as follows: Members, 27,827—a net increase of 1,297; local preachers, 149—an increase of 8; infant baptisms, 1,123; adult baptisms, 1,116; number of Sunday-schools, 311—officers and teachers, 1,621; scholars, 11,810.

APPOINTMENTS.

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.—J. A. B. Jones, P. E. Woodville station, T. S. West; Percy Creek, C. D. Cecil; Wilson and Centerville, P. Howard; North Wilkinson, M. J. Roberts; Amite circuit, G. D. Anders; Amite City, J. M. Pugh; St. Helena, J. W. Ellison; Clinton (La.) station, L. S. Jones; East Feliciana, P. A. Johnson; Jackson (La.) station, supplied (by T. A. S. Adams); Bayou Sara, H. Bradford; Pipkin's, N. B. Harmon; East Baton Rouge, D. A. Givens; Livingston, H. L. Scarborough; Ponceauville mission, N. B. Young; Woodville Female Seminary, T. W. Browne.

SEASHORE DISTRICT.—B. S. Rayner, P. E. Moss Point, R. J. Jones; Ocean Springs, G. F. Thompson; Pearllington, J. D. Hays; Covington, W. B. Brown; China Grove, W. W. Simmons, M. J. Marble; Columbia, R. S. Gale; Mt. Carmel, E. F. Guice; Williamsburg, J. G. Sibley; Hattiesburg, H. J. Harris; Poplarville, Robert Selby; Spring Cottage, to be supplied; Whittington, to be supplied; Vandevoe, Thomas Price; Augusta, V. B. Boon; Americus, W. G. Backus; Scranton, J. W. Tinnin; Seashore, B. Jones; Hattiesburg High School, W. R. Sims, principal.

JACKSON DISTRICT.—J. A. Ellis, P. E. Jackson station, C. G. Andrews; Madison, J. L. Forsythe; Sharon, J. S. Parker; Camden, J.

W. Chambers; Canton station, W. B. Lewis; Edwards, I. W. Cooper; Raymond, T. L. Melien; Flora, M. A. Bell; Benton, T. W. Adams; Mt. Olivet, S. J. Cotton, and one to be supplied; Yazoo City station, H. R. Singleton—R. Abbey, superintendence; Silver Creek, James A. Newsom; J. W. Lambuth, missionary to China.

BRANDON DISTRICT.—F. M. Williams, P. E. Brandon station, F. M. Featherston; Marvln, L. P. Meador; Hebron, to be supplied (by J. F. Roberts); Trenton, A. D. Miller; Lake, J. W. Simdell; Walnut Grove, W. W. Cammuck—J. A. Vance, superintendence; Carthage, D. G. W. Ellis; Hillsboro, to be supplied (by J. C. Long); Fanning, N. M. Clarke; Shiloh, C. McDonald; Raleigh, J. H. Evans; Newton, I. L. Peebles; Westville, M. J. Miller; Morton and Forest, G. Baneroff.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.—R. D. Norworthy, P. E. Meridian station, W. C. Black; Meridian circuit, L. Kendall; Neshoba, J. H. Holland; Marion, D. C. Langford; Enterprise and Heidelberg, D. A. Little; Waynesboro and State Line, W. E. Ballard; Sandersville, L. J. Jones; Vossburg, L. Carley; Paulding, J. C. Brogan; Shubuta, E. F. Edgar; Winchester, J. M. Morse; D-Silo, and Clarke, J. G. Jones; Energy and Camp Ground, W. W. Morse; Lauderdale, H. P. Lewis; DeKalb, R. F. Witt; Chickasaw, to be supplied; East Mississippi Female College, A. D. McVoy, president.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT.—W. L. C. Hunt, P. E. Vicksburg station, R. S. Woodward, Utica, C. A. Powell; Fayette, J. P. Drake; Washington, A. C. Flowers; Natchez—Jefferson Street, E. H. Mouser; Natchez—Wesley Chapel, J. V. Penn; Warren, R. Bradley, J. H. Woodward; Mayersville, Mark H. Moore; Deer Creek, W. W. Hursi; Rocky Springs, H. D. Howell; Port Gibson station, D. P. Bradford; Martin, A. F. Watkins; Mendville, V. D. Skipper; Port Gibson Female College, T. C. Bradford, president.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.—J. M. Weems, P. E. Brookhaven station, C. B. Galloway, W. G. Millsaps; Summit, J. W. Harmon; McComb City, J. W. M. Larrin; Adams and Bogus Chitto, B. F. Lewis; Vesson and Beauregard, B. F. Jones; Providence, R. B. Downer; Hazlehurst, J. T. Nicolson; Terry, J. N. Tucker; Crystal Springs station, T. B. Holloman; Spring Ridge, H. L. Caldwell; Scotland, W. B. Hines; Bayou Pierre, M. L. Burton; Brandywine, I. B. Robertson; NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, C. B. Galloway, editor; Whitworth Female College, H. F. Johnson, president; Keanough College, H. Walter Featherston; A. B. Nicolson, correspondent.

A Diplomatic Question.

The "Kelley case" has been somewhat notorious in our diplomatic circles for some months. The Hon. A. M. Kelley, of Virginia, was appointed first as Minister to Italy; but his appointment was objected to by that government on account of some animal versions of Mr. Kelley on the king and his administration. Deeming it a sufficient reason for withdrawing his name, Mr. Kelley was appointed Minister to Austria. That government refused to receive him also, but for another reason. The reply of Mr. Bayard, Secretary of State, to the Austrian government so clearly sets forth the position of this government on the question that we quote it entire:

The question thus raised by your government involves principles of the greatest importance, and has no precedent as yet discoverable to me in modern times and intercourse between friendly nations. Having submitted the matter to the consideration of the President, I am instructed by him to inform your government, through you, that the ground upon which it is announced that the usual ceremonial courtesy and formal respect are to be withheld from the envoy of the United States to your government; that is to say, because his wife is alleged or supposed by your government to entertain a certain religious faith, and to be a member of a certain religious sect; can not be assented to by the executive of the government of the American people, but is, and must be, emphatically denied. The supreme law of the land expressly declares that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under the United States, and by "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the full exercise thereof."

This is a government of laws, and an authority exercised must find its measure and warrant thereunder. It is not within the power of the President, nor of Congress, nor of any judicial tribunal in the United States, to take or even hear testimony, or in any mode to inquire into, or decide upon the religious belief of any official, and the proposition to allow this to be done by any foreign government is necessarily and a fortiori inadmissible.

To suffer an infraction of this essential principle would lead to a disenfranchisement of our citizens because of their religious belief, and thus impair or destroy the most important element which our Constitution of government was intended. To secure religious liberty is the chief corner-stone of the American system of government, and provisions for its security are imbedded in the written charter and interwoven in the moral fabric of its laws. Anything that tends to deprive a right so essential and sacred must be carefully guarded against, and I am satisfied that my countrymen, ever mindful of the suffering and sacrifices necessary to obtain it, will never consent to its impairment for any reason or under any pretext whatsoever.

In harmony with this essential law is the almost equally potential unwritten law of American society that awards respect and delicate consideration to the women of the United States, and exacts deference in the treatment at home and abroad of the mothers, wives and daughters of the republic.

The case we are now considering is that of an envoy of the United States, unquestionably fitted, whose presence near the foreign government in question is objected to by its agents on the sole ground that his wedded wife is alleged to entertain a religious faith which is held by very many of the most honored and valued citizens of the United States. It is not believed by the President that a doctrine and practice so destructive of religious liberty and freedom of conscience, so devoid of catholicity and so opposed to the spirit of the age in which we live, can for a moment be accepted by the great family of civilized nations, or be allowed to control their diplomatic intercourse. Certain it is that it will never, in my belief, be accepted by the people of the United States, nor by any administration which represents their sentiments. Permit me, therefore, being animated only by the sincerest desire to strengthen the ties of friendship and mutual respect between the governments we respectively represent, most earnestly and respectfully to crave careful consideration of this note, and to request your government to reconsider the views you have communicated to me in respect to the probable reception of Mr. Kelley on the mission of amity and mutual advantage which, in the simplest good faith, he was selected by this government to perform.

Letter from Bishop Keener.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

This Conference adjourned on last Monday, at seven o'clock in the evening, at Columbia. The place of its holding is famous and the disasters of the late war. It was burned by Gen. Sherman. The new capital building and many others escaped this barbarism; among the rest the house where Bishop Asbury held the first South Carolina Conference—just one hundred years ago. The occasion of this centennial was duly celebrated by a sermon on the second night of the session. I was too much overworked to hear what from all reports was an able historical sermon upon the great event by Rev. A. M. Chritzburg. Methodism is now fairly outpacing its orbit for a second century. It begins with the force of a planet—the Morning Star.

This Conference numbers a white membership of 54,853, 133 local preachers and 76 colored members—the most of them sextons. Think of our church in South Carolina as being solidly white! Once the galleries literally snowed under the rest of the congregation in all parts of Carolina Methodism. "What hath God wrought!" Whether this is a healthy sign only the future can determine. It is certain that all things considered, Methodism here has had a hard time and an uphill pull ever since the days of Coke and Asbury. As compared with Georgia and Alabama, with equal advantages, Carolina Methodism has been outstripped by both of them in influence, position, material and membership. But the centre is now passed, and she is moving forward, springing forward, from the relief experienced by events with which she has nothing to do. Last year was one of signal prosperity in church and parsonage building, and in the increase of membership, which was 2,026. Twelve young men have been received on trial; ten, into full connection; and fifteen deacons and ten elders were ordained.

The vote on church name was, as usual, all against change, and none for (yea, 0—v. s.; 119 noes). The delegates to General Conference are, clerical—W. W. Duncan, Samuel B. Jones, S. A. Webber, A. M. Chritzburg, W. D. Kirkland, A. M. Ship; alternates—J. M. Boyd and A. Coka Smith. Lay delegates—J. H. Carlisle, H. Baer, J. F. Lion, W. T. D. Causar, R. H. Jennings, J. G. Chicklescales; alternates—G. E. Prince, W. L. Gray.

During the Conference the Legislature and the Supreme Court were in session. This fact and the fact that here are the State University, the Theological Seminary of the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Columbia Female Institute of our own church, gave us a fine attendance both upon the Conference sessions and the public preaching. The theological school "has fallen into a place where two seas meet," and, if it gets out of the trouble as well as St. Paul and the crew and passengers of the ill-starred craft out of the storm in Adria, it will do well. I can not but admire the sensible way in which our three-decker, the Vanderbilt, weathered the same sort of tempestuous nonsense when it threw the redoubtable Winchell and his advanced pre-adamite speculations overboard; and, lo! there was a great scientific calm! What a blessing a little common sense is when combined with a good share of religion and some science!

This Conference was the sixth

Conference. I am especially grateful to God for health preserved, especially as I got out of bed only two days before the meeting of the Illinois Conference to attend its session. It is a great privation to be unable to attend this night services and the Sabbath morning love-feasts; but the heavy labors of both the chair and the cabinet preclude, always excepting the missionary anniversary.

The sessions have been marked by harmony and true Christian fellowship. Reports indicate large additions to membership, an increased attention to prayer meetings, class meetings, Sabbath-school conversions and to family prayers. Let us hope that Methodism is not enlarging merely in its surface, but also maintaining its original depth and purity. In some of the Conferences there were important trials, and the Discipline was positively vindicated in the prompt expulsion of offenders.

Next South Carolina Conference meets at Orangeburg.

Yours, J. C. KEENER.

DECEMBER 20, 1885.

Christ, the Desire of All Nations.

BY REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

The Prophet Haggal lived and prophesied in the early period of the Persian Empire, some 500 years before Christ: "I will, says the Almighty, shake all the nations, and the Desire of all nations shall come." By considering the history of the times we shall see that they constitute an impressive fulfillment of the first clause of the text. The Persian Empire was overthrown by Alexander the Great in a series of battles and victories—Granicus, Issus and Arbela—Darius, the Persian monarch, being put to death by one of his own subjects. Alexander carried his conquest from Egypt to India. He but hardly completed his conquests and established his empire before he died of his excesses in a drunken revel at Babylon. His only son and heir to his throne and empire was but a child, and his vast empire was speedily divided among his four most distinguished and ambitious generals. These military chieftains, like their renowned master, were insatiably ambitious, each seeking to possess himself of the largest share of the mighty empire.

These fierce rivalries shook eastern Europe, western Asia and northern Africa with the earthquakes and storms of desolating wars for more than two centuries of years. During this tragic period of history the Roman power, which at its beginning was weak and small, was gradually growing into greatness under various forms of government—kingly, democratic, consular and imperial. This iron power steadily went forth conquering and to conquer until it subdued and absorbed all the kingdoms which had constituted the Macedonian Empire. The agitations and perturbations growing out of these great and continuous wars shook all the nations of the ancient historic world, and this continued until the advent of the Son of God, at which time the Temple of Janus was shut by order of Augustus Cæsar, the imperial ruler of the Roman world, because war was no longer raging. At this juncture the "Prince of Peace," the Son of God, was born of the Virgin. Thus had all nations been shaken in their struggles to realize the Desire for better political conditions.

Let us proceed to consider how it is that Christ is "the Desire of all nations." Christ was the realization of what the world had long felt the need, and had in various ways obscurely expressed its desire. We know that certain skeptics have urged it as an objection to the Divine origin of the gospel that some of its doctrines, morals and hopes are to be found in various lands and ages among unenlightened heathens. So have said Celans, Gibbon and Voltaire. These things have not been fully and clearly set forth as in the gospel, but vaguely and dimly as people feeling about in the darkness and reaching forth for something which the gospel has brightly and gloriously set forth. This fact, however, so far from discrediting the claim of Christ to be the "Desire" of all nations, in our apprehension powerfully confirms it. If Christ had met no deep need, no felt want of men, it might have been, it might now be urged as a strong presumption against his claim to be divine, the Son of God; but in that he met these profoundest needs, and that his gospel is wide enough, deep enough and high enough for the needs of "every man," is a most strong presumption that he is the "Desire of all nations."

Let us consider what some of these traditions and yearnings have been. Men in all ages have had traditions of a time in the remote past when man was near to God, when there was no gulf of sin between the creature and Creator, and, along with this, hope of a better time when a great Deliverer would come to rescue men from ignorance, sin and woe, would point brighter light upon the human mind about the dark mysteries that envelop the being and character of God, our origin, our duty and our destiny, and of the problem of evil and the possibility of pardon. Such a great Illuminator and Deliverer is Christ—at once the "Light of the world" and the "Savior of the lost." He speaks as never man speaks, and saves as none other under heaven can save.

This desire for some illustrious One who would bring blessings to men has been the foundation of the hero-worship common to the world. This worship sometimes elevated its heroes to the rank of gods—rallying around them and sacrificing all for them, with the belief that they could dispense happiness, defend from evil, and would in some way better the condition of the world. The same feeling has led to the worship of the sun and moon and of rivers, as the source of blessings to men. Now this something, this illustrious one, which the world has so long worshipped in some form and "desired" in all, is Christ—the realization, the fruition, of the "Desire of all nations." There is salvation in him, and in none other.

Men through various methods have always expressed a craving for communion with God. The poetry of the ancient world, which expressed the traditions and hopes of the various people, represented the gods as mingling with men, and this as the highest and best condition. They expressed the same idea in their sculpture, representing the immortal gods in human form as their highest ideal, as the way in which they would have their gods appear. The ancient millions of India and China believed God had been incarnated and dwelt on earth in a human form, and that he would so appear again. The men of Lystra, when they saw the miracles wrought by Barnabas and Paul, said the gods had come down to dwell among men, and named them Jupiter and Mercurius, and could with difficulty be restrained from rendering them divine honors. The same belief as growing out of the universal "Desire" is seen and heard in the words of the awe-struck centurion when he saw Jesus of Nazareth die surrounded by such appalling and solemn signs of woe—"Truly this was the Son of God." Christ was the realization of this wish for communion with God, this incarnation, this coming to men and dwelling among them. The Word was God; the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father. The bond of union between God and man—an union, a communion for which the world in so many perverted ways expressed its longings—has in Christ been realized.

Everywhere and in all time men have felt, and in endless ways expressed, a sense of their fallen estate and sinful condition, and in countless forms their intense desire to satisfy the outraged justice of God. They have always and everywhere felt a deep want of something to make satisfaction, and in some way to secure the pardoning favor of God. Sacrifices of birds, of beasts, and as the most meritorious, even of men; sacrifices of gold and other precious values; sacrifices of ease and comfort in long and weary pilgrimages, fastings, prayers, and to the extreme of severe self-inflicted tortures. And even in Christian lands, where men ought to know how God can be just, and yet justify the sinner, they are trying by many devices, supposed to be meritorious, to satisfy offended justice and secure peace and hope. Christ, and only Christ, satisfies violated law, meets the universal need and fulfills the universal "Desire," so variously expressed—"Oh! that I knew where I might find him!" He, Christ, is the Name under heaven, and the only Name given among men, whereby we must be saved.

It may be said, and truly, the desire of all men is happiness. Many have been the paths that men have trod and various and wide the search for happiness. Many have thought it could be found in gold, and millions have toiled, sweat, suffered, hazarded and died for gold; but happiness is not in gold. Others have thought happiness is to be found in various sensual indulgences, and millions have believed it and rushed to display—to tables burdened with luxuries for the palate, to the rhy wine, to the dances and sensuous shows—have exhausted vitality and strength and died of exhaustion. Others have thought they heard the voice of blessedness in fame's loud and mellow trumpet, and so they have toiled, bowed, smiled and lied and lost their immortal all to win a place, a name and be renowned; but found, alas! meanness is the head which wears such crowns. Others have thought that retirement, books and meditation would secure the coveted boon, but have found, with the wisest man on whose lips the fire of inspiration ever burned, much study is weariness of the flesh, and of making books there is no end. All have been mistaken and disappointed. No man who has not peace with God and a well-founded hope of immortality can be happy. There is no peace to the wicked; there is a void in souls the world never fills. But Christ is life and health and peace. In him there is rest for the weary, for earth has no sorrow that he can not cure. All sorts of men of all nations have found their deepest needs met and supplied in Christ. No man who has tested has ever said: "I have failed. Christ is insufficient." No thanks be to him who giveth us the victory. The believer can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth him.

Men have always felt and known that they must die, but have always longed to live, to live forever. This desire made heathens, unbelief with the light of a written revelation, believe that the eminently great and good did not die; that they ascended to the glorious habitations of the immortal gods. This—that we may call, instinctive conviction—made men believe that the eminently good did not die; so, though it is said, "God buried Moses," the Jews long had many stories and traditions that Moses did not die, but that he still lived—body as well as soul. So there has been the same feeling about the "beloved disciple," that he should not die. Such stories and traditions have prevailed in many lands, even in modern history, that illustrious men were not dead. We all feel this instinct strong within when loved ones are torn from us, that they are not and can not be dead. It seems to us impossible that so much faith, love and goodness can perish. When they are separated from us the inquiry arises in our minds, "Are they really gone—surely dead?" We seem to feel it can not be. It is difficult to realize in the throng of our crowding cares and glowing hopes that we must die. Human nature shrinks back appalled from the grave and the dark beyond. Especially do we recoil with horror from the thought of the extinction of consciousness—the annihilation of our intelligent and conscious personality—to die to live no more forever. There is an inborn, ineradicable yearning for endless life. As the lungs long and gasp for breath and the eye yearns for light, so we instinctively feel out in the dark future for the light of life. Christ says he is the Life, and he came that men may have life, and have it more abundantly. He is the Resurrection and the Life; the Bread of Life—the Bread which cometh down from heaven. If any man eat of this Bread, he shall live forever. In this regard, then, Christ is pre-eminently the Desire of all nations. He it is that in his glorious gospel brings life and immortality to light; he unseals the grave, breaks the bonds of death; he opens to our faith and hope the gates of life eternal, and points our eyes to fairer worlds on high.

Why Not Like Atlanta?

A correspondent, writing from a section where the great question will shortly be submitted to the votes of the people, uses this language in reference to the coming among them of a certain distinguished temperance worker: "I look at the matter as entirely useless. I am confident that under all the circumstances the lecturer will not get the support here that would be necessary to overcome the majority against us unless we could make a regular Atlanta fight, and that is impossible without there was more genuine religion." I must confess to some surprise that the brother who is a prohibitionist from centre to circumference should have taken the gloomy view of the situation that his words imply. He has set me to thinking, and I have no doubt that many of the battles fought on the temperance question have been lost because over-timid prohibitionists were "confident that under all the circumstances the support necessary to overcome the majority against us" could not be had without—well, this, that or the other thing. The fact is that in all these contests, while we do our level best to make it inexpressibly hot for the enemy, we should place our confidence not in circumstances, but in the righteousness of our cause and in the blessed fact that the God of battles is upon our side. Whenever we go into these glorious struggles for "God and home and humanity," if we fail to make it "a regular Atlanta fight," whose fault is it? All honor to that plucky, glory-crowned Georgia city, and yet the temperance people of any town, ward or parish in our State can do the very same. "More genuine religion" is it, that we need? Well, then, why not go to God for it? As "old John Mathews" (so, Mr.

Editor, he styled himself in his church before Conference when he publicly prayed God to send him "anywhere, but to give him a good place"—and he got it) need to tell us at Felicity: "A man can have as much religion as he wants to have." So, then, if we have not the Atlanta spirit and religion to down the whisky devil in our midst, we ought no longer to take counsel of our fears, but, determined to "quit us like men," go at once to God for all the religion needed and straightway seek the enemy on the field, and there, foot to foot, knee to knee, hand to hand, engage him in a struggle wherein quarter is neither asked nor given. We of Louisiana ought to have as much pluck, grit and genius for light in us as our Atlanta brethren have, and as to the religion needed, the same God to whom they go is our God, and we have the same right that they have to draw our sufficient supply from him. This tender, kid-gloved, criminally timid way of dealing with the traffic in the hedges and souls of men, softly called by its friends "the whisky industry," (2) must be given up and the old-fashioned give and take, eye to eye, pitched-battle style of grand old Georgia adopted everywhere. There is true philosophy in these lines:

"Strike a noble gently,
And it stings you for your pains—
Grasp it like a man of metal,
And it soft as silk remains."

The youth David, strong in God though slender in body, with his sling and smooth stones hurled with sure aim by his dauntless spirit, made the boasting Goliath bite the dust. Surely, "circumstances" were against him, but in his fearless heart he carried the promise of victory and God gave him grand success. So, prohibition is just a stripping; still, sent of God and fearing not the might of his foe, he is winning his way throughout the land and the whisky giants are fast falling before him as he hurls upon them the smooth stones from the brook. Suppose, however, that here and there a community, through ignorance or pure wickedness, vote to continue in power the all-destructive traffic. Well, we must "nip and tuck again" and again until the sure though delayed triumph is gained. Some boys during the Confederate days passed by one of those large cotton yards in New Orleans where some Federals were quartered after the Yankees took the city. They engaged in conversation with a good-natured sentinel who was standing guard at one of the big gates. The leading boy taunted the soldier by calling over to him the names of the battles in which the Yankees had been defeated. At last the soldier said: "Sonny, I will tell you something that may be of value to you in after life. When people are really whipped they stay whipped, and it will be time enough for you to brag when you find us staying whipped." The prohibitionists are bound to succeed in the end, for not only is God their leader, but wherever and whenever they are whipped, you find that they refuse to stay whipped. It does not matter so much about "circumstances" if we will just keep our courage up and do our best fighting and march at God's command. Two boys were talking about Elijah's ascent in the chariot of fire. Said one: "Wouldn't you be afraid to ride in such a chariot?" "No," was the reply, "not if God drove." God is in all this movement and God is driving, and we may without fatalism count on complete success, if with brave hearts we wage successful war upon our foe.

THE EDITOR, 1885.

Louisiana Conference.

Delegates to the Louisiana Annual Conference will be sold tickets on the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific railroad from local points to Vicksburg and return at six cents per mile.

The Texas and Pacific railroad will make the usual reduction, though this reduction is not officially decided.

Preachers and delegates who come to Baton Rouge, via Louisville, New Orleans and Texas Railroad, will pay full fare to Baton Rouge and will be sold return tickets at one cent per mile.

T. K. FAUST LEROY, P. C.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

—Rev. Dr. W. M. Patterson, superintendent of our Central Mexican Mission, was in attendance at the Memphis (his old home) Conference.

—The Rev. Julien C. Brown, of the White River Conference, has been transferred to the Missouri Conference and stationed at the Francis Street Church, St. Joseph.

—Bishop Keener reached home last week after a three months' absence visiting the Conference. He enjoyed good health during the entire time, and never rendered the labor more active and distinguished than now.

—Florence, Ala., has voted whisky out of that beautiful town, and (indeed) has raised the license to $1,000, so says the Alabama Advocate. Good news. Let such towns multiply until the monster is driven from our fair land.

—Hon. Simpson Bobo, of Spartanburg, S. C., and a prominent figure in South Carolina Methodism, died at his home on the evening of December 10, after an illness of only a few hours. He has been a valued member of several General Conferences.

—The following delegates to the General Conference were elected by the Alabama Conference: (Clerical)—R. B. Crawford, O. R. Blue, A. H. Mitchell, M. S. Andrews, A. S. Andrews, Lay—B. M. Washburne, B. B. Conner, F. Law, J. T. Harris, S. W. John.

—We regret exceedingly to learn that Mrs. Knox, the mother of Mrs. Christian Keener, was stricken with paralysis some days ago and remains in a very critical condition. It has not been many months since her husband was called away. Their separation will not be long. The anxious waiting ones have our sympathetic and earnest prayers.

—We notice in the telegrams that Dr. Felix R. Hill, of St. Louis, has been transferred to the Alabama Conference, and that Rev. C. L. Chilton, of the Alabama Conference, has been transferred to the St. Louis Conference and stationed at First Church, St. Louis. Dr. Hill's return South was on account of his health. The climate of St. Louis was too severe for him.

—Delegates elect to the General Conference from the Memphis Conference are as follows: (Clerical)—W. T. Harris, A. R. Wilson, R. H. Mahon, J. H. Evans; alternates—W. C. Johnson, J. H. Witt, W. L. Duckworth, J. M. Spence. Lay—T. W. Crowder, S. W. Godwin, W. L. McFarland, A. W. Newsum; alternates—J. T. Irion, L. D. Mullins, R. W. Haynes, A. R. Boone.

—Rev. J. M. Crews, of the Alabama Conference, died on the evening of the seventh instant. The Alabama Advocate says of him: "He was a fine scholar—an alumnus of the Southern University—a good writer, an elegant gentleman, a line preacher and a devout Christian. He was one of the favorites of the Alabama Conference, all rejoicing in his promotion, none envious of his honors."

—The South Georgia Conference met in nineteenth session in Brunswick, December 9, with Bishop A. W. Wilson in the chair. R. B. Bryan was elected secretary. The reports of the preachers showed an advance along the line of nearly all church work. The following delegates to the General Conference were elected: (Clerical)—J. W. Hinton, J. S. Key, J. O. Branch, J. B. McGehee; alternates—T. T. Christian, G. N. MacDonnell, P. S. Twitty. Lay—J. E. Godfrey, W. B. Hill, W. H. Ellison, Isaac A. Bush; alternates—R. W. Lovett, J. W. Cheatham, W. A. Graham, C. G. Gray.

—The recent session of the South Carolina Conference was a centennial session. The following delegates to the General Conference were elected: (Clerical)—W. W. Duncan, S. B. Jones, S. A. Webber, A. M. Chreitzburg, W. D. Kirkland, A. M. Shipp, Lay—J. H. Carlisle, J. F. Lyon, W. T. D. Cousar, Dr. H. Baer, R. H. Jennings, J. G. Clenckens; alternates—G. E. Prince, W. L. Glaze. W. D. Kirkland was elected editor of the Southern Christian Advocate. Dr. A. M. Shipp was granted a superannuated relation. The statistical summaries are as follows: Members, 54,381; infants baptized, 1,181; adults baptized, 1,587; Sunday-schools, 587; officers and teachers, 3,323; scholars, 20,514; number of churches, 625; parsonages, 115; Conference collections, $1,922; foreign missions, $6,706; domestic missions, $1,378; education, $2,204; church extension, $1,543.

It is a true saying that "there are in human hearts better holds as granite as Thermopylae, as great as Waterloo," O, the strife and the bitter warfare that is ever going on in the heart of man between the powers of good and evil, between the extending forces of light and darkness. It is more glorious to withstand the assaults of evil and conquer self than to be like Leonidas among his warriors slain.—The Critic.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE, if one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON,
Publishers.

Patience: "Have you a permit to play here?" (Grand-children: "No; but it amuses the little ones so much." Father: "Then you will have the kindness to accompany me." "Very well, sir. What do you wish to sing?"

ELIGANT AND USEFUL PRESENTS.—Attention is called to the advertisement of Stephen Freeman & Sons, Racine, Wis., who manufacture an elegant assortment of Aquaria, Ferneries, Window Ornaments, and Boxes, Brackets, Flower Stands, Ornamental Centre-Tables, Vases, etc. These goods are handsomely designed and finished, and make useful and ornamental furniture. Their large illustrated "Catalogue" is sent free in all.

"Are you in favor of enlarging the curriculum?" asked a rural school director of a farmer in his district. "Enlarge nothing," replied the old gentleman; "the building is big enough. What we want is to teach more things in the school."

Consumption is a great national scourge, and my relief is heaven-sent. In 1844, the village of the Temple had long been recognized for their active power in diseases of the respiratory system. In this country, only one firm makes a specialty of treatment with the Koss India Syrup. Craddock & Co., of Philadelphia, have been dispensing these medicines for nearly thirty years, and thousands have been blessed with health and strength who otherwise would have met an untimely end.

"Would you believe it, Sandy," said a divine, "that I never thought of the sermon before I went to the pulpit?" "I do," replied the other; "I have been saying what you were preaching."

Relief is immediate, and a sure cure. Piles' Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

The pupil of one's eye is made to attend to business by the fact that it is held over it.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

It is no comfort to the judges of our Court of Appeals to be told that Job never asked for a new trial.

Those who prove, lecture, declaim or sing, will do and do not make a House of Representatives and the speaker's rostrum at the voice in cases of horse-race. It also cures coughs and sore throat rapidly and completely. Sold by all druggists at 25c, 50c, and $1.

Little Elsa, look out at the soldiers: "Say, Auntie, what are all the other men here for who don't play in the band?"

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

P. WEINER.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of Pianos, Organs, and musical instruments, increases at the World's Music Palace, 135 Canal Street. The wonder is where will the custom come from to absorb this immense stock. The liberal terms combined with satisfactory prices and safe guarantee offered by Mr. Weiner, gives the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is continually spreading out in every direction, and necessitating the carrying of a large and well selected stock of music and musical instruments of every description. Call and see; comparisons treated is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished on application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, secure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, croup, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most solid, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured than by any other mode of treatment. It is sold in the most delicate and palatable form, and is for sale by all druggists, and S. H. THREX, New York.

ADVISE TO MOTHERS. Mrs. Weston's Soreness Symply should always be used for children's soreness. It soothes the child, soothes the gums, allays all pain, cures colds, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. 25c, a bottle.

Olney's Siphon Pump and Siphon, 25c. German Cough Remedy, 25c. Hill's Hair and Scalp Dye—Black & Brown, 25c. Pink's Toothache Remedy, 1 Minute, 25c.

BOARDING HOUSES.

ROOMS AND BOARDING. Pianos—Furnished with or without board; location central; churches in immediate neighborhood; excellent and quiet; excellent cuisine; the best; every convenience. First class accommodations. 150 Canal Street, New Orleans. Mrs. J. D. HAWTHORN.

ROOMS AND BOARD, AND ALSO MEALS FURNISHED. Mrs. J. D. HAWTHORN AND Mrs. N. HAWTHORN, No. 175 St. Joseph Street (North Charles St.), NEW ORLEANS, LA. Cars and Churches very convenient.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY. A beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to every baby whose mother will send us a small photograph of her baby, and their parents' addresses. Also a beautiful Diamond Ring (made of gold) to the mother and much valuable information. Write to: Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

THE WOMAN'S MAGAZINE. (Editor: H. H. H. H.)

12 Beautiful Full-page Engravings, and Large Pages of the best literature produced in our country. The Home Science Department is practical and instructive, and of great interest to housekeepers during the year. Editor's Notes upon topics of general interest and importance. 50c a Year, 10 cts. a Copy.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE CHAMPION KEY BOOK. "SOME NOTED PRINCES, AUTHORS AND STATESMEN OF OUR TIME."

By 20 of our best writers: Canon Farrar, J. P. Felt, Jas. Carter, Tucker's daughter, and others. Over 400 portraits and engravings. "The book is brimful of power and more things than 'N. Y. Observer' intelligent young men and ladies can have permanent employment. A few General Agents wanted. THE HENRY HILL P. CO., Norwich, Ct.

Reduce the Cost of Your Crop. —THE—

LAMAR COTTON CHOPPER. A VALUABLE MACHINE FOR PLANTERS. A chopper that answers every purpose. Light, simple, strong, thoroughly efficient and very cheap.

Guaranteed to Do the Work: Saw is the time to secure it. Send for illustrated circular. Address: 1001 N. 7th St., Atlanta, Ga.

San Francisco and City of Mexico EXCURSIONS.

The Illinois Central R. R. will run TWO FIRST-CLASS PULLMAN CAR EXCURSIONS the second week in January, 1886—one to SAN FRANCISCO, the other to the CITY OF MEXICO, stopping four days at New Orleans, one day at San Antonio, and one at Chihuahua. The round trip rates to either point will be as follows: From all points in Illinois between Freeport and Ashley, and Chicago and Ashley, $113 15; from Dubuque, $115 50; Sioux City, $125. Points between Ashley, Ill., and Jackson, Miss., including St. Louis, Memphis, Aberdeen and Yazoo City, $110. Tickets good to return within six months. Remember the great American Exposition at New Orleans will be at its best at this season of the year. No snow, no ice, no blizzards along this route. Address the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa, for Excursion circular giving full particulars, and for folders, maps, books, etc., concerning California and Old Mexico.

J. F. MEKRY,
Gen. West. Pass. Ag't.

ROCK BOTTOM.

Our Clubbing Arrangement

—1886—

We offer the following club rates to take effect after December 1, 1885. Cash in full to accompany all orders.

The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the following publications will be sent one year, postpaid, at prices in outside column:

Publisher's price.	Our price.
Southern Cultivator	$3 50 $2 75
Daily Freeman—12 mos.	14 00 13 00
" " " "	7 00 6 50
Weekly " " "	3 50 2 40
" Times-Innocent	3 50 2 75
Harper's Magazine	6 00 4 75
" Weekly	6 00 4 75
" Bazar	6 00 4 75
" Young People	4 00 3 00
Deacon's Magazine	4 00 3 25
Literary Life	3 00 2 00

Send cash in full with all orders.

Carver & Jamieson.

B. D. WOOD & BROS.,

Dealers in Best Qualities of COAL and COKE,

47 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

—OFFICE OF TUGBOATS—

Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood, Manile Wood, Will H. Wood.

Our Young People.

CHRISTMAS.

Delight little stockings
Hanging in a row,
Blue and gray and scarlet,
In the firelight glow.

Curly-pated sleepers
Safely tucked in bed;
Dreams of wondrous toys
Dancing through each head.

Funny little stockings
Hanging in a row,
Stuffed with sweet surprises,
Down from top to toe.

Skates and bells and trumps,
Whistles, toys and drums,
Hocks and bells and rattles,
Nuts and sugar-plums.

Little sleepers waking:
Bless me, what a noise!
What you merry Christmas,
Happy girls and boys!

—The Nursery.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl, and feel very glad that you "grown people" let us "little children" have a corner in your paper. Do you know how "we children" love to hear those letters read? They make us feel like trying to be good girls and boys, so that we may make good "grown people." Tell the cousins that I can repeat the Ten Commandments and golden rule. I take the "Little People," and am trying to learn all the lessons for one year, beginning with the August lessons. Mr. Editor, if I teach one little girl all the lessons and read all the stories on the paper to her, will I be a Sunday-school teacher? We can't go to Sunday-school, for there is none near us. I will answer Clifford A. Donaldson's question: It is found in 1 Kings xix, 5. Elijah slept under the juniper tree. I must tell you, Mr. Editor, that I was at China Grove Camp Meeting. Oh! you ought to have been there too. I think you ought to come once and let us see you. I have seen a doctor and a preacher, but never saw an editor.

Your little friend,

MATTIE E. HICKMAN.

FRANKLINTON CIRCUS, Louisiana.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

A Reliable Article.

Dr. E. CUTLER, Boston, Mass., says:

"I found it to realize the expectations raised, and regard it as a reliable article."

New Year's Tangles.

Sophie sat all day and sewed until her cheeks were very pink. It was the day before New Year's, and she felt that her new blue suit must be finished. She was sewing on buttons, and there were so many of them, and they were so small, and so slippery, that really it took much time and patience. But Sophie gave patience and perseverance, and at last the dress was done. With a happy heart she hung it away in the clothes press. To-morrow she was to wear it. Helena, the married sister who lived in the new handsome house on the corner, was going to receive calls all day in her lovely parlors that were just settled, and Sophie had been invited to spend the day, and help wait on the guests, and enjoy all there was to enjoy. There was nothing that Sophie liked more than to be dressed up and play grown-up young lady in her sister's beautiful home.

Alas for her plans! There was another married sister, living three miles away, and on that last night of the old year her baby took sick, and in the gray dawn of the new year, a doctor stood at the door, and Sophie's mamma came, with cloak and bonnet already on, to speak a last word to Sophie.

"I must go, dear, of course," baby may not be very sick, but Alice is sadly frightened and wails mother. And Sophie, you must stay at home, it will not do to leave her with Jane, she is not new a girl; I am not sure that I could trust her, and Fannie must not go out, you know. Good-by, dear; kiss Fannie for me when she wakes; I'll come back to-night, if possible."

And the sleepless out of Sophie's life with it. Had mamma forgotten the new suit that she worked so hard to finish, and the New Year's calls in Helena's lovely parlors? And here she must stay cooped up all day, playing with Fannie. New Year's Day! And her birthday, too! Do you wonder that she cried? You don't know what suddenly stopped the tears, and made the little woman hop out of bed and dress herself rapidly. I do; it was one of her Christmas presents, and at the foot of the bed. An illuminated motto, done in her favorite colors, blue and gold: "Even Christ pleased not himself." She had promised to try to live by it. It would never do to desert it on New Year's morning. I must write a book about the trials of that day. Fannie was just getting over the measles, and was not very well, I assure you. She needed nursing the whole time. She needed watching all through breakfast time. She wanted her milk in a certain goblet that was not on the table, and she wanted a certain spoon that was not to be found; her eggs soft. Poor baby, she wanted her mamma! It seemed to Sophie that papa took less notice than usual, but left Fannie to her care. Patiently she steered the cross baby through the trials of breakfast and prayers. Patiently she hushed her whines, even keeping her still and happy as Sophie did. She went out in the room and wrote letters. A string that could be woven by skillful fingers into all the queer cat's cradle shapes was the thing that amused her then. But one unlucky moment it tangled itself into a dozen knots, and Fannie's temper was not very good. She was so vexed and angry because Sophie could not instantly pick them out; but Sophie tried, picking and pecking, and beginning a funny little story in a whisper, while she worked. Certainly Sophie did not try to please herself during all that trying day. It closed at last, and Fannie, tired out but happy, was put to bed and sung to sleep, and Sophie came down to the sitting-room to rest. Mamma had returned and was resting in the easy chair.

"Alice's baby wasn't much sick," she was saying as Sophie came in. "She has a cold and was pretty hoarse in the night, and you know how easily young mothers are frightened. I've taken care of baby all day and let Alice rest."

Surely Sophie was glad that Alice's baby was better, but it made her weary day seem so unnecessary. What a trial it had been to give up Helena! But nobody seemed to notice it. This was her birthday, and she had not had a single present from anybody. True she had not expected it; she had always preferred to receive them with the family on Christmas; but then papa and mamma almost always took some notice of the day, and gave her a book, or a little picture, or something to remember it by. This day had passed without notice; and Fannie had been so cross, and she was so tired, and it was all so unnecessary. She wondered if Helena had mislaid her.

"Did you call at Helena's?" mamma asked just then, as if she could see the thoughts in Sophie's heart. "Yes," papa said, he stopped a moment; "Helena had callers; the house had been full all day; she had missed Sophie sadly." Then he turned to that sad faced little woman sitting in a dull heap in the corner. "Are you too tired, daughter, to go over to Helena's this evening? She said I was to bring you over eight o'clock to get your birthday gift. So put yourself into that blue dress, for I suspect there will be other company. But first, my dear, can you untangle this knot for me? I saw you were patient about such work this afternoon."

He handed her a little white paper package, a small, square box; the string was tied several times in knots, but fortunately they were how-knots, and Sophie's fingers soon undid them. The cover was lifted off. Pink cotton, with a card on it that said: "For the little girl who cheerfully pleased not herself all day." Could the cotton speak? or what soft, low voice was that whispering under it? "Tuck, tuck, tuck, tuck!" That was what it said. But the way in which it fitted into the new watch-pocket of the blue dress, that Sophie discovered in the new suit at the birthday surprise party, I shall leave you to guess.—Pammy.

Stealing a Reputation. Would you trust one dishonest enough to steal the reputation of another, to make for you anything, especially your physique, not knowing of what it may be compounded? How to tell the genuine Simmons Liver Regulator?—Look for the clean White Wrapper having a large red Z in the center and the signature of J. H. Zedlin & Co. on the side. All others are worthless and injurious imitations. Don't tamper with them, however pleasantly recommended, health and life are too precious to endanger.

The Little Colorado Shepherd.

BY MRS. OLIVER HOWARD.

Freddy Welsh went with his father to the sheep ranch, twenty miles from home. Here was where the sheep stayed and watched the flock of a thousand sheep through the long, sunny days. The little cabin was his home at night, close by the corral where the sheep were folded. Freddy and his father staid with the herder several weeks in the spring, to help take care of the flock. The flock was divided, and Freddy, who was only seven years old, was given charge of the lambs and their mothers. They were turned out in the morning, and slowly made their way from the corral, eating the tender grass.

Freddy could watch them from the cabin until nearly noon. Then they would be so far away that he was sent to turn them, and drive them slowly home toward night. One day he saw a rattlesnake. "Did you kill it?" I asked. "Or did you run away?" "Yes, ma'am, I killed it. Of course I did."

"What did you kill it with?" I asked, curious to know. "A club," said he, "an oak club." "But where did you find a club?" I asked, for the prairie was treeless. "I dug it out of the ground. It was an old picket pin."

"But I don't see how you ever dared to strike the snake," I said, as I looked at his little chubby hands. "Most little boys would have run away as fast as they could. Weren't you afraid of it?" "Yes, ma'am, some; but I hit it before it got collected up. It can't strike until he's collected up."

"Did your father think you were brave?" "He didn't know until I had killed two."

"Then you have killed more than one rattlesnake." "Yes, ma'am, I've killed eleven. I have the rattles at home that I took from the biggest one. It had nine rattles."—Our Little Men and Women.

"What is Woman's Worth?" asked a fair damsel of a crusty old bachelor. He did not know, so she said: "W. O. man" (double you, O man.) But a woman feels worth little if disease has invaded her system and is daily sapping her strength. For all female weaknesses, Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" stands unrivaled. It cures the complaint and builds up the system. Send 10 cents in stamps for pamphlet to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 253 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

It is better in some respects to be admired by those with whom you live, than to be loved by them. And this not on account of any great elevation of vanity, but because admiration is so much more tolerant than love.—Arthur Helps.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL with Hypophosphites. For Wasting Children.

Dr. S. W. Cohen, of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your Emulsion in infantile wasting, with good results. It not only restores wasted flesh, but gives strength, and I heartily recommend it for diseases attended by atrophy."

I very often think with sweetness and longings, and pantings of soul, of being a little child, taking bold of Christ, to be led by him through the wilderness of this world.—Jonathan Edwards.

Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." Positively Popular; Provoke Praise; Provo Priceless; Peculiarly Prompt; Perceptibly Potent; Producing Permanent Profit; Precluding Pimples and Pustules; Promoting Purity and Peace. Purchase, Price, Petty. Pharmacists Patronizing Pierce's Procuure Plenty.

The human heart, like a well, if utterly closed in from the outer world, is sure to generate an atmosphere of death.—Church Union.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BAKING POWDER.

Why the "Royal" is the Best.

Royal is the best baking powder because it is absolutely pure and wholesome, of the highest strength, and maintains its full leavening power until used.

There is no other pure baking powder offered to the public; all others contain either lime or alum,—deleterious substances,—sometimes both. Lime presence results from impure cream of tartar; alum is added to give strength; the object of the manufacturers in both cases is to produce a cheap powder.

The Royal Baking Powder is exclusively made from cream of tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the tartrate of lime and all other impurities are totally removed. Its absolute purity is guaranteed by its manufacturers and certified by all prominent chemists and scientists who have made it the subject of investigation.

The cream of tartar of the market from which other baking powders are made has been tested by Prof. Chandler and Love, for the New York State Board of Health, and found to contain impurities from three to ninety-three per cent of its weight. It is, therefore, absolutely impossible that these powders should be pure, while it is equally as impossible for the Royal, being made as it is from chemically pure materials, to be otherwise than absolutely pure.

There being no inert matter in the ingredients of the Royal Baking Powder, higher strength is, of course, attained; and, the exact value of the materials being ascertainable to an atom, a compound is possible that will maintain its full strength until used, leave no residuum in the bread, and which all chemical tests and practical experience have proved to be the perfection of leavening agencies. This combination in the "Royal" makes it the best, and the only perfect baking powder attainable.

Prof. Mott, late Government Chemist, says: "Because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the constituents used in its manufacture, the proper proportion of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public."

H. A. MOTT, Ph.D., etc.

Late U. S. Gov't Chemist.

A sure cure for THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES. Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Loss of Voice, Influenza, and all other troubles of the throat and lungs. Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm. It is the only medicine that will cure these diseases. It is a positive specific. For a full description of the Tar Wine Lung Balm, and a list of the names of the druggists who sell it, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Cure that bad Cold! Stop that Cough! These colds and coughs are the most common of all diseases. They are the result of a cold in the head, which has descended into the throat and lungs. Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm is the only medicine that will cure them. It is a positive specific. For a full description of the Tar Wine Lung Balm, and a list of the names of the druggists who sell it, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

If you have a cold in the head, the throat, and the lungs, and if you have a cough, send for a free copy of the book "The Tar Wine Lung Balm." It will give you all the information you need.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 31.—NO. 53.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1885.

WHOLE NO. 1535.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
OSCAR & JAMISON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Advance payment of December No. there half price.

Advertisements of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized and a space to which preference may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. S. H. WELCH.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KRAEMER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. J. J. J.
REV. W. L. C. DUNNITT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. J. J.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. G. CAMPBELL.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

CHRISTIAN HYMN.

BY W. D. ANDERSON, D. D.

1. In the groups have passed along
The first of our Bethlehem's starlit plains
2. Angels rolled their sweetest strains
Woke the shepherds with celestial strains
3. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first
4. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

5. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

6. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

7. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

8. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

9. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

10. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

11. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

12. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

13. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

14. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

15. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

16. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

17. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

18. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

19. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

20. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

21. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

22. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

23. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

24. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

25. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

26. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

27. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

28. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

29. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

30. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

31. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

32. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

33. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

34. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

35. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

36. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

37. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

38. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

39. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

40. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

41. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

42. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

43. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

44. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

45. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

46. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

47. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

48. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

49. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

50. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

51. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

52. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

53. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

54. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

55. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

56. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

57. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

58. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

59. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

60. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

61. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

62. To the guide who was angels' first
To the guide who was angels' first

merce, we see yet other forces, the arts and sciences, at work in the midst of Christendom, subduing to her control the whole empire of nature, which, like another new world, has lain for ages unexplored, the retreat of whole tribes of heathenism and superstition, more ignorant, savage and brutal than the wild Indians of primeval America.

4. We see the church, rescued from the darkness and paganism of the middle ages, reformed by Luther, and later on revived by the Wesleys, and in these latter days delivered from bitter sectarian controversies, preparing afresh, as if just made conscious of the divinity and universality of her mission, to go forth with the gospel and add to the triumphs of Christendom, this greatest of all conquests, the world brought to Christ.

Thus with a political presence felt and respected in every land, a commerce commanding a monopoly in every sea, a science every day adding new treasures to her knowledge and greater riches and power to her dominion, and a church whose missionary enterprise is everywhere penetrating the kingdoms of darkness, the preparation of Christendom is complete and her representatives, already gone forth on their respective missions, are now also concentrating upon China.

Diplomacy, commerce, science, missions—these four—constitute and comprise the agents and representatives of Christendom in China, and it is to them we would now briefly call attention. The first three, diplomacy, commerce and science, while in no proper sense, regarded simply in themselves, connected with the missionary enterprise, are nevertheless so intimately associated with it and have such an important bearing on it that to omit them in this connection would be to ignore many of the most pertinent and potent facts in the history of missions in China. We shall therefore extend them and treat them, however fragmentary and unscientific, as the preliminary and necessary conditions of the missionary enterprise.

Referring now to their bearings on the progress of Christian missions, the following facts will serve to show wherein and how far the above friendly influences do, and also to illustrate the character, extent and limits of their services:

1. This represents the combined interests and sentiments of at least ten of the European States and three of the American continent, or, in other words, Christendom; for, however much these States may differ among themselves, they are in unit as against pagan China. The services it has rendered to Christendom in general, to the missionary enterprise in particular and to the best interests of China in the ultimate, are neither few nor insignificant, and may be summarized as follows:

It was diplomatically supported in the first instance by an appeal to the ultima ratio regum war that forced the gates of China, humbled the haughty arrogance of her sovereign and made intercourse with her people possible. Having grown up without a rival, a world, as she fancied, in herself, or "all under heaven," as the title of the empire implies, and knowing nothing of the global shape of the earth which hid behind her horizon the existence of the great nations of Christendom, she treated them on their first appearance as she had been accustomed to treat the weak nationalities and wandering tribes on her outskirts with contempt, calling them barbarians and demanding tribute. War was inevitable, and it came. "The effect was immediate, the lesson decisive—an experience of inestimable value, without which all the attempts of Western nations to benefit the Chinese must have proved like attempting to irrigate the side of a mountain by projecting water from its base."

Diplomacy being now installed in her capital and having the force of thirteen against one, the reduction of the pride of China, pride of the East, most obdurate and offensive stronghold of the nation, was begun in earnest, and how effectively the following facts will show:

1. It was compelled to recognize all the thirteen sovereignties of Christendom as the fellows and equals of "the hitherto peerless 'middle kingdom.'"

2. Concede to their rulers an equal right to the use of capital letters in writing their own names or the names of their respective countries.

3. Grant to their representatives in China the right of important audiences and the privilege of riding in Sedans along the streets of the capital, etc.

4. It had to submit to the idea of an international law, in the application of which it had had no hand.

5. Open its seaports to a commerce which dictated its own tariff and regulations.

6. Grant to missionaries the right of entrance and residence and security of life and property and freedom from molestation in any part of the empire.

7. It was forced to accept the intervention of the extra-territoriality law which entirely excludes and prohibits the jurisdiction of China over any subject or citizen of the respective States of Christendom and recognize the judicial functions of the consuls sent to reside at all the open ports on her coasts and rivers.

Diplomacy here rendered, but before its work was done, and well done. For, overwhelmed and humiliated, the pride of China was already prostrate in the dust of humility. And when next it appears it is seen in the person of the Prince Minister humbly memorializing His Majesty in favor of allowing the nation to become a pupil of the men of the West in terms like these: "We have weighed the matter maturely before having it before the throne. But among persons who are acquainted with the subject there are some who will regard this matter as unimportant; some who will censure as wrong in abandoning the methods of China for those of the West, and some who will even denounce the proposal that China should submit to be instructed by the people of the West as shameful in the extreme. Those who take such objections are ignorant of the facts of the times." Referring to and refuting other intimations and objections, he says, finally: "As to the allegation that it is a sin to learn from the people of the West this the absurdest charge of all. For under the whole heaven the deepest disgrace is that of being content to lay in the rear of others."

To this memorial the following reply, written with the "venial pencil," was vouchsafed: "Let the nation be prepared in the memorial be adopted." Here, I can assure at least three eminent services for which the missionary enterprise is directly indebted to diplomacy, to-wit:

1. The rights which missionaries enjoy in being allowed an open and unrestricted entrance into China, with the privilege of residence, security of life and property and the unobstructed prosecution of their work in any part of the country. There are advantages not accorded to merchants or any other class of foreigners in China, and such as are not yet granted even to missionaries in more progressive Japan.

2. So regulating the terms of intercourse between Christendom and China as to establish the one as teacher over the other, or in other words rendering it necessary that China should become a pupil of Christendom. This last is of tremendous significance to the missionary enterprise and only equaled by the third.

3. The imposition of the extra-territoriality law, which, being interpreted, simply means that China's pupils will continue till such time as Christendom shall judge her sufficiently qualified in learning and moral character to be entrusted with the entire administration of international affairs, involving jurisdiction over the lives and property of foreigners while resident or temporarily sojourning in China.

Reduced down to its last analysis, the services rendered to the missionary enterprise by diplomacy may be summed up in two words, to-wit: "It has opened up China through-out from its seaboard to its uttermost frontiers, to the missionary, and to him only, as yet."

2. It has delivered to him as a pupil and ward of Christendom, to teach and instruct by pulpit, press and school-room, the whole nation, from the emperor and his council down to the most abject among the people.

As one of the agents of Christendom, the only auxiliary, diplomacy has wrought this wonderful work. Shall it be, can it be, that the men who shall be waiting on their part? Hear the South speak: "The man is truly glorious, but the honors are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

(To be continued.)

SHANGHAI, CHINA, DEC. 25, 1885.

"Older Days."

MR. EDITOR: It seems but as yesterday and as "a watch in the night" when we were in the dear old Louisiana Conference. Ten long, weary years have elapsed up their feet and down backward to join the mighty ages since we left the alma mater of our itinerant life to join the gospel battle-grounds of the great West. Old friendship like the "old wine" of the feast, "is better" than the new. And yet how strange to us when we reflect upon the mutations of life that the "old" Conference is nearly "new" and that we would be a stranger in the midst of its sacred throng. When we first entered the Louisiana Conference there were but few young men in it. The towering Wilkinson, the glorious preacher, the loving friend, was then a year but one year old in the full connection of the itinerancy. Four boys of us stood at the altar and were taken on trial. Joseph Gordon Miller, a native and a childhood companion; Joseph W. Medlock, a zealous, devoted young minister; J. L. Borden, a Greek and a gifted servant of Jesus Christ; and the writer composed the class of sixteen yearlings. It was in the days of reorganization of the Southern Methodist Church after the stormy year had passed and people's hearts were brought to confront new and intricate problems in the social and political world. Poverty, privation and general corruption of manners were everywhere, and it seemed that the harvest truly was great. "Disfranchise and absorption" was a new and untried factor in the hands of "false brethren" whose zeal was worthy of a better cause. For nearly nine years, through rule and stormy scenes in old Louisiana, we pressed onward to happier bowers than Eden's bloom. Epidemics frequent and terrible—yellow fever, small-pox and cholera—swept through the land, taking off thousands of the best people of the empire. The church grew up slowly through all these years of trial and poverty. Individualism, political corruption and journalism swept in like a flood; but the church stood. To our minds the endurance of the church in the State of Louisiana during the time we were in that Conference is a sufficient vindication of its divine origin and energy against all the attacks of the most bitter and unrelenting hostility the world affords. Perhaps no part of the world is cursed with such a type of infidelity as is the State of Louisiana. Not the extreme theory of Paine, the wicked interpretation of Voltaire or the bald-faced, hearse-yet voluptuous being and blasphemy of Ingels; but rather the polite art and sophistry of a Voltaire and the attractive reasonings of a Hume associated with the polished manners of a Chesterfield.

There are points or powers of man, however, that can prevail against "the powers of the world to come." The workmen die; but the work goes on. Just to read over the annals of Louisiana Methodism, as epitomized in the Conference reports, is sufficient to teach us that "one generation passeth away and another cometh." When we entered the Conference Bishop McPye was a young Bishop, and Dr. Keener and Dr. Parker both leaders of the Conference in their prime. They are now old, and some have fallen asleep. Joseph B. Adams, Nehemiah A. Cravens, John Pipes, A. E. Goodwyn, B. F. Alexander, James A. Ivy and a host of others whose names are as ointment poured forth, now have laid their armor by, are sitting under the green shades or have answered the summons of the Master to "come up higher." Some few of the old men are grandly tottering on "determined," as Bishop Pierce used to say, "that the summons shall find them in the field plowing." What a long list of names, unknown and strange as we read over the appointments! Now and then a name like Carter, sweet as muslin; McKee, pure as light; Franklin, tried like gold, and others of olden time, but most of them are new. Many of them we saw received on trial. We saw their pin-festlers sprout, as for instance, Kim, Christian Keener and Bro. John T. Sawyer, and, then fledging out, they have made the Ansonian Mount by no middle flight; but beyond the highest reaches of imagination they have flown to kiss God's heritage with the abundance of their labors.

We met an Irish brother out here in Texas who was eloquently chiding upon Bro. Sawyer's excellency as a pastor, "I tell ye, Brother A. he got a job for every man and woman in his church." And thus it shall go that these men, once young, shall soon be old and then no more; but Zion will, as Bro. Caradine says, "be still looking up," and after the sun has failed and the moon has faded Zion will then put on her beautiful garments and smilingly look up for her heavenly bridegroom. Our Savior departed and our fathers died in the faith that we, their sons, would perpetuate the gospel through our times and so "pass the word down the lines" of Zion's march that when the Son of Man cometh he should find faith on the earth. As yet we have never got his internal sea in Africa; but the roses of Sharon and the lilies of Gethsemane shall bloom all over Sahara and every other waste place of earth, for the Lord hath spoken it. My eyes never live to see it; but there is enough of love and joy, hope and peace blowing to our times to make us glad that we have lived and to make green our graves when we die. Oh! now death has reaped all around us this year, 1885. Our dear mother, Mrs. Sydney Harding, of Rocky Springs, Miss., died February 5. She was one of the earliest trophies of the cross in the valley of the Mississippi. In 1819 she was converted to God. William W. B. M. Drake, Elijah Steele, Thomas Clinton, Thomas Owens and John G. Jones were among the saintly company who ministered to her in holy things and as long as she had sight on earth nothing was so good to bestow upon the herds of the cross. Then October 8 it pleased God to fade from our dear little son, Clinton Montgomery Adams. What do not those two names recall to thousands in central Mississippi? George H. Clinton, whose powerful preaching, seconded by the humble pastor, D. A. Parker, and the earnest and wise of the devoted P. A. Johnson, led the writer to embrace Christ and enter the ministry. H. H. Montgomery, our dear old presiding elder in childhood days, who used to lead us out into the garden and into the grove, and on his knees with his arms about us, and with his eyes, eddled on God to direct us and bring us to him. One it be wondered that we called the dearest, best boy that we ever knew "Clinton Montgomery?" Oh, what a lovely little fellow! How dearly he loved Bro. Kizzlar, his first pastor, and blessed Richard Hall, his last, who led him to embrace his Savior and his boy. Oh, what blessed men these Methodist preachers are! In every land, in every clime, man's best friend, earth's noblest race and heaven's highest royalty. Thank God their shadow ever darkened mother's doors, for they led us to Christ, and the same dear shadow fell upon the boy's pathway and brought him to the fold. Thus in one short year, by the ties of life and death, by the joys of childhood and the sorrows of manhood, our union with the Methodist infidelity is complete and our blessings shall be on it forever. We have heard the eloquence of the most gifted men of earth, the richest of music and beheld the most glorious landscapes, but nothing was ever so sweet, eloquent or sublime as the simple reading of "Gathering Home" and "I heard a voice from heaven, saying, 'Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord,' read by Bro. Sam. Franks, a plain, unpretentious Methodist preacher of the North-west, Texas Conference. "Blessed our dear" did we say? Nay, they came bringing light from heaven and precious tokens in earthen vessels and the glory of their lives will shine upon our way until we tread the verge of Jordan. We are living firm in the faith that Mother Clinton and our dear old pastors and hundreds in whom we have preached in old Louisiana have all met beyond the river and are looking this way waiting for us to join the "Gathering Home" throng. Parker is there; Wilkinson is there; Borden is there; and Bro. Pipes writes us that he is looking such to be there, and so are we. Mr. Editor, we will all soon be there, and then this dull epitaph shall be changed to a story of triumph in Jesus' name. Let the sword of the spirit be whetted anew, let some other edge be quickened by a mysterious power and a holy fervor. Let us gather to the breaches where our brightest and best have met their last enemy and then gather the greenest laurels for our triumph.

No wonder the old poet said, "This hath set me all on fire." Ball and earthly must be the soil that can feel no kindlings of desire for a holier life when seated under the mercy seat and looking on a royal priesthood moving around among the golden candlesticks. For if the misadventure of death, written and graven in stone, was glorious. How shall not the illustration of the Spirit be rather glorious? Moved and inspired, humbled and chastened, by these things we buckle on the armor anew and go to war again. "The Lord is a man of war," and he has been trampling our hands to war and our fingers to fight for nearly a score of years. Let us take "Above all the shield of faith." Let every man ride his shield in the heat of days the enemy is hounding, and let each level his lance and "In the name of Almighty God and Continental" Methodist make a Macedonian rush upon the enemy, and when the dust clears away the world will see who are victors. Louisiana, all Texas is in the debt. Many of your sons are here and they are not happy in the fight. We will never meet you again, but in glory we will sing with you and tell of "Glorious Days."

Kind Words from An Aged Colored Woman.

This dear friend of two years past in Yazoo City, Miss. Years of hard labor they were, but full of joy. These tender friendships can never be forgotten. And among the most grateful memories of those young years is our labor among the negroes. Often their churches were visited and sermons preached to appreciative congregations. One of these old friends has become a subscriber of the ADVOCATE. In renewing her subscription, she writes as follows:

"I, with pleasure, enclose you post the order for $2.00, the amount due for the ADVOCATE. I am thankful you thought to send it to me. I have it read to me, and from its teachings I take courage to go on in the service of my God, and thank him for such good and smart men as writes for the ADVOCATE. As I work day after day, to make my honest living, words come to me which you preached to us while in Yazoo, which does my soul good, and helps me take courage and fight more earnestly the fight of faith. Please use this confession from a poor, ignorant, but, I trust, humble servant. I love God, and hope to meet you in heaven. Very respectfully,

SEAN MANSLEY.

NOTE: Those members of the Mississippi Conference who got no reduced rates on the Vicksburg and Meridian, and the New Orleans and North-eastern railroads can get part of the money paid for the trip refunded by sending the secretary's certificate. If any have lost their certificates, let them apply to Dr. Andrews for a duplicate.

W. C. BLACK.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1885.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
OLD FEAR.

BY SPAN WILLIAM KILBOURNE.

A perfect life was yours, old year,
Though now the end is drawing near.
The winter days are short and clear.
Your feeble steps are slow:
A perfect life was yours, old year,
You have no cause for woe.

You saw the tender buds appear,
The harvest ripe with long and clear,
Your day of joy was long and clear,
And perfect in its flow:
Though now you bend above a turf,
You have no cause for woe.

You saw the glory of the year,
Your fields were green and new and clear,
Your days of joy were long and clear,
And bright in its glow:
Though now the voiceless night is here,
You have no cause for woe.

CLINTON, LOUISIANA.

Sabbath Observance.

The anniversary of the Sunday League of New Orleans was held at the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, pastor, Sunday evening, the twentieth instant. This address was delivered by Rev. S. Halsey Werlein, pastor of the Felicity Street Methodist Church. A report of this eloquent address by a friend who was present on the occasion we have the pleasure of giving the readers of the ADVOCATE:

Rev. Mr. Werlein first dwelt upon the necessity of the Sabbath for the physical and mental development of man. He claimed that Sunday rest is absolutely essential to recuperate and re-invigorate the body; that it enables the weary toiler, whether his work be with the brain or with the hands, to do more efficient service in six days than he could accomplish otherwise in the seven; that this incessant strain of mental labor without the divinely appointed Sunday rest not only impairs health and strength and tends to insanity, but checks the moral career of many a man yst in the prime of life by that awful summons from the invisible world—a stroke of apoplexy or congestion of the brain. The seventh day is also greatly needed by all laborers for the improvement of the mind. The most complete rest for physical effort is found in mental culture, and the companionship of pure and elevating books must tend directly to the formation of character.

But, the reverend speaker continued, it becomes our duty to contemplate this question from a moral and religious standpoint. If temporal interests are enhanced by the observance of the Lord's day, how much more is man's religious nature blessed by its worship and softening and elevating influence? Thus our earthly life connected with the heavenly. Our thoughts are carried up to God. We contemplate the life immortal, the world of rest, the saint's delight. This day becomes a divinely ordained instructor in which we learn our relations to God and to our fellow-man. Thought is taken off the secular and earthly and placed upon the heavenly and eternal. Such an agency is greatly needed, for the tendency of our lives is toward the earthly. Our cares, pleasures, business, ambitions and rivalries all draw our eyes to the earth and encircle us with the atmosphere of sense. Now, the Sabbath is divinely appointed to interrupt these activities—to shut up the office, close the banks, hush the busy hum and stop the dance. It is the day which calls a man, as from the throne of God, to pause and contemplate the drift of life. It speaks with the voice of warning. It tells of duties neglected, of a righteousness exacted by God, and proclaims to all who will heed its sublime testimony a risen Lord and an invincible Savior. It is the day God has set apart for his heralds to declare his counsel, and for all his creatures to assemble for worship and heavenly instruction. A day of all the days the best. We realize, with Robertson, "the obligation, because of the eternal necessity of the day. The soul withers without it, and thrives in proportion to the fidelity of its observance."

The day, properly observed, is a recognition of God's sovereignty, and will be followed by his favor. God means well to every living man. He desires to bless all his creatures. He claims one day in seven of man's time less to vindicate his glorious majesty, whom angels and archangels adore, than to confer upon his creatures here happiness, prosperity and loftiest development. But Sabbath desecration has always been and is to-day attended by God's displeasure. It is an insult to him. It is robbing him of the day he claims for his own, and using it for purposes which defeat its aim. Woe be to the life or people who forget God's day!

The desecration of the Lord's day not only results in physical and mental injury, but leads to the destruction of the moral nature. It is a letting down the gap. It is a flood-gate through which the billows of sin rush until the whole moral nature is submerged. It is a turning away from God and abandoning the path of righteousness. It is an invitation to the forces of iniquity to enter the soul and infect it with diabolical suggestions. How many of the thousands of those who have abandoned themselves to iniquity can trace their downfall to the desecration of the Lord's day! This is generally the first step toward perdition. Upon the observance of the Sabbath day hinges the religious life. The great interpreter of jurisprudence, Blackstone, said, "A corruption of morals usually follows a profanation of the Sabbath;" and Justice Strong, of the United States Supreme Court, declares that "those who have observed the administration of criminal law have often heard the sad confession of a convicted criminal that his career downward commenced with Sabbath desecration." It was not until the people of France had abolished the Sabbath day that they could defy Reason and descend to the orgies of oriental Bacchanals. It was then that the Commune became possible, and that Patriotism, transformed into a demon, went about with torch and dagger to burn and murder. All we need in this country to destroy our republic is the Sabbath of continental Europe. Earl Russell has finely said: "There is no necessity, in the nature of things, that nations should die. History points to no people who, while strong in faith, in reverence, in truthfulness, in chastity, in the virtues of the temple and of the hearth, have sunk into atrophy and decline." This is a principle to which we, as American citizens, should give attention. Certainly no self-government can exist without freedom, and freedom can not exist without virtue and intelligence, and virtue and intelligence can not exist without religion, and religion can not exist without the proper observance of the Sabbath day.

This commonwealth is the child of Christianity, and under its fostering care have been erected, one by one, the institutions which go to make our national glory. "In God we trust" as a people. But, my friends, do we not find that our American Sunday is threatened? Some would say, Not only threatened, but in great peril. In some of our great cities of our Union the Sabbath of which De Tocqueville said—"France must have the American Sabbath, or she is ruined"—has already disappeared. We can not but thank God that this is not the case throughout the United States, and that the evil is not so widespread but that it may be arrested if earnest effort is used. Yet if Washington could revisit the land to which he devoted the energies and genius of his life, he would veil his eyes before the open and wanton desecration of the day concerning which he sent an army order to his soldiers (August, 1779), exclaiming them from fatigue duty on Sundays, and adding, "We can have little hope of the blessing of Heaven upon our arms if we insult God by our impiety and folly."

When it is said that the Sabbath was made for man, we do not understand that its hours are to be spent without reference to the reason of its bestowment. We can not understand that God would set apart this day to be so employed as to work injury to the moral, religious and social nature. But when it is used solely as a holiday, it then becomes an ally of evil and one of the factors of social, political and religious disintegration. A Sabbath of pleasure generally means a day of dissipation, and usually requires Monday to recuperate wasted vitality.

But what of our rest from labor on the Sabbath day? Alas! In this regard also we are fast becoming a Sabbathless nation. Little by little encroachments have been made upon the command, "Upon it thou shalt do no work," until to-day in these United States 800,000 men are forced to spend Sunday in menial labor! I must appeal for this army of laborers! With them it is not a question of choice. It is "work or leave" among the corporations; but at the homes of the working-man it is "work or starve." Eight hundred thousand brothers worked to death on railroads, handling United States mail bags, printing and editing newspapers, heating furnaces and driving street cars! And thus God's blessings are transformed into machines for the speedy wearing out of human life. These are among the agencies for ~~civilizing and enriching communities~~; but, employed otherwise than God's word doth allow, they sow seeds of irreverence, Sunday desecration and dissipation among men. Thus every train that files up him and down vale on the Sabbath day thunders from its hoarse and heated throat, "Business first, and God's Sabbath afterwards!" The Sunday mails are but grave-diggers making ready earthen houses for the thousands of exhausted brain workers. The average Sunday newspaper, with its gossip, vivid descriptions of crime, its sensational claptrap, its lurid columns of suicide, strife, elopement, absconding, is entailing the minds of thousands on the thought of the day end from that purer literature which would enrich the heart and ennoble the mind.

And yet, my friends, to talk of reform here is to subject one's self to the cry of "Old-fogysm!" "Puritanism!" There are many good Christian people who exclaim, "How could we exist without such conveniences?" I admit that these are conveniences; but they are conveniences at the expense of God's inconvenience. The Sabbath is God's gift to these 800,000 men. What right have we to rob them of it? God gave them Sunday for religious culture, so that they might frequent the place of prayer and become the beneficiaries of its heavenly helps. Men say: No; let them pray where they work. The machinery of this world can not stop. God gave them the Sabbath to spend in the bosom of their families; but they rarely know this luxury. That which should be guaranteed a man by the laws of his country and by general consent is withheld from hundreds of thousands in our land. A Sabbathless home is a godless home—a home without prayer, without faith and without hope. (Mr. Werlein here drew an exquisite picture of the ideal Christian Sunday at home.) Some may say homo does not mean this to these classes. We can not say what it might not mean if they had opportunity to cultivate it. In vain have these public servants petitioned the corporations for which they work for the rest of the Sabbath day. They have represented the wrong done them, the injury inflicted on their families, and the inefficiency of the labor rendered by minds and bodies overtaxed. And their prayers have not been heard! We talk about the value of human life and the preciousness of the immortal soul! Politicians circle read with horror the brutalities of the Roman amphitheatre, where the gladiators turned toward the emperor, and said, before they drove cold steel into each other's quivering hearts, "Morituri saluamus!" How little sympathy is felt for the hundreds of thousands who are being crushed and lacerated by the pitiless workings of machinery! These classes feel the injustice. They are not insensible of the wrong done them, their families, their bodies, their souls! Their wrongs are followed by inevitable consequences. They tend to make the religious among them irreligious, and the irreligious more worldly. These wrongs tend to socialism, and to animosity between labor and capital. They lead to strikes and riots, to conspiracies and incendiarism. The smoking ruins of Pittsburgh a few years since, Galveston's recent baptism of fire, the riot in Cincinnati, and communist speeches in Chicago and San Francisco have but one meaning—a meaning which every American citizen may well ponder. These things mean that the Goths, the Huns and the Vandals are at the door of our republic; that if the work of Sabbath desecration goes on, with the attending evils, our continent may yet be shaken from centre to circumference, and baptized with the blood of an intestine war! God's pleasure rests upon no people who forget his Sabbath. Such a people can not be happy and contented. We may say, "Peace, peace;" but there is no peace.

The only hope for the land is Christianity. The religion of Jesus Christ must harmonize these differences, or the result will be to the pistol, dagger and torch. The Christian population of this country, numbering 10,000,000 evangelized church members and 25,000,000 church adherents, must inaugurate the work of reform. They should frown down every attempt to dishonor God's day; they should protect those who refuse to work on the Sabbath, and give the great corporations of the land to understand that, if they sacrifice men, the country will sacrifice the men killers. The work- ingmen of the country should combine to strike for Sunday; and disagree be to any man who would not stand with them!

But when to the violation of the Sabbath you add the auxiliaries of open saloons, gambling houses, theatres, opera, and all the other devices for the corrupting of men, you give the enemy of the soul a weapon of incalculable efficiency to destroy. Then Sunday—the day that should be the sweetest and brightest of the week—becomes the blackest and most injurious. God's blessing becomes a curse! It then becomes an invitation to thousands and millions who throw off the yoke of the week's labor to spend the day in drunkenness and debauchery. God's blessed day of rest and worship becomes man's day of profligacy! The Sabbath becomes the criminal's day of jubilee, the carnival of crime—Satan's day for harvesting souls for hell!

Mr. Werlein here described in burning words the Sunday desecration common in New Orleans, alluding to the Sunday opening of the Exposition last year, and lamenting that the present management has thus far failed to heed the righteous protest of our Christian civilization. But what are our protests? He continued. How far do they reach? Is there anyone to protect us? Are we not helpless? Are we not in the hands of those whose gain is Sabbath desecration? Do not the liquor men, the gamblers and those who pander to the worst passions of human depravity hold the reins of the city and State government with respect to this question? To-night, while I stand here, St. Charles street is ablaze with the brilliant lights which emerge from the thresholds of hell. By impure and suggestive scenery, the hearts of thousands are being corrupted, their imaginations are being deluded and their souls are being sealed for perdition. Thousands of our young men—some of the most promising our city has known—have been led by these enticements into irremediable ruin and expedited into premature graves. I would stand over these graves and plead with fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters. I would plead with the many homes, the burden of whose sorrow has been compounded by these popular iniquities.

I would ask the citizenship of New Orleans, in the name of God, to say whether these things must be allowed to continue year after year. And I would appeal to the City Council of this city and to the Legislature of the State no longer, through their special committees, to give their official sanction to Sabbath desecration by conveying these committees and transacting official business on the Sabbath. And yet in many instances this appeal is met with indifference and apathy. A low standard obtains in some influential portions of the community with reference to Sunday observance. But this is a broad question, and of great moment alike to Jew and Gentile. It has to do with the west or woe of our city, with the salvation or destruction of thousands of souls for whom the Lord of Glory died. No property holder, no citizen can afford to consider it lightly. I would commend to the Roman Catholic portion of the community a resolution recently passed by the Catholic Young Men's Association, of Chicago:

Resolved, That we call on every town and city government and upon all Christian people to use every lawful means for the better observance of the Sabbath day, which is the greatest social bulwark of Christianity.

And I would commend to our Jewish fellow-citizens the statement recently made by Rabbi Gotthell, of New York City: "We are willing to suffer reasonable restrictions upon our liberties for the sake of our Christian neighbors." Men should live in a community for more than gain. Material and temporal prosperity should not be the supreme aim of their existence. Every citizen should feel he owes it as a debt to the city to contribute to its moral purification.

And, lastly, let me say that nothing can be accomplished toward expelling the flagrant iniquities of our city until the moral and religious people of New Orleans combine for action. Thought is good; persuasion, better; but action is best. The people of this city are sometimes kindly criticized by their neighbors as easy-going, lazy, generous, brave, extravagant, time-wasting; but they have made their record by being equal to great emergencies. Sons of Louisiana, Sabbath desecration and the open saloon are your greatest enemies! These are the vultures that feed upon your souls. Strike! strike! and while you are striking, with one full, whole-hearted blow annihilate that other disgrace, The Louisiana Lottery, and wipe from your Constitution the memorial which must ever perpetuate the ignominy of a Legislature which could charter such a monstrosity and settle so black a stain upon the escutcheon of the State of Louisiana.

What New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Atlanta have done we can do. Let us rise up in the strength of our manhood and womanhood and, under the banners of Christianity, lay siege to the ramparts of Satan in our Crescent City.

Hereditary Genius.

BY HON. W. H. GOODALE.

I remember a story of an impulsive fellow who, having heard for the first time a thrilling narrative of the crucifixion of our Savior and all the attendant horrors of this pivotal event in the world's history, was so wrought upon by the eloquence of the speaker and the still greater eloquence of the facts themselves that he rushed from the church in a "pitch of frenzy" and pouncing upon the first Jew whom he chanced to meet he pounded him nearly to death. And when his astonished victim, as the assailant paused to take breath, ventured to inquire the cause of this sudden attack, he said, renewing the blows between the words, "It was you Jews that crucified Jesus of Nazareth."

"Mine Gott!" said the wondering Israelite; "dot was two thousand years ago."

"It don't make a bit of difference," said his interviewer; "I have just heard of it anyway."

My readers may see the relevance of this story as I proceed to review a book written, certainly as many as ten, perhaps fifteen years ago; and to such as feel disposed to be critical on this account, I can only say, "I have just heard of it anyway." Not literally, for I know that there was such a book, but to all intents and purposes, for I did not know what was in it.

I refer to a book entitled, "Hereditary Genius," by Dr. Francis Galton, of England. The revised American edition before me bears the imprint of the Appleton and the date 1881. It is a remarkable book for many reasons, and perhaps the most remarkable circumstance connected with it is that, while confessedly a book of real importance and value to the world, apparently autailing its significant propositions with facts most laboriously gathered and most ingeniously woven into argument, it nevertheless stands before the world to-day very much as it did during the first year of its existence, its propositions, certainly, not refuted, and, as certainly, not very much strengthened by further extension of the author's ingenious and painstaking labor.

True, the work of the French author Rihort has since appeared, and Dr. Galton has himself again written upon a kindred subject, but the work of the former is general in its scope, covering the whole field of heredity and the later writings of the accomplished English scholar are rather inquiries into the constitution of the human faculties and speculations upon the consequences of the facts noted in his earlier work than an extension of the facts themselves. The original work occupies practically the same field in the world of thought to-day as when it was first written. Can it be that his position was made so impregnable that no one has ventured to assail it; or are his announcements and conclusions, so in harmony with our pre-conceptions that no one is surprised? Perhaps, in a general way, we are all agreed that intellectual parents are more likely to have bright children than dull parents are; but just to what extent this probability is a law of our being and whether or not peculiar phases of genius are transmitted and under what conditions and to how many generations, as determined, not by speculations merely but by pages of statistics as exact and unmethodical as logarithmic tables, surely this was all new and, if not surprising, was, at all events, of importance to the world of thinkers. And this is the field covered by the work before us. It was not a book to be ignored, and it was not ignored. Men praised the book and praised the author, called him a "genius," and the book "a remarkable contribution to positive philosophy;" but still the fact remains that the conclusions of the author were supported by very meagre statistics and the confessedly imperfect observations presented by him could not have been regarded as conclusive, but as tentative and suggestive merely intended to stimulate to further work of the same sort rather than as a demonstration that might defy future assault. The wonder is that after the lapse of so many years the work is no further advanced.

A fisherman casting his lines in the channel of our muddy Mississippi might fish forever and catch only "gar" and "buffalo" and "cat fish" because, in truth, these are the only fish of strength of fin sufficient to stem the swift current of this mighty stream, and yet how erroneous, though how natural, would be the conclusion that there were no other fish in the river but these.

So Dr. Galton, in the brief time devoted to his work, could only dip his line here and there in the swift current of life's on-rushing stream, but could not claim in any sense with truth to have sounded the pools and the eddies, the inlets, bays and "false rivers" that lie all along the shore. And hence it is that his conclusions, though not shocking to our preconceptions, and hence, admissible as deductions, are yet, when offered as the result of the first attempt to apply the inductive method to this class of facts to be of necessity accepted with this reservation, that the range of the facts observed is in reality very limited. But accepted merely as a specimen flock of an edifice yet to be reared the work is significant and suggestive. A new field lay open to the investigator. The work seemed simple enough. The question, "Are great people any more likely to have great children than ordinary people?" would be simple enough were mere physical greatness under consideration. The task then would be to hunt out all the Goliaths of the world and measure their posterity, or, as some writer claims to have done, follow the untraced trail of the Potsdam giants, Frederick's body guard and note the record of this physical law of heredity in a hasty offspring of unusual size all along the line of march. But who is to determine what constitutes greatness of mind? With what scales will you weigh utility of purpose, purity of motive, bonniness of aim, self sacrifice for others and the long list of virtues that enter into the make-up of the morally and intellectually great? How far may we accept reputation as the test of real greatness? Does the world bestow its honors with an even hand? Perhaps none will say so but those whom the world has honored. How many men of moderate ability have been born to fortune or born to fame on the shoulders of accident with just ability enough perhaps to meet the crisis of life without going to protest, but with not a tithe of the mental power of the man next in the file upon whom fame draws no drafts at all? Who knows but what the children of great men, whenever of moderate ability, disguise reputation from their parents as they inherit their landed estates rather than as the descendants of Adam and Eve inherited the Bourbon name? It is no easy matter the learned doctor found to determine who were really great.

Again, there is no natural boundary between eccentricity and genius. If we are to accept reputation as the test of greatness, it becomes necessary to analyze the quality of the reputation and note not merely the persistence of the reputation in subsequent generations but also the persistence of its peculiar quality. The writer tells us of one who had, and transmitted to posterity, the habit of so beating his nose with his arm when fast asleep as to keep his proboscis constantly sore from the abrasion and to render it necessary for his wife not only to keep the baritone off his sleeve but actually to tie up his arm. There are tricks of the intellect no less marked than this physical vagary, some of which are often confounded with evidences of genius, and these our conscientious investigator found it difficult to avoid.

Again, it was necessary to determine the degree of eminence. Should he regard as great the most eminent man in one hundred, or in one thousand, or in one million? One of the most interesting chapters in the work is given to the discussion of this single question. Without giving the steps we may state his conclusion that one person in four thousand should be considered "eminent" (four thousand being more than the number of stars visible to unaided sight at any one time), and as "illustrious" as "one in a million or sometimes in many millions." They are men whom the whole intelligent part of a nation mourns when they die, who have, or deserve to have, a public funeral; and who rank in future ages as historical characters."

Having thus determined a basis for the measurement so to speak and comparison of reputations the writer proceeds to consider another factor in the case no less important, to-wit: the question of "natural gifts." He says he has no tolerance whatever for the nursery theory that all children are born equal in intellectual possibilities and applying the principles known as "deviation from an average" to various classes of cases with great industry and fairness of reasoning he arrives at the somewhat startling conclusion "that eminently gifted men are raised as much above mediocrity as idiots are depressed below it," and that the highest grade, intellectually, of animals is far superior to the lowest grade of human kind.

New comes the comparison of the two classifications (for even "natural capacity" must be measured by "reputation" for lack of a better standard), and an open avowal of his belief in the permanence of natural traits under difficulties, as follows: "I believe and shall do my best to show that, if the eminent men of any period had been changelings when babies, a very fair proportion of them who survived and retained their health up to fifty years of age, would, notwithstanding their altered circumstances, have equally risen to eminence." To this point the argument now tends through these three lines:

1. "Men who are gifted with high abilities easily rise through all the obstacles caused by inferiority of social rank."

2. "Countries where there are fewer hindrances than in England, e. g., the United States, to a poor man rising in life produce a much larger proportion of persons of culture, but not of what I call eminent men."

3. "Men who are largely aided by social advantages are unable to achieve eminence unless they are endowed with high natural gifts."

All this is but clearing the ground for the real work to be done. A new, but exceedingly simple, nomenclature is devised for the understanding of the tables, and now comes the ransacking of cyclopedias and histories and works of biography and obituaries and the writings of all ages and countries for data of great men whose posterity are known. These are the classes considered: The Judges of England between 1680 and 1865; modern English statesmen; English peers; commanders; literary men; men of science; poets; musicians; painters; divines; senior classics of Cambridge; orators and wrestlers of the north country. Each of the foregoing divisions is considered separately and then comes the "comparison of results." The tables certainly show that the eminent sons of eminent persons are almost invariably more numerous than the eminent brothers, and these, in turn, a trifle more numerous than eminent fathers, etc., q. c. d. But what of the mothers? Here at last is a place where woman need voice no cry for recognition. Ignore her if we will as a political and as a social factor and class her with the "idiots and incapables" before the law here, at last, at the shrine of pure science, her very presence is a voice, and a voice that must be heard. The author could not be blamed surely that the paucity of records rendered it a work of unusual difficulty approaching even to the impossible to tabulate the influences of mothers upon their offspring. For this he expresses regret (p. 63); but does not seem to feel that the force of his argument is considerably weakened thereby. Whether necessarily or not the fact is that he has left out of his problem an entire half of its essential factors and, by a principle elementary in the science he seeks to elucidate, the most important half. Not only does he give us no tables of illustrious women, but he even omits the female relatives of illustrious men in his comparison of their descendants and antecedents. Verily, this is most too wide a "deviation from the average," doctor, for your "inductive method." Have the mothers nothing to do, we pray, with this question of hereditary genius?

He sees the rent in the garment and tries to cover it with this too conspicuous "patch." He concludes that for the most part eminent men are likely to marry women above mediocrity and hence the general average is not deviated from very far. This complete ignoring of the "inductive method" of which this whole argument is presented as an example is open to the further objection that it entirely omits to consider in the time-honored way all the individual peculiarities or personalities of one-half of the human family. Besides, the doctor seems to regard women as a hindrance rather than as a help to a man of genius, as witness the following quotation (p. 320):

"A very gifted man will almost always rise, as I believe, to eminence; but if he is handicapped with the weight of a wife and children in the race of life, he can not be expected to keep as much in the front as if he were single. He can not pursue his favorite subject of study with the same absorbing passion as if he had no other pressing calls on his attention, no domestic sorrows, anxieties and petty cares, no yearly child, no periodical influenza epidemics, no constant professional toll for the maintenance of a large family." For this irreverence, should it ever fall to my lot to revise the "Purgatorium," I would add to the roll of names of Slayphus and the receding waters of

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. ADAMS, D. D., REV. J. T. SAWYER, REV. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1885.

We bid adieu to the old year with mingled joy and sorrow. Joy at the abundant blessings vouchsafed by the good hand of God and the measure of service we have been able to render him, and sorrow that the months have not been more wisely spent, and that results have been so meagre.

Many blessings have brightened the year 1885, and sweet memories will linger about it through all the days of the year's pilgrimage. The new year is hailed with hope and prayer. May the failures and mistakes of the past be guides and guards for the future. In the name of God we set up our banner and enter upon the conflicts and duties of 1886.

Rev. Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone, ex-Premier of England, celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday on Tuesday of this week. He received four hundred congratulatory letters that morning, and attended special services at the village church. Though so advanced in age, he shows no abatement of his great intellectual powers and prosecutes his literary studies with the zest of younger years. It is quite possible that he will soon return to power and make another important chapter in the history of English politics.

Before two judges the prohibition election contest in Atlanta has been tried, and both sustained its legality. Counsel for the whiskey men were ready with another technical trick, however, to delay its enforcement. They had as well surrender. The question has been passed upon by the great jurists of the land and invariably sustained. The fiat of the people has gone forth, and the whiskey traffic must depart. We shall hail the day with an exceeding great joy.

Miss Maggie R. Beale, known to the readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE by her writings over the signature of "Invalid," was married at her mother's residence in Madison county, Miss., on the twenty-third instant, to the Rev. Curtiss D. Cecil, of the Mississippi Conference. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. L. C. Hennrich. We wish our fair correspondent many years of happiness, and bid her welcome into the ranks of the literati.

The Statesville Christian Advocate is a new candidate for public favor. It is to be published at Statesville, N. C., by Mr. James Wilson. The Holston Methodist refers to the enterprise, and takes occasion to moralize facetiously on the general subject of multiplying newspapers under the patronage of the church:

"This is a free country, and when a man wants to start a paper he has a right to start it. The excessive multiplication of Methodist papers is not wise. If there are too many potatoes in a hill, they will not be well developed. A few good papers would be better than many inferior ones. This argument might have prevented the birth of the Holston Methodist. Be it so. But we have had experience, and in this school have learned something. With us the Rubicon has been crossed. We have cut down the bridges behind us. But it is proper and right that we should send warning to our five brethren not to come to this place of torment."

One of the practical methods of work adopted by the Wesleyan Methodist missionary secretaries is the publication of "missionary notices." In that way all the current, thrilling facts from their several foreign fields are kept before the people. They are condensed from the letters received at the mission room and arranged in attractive forms. Just that is needed in our Southern Methodism. The letters from missionaries are read by very few. And, then, it must be admitted that all good missionaries are not good letter writers. Some of them write elaborately about the geography, topography, history and government of the countries, and give scant space to items and incidents in daily missionary experience. What the church needs is tersely stated facts, fresh from every field where we have a laborer. They will be a constant support to faith and an ever fresh inspiration to liberal giving.

Dawdling with Justice.

The notorious Ford and Murphy murder case is yet before the people, and occasions even more excitement than when the crime was first committed or was up before the courts. Its history is an anomaly in jurisprudence. Twice the case was investigated before a jury, resulting in the conviction of five men—three of whom were sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary, and two to be hung. The press and people generally approved the verdict. Our city papers were unanimous in applauding Judge and jury, and quite canonized the great ability and fearless courage of District Attorney Adams. We were congratulated on a revival of justice—a returning sense of right among law administrators—and upon the fact, that the issue of the trial would again put a premium upon human life. The case went before the Supreme Court—that body of able, discriminating jurists who stand aloof from the passions and excitements of a crowd. They are supposed to investigate and decide questions in the cold, white light, without sentiment, and according to the law and evidence. From the well-known high character of those distinguished gentlemen, we can not suppose it possible that they should reflect the spirit of the mob and enter a conspiracy to destroy human life. But, after this, there was further investigation. The Board of Pardons, composed of the Lt.-Governor, Attorney General, and the Judges who sat on the trial, twice passed the case in review and refused to make any recommendation to the Governor.

But a sudden change in public expression, if not public sentiment, has been wrought. With commendable industry the friends of the condemned men have called to their aid outside sympathy. Whatever value these opinions may have upon the merits of the case, they have arrested public attention. It is hardly reasonable, however, that persons who only have a newspaper or hearsay knowledge of an adjudicated question are competent to pass judgment upon the trial. The court has been arraigned as a conspiracy, the jury as under the menace of the mob, and the verdict as the expression of a mad, popular clamor. And all this transpires months after the conclusion of the trial—indeed, after the decisions of the Supreme Court and the Board of Pardons. A federal judge, the governor and attorney general of another State, and citizens here and there have published opinions upon the trial and requested the governor to exercise executive clemency.

Now, with this recital of facts, we desire to make some practical observations: And, first, we have no advice for the Governor or Board of Pardons. Though a careful reader of the daily papers, and possessed of the fragmentary knowledge of the case as given to the public, we are necessarily incompetent to pass judgment. Of course, we would rejoice if the ends of justice and the interests of society could be subserved and these lives be spared. It is a fearful thing thus to die. No one can contemplate it without a shudder. But it is alike, and more, shocking for a human being to be struck down by the red hand of murder. We think it proper, therefore, for the Executive and the Board of Pardons to finally decide this matter without the influence of outside fickle sentiment.

2. The tone of some newspapers and the expressions of certain persons will have the effect of undermining the criminal jurisprudence of the land and bringing into contempt the forms of law. If their utterances are to pass current and prove to be dominant in the public mind, the decisions of judges and juries will be worth no more than the indiscriminate talk of the street corner. The calm judicial determinations of the courts—the guardians of our sacred rights and liberties—will be derided of their authority and become a hissing and a byword. Alas! for the country when courts of justice for the punishment of offenders shall be brought into ridicule by popular clamor. There have been periods in history when courts became star chambers and judges, brutal tyrants. But surely our lot has not fallen upon such a time. The lament of our day is that, with the present jury system, it is almost impossible to bring criminals to punishment. And that, in consequence, human life is cheap and crime stalks abroad with brazen front. On this subject some of our papers spoke wisely and earnestly several months ago. But, strange to say, they are now the exponents of a different doctrine and the unwelcome advocates of a dangerous sentiment. Goethe, the great German philosopher, once said, "There are many echoes in the world, but very few voices." That statement finds illustration in many of our secular papers. They echo what they suppose to be the popular sentiment of a community, without venturing an original, well-sustained conviction.

3. The interference of the judges of another court and the officials of another State is a strange departure from traditional propriety. When one judicial officer can sit apart and read the newspapers, and then pronounce an opinion upon the rulings, processes and determinations of another tribunal, and give that to the public, we have introduced interminable confusion into our administration of law. He presumes to decide a case without having tried it in legal form, and to travel outside his jurisdiction to dissent from the opinions of the lower and superior courts. What impropriety, even to imperpetuate! Suppose these judges in turn criticize in the public prints the decisions of Judge Parlee in a great civil case, what would be his reflections on such procedure! And what of its effect upon the public mind and the rights of property?

The attitude of this question may well excite alarm. Could it stop with the present case, no great harm might result. But that is impossible. This precedent will be established that the street-corner community are as competent to administer justice as men selected for the bench because of their legal learning and judicial bearing. We have no opinion on the merits of the Ford and Murphy application for pardon, and will not join in whooping up a clamor for or against. Our theory is that able, conscientious judges should be elected or appointed, intelligent, competent jurists selected; that every offender should have a fair, impartial trial, and that the innocent should be acquitted and the guilty punished. In administering justice our law officers should be sustained by a healthy public sentiment, and the law made at once a protection to the unoffending and a terror to evildoers.

Alabama Conference.

The fifty-third session of the Alabama Conference met at Union Springs, December 16, with Bishop Wilson in the chair. R. B. Crawford was elected secretary. This session was in all respects pleasant and profitable. The vote on the change of name stood: Yeas, 0; noes, 133. The Board of Missions made a good report, as follows: Raised for foreign missions, $6,869 92; for domestic missions, $3,490 15—a total of $10,360 07. Rev. W. C. McCoy, agent of the Southern University, reported that he had raised $30,000 in cash and subscriptions for that institution since his appointment. There are 147 students at the university—seventeen of whom are preparing for the ministry. Dr. Kelley and Bro. Palmer, of Nashville; Dr. Hinton, editor of the Quarterly Review, and Rev. W. C. Dunlap, of Palmetto Institute, were present representing their several connections. The statistical summaries are as follows: White members, 34,957; colored, 21; adults baptized, 1,625; infants, 995; money expended, $4,126; number of Sunday-schools, 444—officers and teachers, 2,553; Sunday-school scholars, 19,514; Bishop's fund, $1,133 70; Conference claimants, $4,899 65; education, $599 45; Bible cause, $665 80; church extension, $1,458 15; foreign missions, $6,359 60; domestic missions, $3,420; Woman's Missionary Society, $1,315 95.

APPOINTMENTS.

MOBILE DISTRICT.—A. J. Lamar, P. Z. Franklin Street, R. B. Crawford, St. Francis Street, M. S. Andrews, St. Paul's, J. H. Jones; Whitestart, W. P. Hurt; Ellington and Grand Bay mission, W. F. Arnold; Citronelle, J. B. K. Spahn; Pleasant Valley and Creola mission, G. W. Jones; Washington circuit and Vernon mission, A. J. Coleman; Janey, G. F. Fisher; Bladen and St. Stephens, C. S. Perry; Sugsville, T. Y. Abernathy; Grove Hill, J. W. McCann; Bay Minette, W. T. Rencher.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT.—J. Bancroft, P. E. Greensboro station, W. P. Dickinson; Greensboro mission, C. A. Rusk; Havana circuit, P. M. Guthrie; Newbern circuit, W. Bancroft; Forkland mission, N. W. Beverly; Demopolis and Jefferson circuit, C. R. Lamar; Greene circuit, T. D. Albright; Livingston and Rutaw circuit, J. M. Roland; Gainesville circuit, W. H. Wild; Belmont circuit, W. I. Powers; Cuba circuit, J. M. Patton; Gaston circuit, W. P. H. Connerly; Butler and Mt. Sterling circuit, E. M. Glenn; Choctaw circuit and mission, G. W. Ferrer; Southern University—A. S. Andrews, president; F. M. Peterson, J. A. Moore, professors; W. F. Andrews, T. R. McCarty, tutors. J. S. Moore, Emory College; J. W. Rush, editor Alabama Christian Advocate.

SELMA DISTRICT.—J. O. Keener, P. E. Selma, T. F. Mangum; East Selma and mission, A. H. Mitchell; Summerfield, H. D. Hill; Cahaba River mission, A. A. Easley; Marion, W. A. Rice; Marion circuit, A. M. Jones; Uniontown, J. B. Anderson; Dayton and Spring Hill circuit, J. G. Johnston; Orrville circuit, B. D. Gayle; Rembert Hills circuit, G. F. Elder; Clifton circuit, J. W. Shores; Lower Peach Tree circuit, J. F. Bilbro; Choctaw Corner circuit, W. H. Morris.

PRATTVILLE DISTRICT.—O. R. Blue, P. E. Prattville station, H. D. Moore; Deatsville circuit, to be supplied; Autaugaville circuit, C. D. Jordan; Clanton and Verbena station, S. H. Nettles; Wetumpka station, J. P. Hamilton; Randolph circuit, J. B. Nelson; Lowndesboro and Union circuit, J. P. Sanders; Pleasant Hill circuit, R. F. Dennis; Monterey circuit, A. H. Moore; Sepulga circuit, J. W. Hanner; Pine Apple circuit, A. Hood; Jewett mission, to be supplied; Plantersville circuit, T. F. Hardin.

MONTGOMERY DISTRICT.—J. M. Mason, P. E. Montgomery, J. O. Andrew; Tuskegee, Felix R. Hill; Tuskegee circuit, J. W. Glenn—L. P. Dowdell, superintendent; State and Hurstboro circuit, D. C. Crook; Trinity and Girard circuit, J. B. Conins; Salem circuit, George Fontaine; Opelika, J. S. Rencher—J. H. Lockhart, superintendent; Auburn, W. G. Isaacs; Loachapoka circuit, J. R. Peavy; Tallapoosa mission, J. M. Hurt; Elmore circuit, to be supplied; Tallapoosa, J. P. Roberts; Pleasant Grove circuit, W. K. Nott; Harmony, J. W. Strider; superintendent of American Bible Society for Alabama and West Florida, R. S. Holcombe.

EUFAULA DISTRICT.—J. L. Ughart, P. E. Eufaula station, E. L. Loveless; Glennville circuit, C. R. Williamson; Villula circuit, J. W. Solomon; Benah circuit, J. A. Peterson; Eunon and Midway circuit, B. C. Glenn—W. A. McCarty, superintendent; Perote circuit, J. L. Skilper; Clayton station, C. B. Pilley; Louisville circuit, J. M. Danely; Ozark circuit, A. Dowling; Echo circuit, A. J. Sellers; Columbus mission, T. H. Windham; Eufaula circuit, D. C. Stanley; Lawrenceville mission, L. P. Latham; Abbeville and Clopton circuit, O. C. McGhee.

MARIANA DISTRICT.—J. L. Mathison, P. E. Mariana, N. P. Sanford; Greenwood circuit, J. K. Powell; Calhoun mission, T. L. Adams; Headland, J. O. Noble; Chipola, J. A. Scott; Geneva circuit, J. W. Boyd; Eba circuit, J. F. DeBardleben; Freeport mission, C. M. Martin; Campbellton circuit, G. W. Mathison; Holmes Valley circuit, W. D. Owens; Pond Town circuit, J. D. Kersh; Cottonwood circuit, to be supplied.

UNION SPRINGS DISTRICT.—J. S. Frazer, P. E. Union Springs, G. M. Roper; Mt. Hilliard circuit, O. S. Perry; Troy, L. H. S. Chappelle; Brundidge circuit, E. M. Turner; Briar Hill circuit, J. W. Menefee; Pine Level circuit, J. S. Williams; Mt. Meigs circuit, R. H. Lewis; Rocky Mt. circuit, N. Gillis; Fort Deposit circuit, H. M. Gillis; Greenville, E. W. Solomon—W. H. Morris, superintendent; Greenville circuit, W. A. McCann; Rutledge circuit, D. J. Wright; Oak Streak circuit, R. Smiley; Andalusia mission, W. J. Price.

PENSACOLA DISTRICT.—W. M. Motley, P. E. Pensacola, A. J. Briggs; Pensacola circuit, G. M. Sellers; Milton, W. M. Cox; Powell circuit, B. L. Selman; Brewton circuit, A. C. Hundley; Douglasville circuit, J. B. Hudgins; Stockton circuit, A. B. Brown; Evergreen circuit, W. S. Wade; Monroeville circuit, E. E. Cowan; Repton mission, E. W. Barnes; Georgiana circuit, E. C. Calhoun; Gravelly mission, J. R. Crawford; Coates circuit, E. F. Wardlaw; Red's Landing circuit, H. T. Johnston; Black's Bend circuit, J. M. Scott; Camden and Oaklawn circuit, I. F. Betts.

TRANSFERRED.—R. P. Barton, to West Texas; C. L. Chilton, to St. Louis, and stationed at First Church.

"Nagging" the Pastors.

In some places when any church work is to be done, such as building or repairing, requiring an outlay of money, one of the first sources of revenue thought of by some people is "docking" or "nagging" the pastor's salary. "If we pay him a hundred dollars less, we will have a hundred dollars more for this work. We've got him in a corner where he can't help himself, and we will squeeze this much out of him for our needs." I have known this to be done in a number of instances, and yet I never knew a pastor to receive any credit for the amount wrung from him for purposes of this kind. The very persons who favored levying this forced contribution on the pastor claim all the praise of this money wrung from him.

Things of this kind will come up for adjustment in the day of final accounts. Some preachers have been "nagged" nearly to death to build churches and parsonages for the charges they have served. A common excuse for not paying the preacher in full is, "We have repaired the church this year; hence this falling off with our pastor." This statement, if true, is much like "robbing Peter to pay Paul," as the saying goes. It is only another way of doing the same thing—"nagging" the pastor in the end rather than in the beginning of the year. What right have you, has any church or charge, to force the pastor to pay more than any single member toward building or repairing churches? Why not "dock" the freedman who tows your cotton and plows your corn? Why not "nag" the clerks and bookkeepers in your stores? It is just as fair and honest in the one case as in the other. Neither is right—rest assured of that. God will hold you accountable for withholding the hire of the laborer, his he in the pulpit or cotton patch. God has put a premium on laborers, and he has promised them special protection. Terrible judgments are pronounced against those who withhold the hire of laborers.

As a rule, pastors are not lacking in liberality. Most of them are good examples in this regard to their people. Pay your pastor in full, and let him give according to his own sense of right; but for conscience's sake do not "nag" it out of him, whether he will or not. Do not lay a plan to make your pastor pay more than he ought to pay toward building or repairing the church in which you and your children are to worship God. Do not cut off his pay after the work is done. If you must "dock" him, and if you will "dock" him anyhow, why, then, let it go on record that the pastor paid so much toward building this church and repairing that one. If the reports be true as to the pastor falling behind, some churches and charges could be adopting this course balance accounts every year. When a church or charge falls behind would it not be well enough to charge up the amount to domestic missions, and give the pastor credit for having paid it? This would keep the books balanced, and would show how much pastors are paying every year for the support of the gospel in this country. In this way most of them pay from fifty to two hundred and fifty dollars every year. It is "nagged" out of them. The preachers in some charges pay half as much as all the members. In some charges the deficit would not amount to fifty cents to the member, and yet it runs up to several hundred dollars to the pastors. What charge or church will go to "nagging" the pastor this year?

OLDEROY.

The Wise Men Offering Gifts.

Who were these wise men coming from the east to worship the Infant Savior? The attempt to answer this question has provoked an extensive literature and an immense amount of speculation. It is assumed that they were Persian Magians—a religious order in the east. These Magians were called wise men because in that day religion and science were not divorced, as they are in our times. The religious teachers held a monopoly of the sciences—in fact, were the only instructors of the nation. We may learn from this that religion has always been the friend and promoter of science. Skeptics would do well to remember that in all ages the founders of educational institutions have been almost without exception eminently religious men.

These Magians were astrologers. Hence their faith in the guidance of the star which they said they had seen in the east. Astrology in that day took the place of the present science of astronomy. Those versed in it professed to be able to foretell important events by the position of the heavenly bodies. It will, perhaps, always remain a mystery what sort of a star it was that guided these wise men to the place of the Savior's birth, and how it was that they became so impressed with the momentousness of the fact which had seemingly so little impressed the Jewish world.

Right here we may have some insight into one of the profoundest lessons of Providence. It is well known how dead generally the religious sense of the Jewish world was at that time. The Savior asked: "Whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the market-places, which call unto their fellows, and say, We piped unto you, and ye did not dance; we weiled, and ye did not mourn." But the Savior's birth must be announced, and if the Jews were not competent for the occasion, God had those even in the far east who were.

But how were those Magians prepared for this event? It must be remembered that the secret of the Jewish religion had not been kept wholly from the outside world. The Jews had been many years in captivity. Daniel among the Chaldees had attained the highest post of honor for his religious knowledge. We know not how deeply he may have impressed the Jewish faith in regard to a coming Messiah upon the religious system of these people. When Cyrus, the Persian king, captured Babylon he was thrown in direct contact with the captive Jews, and it was doubtless the superior wisdom and religious character of these captives that caused him to issue the decree, sending them back to their own land to rebuild their city and temple. Thus in the course of history the wise men of the east had intermingled with Jewish prophets and teachers, and out of this circumstance may have been born the expectation in the east of this coming Jewish King whose star these wise men had seen.

But, whatever the explanation, this visit of the wise men has its practical lessons:

1. It is prophetic of the interest of the whole world in the Savior. It is glad tidings of great joy which should be to all people. He was born King of the Jews, but not of the Jews only. The progress of the gospel among all nations is the gradual fulfillment of this prophetic visit of the wise men.

2. They presented to him gifts—gold, frankincense and myrrh. This was in accordance with Eastern custom. No one dared to come into the presence of a superior without a present and the most servile prostration of himself. This, then, was the announcement of the intrinsic dignity of the Infant Savior. Earthly princes did not need presents, only as the symbol of the servility of those who did them obedience. But not so with this Prince. He was poor, and needed the offerings. And right here he began to reverse the usual order. Earthly nobles, through their riches, made many poor; but he, through his poverty, made many rich. He taught the great lesson that service to the needy is the highest service; that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and that the true mark of greatness is not in being served, but in serving.

This eastern spirit of servile offerings is not uncommon to-day. It will be seen during these holidays. Many will be seeking honor one of another by all sorts of social devices. They will be looking up to those above them, asking how they may propitiate their favor and recognition. Let us repudiate that heathen custom and go to the cradle of poverty and helplessness, for there we will find the true King, in honoring whom we will find the highest honor and the most blessed reward.

J. W. M.

Results of the Episcopal Mission.

Our readers have been advised of the Episcopal protracted meeting in progress in New York City. Several distinguished "missioners" from England—chief of whom is Rev. W. Hay Aitken—have conducted the meetings, assisted by the Bishops and other clergy. The services have been largely attended, and Mr. Aitken's preaching, especially, has been evangelical and earnest. We rejoice that such a movement has been inaugurated among our friends of that communion, and that new spiritual life will be awakened in all their borders. Such preaching can but produce the peaceable fruits of righteousness. Whatever names or distinctions separate us, all should take pleasure in the spiritual prosperity of each. The numerical estimates of conversions and confirmations are not given; but the Independent, which has heartily favored the missions, sums up its moral and general results as follows:

Moral results may not be summed up by rules of arithmetic, but we attempt to number the new-born babes of Israel, to God may not be due. Included in the acknowledged benefits resulting from the mission are: (a.) The value of liturgical flexibility and brief services for special occasions. (b.) The ability of the Episcopal Church to benefit all classes of society. (c.) The willingness of people to listen to intensely practical sermons on Gospel threatenings as well as to its promises. (d.) The praise fervor congregational singing incited. (e.) The gladness of laity to co-operate with clergy to lead to Christ the Christless. (f.) Zeal incited in rectors by contact with the missioners. (g.) That a "Revival" may be efficient without undue excitement. (h.) Rectors who were timid have had their fears "depart." Some rectors, who had looked easily at the mission, are now enthusiastic in view of its success. (i.) Zeal has been increased in other Christian bodies, and their sympathy with the Advent Mission has been warmly expressed, and by Churchmen appreciated. (j.) Increased charity in Churchmen for Christians who do not prefer the Episcopal form of Church polity. (k.) The indications that hereafter, "non-Churchmen" will not say that "Episcopalians have a beautiful liturgy, but no personal piety; and that Churchmen will not say: 'Ministers not by bishops ordained are not in the apostolical succession and have no valid authority to minister at the Christian altar.' Sometime ago a Methodist said he was gratified that a Churchman recognized him as a soldier of Christ's militia, even though he was not a soldier of the regular militant army." During the missions rectors were glad to welcome as fellow helpers, Methodists and other Christians who prayed for the success of the Advent Mission, and invited sinners and saints to attend the services. (l.) Churchmen, "high, low and broad," "latitudinarians, latitudinarians and platitudinarians"—forgot their ecclesiastical dimensions; and, as aptly stated by the Rev. Dr. McKim, "looked their theological differences in the church cabinet of curiosities, and silenced their shibboleths." They more fully realized that, while rhetorical sermons may be musical to the ear, and philosophic theories may please the intellect, only the Gospel's "Bread and water of life" can satisfy the hungering and thirsting soul; and as man has an eternal soul as well as an intellectual faculty, more than heretofore, to allure the intellect and touch the heart, and move the will to—embrace the Christ, body, soul and spirit, many rectors will base their sermons on themes connected with the facts precepts, threatenings and promises of Christ's Gospel they were ordained to preach. (1) Through "The Advocate," the executive of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society, has published a paper, placed in the pews of the Episcopal churches, requesting that churches pray for blessings on "bishops and other ministers." In the five and six months for special blessings is included "Pray that the spirit of God may be poured upon all flesh, and that all the ends of the earth may see the salvation of God." (2) Other Christian bodies are offering earnest prayer for a Pentecostal blessing. (3) There are cheering indications that the wave of revival which has reached the Episcopal Church in New York is never before will reach all the Episcopal and other churches throughout the United States. Boat all who are moored at the stagnant docks of worldliness and selfishness to a region higher and brighter than that, with "the blessed company of all faithful people," a large number of more sinners saved will unite with them, singing: "Glory be to the Holy Trinity."

—Bishop Keener is to dedicate a new church on Bro. Houghton's work next Sunday.

—We are indebted to Revs. J. A. Ellis and A. F. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conference, for pleasant calls this week.

—Rev. A. D. McVoy, president of East Mississippi Female College, has been in the city this week attending the Exposition.

—Bishop Mallalen, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has returned to New Orleans from extended episcopal visitations.

—Rev. T. B. White has returned to the city with his family, from Oregon, and will take work in the Louisiana Conference.

—Dr. Morton, secretary of our Board of Church Extension, is expected in the city this week en route to the Louisiana Conference.

—Rev. W. W. Hopper was in the city on Tuesday, journeying toward his new work in the East Texas Conference. Mississippi parts with him regretfully.

—Rev. J. O. Keener, of the Alabama Conference, and presiding elder of the Selma district, has been spending the holidays with relatives in the city.

—Rev. J. S. Oakley, assistant secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, calls our attention to the fact that the name of Dr. J. Y. Murray should appear in the list of reserved lay delegates to the General Conference.

—The Rev. R. M. Blocker, willing from Bellevue, La., gives account of a beautiful Christmas tree at Hoaghton and the kind remembrances of the pastor. Among other things given out by Santa Claus was a handsome "Conference suit" for the preacher.

—There are fifty-two colleges in America under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with an endowment of $11,000,000. The next largest showing is by the Baptists, who have forty-six colleges with $10,300,000 in endowments.

—Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, of the Mississippi Conference, has been quite ill for some days at 159 Canon, delect street, this city. He returned from Conference at Meridian to visit his family here, where his wife has been conducting a boarding house during the winter, and was taken sick immediately on arrival. At this writing he is much improved, and we hope will be ready for his work at Ocean Springs very soon.

—The anniversary of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held on the evening of the seventeenth instant, in the Academy of Music, New York, was a grand occasion. There was an immense audience, and the New York Advocate says "a more thoroughly representative Methodist audience of so large a size was never gathered in the city of New York." Bishop Harris presided, and Dr. William Butler, for years a missionary in India, offered a prayer. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Reid, Gen. Plisk, Dr. Buckley and Bishop Hurst. After this came the inevitable collection, which amounted to $30,000.

—In nominating Dr. Milburn for chaplain of the House of Representatives before the Democratic caucus, Representative Morrison, of Illinois, is reported to have made this witty little speech: "Mr. Chairman, I have no eloquent figures with which to address you, but only a few plain words. I nominate a man for chaplain who loves God, hates the devil and always votes the straight Democratic ticket. Knowing the Northern Methodists of Illinois, as I do, I ask if a minister of that church who has voted the Democratic ticket in Illinois for twenty-five years does not deserve well of a Democratic house, who does?"

The office of chairman of a district among the Wesleyan Methodists in England answers to our presiding elder. The chairman is also the pastor of a circuit, and receives his support therefrom. For some time past the question of relieving chairmen from circuit work has been under consideration, and at the last Conference a representative committee was appointed to report upon it. They are endeavoring to attain into the presiding eldership as we have it. Some of the fears entertained and difficulties foreseen are rather amusing to us on this side of the sea. But they are making progress, as is evident from the following which we find in the Methodist Times (London):

"The committee on the office of chairman of districts had two long sessions on Tuesday. There was a large and representative attendance. After much discussion it was agreed, with one dissentient, that the present method of appointing chairmen of districts was unsatisfactory. But, after some hours more of debate, it was decided, by 17 votes against 12, that no better method could be at present suggested. The committee then recommended that, in the special circumstances of the Norwich and Lynn district, the chairman of that district should be relieved from circuit work. But it was unanimously resolved that such relief from circuit work should not be accompanied by any alteration whatever in the constitutional powers of the chairman. Some of the brethren are very much afraid that there was some intention of infringing upon the rights of superintendents. Nobody intended anything of the kind. But to allay alarm it was thought best to state the fact in express terms. A sub-committee was then appointed to consider the best method of making proper provision for the support of chairman relieved from circuit work; the means by which the position of chairman in the poorer districts might be made more nearly equal to that of the chairman of the richer, and the provision necessary to provide chairman with material assistance when the demands of the district required it. It was felt that such assistance could be given by district missionaries or young men from the president's list of reserve, as it would be required only during a part of the year. The committee came to one important decision. They resolved to recommend that no one should be elected chairman of a district unless he secures a clear majority of the votes cast."

Notice to North Mississippi Conference

I was appointed at the last session of the Conference to publish the minutes, but my duties as presiding elder of the Winona district will prevent my giving the matter my attention; and hence Rev. Thomas Cameron has kindly consented to publish the minutes. Any one wishing to correspond with him in regard to the matter, can address him at Goodman, Miss.

H. P. MITCHELL.

I wish every member of the North Mississippi Conference to send me at once his present post-office address. At the urgent request of Bro. Mitchell, who was appointed by the Conference to do the work, I have agreed to publish the minutes of the last Conference. Please let every brother who is not positively certain that I know his address, send it to me at once by postal to Goodman, Miss.

THOMAS CAMERON.

DECEMBER 28, 1885.

Farewell Words.

MR. EDITOR: Another merry Christmas day is past; another celebration of the birth of our Lord and Savior. Many happy faces have we seen to-day; many little hearts rejoicing in the gift from Santa Claus. From these we have turned and asked how many, oh! how many homes are destitute of these pleasures—yes, to how many homes is this day only a day of dread and sorrow.

But I did not intend to send you an article on the nature of celebration of this greatest of all events. I want to speak of other things. In a day or so I am to bid farewell to the generous people whom it has been my privilege and pleasure to serve for the past four years. In seasons of deep affliction, as also in times of rejoicing, I have found them so ready to respond to my circumstances that my heart has greatly grown towards them. But our flexible law says I must give place to another brother here; so with a sad heart I say, Good-bye, and recommend them to the watchful, tender care of another, feeling assured that I go to others equally generous and kind. How suddenly often are the necessities laid upon us! For the pleasure of the children, our Sunday-school, in connection with the Presbyterians, prepared a Christmas tree on the evening of the twenty-fourth—a real thing of beauty—and while I have always regretted the shortness of my stature, this was one time when I was glad to be numbered with the children. The tokens of kindness and appreciation then and there bestowed upon the departing pastor made me feel glad that I had ever known such a delightful, thoughtful people. May God bless them always! We will take great pleasure in exhibiting to you some time in the future this substantial remembrance. However, we need tell you nothing of the people of Yazoo City. You have known them long and well.

We leave our church here in good working condition, ready to welcome their incoming pastor as loyal Methodists. During our stay we have added fifty to the church, mostly by profession, and after deducting for deaths and otherwise removed, we report a net increase of fifteen. May God bless the people of Yazoo City and their beloved pastor.

T. B. H.

DECEMBER 25, 1885.

The Southern Christian Advocate spoke some appreciative words of Bishop Keener in speeding homeward from the South Carolina Conference, their parting guest. His presidency of the Conference delighted all, and "journeying mercies" were invoked upon him as follows:

If ever a Bishop went from holding a session of the South Carolina Conference in higher esteem and greater favor than did Bishop Keener from the recent session of the South Carolina Conference, we are ignorant of the fact. We are not given to saying more than we feel; and we hazard nothing in the assertion—enthusiastic as it may sound—that the good Bishop took us all by storm. In the pulpit, where he preached like an apostle, and in the administration of the affairs of the Conference, as well as in the social circle, he magnified his opportunity as an ideal Methodist preacher. We can only say so hereafter as an individual, but as such we ask the Bishop to come to us again and again. He will find a warm welcome, and yet no warmer than he deserves.

The following item of news is clipped from the Roston Calligraph: Mrs. R. J. Harp, of Mansfield, has sued the Texas and Pacific railroad company for $8,000 damages, which she claims to have sustained by a fall from the depot platform to the ground, by which she fractured her arm. She claims that the platform being very high, the company should keep lights burning so that travelers could see how to avoid accidents of the kind.

Louisiana Conference.

Delegates to the Louisiana Annual Conference will be sold tickets on the Vicksburg, Sareveport and Pacific railroad from local points to Vicksburg and return at six cents per mile. The Texas and Pacific railroad will make the usual reduction, though this reduction is not officially decided.

Preachers and delegates who come to Baton Rouge, via Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad, will pay full fare to Baton Rouge and will be sold return tickets at one cent per mile.

The New Orleans Pacific Railway Company will grant reduced fare over their road to and from Baton Rouge to members and delegates to the Louisiana Annual Conference. The rate will be one fare of five cents per mile for round trip, commencing on the fourth and ending on the fifteenth of January, 1886.

T. K. FAUNT LEROY, P. C.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Ministers of the Gospel should be men of peace. They are the ambassadors of the God of peace, sent to preach the Gospel of peace. Their ministry is the ministry of reconciliation. While the peace of God should keep their own minds and hearts in Christ Jesus, they should, so far as possible, be at peace with all men. They should not be sowers of strife, nor bearers of faction, but peace-makers among brethren. If a minister's presence in the church, as a man of peace, is held to be a hindrance to the peace of the church, a minister who is not willing to do this, shows that he is destitute of the spirit of the Gospel—Methodist Recorder.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, NEW ORLEANS.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

WATCHES AND JEWELRY.—At the old stand, No. 8 Camp street, Mr. H. P. Buckley will be found, ready to attend to all customers from a well-selected stock of first-class watches of standard quality, and in all the new designs and improvements. All goods are guaranteed as represented, and purchasers are certain of getting from Mr. Buckley just exactly what they pay for. Repairing of fine watches a specialty.

In a restaurant: "Waiter, bring me some mistakes in orthography." Puzzled waiter: "But sir, we haven't any." "Why, then, do you put them in your bill of fare?"

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere, 25c.

At the theatre—She: "Don't you think something ought to be done toward uplifting the singer?" He: "Yes; or perhaps something toward the lowering of the box-seat would serve the same purpose."

The best Ankle, Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

We are glad to hear there is a "Life Saving Bureau" in this country. When a man gets up in the dark and wrestles with a rocking chair, that kind of bureau would be a good piece of furniture to have in the room.

Those who preach, lecture, declaim or sing, will do find Bile's Honey of Horehound and Tar the speediest restorative of the voice in cases of hoarseness. It also cures coughs and sore throat rapidly and completely. Sold by all Druggists at 25c, 50c and $1.

Good morning, Mrs. Milligan, how is Patrick this morning? Sure he is better, sir. Why don't you send him to the hospital to be treated? To be treated, is it? Faith an it's the delirium tremens he has already.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Waterbrook's Steel Pens.

P. WERLEIN.—As the fall trade opens, so the already immense stock of Pianos, Organs, and musical instruments, increases at the Werlein Music Palace, 135 Canal street. The wonder is where will the custom come from to absorb this immense stock. The liberal terms conditioned with satisfactory prices and safe guarantees offered by Mr. Werlein, gives the purchaser every advantage to secure just what is wanted. Other inducements are offered to all alike, whether new customers or old friends and patrons. With this plan of doing business, trade is constantly spreading out in every direction, and necessitating the carrying of a large and well selected stock of musical and mechanical instruments of every description. Call and see; courteous treatment is assured. Catalogues and prices furnished on application.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change cannot be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for cough, cold, bronchitis, and tubercular consumption, acrimonia and general debility. The sweet oil, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more benefit secured to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil. The most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRIPLE, New York.

T. K. FAUNT LEROY, P. C.

ADVICE TO TEENAGERS.

Age and wisdom's doctrine, youth should always be used for children's teaching. It soothes the child, soothes the angry allays all pain, cures what cures, and is the best remedy for children. 25c a bottle.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap, cleans and beautifies, 25c.

German Corn Remover—Kills Corns, Blisters, 25c.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 25c.

Pile's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

H. P. BUCKLEY,

Camp Street.

Watchmaker,

DEALER IN—

WATCHES, DIAMONDS, JEWELRY,

—AND—

SILVERWARE

Repairing of Every Description.

Agents Wanted. The

Rooms and Boarding.

Rooms and Boarding.

Rooms and Boarding.

Rooms and Boarding.

Rooms and Boarding.

Rooms and Boarding.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

IF YOU WANT A GOOD PIANO OR ORGAN At a Moderate Price, Write to Louis Grunewald, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Special Low Prices on Second-Hand Pianos in First-Class Order.

BEST PIANOS

—AT—

PHILIP WERLEIN

135 CANAL STREET.

Best Place to Get a Piano.

Immense Assortment of Pianos and Organs at the very Lowest Prices and on the Easiest Terms.

Music and Musical Merchandise, Wholesale and Retail.

Be sure to Call and Examine My Stock of Fine Instruments, or Write for Catalogues, Mailed Free to any Address.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for children's organs, one hundred styles, $25 to $500. For Cash, Easy Payments or Deferred Payments, Catalogues free.

PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as pianos on the old plan. Price $100 to $1,000. For Cash, Easy Payments or Deferred Payments, Catalogues free.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.) N. Y. 143 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

H. Dudley Coleman,

Engines, Boilers and Machinery.

Refrigerating, seven makers of steam engines, whose goods I have in stock, with unexcelled freight facilities by rail and water, and having an extensive country and machine shop in this city. Lower extra in quantities to purchasers. Send for prices. H. DUDLEY COLEMAN, NEW ORLEANS, LA., No. 9 Perdido St.

Stoves, Grates, House-furnishing Hardware.

IRON AND SLATE MANTLES.

MANUFACTURER OF—

GALVANIZED IRON CORNICES

—AND—

Ornamental Work.

GALVANIZED IRON & TIN ROOFING.

GUTTER WORK OF ALL DESCRIPTION.

I am prepared to contract for work in the above line in City or Country.

The best stove in the market is the Celebrated

CHAMPION MONITOR.

I have stoves varying in price from $6 to $100.

J. H. CAPMAN.

101 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

W. O. WHEELER,

Clothing and Furnishing

GOODS.

Successor in Wholesale to

WHEELER & PIERSON,

34 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS

SHAFTING, JOURNAL BOXES AND PULLEYS

For Transmission of Power.

Made of best iron, and by use of latest improved machinery, I am enabled to compete with other manufacturers, and in the promptness of the trade.

H. DUDLEY COLEMAN.

No. 9 Perdido St. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE FOLLOWING NEW BOOK

"SOME NOTED PRINCIPLES, AUTHORS

AND STATESMEN OF OUR TIME."

By one of our best writers, James Parton, Esq., of New York. It contains a complete and accurate history of the lives and times of the great men of our age, from the time of the French Revolution to the present day. It is a work of great interest and value, and is well adapted for the use of schools and libraries. A few copies are now on hand, and will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Send for the book at once.

THE HENRY HILL PER CO., Successors.

Reduce the Cost of Your Crop!

LAMAR COTTON CHOPPER.

AN INVALUABLE MACHINE FOR LANKIN'S

Choppers will save a day with one man. Light, simple, strong, thoroughly efficient and very cheap.

Guaranteed to Do the Work!

Now is the time to secure it. Send for illustrated circular. Address

RECIST & HILL, Atlanta, Ga.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash,

Blind and

Door

FACTORY.

298, 301, 303, 305, 307 Gravier Street,

—NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO.

Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Flooring and Ceiling, Newels, Balusters, etc., always on hand, or made to order.

Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty

BRANCH OFFICE:

No. 52 CARondelet Street,

San Francisco and City of Mexico

EXCURSIONS.

The Illinois Central R. R. will run

TWO FIRST-CLASS PULLMAN

CAR EXCURSIONS this second week in January, 1886—one to SAN FRANCISCO, the other to the CITY OF MEXICO, stopping four days at New Orleans, one day at San Antonio, and one at Chihuahua. The round trip rates to either point will be as follows: From all points in Illinois between Freeport and Ashby, and Chicago and Ashby, $13.15; from Dubuque, $15.50; Sioux City, $12.50. Points between Ashby, Ill., and Jackson, Miss., including St. Louis, Memphis, Aberdeen and Yazoo City, $11.00. Tickets good to return within six months. Remember the great American Exposition at New Orleans will be at its best at this season of the year. No snow, no ice, no blizzards along this route. Address the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa, for Excursion circular giving full particulars, and for folders, maps, books, etc., concerning California and Old Mexico.

J. F. MERRY,

Gen. West. Pass. Ag't.

ROCK BOTTOM!

Our Clubbing Arrangement

—1886.

We offer the following club rates to take effect after December 1, 1885. Cash in full to accompany all orders.

The Christian Advocate and the following publications will be sent one year, postpaid, at prices in table column:

Publications price. Our price.

Southern Cultivator $3.75 $2.75

Italy Playmate—12 issues 14.00 13.00

" " " 6 " 7.00 6.50

Weekly " 3.50 2.50

" Times-Democrat 3.50 2.75

Harper's Magazine 6.00 4.75

" Weekly 6.00 4.75

" Bazar 6.00 4.75

" Young People 4.00 3.00

Demorest

MISCELLANEOUS.

PEACH BRANDY'S OF THE WORLD'S Great Nerve-Tonic
FRUIT WINE COCA

It is a tonic, a compact blend of Peach Brandy, Cognac, and Elder,
The Peach Brandy of France, an Unsurpassed Perfected Brandy, and the Elder, the Medical Perfession for the cure and a condition of Mental and Physical Exhaustion, such as: Rheumatic Diseases, Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Liver Troubles, Heart Diseases, Menstrual Disorders, Catarrhs, Headaches, Faintness and Languor, Nervous Debility, and Nervousness, and all the above. For Catarrhs and all the above this is the most powerful and the most valuable. The medicinal and strength-restoring properties of French Wine Coca are truly wonderful and cannot be fully described. The fruit wine itself will chase and excite your circulation. For sale by Druggists, Grocers, and Dealers in the United States and Foreign. Price, 75¢ per bottle.

A. S. PEMBERTON & Co., Mfg. Chemists, Atlanta, Ga.

FREE BOOK!

There is a big market for the following fruits of Arizona, California, Florida, Texas, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and Alaska, Brackenberries, Raspberries, and Nuts, Currants, and Apples, and various instructions for proper management of Arizona, California, and Washington, Oregon, and Idaho, California, Texas, and Arizona.

S. FREEMAN & SONS, RACINE, WIS.

WARREN'S

For dress-making purposes, ladies are delighted with it. For sale Everywhere.

[illegible] rich with the fingerprints of the Deity. It contains 1,000 pictures, and is a most interesting study. Price, $1.00.

Send your order to
The National Geographic Society,
Washington, D.C.

THE NEW ALL EARS FAILS.
Just touch eardrum. Taste good. Use in water. Sold by druggists.

SPRINGFIELD AMERICAN
ESTABLISHED 1864.
The most popular Weekly newspaper devoted to agriculture, horticulture, engineering, discovery, inventions and patent rights. Published weekly except on Sundays and public holidays. Price, 10 cents per copy. Subscriptions, $1.00 per annum in advance. Single copies, 5 cents. Address, Springfield American, Springfield, Mass.

over published. Every number illustrates a splendid array of new and old inventions, a most valuable encyclopedia of information which no person should be without. The paper is of the highest quality, and the circulation nearly equal that of all other papers of the class combined. Price, $3.00 per annum in advance. Send for a sample. MUNN & CO., Publishers, No. 321 Broadway, N. Y.

PATENTS. Mean & Co., Inc. and Thelwell & Co., Inc. have secured the Patent Office, and have prepared over two One Hundred Thousand applications for patents in the United States and foreign countries. Cables, Trade-Marks, Copyrights, etc., are also handled.

desiring to interfere their rights in the United States, Canada, England, France,
 Germany and other foreign countries, prepared either to make a reasonable return Information us is wanting and is being fully given without delay. Hand-books of information sent free. Patents obtained through Munn & Co. are national in character and American law. The advantage of such work well understood by all persons who wish to dispose of their patents.
 Address: MUNN & CO., OFFICE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, 361 Broadway, New York.

ONE—$500
 1—10 years
 Made weekly

Read a copy for Special Rates. Mention this paper.
 F. ALBURN Treat,
 Meridian, Wash.
 CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR COUGHS, CROUP AND CONSUMPTION USE
OR'S

PALE
CHEROKEE
REMEDY
OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN.

The Sweet Gum from a tree of the same name growing in the South, combined with a tree mullein from the Mullein plant of the fields. For sale by all druggists at 25 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

WALTER A. TAYLOR, ANTIQUARY,
Man Wanted
 In his specialty, the beautiful home, changed. CAY & SMOB. 12 Barclay St. N. Y.

OPHIUM
 MORPHINE, HEMP KASHEE,
 FUGED, BOOK FREE, J.
 J. C. Hayman, 1211 Broadway

CARDS

60 Fancy Pictures, and 25
var. Cards in Art. Lays.
Princk, Binder, Name, Ac-
Saucer, 10c Price. Butcher 10
8 partner games, all for 10c. 10c Price. Butcher 10

IVY CARD CO., Cincinnati, Ohio

150 CARDS. In new styles. Embossed, Illustrated, Nature, Wolf Edge, Transparent, Ac., Ac.
latest designs and lowest prices. 10c each. 10c
name on 10c. 10c Card Co., Cincinnati, Ohio

Messiah Bell Found

Finest Grade of Bells

GIMES AS PRIZE FOR CHURCH BELLS

Sold for Price and Quality by J. H. MESSIAH & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Merchandise Day 1977

ants,

respect-

ENTORM.

your name and address and initially illus-

Notes.
Send them to your supply any of Ward address

OKLAHOMA.

WILLIAMS' RUBBER STAMPS
THE
WILLIAMS MANUFACTURING
CO. 1000 N. 10TH ST. OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.
Sole Agents for Oklahoma and Indian Territory
J. A. McNEELY, 1000 N. 10th St., Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

WILLIAMS' RUBBER STAMPS
The Best in the World
For Office, School, and Business Use
They are made of the finest rubber and are guaranteed to last for years.

Plows & Brgs

Of all machine driven engines from quarter of a horse to over a horse power, all horses satisfied. See the latest illustrations and prices
as requested and sent free.

tested. Write us before purchase. An American machine made by you from 1906 to 1909 $5.00. Ad-
JESSE FRENCH, Nashville, Tenn.
Wholesale Distributing Dept for the South

